And so it was, through the entire play, until the last few minutes when Phillip Mason, so well played by Henry Fullerton, came in. His portrayal of a crazed murderer was excellent. This part was difficult and Henry is worthy of all the praise he received.

The inspector, George Osborn, was as inquisitive as most detectives, but he was on the job and George played the part as Sherlock Holmes. Edward Wales, the murdered man, or Paul Dickenson, though his part was cut short by his untimely death, played his part well. Pollock and Sergeant Dunn added a bit of character work to the play.

34 PICTURES REVIEWED

Saintly Expressionn Blamed on Bible Department or the Photographers.

(by Sarah Moore)

"Any ideas for this week's article?" inquired Jack Cotton.

"No," I cheerfully admitted. (He would discover the fact anyway, so I might as well confess.)

"Well, suppose you go over to the registrar's office and look at the photographs of the new students and see if you get any inspiration."

I went, I saw, I was inspired. And for the comfort of those concerned, I will say that although the students were recognizable by their pictures, they certainly do not resemble the pictures all of the time.

One of the faculty remarked that the pictures must have been taken by the Bible department, for each and every student is gazing soulfully up at the left hand corner of the picture. It is my private opinion that the defenseless ones took this attitude to avoid looking at the photographers.

Just in case Miss Jones won't allow anyone else to see this prize exhibit, I'll tell you about a few of them.

James Carl Adair, by reason of his last name beginning with the initial letter of the alphabet, heads the file. This young man possesses a crest of hair that looks very cocky.

Marion Adelaide Allen was trying to smile but decided against it the second the photographer snapped the picture.

Iva Elizabeth Babcock is gazing upward and looking earnestly angelic.

Harold Edwin Baer looks like a movie actor who could play the villain with gusto and abandon.

Wallace Barr, of Tarrytown, is evidently wishing he were back home.

Louis Bliss Blair is not seeming extremely blissful.

Evelyn Byrd Butnam had evidently finished saying to the photographer, "I just dare you to tell that joke!"

Lea Calloway, true to red headed tradition, has his head up and appears to be demanding, "Well, what next?"

Ruth Chenoweth has her eyebrows up and is successfully endeavoring to be sarcastic.

Walter Randall Combs, we should say after an earnest study of his picture, looks to be a very capable cusser—hard-boiled, and all the rest of it; "Hey, guys, What d'yuh mean? Snap out of it!"

Gifford Cruze never looks extremely happy on the campus, but he is very evidently enjoying having his picture taken—we never before suspected him of being vain. But his successful, cherubic grin advertises the fact that he is satisfied—as far as his face is concerned.

Mary Lois Cupler—"Really pretty" we said, and if she can stand the acid test of that photograph, she ought to be sent to Hollywood.

Hubert Curtis looks just as he looks on the campus every day—eyebrows raised as if he were always gently—but acidly—inquiring, "So-o?"

Mark Dance is the perfect example of the way a cat would look after swallowing the canary—proud of himself, and yet doubtful if he has done his best.

If ever a madonna is needed for Christmas pageants around here we recommend Ruth Houghton. And we hadn't suspected her of looking like that, either.

Lincoln Walker Hurst, all eyes, is sitting on the edge of his chair and appears to be asking, "Where did that little dickey-bird go?"

Chung Ryung Kim seems to be the only imperturbable one in the group.

If ever we see Homer McCann's picture in Hollywood, we'd say, "There's Sitsky!"

Explosive Bursts of Cheer

The use of the unsafe and insane methods of Independent Day celebration at Christmas time has acquired considerable popularity in the South, but certainly not here at Maryville. We do not believe that firecrackers and torpedoes are fitting implements with which to usher in a Merry Christmas.

The faculty has shown its aversion to such explosive bursts of Christmas cheer quite frequently in the past. Little two inch fire-crackers have caused the extension of more than one students' Christmas holidays.

Some fellows are tempting fortune again this year. An occasional explosion in the hall reminds us that someone else is "having a good time", at a rather selfish sport.

The fact that there is a rule against the use of fireworks on the campus is not the only reason why we should discourage their use in or around the hall. There is always the possibility of fire or accident. Fellows who are responsible for all this racket are not particular where they throw their fire-crackers; they are concerned only that they be anywhere else than in the vicinity of the explosion. Others must look out for themselves.

—O—

Your Health and Ours

The weather is taking its regular toll of victims. There are several cases of influenza on the campus. This should be a greater incentive to us who are still in good health to see to it that we stay that way. A cold is easily acquired just now and once gotten, may be hard to get rid of. No precautions are too elaborate in the business of staying well.

If you already have a cold of the coughing variety, don't be unselfish with it; keep it to yourself. We would rather sympathize with you than to share your affliction. When you must cough in chapel or classroom, please use a clean handkerchief as a muffler.

Everyone will appreciate this bit of thoughtfulness on your part.

Theta Alpha Phi

Maryville's chapter of the national honorary fraternity of dramatics, Theta Alpha Phi will hold its first initiation of the year next Friday evening.

Eight new members are to be taken in: Bob Anderson, Chilly Bowles, Ed Sprouse, Forrest Robertson, Frank Baker, Roger Rusk, Evelyn Sherard, and Ada Bell Campbelle.

The initiation will be followed by a banquet at the home of Mrs. West.

The chapter is well represented in the midwinters and also in the casts of college players this year. day evening. This chapter was organized in the Spring of 1927 .

To gain admittance to the fraternity one must have had two major or four minor roles or must have directed one play or managed two plays or have written a play which was put on by the college.

The chapter has the following officers: President, Jesse Peirce; Secretary, Sarah Moore; Treasurer, Albert Tull.

Elizabeth "Toots" Whitten fainted on the chapel steps after the play Tuesday night. Fortunately a number of young gentlemen were present, who conveyed her to the dormitory. She escaped with no injuries in spite of her fall.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

When we think of all the people in the world without brothers or sisters or people to remember at Christmas time—gee, how we envy 'em!

There are fewer self-made men now than formerly, observes an educator. Also, they've stopped putting boot-straps on boots.

Children are keen observers, and by the time they are freshmen they know almost as much as their parents.

News item in "Toonerville Times": Mrs. John Smith won the rolling pin throwing contest. Mr. Smith won the 60-yard dash.

Student activities are very interesting, but so is a dog fight.

Many a man comes in from a football game unable to talk, but we've yet to meet the man who has talked himself hoarse answering a professor's questions.

"Bring me another sandwich, please."

"Anytihng else?"

"Yes, a paper weight. That last sandwich blew away."

"Henry, what do you call a man who drives a car?"

"That depends how close he comes to me."

"Betcha I can spell "bum" with two letters."

"You're on."

"B - m."

"Wrong."

"Oh, I left "u" out.

Shakespeare said, "All that glitters is not gold." We would like to ask if "All that glitters is a diamond?"

Jewelers in town must be having a rushing business. They are selling diamonds by the installment plan.

Even Miss Scheibler has consented. "Gobo" is one lucky man.

EXTEMPORANEOUS TALK PROGRAM POSTPONED

The programs of extemporaneous speeches that the societies are to put on, has been postponed until the second Saturday after the holidays. There will be private elimination contests in each society, and the first and second best out of each will make public speeches in the chapel to determine the winners.

The winners will go to Transylvania College, Lexington, Kentucky, for a final try-out on April 9. The topics for men and women respectively for the final contest are, "Political Parties" and "Women in Politics". Schools in this whole district are taking part in this contest.

Margaret Roberson returned to the Hill last Monday, after a month's absence due to an operation for appendicitis performed in the Erlanger Hospital in Chattanooga.

Incidentally

——Hayes Williams has trouble getting dates now that his right arm is out of working order. He wishes it to be known, however, that he is becoming quite proficient with his left.

——Campus whistlers (may their tribe increase!) have been concentrating on the melody of "Sonny Boy" since "The Singing Fool" visited Knoxville.

——Another coincidence. Bob and Nick, room-mates, have their birthdays close together. Bob's was on the sixth and Nick's on the seventh. Bob has just entered man's estate. Nick hasn't arrived yet.

——Four or five couples have been mooshined recently. The rushing pre-Christmas season of lyceums, plays, etc., is in progress, too. Lucky fellows! ?

——Freshmen are voluntarily adding a collegiate touch of color with their new orange and garnet caps.

——Copley has been having trouble lately with the door to his room. A few nights ago it left its hinges and fell upon his table and right pedal extremity,—incidentally, nearly crushing a "very valuable" picture on his table. Copley doesn't fully understand the accident. Probably somebody pulled the pins.

——Red noses and sniffles add color and music respectively to the otherwise monotonous landscape. The wave of flu has found its way to Maryville, and everyone who has even the slightest indication of a cold wraps his collar around his neck a little higher, and valiantly strives to build up his resistance so that he can successfully cope with the little "flu" germs.

——Speaking of "flu", the hospital is about to have an overflow of patients. The customary rumor is prevalent, that if a few more catch the "flu", school will be dismissed. Let everyone judge for himself the amount of confidence to put in this statement.

——It was rather a weak-kneed, wild-eyed audience which left the chapel last Tuesday night. Of course, most everyone professed "to have known from the first" which one was the murderer. Nevertheless, the play furnished surprises aplenty and cold chills in super-abundance during the seances, and other particularly gripping parts of the play. We can't say that we "enjoyed" it, for that word is too mild a word, and does not begin to express our intense interest throughout.

——The girls who are "big sisters" to the orphans are busy planning their share of "peace on earth good will to men" with which they are going to shower those less fortunate than they. The "big sister to the orphans" movement, is one of the most helpful projects of the Y. W. C. A., and is this year headed by Gwendolyn Green.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

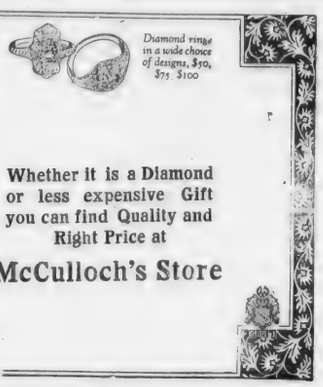
"Now the other group of reptiles to which man belongs—are mammals."—Miss Green.

"Are you still getting mixed up with 'Apple-sauce'?"—Prof. Howell to Margaret Haynie.

"Everyone should take all precautions to keep from catching the 'flu'; soda water is a good preventative."—Mrs. Snodgrass.

"The College Maid Shop needs more helpers, people who want to sew on buttons or press, because a large order for Indian Head smocks must be filled before Christmas."—Mrs. McMurray.

"When I learn to play my clarinet well enough, I'd like to join the Student Volunteer Band."—Georgia Burk.



"'Pilgrim's Progress' has always seemed to me to be much more sincere and real in allegory than Spencer's 'Fairie Queen'. Spencer, living in the age of chivalry, peopled his allegory with fairies and impossible things, whereas Bunyan places in the very real world which he creates, very real people."—Mrs. Alexander.

"Armenia is one of those countries which you will find to be mentioned only very briefly in most history books. In a history of Armenia, you will find the reason to be that they spent too much time in wars, massacres, and battles to accomplish anything great for the world."—Yervant Topalian.

SPEND A POSTAGE STAMP ON THIS!

The Commission on Interracial Cooperation, 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, has recently issued a number of pamphlets on race relations which it will be glad to send without charge to any student interested. The series comprises "The Racial Situation in America", "Southern Opinion and Race Relations", "America's Tenth Man", and other interesting titles. Individuals, classes and discussion groups are invited to write for these pamphlets, and also for information about the cash prizes offered by the Commission for papers on race relations.

ALUMNI STARS MEET COLLEGE QUINTET, SATURDAY

Johnson Bible Frosh Cage Foe of the Year

A squad of about 50 men answered Coach Honaker's call for basketball candidates. This is an unusually large number and Coach Honaker has some fine material to choose from. The customary axe will fall on the squad this week-end for it is impossible to spend much time drilling the candidates in view of the fact that the first game of the schedule is to be played on Tuesday, December 18. The opposing team will be Johnson Bible College. This game promises to be an interesting one for Johnson Bible College boasts a scrappy quintet.

Coach Honaker has the following veterans from last year's squad to form a backbone for this year's team: Capt. Reed, Bird, Delaney, K. Davis, Cherry, Waddell, and J. D. Davis. Those showing most promise from the new men are, Kaiser, Ferguson, Peters, White, Payne, Vincent, Calloway, McWilliams, O. Wooten, R. Wooten, Overly, McCulloch, Collins, Peacock, Combs, L. Martin, Martin, H. Jarvis, Fishback, King, W. Smith, Murray, and Wrackley.

Arrangements are being made for a game between the Alumni and the Varsity. The game will be played on the Alumni Gym floor, on Saturday, December 15.

GIRLS CONTINUING SOCCER TOURNAMENT

Finals Between Juniors and Sophs To Be Played This Week.

The second series of games of the soccer tourney was played off and resulted in a victory for the sophs and juniors and one scoreless tie in the soph-frosh combat.

The freshmen have been unable to score yet but their plucky eleven kept up the old fight. It has held the sophs and juniors scoreless in two encounters.

In the first game of the second series, the frosh-soph battle ended 0-0, in favor of both sides. In the fun sophomore game the sophomores were able to eke out a victory of 1-0 by a timely kick by Ruth Laughead. Friday afternoon the juniors defeated the freshmen 2-1, Clopton supplying the needed points by the use of her goal kicking toe.

The teams were handicapped Friday by missing players, due to sickness.

The line-ups for the teams are as follows:

Frosh—D. Cable, R. Chenoweth, V. Heidle, H. Littlejohn, R. Ott, C. Foster, E. Kitts, I. Babcock, I. McGill, J. Terry, G. Burk, (c).

Soph.—G. Bowers, M. Fullerton, (c)., H. Bowers, R. Laughead, B. Rodgers, M. Lowry, D. Bassel, W. Lowry, C. Cushman, H. Meimich, L. Wright.

Juniors—M. Haynie, O. Clopton, V. Boyd, L. Lovette, F. Crabell, E. Burns, Hunter, R. Buchanan, E. Hampton, E. Nash, V. Pearson (c).

Substitutions: Frosh, Chenoweth, Avery, Allen, Beachboard, Thornby, Garrett; Sophs, Enloe; Juniors, Caulton, Moore, Crowder.

Officials—Referee, Weller; Scorer, Coach Queener; Timer, Covington.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Program of Carols To Be Presented by Vesper Choir Sunday

On Sunday, December 16, at seven o'clock, the annual program of Christmas carols will be presented by the Maryville College vesper choir, under the direction of Miss Frances Henry.

To sing songs of joy and gladness on the Holy Night of the Savior's birth, and to welcome Him with carols of praise and thanksgiving is a practice which has lasted throughout centuries and grows more common from year to year. This universal spirit of rejoicing will be well expressed in this year's vesper choir Christmas program. This program will include carols from many countries, some of the carols being as old as the sixteenth century.

BALLAD NIGHT IN CHAPEL SATURDAY

Oh hand me down my walking-cane,
Oh hand me down my walking-cane,
'Cause I'm gonna leave on the midtrain,
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

Oh if I die in Tennessee,
Oh if I die in Tennessee,
Oh if I die in Tennessee,
Just ship me back C.O.D.
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

Oh hand me down my bottle of corn,
Oh hand me down my bottle of corn,
Oh hand me down my bottle of corn,
I'm gonna get drunk as sure as you're born,
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

Well I got drunk and got in jail,
Well I got drunk and got in jail,
Well I got drunk and got in jail,
And had no one to go my bail,
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

Oh the beans were tough and meat was fat,
Oh the beans were tough and meat was fat,
Oh the beans were tough and meat was fat,
And, oh my Lord, I couldn't eat that,
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

If I had listened to what Mama said,
If I had listened to what Mama said,
If I had listened to what Mama said,
I'd been sleepin' on a feather bed,
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

Oh come Mama and go my bail,
Oh come Mama and go my bail,
Oh come Mama and go my bail,
And get me out of this buggy jail,
'Cause all my sins are taken away.

I WISH I WAS SINGLE AGAIN

When I was single, O then, O then,
When I was single, O then,
When I was single my money did jingle,
I wish I was single again,

I married me a wife, O then, O then
I married me a wife, O then,
I married me a wife, she was the plague of my life,
And I wish I was single again.

My wife she died, O then, O then,
My wife she died, O then,
My wife she died, and then I cried,
To think I was single again, again,
To think I was single again.

I married another, the devil's grandmother,
I wish I was single again,
For when I was single my money did jingle,
I wish I was single again, again,
I wish I was single again.

Another ballad which is adapted to a little game is "Happy Miller." It is sung to the tune "Turkey in the Straw" as the game is played.

Oh, happy is the miller,
As he lives by the mill,
Grinds by the bushel,
And he gains by the mill;
One hand in the hopper, and
The other in the sack,
The mill turns round and
The (girls) drop back.

Most of the songs will be accompanied by the guitar or the fiddle. Appropriate instrumental music will also be rendered.

The program as tentatively arranged follows:

Part I—American Folk Songs and Ballads
- Hand Me Down My Walking Cane - - - - Chorus
- Old Smoky - Willie Nelle Harold
- New River Train - - Chorus
- I Wish I Was Single Again - - - - Chorus
- Death of Floyd Collins - Chorus
- Arkansas Traveler (Fiddle) - Edgar Shepherd
- Happy Miller (Singing Game) Chorus

Part II.—Type Ballads and Songs
- Casey Jones (Railroad Ballad) Walter Courtenay
- Barbara Allen (English Ballad) Dorothy Franklin
- When the Work's All Done This Fall (Cowboy Ballad) - Chorus
- Dese Bones Gwine Rise Again (Negro Ballad) - - Chorus
- Little Mohea (American Ballad) - Dorothy Franklin
- Jack and Joe (American Ballad) and Lucky Jim (American Adaptation) - - Eugene Gabbard
- Buck Dancing and Instrumental Novelties - - Eugene Gabbard Edgar Shepherd, Ed. Ross

Airplane To Be Given

Writer of Best Four Monthly Articles on Aviation Will Win an Airplane.

To interest more college students in aviation, the Alexander Aircraft Company at Colorado Springs offers a new Alexander Eaglerock Airplane or a complete University Course in aeronautics for the best series of four short monthly articles on aviation from January 1 to May 1, 1929 written by undergraduate college students.

The winner will be awarded a 4 year scholarship in a leading aeronautical engineering school, or in a school of business administration where he can get an aeronautical background. Competing students who receive undergraduate degrees June 1 may win a graduate scholarship in a technical school of aeronautics, leading to a master's or a professional degree. As an alternative award, the winner may receive a completely equipped Eaglerock. Articles of superior merit but below winning quality will win their writers 10-hour flying courses. The awards will be made June 1.

The papers, technical or non-technical and 400 to 600 words in length, must be submitted to the Committee on Awards on the first of each month from January 1 to May 1. Suggested subjects include, "Future Aircraft Development," "Flying for Recreation," "Commercial Possibilities in Aviation," "The Airplane as a Future Decentralizer of Cities," etc.

Any students interested in this competition may see a complete copy of the contest rules by application to the editor.

——Another item of news interesting to all is that Ted Watson has reached his destination. When Ted announced his intention of going to California, every one naturally came to the conclusion that he would go direct to Hollywood. He is saving his contribution to the movie world until a later date, however, and is now working in Los Angeles.

APPLESAUCE PALATABLE

Everyone enjoy the College Players' second play last Saturday night. Chily's performance was especially good, probably because he could act the part in a genuinely natural way.

Football Banquet Still Uncertain

December 10—An attempt has been made in the last week to ascertain just what steps have been taken by the business men to stage the annual football banquet, but so far we have been unable to find the responsible committee.

We hope the men in town will see fit to continue the custom of honoring the football men in this way, way, because the football boys have been looking forward to it with keen anticipation, and such a feast would be an appropriate climax to a successful season.

Saturday at the Societies

Bainonian

Station B.L.S. on the air Saturday night! Some celebrated Travelers passing through our metropolis have consented to broadcast their program which was so well-received in New York a short time ago. It will be sponsored by our new program secretaries, Irish Terry and Eleanor Kuhlman. The program will consist of musical presentations. Bainonians, the new Atwater-Kent guarantees no static, so all Bainonians be sure to tune in.

Athenian

Christmas program at Athenian Saturday night. Everyone out.

There will be singing of Christmas carols, and appropriate readings by Mr. Laster. The hall will be favored by the presence of Miss Adkins who will render some numbers of special interest.

Santa Claus will make his appearance through our college magician, Russell Gilmore.

Everybody out! Last program of the year. Come get your gifts in the above specialties.

Theta Epsilon

There will be a short Christmas program at Theta meeting next Saturday night. It will be the first meeting since the installation of the new officers and everyone may count on an interesting meeting. The program is being kept a secret, it is said,—perhaps Santa will be there! It will be the last meeting this year besides being a Christmas meeting, so be sure to be present, all Thetas!

Alpha Sigma

We are unable to enumerate here the different features of Alpha Sigma's program for next Saturday night, but everybody may rest assured that these numbers will be of the same high class as those which have given us so much real enjoyment in the past weeks. From present indications, we will have with us Howard Schlemann, the sax player—and none other than a second Rudy Weidoft when it comes to wailing out the harmony.

Incidentally, is every Alpha Sig boosting "Little Old New York" as much as he ought to?

FRESHMAN ROGUES' GALLERY PROVIDES MUCH AMUSEMENT

Lloyd McCulloch is looking mischievous—a chronic state with that young man.

Marion Noonan is solemn for once.

Lloyd Overly appears to be very much at home, as if pictures were an everyday occurrence in his young life.

Alfred Sylvester Payne— yes, that's his name, although you may pronounce it "Shady"—looks like the "nize beby what's et all the prune juice."

Coile Quinn is resignedly asking, "When will it be over?"

Lula Mae Rockett seems to be inquiring, "Am I supposed to look pretty?"

Henry Settle needs only a Spanish hat to look as Spanish as Ricardo Cortez.

Edwin Shelley's belligerent set of the head says, "Take my picture then, and go to grass!"

Gladys Anita Shields appears to be remarking hopefully, "I hope it's all for the best."

We surely do like Alma Tanner's looks. That's a girl that would look nice across the breakfast table.

Holman Vinsant's eyes say, "I dare you to make me smile."

Phillip Vogel seems to be a real nice looking young chap.

Lucy Ann Voorhees had evidently demanded of the photographer, "What was that last wise crack you pulled?"

Robert West is staring out over the Atlantic Ocean and is just about ready to shout, "Ship ahoy!"

John Wood's sarcastic pose exclaims, "Is zat so?"

Dorothy Wynn seems to be asking politely, "Really?"

Yes, they're all there—all the new students, and a nice looking bunch they are.

BOOKS RECOMMENDED FOR GIFTS OR READING

Dodd (Century). An unusual study of the hidden forces behind and about these two great heroic figures of the War between the States. $2.00.

John Brown's Body by Stephen Vincent Benet (Doubleday). An epic poem about the Civil War; remarkable for its poetic qualities and for its deep sympathy with the human materials involved. $2.50.

Bambi by Felix Salten (Simon and Shuster). One of the best in a rather meager list of really good animal stories. A book about a deer. $2.50.

The American Song Bag by Carl Sandburg (Harcourt). A fairly encyclopedic collection of American folk song and balladry. Of unfailing interest to those who like to sing and hear the old songs. $7.50.

Kayser Hosiery Stands Alone

Points—yes, even fine, delicate hosiery has points—many of them if made by Kayser.

The most obvious point is the "Slipper Heel" which gives a slenderizing appearance to the ankle. Other points are the fine texture of the silk, the ample length of the hose itself, the new French inspired shades, the long wearing quality and the remarkably low price for an article of style plus quality.

NOTED LEADER SECURED FOR MEETINGS

College Five Loses To Alumni, 31-25

VETERAN STARS PLAY GREAT GAME TO WIN

Slim Crowd Sees One of Best Games of the Season. Girls are Absent.

McMURRAY STARS

Varsity Needs Polishing Before Meeting Birmingham Southern This Week.

Last Saturday night at the Alumni gymnasium, the annual Varsity versus Alumni wrangle for basketball laurels took place, and the ex-Highlanders came away with a well-earned 31-24 victory tucked away. The game was hard fought from first to last, and an extra period was necessary, as the count stood 20-all when the final whistle blew.

The Varsity, except for a desperate effort in the final canto which knotted the count, could not keep pace with the flying grads, who started fast and finished faster, scoring heavily in the overtime period to put the game on ice.

The first quarter saw little scoring, and ended 4-3, Alumni leading. This lead was increased to 9-3 at the half and 15-10 at the third quarter. The grads were out-scored 10 to 5 in the final stanza, and the game ended at 20-20.

The overtime period netted the Highlanders two field goals, while the Alumni garnered five double-deckers and a foul shot to finish ahead by a comfortable margin.

Bird and McMurray tied for high score honors, each having five field goals.

SIXTY-THREE COLLEGES HAVE RADIO STATIONS

Radio is rapidly gaining recognition in the colleges, both as a medium for broadcasting college activities and as a course of study for those who wish to make it their life work. Many of the larger stations are employing only college men in the capacity of announcer or director—men who have had microphone experience.

There are now sixty-three college radio stations in the United States. This is particularly remarkable, since it must be remembered that radio as a college institution is comparatively new. The colleges broadcast lectures, educational talks, talent recruited from the student body, etc. Some of the schools have large and beautiful studios with a staff of artists equal to any commercial station.

PERFECT ATTENDANCE RECORD FOR 19 YEARS

January 3—For the first time since 1909 when he began teaching in Maryville College, Professor Walker was unable to meet his classes today. Never before, in the nineteen years during which he has been here, has Professor Walker missed a class because of illness. Surely this is a commendable record.

This weather makes us want to go back up North where it's warm.

FIRE DAMAGE REPAIRED

The harmony room in the basement of the chapel, which was badly damaged by the fire the night on which "Graustark" was given, has been replastered. The work was done during the Christmas holidays. As soon as the blackboards are hung the room will be ready for use.

The much needed fire-extinguishers which were to have been placed in the chapel immediately after the fire, are not yet in evidence. It is to be hoped that they will be ready when they are next needed.

$400,000 Gift To Be Used on New Y.

Building on U. of Cincinnati Campus Will House Both Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.

A gift of $400,000 for the erection and maintenance of a Y. M. C. A. and a Y. W. C. A. building on the University of Cincinnati campus has been announced. This gift was made November 28 by Mrs. David B. Gamble, and her three sons Cecil H., Sidney D., and Clarence J. Gamble, in memory of the husband and father David B. Gamble.

This is the largest amount ever donated to the Christian Association for such a purpose, and the plans for the erection of the building have already been made. This is to be used by the students of the University and the people of the surrounding community. It is believed that it will fill a great need of the University.

Robert W. Bishop, executive secretary of the University Y. M. C. A. believes that "the facilities which will be available in this building will make possible the planning and working out of united and separate programs with Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, and with various student organizations." He also believes that "in as much as the building will house the headquarters for both the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. the activities of both sexes will result in natural, happy relationships between the sexes." Bob is a former student and graduate of Maryville College.

DR. MUDGE TO VISIT KNOXVILLE, MARYVILLE

Chief Permanent Executive of Presbyterian Church Coming Soon.

Knoxville and Maryville are to have official visits, Wednesday and Thursday, January 16 and 17, from the chief permanent executive of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian General Assembly. Dr. Mudge is to speak in the East Vine Avenue Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, and also at a men's convention in Knoxville. He is to address the students of Maryville College during his visit.

Dr. Mudge is Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. He has held this office since his first election in 1921. As Stated Clerk he is executive head of the office of the General Assembly. He is directly responsible for the smooth running of all the general business of the Presbyterian Church which has Synods and Presbyteries in every State of the Union and in 16 foreign countries.

Dr. Mudge received the degrees of Bachelor and of Master of Arts from Princeton University, of Doctor of Divinity from Franklin and Marshall, and of Doctor of Laws from both Lafayette College and the University of Dubuque.

Epidemic Passing; Danger Now Lies In Complications

Many Cases Before Holidays Caused Early Closure of School.

HILL FAIRLY SAFE NOW

Week Lost Not to Affect The College Schedule.

January 4—The flu epidemic which has been spreading over the United States during the past several weeks continues its hold on the people of this section, but it is believed by the medical authorities that the climax has been passed. Doctors are expecting a decline in the number of cases. They are still extremely busy and some of them have all the patients they can possibly care for. They have been able to catch only a few hours sleep each night since the epidemic struck the city.

The flu is most prevalent at the present in the rural districts. The Maryville public schools are to open on January 7, a week later than usual. It seems that the worst of the epidemic struck Maryville after the college dismissed.

Faculty Not Spared

There have been no serious cases of flu among the faculty but quite a number have been ill for varying lengths of time. Dr. Hunter's wife, several members of Dr. Wilson's family and some of Dr. Orr's family have been sick. Several of these are still confined to their homes.

Miss Caldwell has been very sick for the last two days. It was reported this morning that she spent an uncomfortable night and her condition had changed little.

Complications Fatal

There have been few fatalities in Maryville and vicinity. Most of the deaths have been caused by pneumonia or other complications in conjunction with the influenza. The flu this year is, generally speaking, proving fatal to only the very old or the very young, but the weakened condition brought about by it offers other diseases of a more deadly nature a chance to get a start. Dr. Bryant of the County Board of Health says that the epidemic is about past in this section of the state. He says, however, that there will probably be more deaths from now on than previously, due to complications following the flu. Pneumonia is the disease which must be guarded against.

Sick List Large

At present there are no patients in the college hospital. Before the suspension of school it was entirely full. It is impossible to state the number of students who were down with the flu, since comparatively few who had it went to the hospital and several went home as soon as they became sick. While there have been no serious cases of the disease among the students, the wave of sickness has been sufficiently widespread and inclusive to give a large part of the student body at least a touch of illness and quite a few persons are convinced that they had enough. Some persons believe that,

COLLEGE RELIGIOUS WEEK

The near approach of our February Meetings causes us to note what other colleges are doing along this line. Carrol College in Wisconsin has a Religious Week which is something like our February Meetings except the time is shorter. Their Religious Week was observed just before the holidays with Dr. R. M. Davis, a cousin of our Professor Davis, pastor of the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church in Chicago in charge.

Week Dropped Causes Shift in Calendar

Several Events Necessarily Dropped; Others Will Come Later.

Losing a week of school before Christmas gummed up the college calendar considerably. Various events which had been scheduled for that week had to be postponed or dropped completely. Dr. Wilson says, however, that there has been less trouble in arranging these dates than he had foreseen. Nearly everything has already been straightened out.

It is unfortunate that the program of Christmas carols that the Vesper Choir had been working on for some time had to be dropped. This is one program that could not be postponed. Likewise, the special program which the Y.M. and Y. W. were preparing had to be dropped. A date to sing in Knoxville Sunday morning which the Glee Singers had was also cancelled.

Following are a few dates which have been set. Some of these have had to be changed and others are as originally planned. Lyceum numbers, January 21, and February 16. Alpha Sigma midwinter, January 28. Theta Epsilon midwinter, February 25 (after the February meetings). Athenian midwinter, March 4. Life Work Conference, March 1, 2, 3.

COACH SAYS HOCKEY IS MOST DANGEROUS SPORT

Hockey, as played by the colleges, is more dangerous than football or any other sport according to Joseph Stubbs, Harvard Hockey Coach.

"A doctor is in attendance at all practices and games", says Coach Stubbs, "and he has a most complete equipment of medical supplies. It might be noted that we had two very severe injuries from skate cuts last season, both of which required prompt needlework. One of the visiting players dislocated his shoulder in a game, was etherized, his shoulder reset, and strapped up without leaving the building. There are very few practices or games where the doctor leaves without having a call for his services. Hockey is a dangerous game." (College Humor Service.)

It begins to look like there may be a girls' glee club on the Hill. The men's club is greatly agitated about it.

Resolutions Are All Wet; Sarah Indicates Two Main Weaknesses

Logical Arguments Would Put Out Useless Custom on Two Counts.

(By Sarah Moore)

The man who invented New Year's resolutions should have been jailed on the charge of being a public nuisance. He was an imbecile, a moron, and a half-wit. He set himself down to think of the most useless thing he could foist upon a believing people, and New Year's resolutions were the result.

One must, he declared, on January the first, take stock of oneself and make resolutions for the incoming year to remedy the defects thus revealed.

And having thus evolved this national custom, he was probably gathered to his fathers. Let us, at least, hope so. He was no good on earth.

As the debaters would proceed: New Year's resolutions are out on two counts: taking stock of oneself, and keeping the resolutions made.

As for taking stock of oneself—that suggestion is Antique Joke No. 1999. If everyone could look into the mirror on January the first and see himself as he is—the mirrors would be immediately broken. We can imagine Napoleon doing it. Napoleon probably confronted the mirror and took stock of himself in a manner somewhat like this:

"I am in my prime. I have a distinctive Roman profile. My brow is remarkably like Julius Caesar's. I am a good talker. I am a good executive—in fact, the only executive in the Empire. The people adore me. I have a marvelous brain—at least, Josephine told me so. And above all, I make an imposing figure on horseback. That reminds me—my riding costume must be cleaned immediately, and I need a new sword."

And the Emperor Napoleon the First probably forgot all about his bald head, rotund figure and double chin.

If the great Napoleon thus failed to take accurate stock of himself, what can a poor student be expected to do?

To proceed to our second point—again, as the debaters would have it—as to the matter of keeping the many noble, wise, and heroic resolutions. We will cite a Horrible Example and then make an end.

John Smith, Junior (not junior class) was a very likeable chap until he decided to make New Year's Resolutions. He could not think of any ready to hand, as he was a very good boy going to Maryville College, but at last he found the ideal resolution. He resolved to refrain from any more dates. He was conspicuous by his absence on the campus at noon and at basketball games and snaps at night. He jingled money in his pockets and declared that he was rich by reason of his dateless existence.

There was a girl who sat next our John in Psych. class. She sympathized with his resolutions. She thought it was a shame that so many girls were gold-diggers these days. She declared if she were a man she would do exactly as John was doing.

The next Sunday John took her to church. And after that a deluge of dates.

Let us all hereby highly resolve to make no more New Year's Resolutions.

Speaking of Christmas, we've counted at least eight new sparklers on the campus lately.

Rev. S. E. Stringham Again to Have Charge of Musical Part of Services.

The February Meetings have been so uniformly successful that the conviction that the college authorities have had, that they have, throughout their history, been providentially directed, seems to be amply justified. Surely no series of college meetings in the United States has gathered around it a more efficient corps of leaders. And, as the years pass by, additional leaders are becoming interested in them and bringing to them their individual contributions of service and enthusiasm.

This year a very remarkable arrangement may be reported. The president of another important institution of learning is making an unprecedented contribution of service to the Maryville College February Meetings, namely, the contribution of nearly two weeks of his time to the interests of religion in our institution. Impossible as such a sacrifice to another school than his own may seem, it is nevertheless true that Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, the President of the Louisville Theological Seminary, has most generously consented to be the leader of the Meetings for the current year of 1929, and this in spite of all the work that he has to do for his own institution.

No visitor has ever appeared on the Maryville College platform who has more fully captivated the students than has Dr. Vander Meulen, when on his occasional visits to Maryville. That we are to have twenty-two such masterly and convincing and inspiring addresses as Dr. Vander Meulen is accustomed to deliver will make this year another glorious year in the annals of the Meetings. And what a great contribution is this one that our genial friend, the President of the Louisville Seminary, is making to our chief event of the college year! Surely a boundless debt of gratitude is the one that Maryville people owe to Dr. Vander Meulen for his acceptance of our request for his invaluable services.

Dr. Vander Meulen comes of Dutch Reformed stock, than which there is no worthier stock in our composite Americanism. He earned his B.A. degree at Hope College; and he took his theological training in Princeton and McCormick Seminaries. He was ordained to the Presbyterian ministry in 1896. His principal pastorates have been in Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, New York, Louisville, and Oak Park. He had six years' experience as professor of psychology and pedagogy in his alma mater, Hope College; and has been president of the Louisville Theological Seminary for eight years. He also had two years' experience as superintendent of home missions in Oklahoma. In all these varied fields of labor he has garnered valuable experiences that enrich his sermons and deepen their influence. His acceptance of Maryville's invitation has added another red-letter day to Maryville's more than a half-hundred of such days encountered while preparing for the successive February Meetings.

Dr. Vander Meulen writes that he is looking forward with much pleasure to being with us in the Meetings; and that he hopes that students and teachers will be in prayer for the Meetings before they begin. Of the realization of this wish we are sure he may be very confident.

Rev. Sidney E. Stringham has admirably rounded out the program of the Meetings by sending a telegram of acceptance of the Musical Directorship of the Meetings. This

Happy New Year

We of the staff were all set to wish everyone a hearty Merry Christmas on Monday, December 17, when along came the announcement in chapel on the preceding Thursday that school would be dismissed at noon that day. Thus did the encroachment of the flu on the campus prevent us from spreading a little Christmas cheer through our columns.

It is too late to say Merry Christmas now, but we can still wish everyone a Happy New Year. The year is yet young and there is plenty of time ahead for happiness for everyone. May everyone find happiness at every turn of the way throughout the coming year!

Economical Reading

A wise man knows how to save. This is not an advertisement for the banks this time. Rather than that, it is intended to recall the fact often brought to our attention that time is our most precious possession. We may waste it or spend it wisely. A college course is supposed to be an investment of time that will pay dividends in the future. Are we all investing wisely?

For college people one of the best investments of time is in reading. Through systematic readings of the right kind we can so supplement our regular college work as to build for ourselves a well rounded fund of knowledge. One of the serious questions that confronts the would-be investor of time is, "where can I get the most for my money in an investment of this kind?"

For the man or woman who wishes to keep up with current events and current opinion without spending too much time obtaining it, there are various aids in the college library. The Literary Digest magazine is a popular and well-known aid to rapid reading. Some people like Time better. These are both very good magazines with which to keep up with current events. The Readers' Digest provides a simple means for keeping up with modern thought as expressed in various magazines. Its condensed articles contain all the high-points contained in the magazines from which they are taken.

Another very valuable aid in the reading of current magazines is the list of the Ten Best Magazine Articles which is published monthly by the national council of librarians. One of these lists is always posted on the bulletin board in the library. The list for December is still on the board and it contains the names and a short review of ten articles, eight of which may be found in magazines in the library. These articles are always the cream of the month's magazine offerings and therefore are worthy of the attention of everyone.

In reading, do not confine yourself too much to a single subject even thought it be the subject of your greatest interest or the subject of your life work. The great man nowadays is the broad-minded man. The specialist in a single field may do more for that field, but he is blind to a great deal of what is wonderful in life. There is always room for the man who is widely read and can see the inter-relations of all the things he sees around him.

—O—

Just a Suggestion

Examinations will soon be here. Then there will be a great and fervid devotion to study even by the light of midnight oil. Every season of exams finds it thus. Not only are there all night periods of review, but there are also note-books to be finished up and handed in, absences to be explained, etc. Might it not perhaps be possible to begin this pre-exam cramming a week or two ahead and get better results for a less tiring expenditure of energy? We realize that this is one of those practical ideas that does little good aside from filling space in the column. Someone might read, heed, and profit, however, so we print the suggestion.

—O—

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Senior: After my graduation, professor, what do you advise me to read?

Dr. Hunter: The help-wanted column.

From the etiquette book of a Cave man: Faint clout never won fair lady.

"I see that in London a man is run over every half hour."

"Poor fellow."

Whom the juries would acquit they first make mad.

"Yep, I had a mustache like yours once, and when I realized how it made me look I cut it off."

"Well, I had a face like yours once, and when I realized I couldn't cut it off, I grew this mustache."

"A man has the right to control his wife," says a judge. And a left to defend himself if she resents. Take notice "Gobo."

"Brown eyes indicate a weak will" states an oculist. Black ones probably a weak defense.

The doctors around here are telling us to avoid trouble by breathing through the nose. Yes, it keeps the mouth shut.

We suggest that the Student Council appoint a committee for the purpose of executing every and any senior who says, "Well, this is the last time we'll ever ——". Go on. You know their line.

He: What is that light in your eyes?

She: That's my stop-light, honey.

"I had a funny dream last night. I dreamt that my watch was gone. It seemed so real that I got up to see."

"Was it gone?"

"No, but it was going."

Jimmie Cox: (getting in late) What's the score?

Bob Anderson: Nothing to nothing.

Jimmie: Must be a good game!

Bob: No,—hasn't started yet.

Is it an optical illusion when a poor fish falls for a pair of eyes and then marries the whole girl?

Incidentally

——The last bus from Knoxville on Wednesday night brought back many reluctant students who had put off the evil hour till the last possible moment. Not that they weren't glad to get back—some more glad than others perhaps. Classes have resumed their customary monotony, and exams are hovering in the foreground.

——No fourth systematic speech! Could there be a more welcome Christmas present? The "flu" epidemic lived up to the saying that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

——The usual Christmas disruption of moonshining couples was less prevalent this year. Christmas and Easter have always been the favorite times for occurrences of this kind.

——The campus looks much the same as when we left it. There are some of our friends who, we regret to say, were detained at their homes by illness. But then, too, there are several familiar faces that we were not expecting to see back on the Hill attending classes as formerly.

——The girls must have been pretty hard on the matrons, for almost all of them were ill during the vacation, or are ill now.

——Miss Helen Scheibler and Mr. James Cartwright were married at Greensburg, Pa. during the holidays.

——Another Christmas wedding of interest was that of Phyllis Anderson and Luther Hammond, both Maryville graduates, which was solemnized at the Second Presbyterian church at Chattanooga, Tennessee.

——Miss Anna Cline's friends will be interested to learn that she, too, was married during the holidays.

——There is a rumor that there will be no basketball. Which brings up the question as to what is the difference between classes and games. Do germs know the difference?

——Bill Gillingham returned to school in time for his first class. This is remarkable considering the distance of the school from his home.

——Others, who lived at a greater distance, encountered several difficulties. One car full of boys enroute East discovered that the climate of West Virginia was not very healthful for them. They insured their future peace, happiness, and prosperity by making a hasty exit from that state.

——The Maryville cows must have had a change of spirit during the holidays. Milk last Thursday night!

——Walt Courtenay has just returned from his home in Canada. He was rather put out by a demand of eight dollars head tax when he came back into the States. This will be returned if he goes back within the next six months. He's going of course.

——If the game Saturday causes a big increase in the spread of flu the girls will at least be spared. For so far as they were concerned, there was no game.

There will be new song books for the February Meetings.

They may not play as good a brand of football in the south as they do in the west, but at least they don't run sixty or seventy yards toward the opponent's goal before locating the points of the compass.

They don't make as good footballs out there either—somebody fell on one and bursted it in the Georgia Tech-California game.

FEW STAY HERE X-MAS

The customary "big times" here on the Hill were not so big this year because nearly everyone went home. Quite a large number had planned to remain during the holidays, but the extra week of vacation and the urgent push of the flu was enough to send nearly everyone home.

Regular Quintet of Reed, J. Davis, Waddel, Bird and K. Davis to Start.

Wealth of Material Makes Positions Unstable.

The 1929 basketball schedule looks like a good array of games. Contests are listed with each of our Smoky Mountain Conference rivals—so we should be able to see a basketball champion emerge even though 1928 football schedules did not permit any laurels to be awarded, due to lack of conference games.

The first game, that with the Knoxville Y.M.C.A., will be a good curtain raiser. While it is not known who will start, chances are that the forward positions will be filled by Bird and Kemp Davis. Waddell will maneuvre at centre, while Capt. Reed and J. D. Davis will scintillate at the guard posts. These men are all veterans from last year and it goes without saying that the new men will have to work plenty hard if they are to displace any of them.

With the nice array of material on hand, and a well balanced schedule to play, Maryville College is looking forward to a successful basketball season.

CONTEST SATURDAY

The contest for extemporaneous speech for both men and women will be held by the four literary societies next Saturday night, Jan. 12. It is believed that a number of men and women from each society are planning to take part. The two winners in the final try-out will represent the college at the provincial convention at Lexington, Ky.

All-Smoky Mountain Conference Team Chosen By College Coaches

Maryville Places Three on Mythical Eleven, Taylor MacDonald and Bird.

Maryville again looms in the limelight of local football circles by placing three men on the mythical All-Smoky Mountain Conference Team. The men who are so honored are Harold Bird, who holds down the full back position, "Youth" Taylor at end, and Lowell MacDonald with one guard post to his credit.

These men deserve all the honor that such a selection gives them, and we look forward to seeing many Maryvillians gain similar laurels in the future.

The team chosen by the coaches of the six colleges represented is given below.

Ends—Taylor, Maryville; Mackie, Emory. Tackles—Brown, Milligan; Henritz, Emory. Guards—MacDonald, Maryville; Stickley, Emory. Center—Schwartz, King. Quarter—Moreno, Tusculum. Halfbacks—Littlejohn and Farmer, Emory. Full back—Bird, Maryville.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS SUPPORTED BY OIL

The University of Texas does not have to worry about raising money. Theirs is complete financial independence. Acres which were valued at ten cents when given to the University are now producing oil and bringing in wealth by the millions. So far, royalties from oil have amounted to over ten million dollars, a monthly gross income of two hundred thousand dollars.

Since the discovery of oil on their lands the student body has doubled and quadrupled.

Swimming Instructor Has Extensive Plans

Frosh and Soph Girls Must Take Swimming Next Semester. Boys' and Girls' Water Carnivals Being Planned.

The purpose of this article is to encourage interest in swimming and to hasten the opening of the pool. At present the pool is in need of slight repair. The college engineer says that the work could be done in a half day's time. If he were authorized the college engineer could begin work at once. Maryville has a good pool and it is a shame that we should allow it to remain unused, when the trouble to put it in order is so trivial. The swimming instructor is anxious to get started. He has some new ideas that sound interesting.

When the pool opens the freshman and sophomore girls will be required to attend swimming class once each week. They may attend every day except Monday and Saturday. Junior and senior girls will not be required to attend swimming classes. The boys are not required to take swimming. They can use the pool practically any time they wish.

Pan-American History

New Texts Will Do Justice To Countries Below Texas.

New York, N. Y. (by New Student Service). A student of Latin American history remarked last summer that the day is not far off when young North America will have the opportunity to study a high school course in "United States History" conceived in terms of the total influences and results of the general migrations of the western nations in the wake of Columbus.

Certainly we are beginning to discover that there is a rich and significant history and an important literature below Texas, as well as bananas and oil and timber. And while Mr. Hoover set out in his battleship to strengthen commercial relations the historians of several colleges are making possible a more enduring friendship through understanding. Last year the Duke University Press published the first of a series of monographs on Spanish American history and this year an even more important contribution is being undertaken by the University of North Carolina Press. An Inter-American Historical series is being planned, which will consist of fifteen volumes of histories of the Spanish-American countries. The histories will be those generally used in Spanish-American countries. There will be an atlas of Hispanic-American history.

More Action, Please!

There has been alarmingly little done since school took up this last Thursday. For that reason there is very little news as yet with which to burden our readers. This has made the filling of this issue rather difficult.

The year has begun, folks. What are you going to do about it? As soon as you wake up and give us a few sensations the Echo is ready to emblazon your efforts before a gaping and wondering world. If you do not feel like doing anything sensational, then how about writing a letter to the Echo on your pet subject for the perusal of the multitudes. We'll print it,—possibly "Bulldogs" Play First Game With H. S.

CALLOWAY HIGH POINT MAN

The Maryville College "Bull-dogs"—this time of basketball, not football—met the Everett High School team Friday night, January 4 at the Armory and won hands up by a 34-21 count. The "Bulldogs" scored consistently throughout the game—the score at the end of the third quarter being 24-13. Calloway and "Red" Wooten were high scorers for the Orange and Garnet—with five field goals each. Calloway also contributed two fouls out of four attempts.

U. T. DROPPED

U. T. will not be on Maryville's football schedule next fall. This fact was officially announced after the holidays and comes as a surprise to many, for it will be the first time in many years that the Highlanders have failed to meet the Orange and White gridders.

Many students, graduates, and other friends have protested against such a step, but certainly U. T. is not among those protesting. We would not have the audacity to assume that the university which lost only one game last season and was runner-up in the southern championship race, is afraid of Maryville's football team, but perhaps it would not be putting it too strong to say that they are extremely careful.

As has been her custom for some years, Tennessee offered Maryville the first game of the season, but since they have spring training and a wealth of material from last year's frosh squad, Coach Honaker declined to furnish U. T. with a practice game.

The University then offered October the fifth as a suitable date for the fray, but the Highlanders are due to ramble up to Kentucky State's field for an exhibition of turf cavorting and had to decline that offer. Our coach suggested the next week, but U. T. couldn't afford to play two big games in succession—Vandy is scheduled to meet Tennessee on the nineteenth, so they refused to play us on the twelfth.

We do not blame Tennessee in the least for taking this stand; we merely cite it as a tribute to the kind of football team Maryville puts out.

In the past few years the Highlanders have come so near wresting several games from the Volunteers, and have given them such strong opposition that they realize they have nothing to gain and everything to lose when they play us.

Downcast as we may be at the thought of not being able to make the welkin ring with shouts of "Beat U. T.", we have hopes of being able to raise the battle cry of "On to Vandy", since Vanderbilt has been added to our schedule for next fall.

We feel that Vandy will make a very adequate substitute for Tennessee, and we are already looking forward to it with a great deal of interest.

The schedule for 1929 follows:
Sept. 28—Wesleyan—Here
Oct. 5—Kentucky—Lexington
Oct. 11—King—Here

Epidemic Now Passing; Danger Now Lies in Complications

in view of the fact that there was a chance of the college closing early for the holidays, part of the sickness among the students about December 12 was imaginary. But no one can judge how another feels so it behooves no one to pass judgment in such a case. Be that as it may, it is very unlikely that anyone will encourage his imagination in that direction much now that vacation days are over and exams are looming up in the near future. However, those who do get sick should realize that the best course to pursue is to give in and rest completely. The few extra days spent in getting perfectly well are very wisely spent if a relapse is avoided.

No Make-Up Week

There will be no change in the schedule of the college. The week lost before Christmas will be made up as each teacher desires. It will not be necessary to go an extra week next Spring because the College calender calls for one more week's work than is necessary to maintain standing as a first class college.

There is very little danger that it will be necessary to close the college again. The state surgeon-general does not advise it because too little is known about the habits of the flu in spreading to warrant such action unless the local health officer thinks it advisable. Dr. Bryant says the worst is over. We who are still alive and kicking have much to be thankful for.

French Club Reorganized

The French Club was reorganized the last night before the Christmas holidays began, under its former name, Le Cercle Francois.

The following officers were elected:

Virginia Sting—President
Mary E. Woodard—Secretary
Mabel Dickerson—Treasurer
Ruth Laughead—Prog. Secretary
Earl Wilkinson—Serg't.-at-Arms
Polly Covington—Editor

Following the election of officers a short but interesting program was given, consisting of a bit of French humor by Dottie Holland, and a solo by Miss Gregory Gruchy accompanied by Miss Griffes.

STUDENTS GOING IN FOR MOVIES IN EAST

College men and women have come to the point where taking moving pictures at big games and winter sports festivals is the mode. In the East, where football originated, the students are going in for moving picture photography with the same amount of interest and enthusiasm that they show for archery, hockey and soccer. Movie clubs are next, for in this day and age of simple movie cameras, which now take color pictures and which are being shown in all attractive colors, it is possible to get a permanent record of your college days. And now one can even secure an f. 4.5 lens to give telefoto effects and objects will be larger and nearer when shown on the screen.

Mr. Lloyd's "Ten Days at Maryville College"

Last Year's Leader Expresses Thoughts Concerning February Meetings.

When Rev. Ralph Waldo Lloyd returned to Pittsburgh last year after conducting the February Meetings at Maryville, the editor of "The Presbyterian Banner" asked him to write an article about the Meetings. Mr. Lloyd complied with the request, and the article was published under the caption, "Ten Days at Maryville College".

As we approach this year's Meetings, our readers will be interested in Mr. Lloyd's impressions of last year's series. We are glad to be able to print about half of Mr. Lloyd's article. It is as follows:

Speaking twice a day for two school weeks to audiences of seven hundred to one thousand alert college students, faculty, and friends; meeting many in interviews concerning life problems; 'experimenting with the joy of generous friendships and contact with responsive minds and hearts; coming away somewhat weary in body, but refreshed and encouraged in spirit—such is the story of a leader of the annual religious services at one of our denominational colleges. The writer of this paper recently had the privilege of this experience in connection with the fifty-second series of "February Meetings" at Maryville College, Tennessee.

Maryville is one of our oldest Presbyterian colleges; there is a uniquely attractive campus of 275 acres on which are nineteen buildings; the enrollment is limited to 750 students. These young men and women come from over forty states and countries; they are representative American college youth, perhaps somewhat above the average in their advantages of a religious background, but withal of the same stuff, wrestling with the same temptations, asking the same questions about religion and science and all life, displaying the same urgent interest in athletics, romance, life work. The February Meetings have strong traditions back of them. A bulletin just issued says they "have through many, many years been an integral part of the life on College Hill," and "are periods of quiet thought when young men and women are brought face to face with life's most important decisions." The faculty and student Christian associations are carefully organized

Tulip Bed on Campus a Knox Club Donation

Club Also Gives Three Books to Library; Other Clubs Should Take Heed.

The Knoxville Club has recently decided to show everybody that it not only exists, but also can be of some service to the school as an organization. The club has presented three new books to the college library and is directly responsible for the construction of a tulip bed in front of Pearsons Hall.

Probably everyone noticed the newly-made flower bed in front of the dining-hall upon returning to the Hill after the holidays. Comparatively few know that the Knoxville Club is responsible for it. We are very glad to give the club this recognition of their service which will be more appreciated when the tulips begin decorating that section of the campus later on. The bed will contain three hundred mixed Darwin bulbs. These were given to the club by a friend of the club president who is connected with Baum's Home of Flowers. In addition to this gift, Mr. Dailey, a Knoxville florist, is giving to the college through the Knoxville Club some shrubbery which will be used around some campus building, probably the chapel.

"The Lure of the Smokies", by R. L. Mason is the first of the three books donated to the college library. Mr. Mason is a Knoxville artist who is equally capable in describing the beauties of our neighboring mountains and in telling amusing tales of the people who live in these mountains.

"They Knew the Washingtons", is a translation from the French by Princess Radzewill. The book contains the letters of a French soldier who lived with his family in Virginia. It is not known certainly that these letters are authentic, but they are certainly interesting and reconstruct intimately and exactly an

Take Heart; Our Exams Mere Amusement Compared With Early Harvard Finals

(By Sarah Moore)

There are many of us who wish for the return of the olden days, but during examination time we are more apt to sigh for the days of yore, when men were men and examinations were not. Like Miniver Cheevy, we miss "the mediaeval grace of iron clothing." When notebooks pile thick and fast and assignments even thicker and faster, we wish passionately that we might have lived some three hundred years ago and thus have escaped the torture of examinations.

But, alas! It has been just recently re-discovered that a Puritan youth was, more unfortunate in the matter of examinations than we. Compared to his program of examinations, our exams are mild mental exercises conceived by doting professors for our pleasure and amusement.

This heartening information was found in an account of the founding of Harvard College, written by "the Reverend and learned Cotton Mather" in his book "Magnalia Christi Americana, or The Ecclesiastical History of New England from 1620 to 1698." Yes, that's the title. (Editor's note: We have at last discovered the origination of the double, title, so successfully used in dime novels; for example, "Troubled Waters or the Vengeance of Vivian." The origination of this unique device was the Reverend and learned Cotton Mather.) As we were saying, this weighty volume proves beyond a doubt that a collegiate young man of that day had to be a scholastic genius in order to pass the examinations of Harvard College. (He was either a genius of scholarship or of the art of cramming.)

The Reverend Cotton Mather did not seem to think the first three classes worthy of his attention in the matter of examinations, but reports only the examinations of the seniors. He thus describes the procedure:

"Those then who stood candidates to be graduates were to attend in the hall for certain hours three weeks together towards the middle of June, which were called weeks of visitation; so that all comers that pleased, might examine their skill in the languages and sciences, which they now pretended unto."

So it seems that young Master Jonathan's graduation and examination became a matter of community concern. Imagine a long line of neighbors, trying to look intelligent and critical, when one repeats at their request the first Psalm in Greek, then in Hebrew, and finally in Latin verse, or rattles through the declension of the paradigms of nouns and verbs in the Greek. But certainly there were compensations. One might conceivably settle a long standing score against the sour-faced deacon whose Sabbath task was to waken those sleeping in church by telling him to his face one's blackest opinion of him—in Hebrew, of course—while he stood confronting one, convinced that Master Jonathan was repeating the thirteenth chapter of the second book of Corinthians.

In the following paragraphs the Reverend and learned Cotton Mather proceeds in his scholarly fashion to describe the graduation exercises of the "commencers"—(Nowadays, no freshman even thinks of applying that name to the graduates)—at which the "commencers" delivered orations "not only in Latin, but in Greek also, and sometimes in Hebrew." The whole affair seemed to be a Marathon talking contest. The man who had the best wind and longest oration probably graduated with first honors.

To quote our historian: "At the close of the day the Praesident, with the formality of delivering a Book into their hands gave them their first degree." It would seem to us more like the third degree.

As Pollyanna once brightly remarked, "Are'nt you glad we didn't graduate then?"

Men: Learn to Cook; Save Trouble Later

New Home Ec Course For Men Starts Next Semester.

Yes, the rumors you've heard are true. The Home Economics Department is opening a new course for men. Such courses have long been offered by many co-educational institutions and have been found to be very popular and valuable. This one will be called, "Problems in the Selection of Food and Clothing for Men." It is offered for two credits.

Men and women with college trained minds are no longer a novelty, and intellectual perfection alone does not guarantee success. There is an extra indefinable something that distinguishes the truly successful man.

He is a perfect host.

He carves and serves easily and well.

He aids the hostess and assumes his share of responsibility.

He is unobstrusively well mannered.

He observes the little courtesies that distinguish the true gentleman.

He chooses his food wisely, and with knowledge of food values.

He orders correctly and well when entertaining guests publicly.

He can prepare a simple and palatable camp meal.

He is correctly dressed at all times.

He can distinguish good from poor material.

He can determine good color combinations.

He can differentiate between style and fad.

He knows he can take his place at any social function without self consciousness.

He is the man who is pointed out as the desirable "successful man".

Such problems as these, and others that may be offered will be discussed. All men interested are asked to see Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz.

Oh the Goops they licked their fingers,
And the Goops they licked their knives,
The Goops they tipped their soup bowls,
Oh, they led disgusting lives.

The Goops they shocked their neighbors,
And then they shocked their wives,
By drinking tea from saucers,
And eating peas with knives.

And then they mended them their ways
Of eating peas and soup;
Their teacher taught them how to say,
"I'm not a Goop,
Are You?"

Registration Begins Week Starting Jan. 22

Seniors Lead; Juniors, Sophs, and Frosh Follow.

Registration for second semester classes will be taken care of during the week beginning January 22. Seniors will be registered first, then juniors, then sophomores, and lastly freshmen. Naturally, students will register for one semester courses only, and for comparatively few of these since most of the second semester courses were registered for in September.

Freshmen were registered for the entire year in September. Readjustments and necessary changes in freshman schedules will be made after the registration of upper classmen.

Readjustments and changes which must be made in any student's courses will be made the following week.

Registration of new students and old students returning will begin January 29.

The schedule for the second semester will be as announced in September with few changes.

Logic will be added at an "x" hour.

A new course in religious education, 34b, will be added. This is "Psychology of Religion."

Two new Home Economics courses, 33f and 35A are described elsewhere in this issue.

Vagabonds Featured In Shrine Program

Maryville Quartet in Great Demand at Knoxville Station WNOX.

January 11—The Dixie Vagabond Quartet made its third radio appearance tonight at WNOX, Knoxville, this time from the St. James Hotel studio. They contributed three numbers to the special Shrine Luncheon Club program which was unusual in variety and quality. The quartet's work on this program got "out on the air" in better shape than at either time heretofore.

Tuesday, January 8th, the quartet sang in the Hotel Farragut dining-room at the dinner and installation ceremonies of the district governor and other officers of the Kentucky-Tennessee District of Kiwanis.

The quartet was booked to appear at the various Booth theatres here in East Tennessee during the Christmas holidays, but due to a cold and fluish inclinations in the baritone section the Vagabonds were forced to cancel their engagements.

Ministerial Association

Wednesday night, January 9, the Ministerial Association met and elected officers. Those chosen to lead the association next semester are:

Robert Crosby - - President
Phillip Vogel - Vice President
Lynn Rankin - - Secy.-Treas.
Ira Morrison - - - Editor

The devotions were led by Ira Morrison after which he gave a talk on Prophecy.

Next week the new officers will be installed.

"But surely, Morgan, seeing is believing."

"Not necessarily, Thammy, I see you every day."

Marionettes Will Portray Story of the Thrilling Voyage

The biggest attraction of the year's lyceum program will be here on the 21st of this month. Tony Sarg's marionettes will be seen here on that night at eight o'clock presenting the newest production of the puppet master, entitled, "The Adventures of Christopher Columbus", a fantasy based on the Washington Irving History of Columbus.

There will be a special afternoon performance to which all the Maryville school children will be invited free of charge. This performance will probably begin at 2:30 o'clock. The night performance for college students and town people will begin as before stated at eight o'cock.

These magic marionettes give ten scenes all in every way equal to the previous successes of Treasure Island, Rip Van Winkle, Don Quixote and other Tony Sarg favorites. Much glue, sawdust, wires, silk and wool, and imagination have gone into the creation of King Ferdinand, Queen Isabella, the courtiers, pirates, Indians, sailors and sixty odd characters who appear in this melange of mirth. The clothes were created in Spain, and brought to this country by a company which never got further than New York, and are pronounced by all as marvels of costuming. Tony Sarg assures us that the cast is the largest, most talented, most distinguished and most bestringed he has ever assembled to grace his miniature stage. The scene under the sea where Red Beard the villain is thrown from the good ship Santa Marie, to be finally swallowed by a monstrous fish is greeted with "Ohs" and "Ahs" at every performance. Scenically the new show is said to be the last word in puppetdom. There are the usual number of animals, a prima donna feline, a Spanish dog, monkeys and snakes and a donkey who is something of a comedian. One of the funniest characters that has ever stepped on a marionette stage is the irrepressible servant who accompanies Christopher Columbus on his voyages. A good successor to Ali Baba is what they all say of Christopher Columbus.

New York University Dean Recalls Truths

Dean Brown Says in Age of Rushing We Should Take Stock Occasionally.

January 9—Marshall S. Brown, Dean of the Faculties of the University of New York, addressed the student body this morning in chapel. We are indebted to Dr. Stevenson for Dean Brown's visit; he was on his way to Chattanooga to attend a meeting of the Association of American Colleges.

The Dean was introduced by Dr. Stevenson who cheerfully admitted that he was largely responsible for the Dean's success. Dean Brown later acknowledged this fact without embarrassment.

Dean Brown's address did not deal with any new thoughts. He recalled to us certain truths which have been tempered and tested by time. According to the Dean it is wise in this age of rushing forward to stop

Little Blue Books

In a few days the college faculty will begin its private and semi-annual collection of little blue books. The collection of these blue-backed manuscripts (in the original) is sponsored each semester by the college; the faculty officiates. In accordance with aged-in-the-wood principles, the expense to the students in this special drive is cut down as much as is at all possible. According to the plan now in use, the individual student buys the blue books in blank form at the astonishingly small price of three for five cents. The student then takes one of these really rather insignificant books to the class-room where he has been studiously studying some particular subject for the past semester and there with the aid of thought-invoking questions, graciously supplied by the instructor, proceeds to fill it with the fruit of a semester's work. Thus, with no additional expense to the student he is able to present to the college a small volume which cost him practically nothing, and which in its finished form is often worth many times that much.

Each student is asked, yea, expected to prepare such an original manuscript in each subject which he has studied during the semester; to neglect such a duty would be a sad blow to the Alma Mater and a sign of inappreciation of the efforts which the instructors have put forth in order that we may go forth from our classes, masters of their subjects.

Originality is stressed,— always. The professors have read the regular course texts,—even as we have,—and are therefore eager to obtain the old truths in new form. Many professors go to some pains to see that the books they collect bear nothing except the imprint of the individual student's thoughts.

Thousands of these volumes are collected each semester. It is indeed unfortunate that they are no more carefully preserved. Not only would students be interested in reading the literary efforts of their fellow sufferers, but also there might be some commercial value to some of them. It is certain that many radically new thoughts are developed in every examination. Occasionally, even the professors must admit their ignorance of some of the statements they find in these little blue books. Perhaps this great waste of mental wealth is now waiting some ingenious person who will be able to take it and make something of value therefrom. They used to throw away coal-tar.

The Question of Honesty

Some students just entering Maryville from high-schools are surprised to find that there are college students who cheat on examinations. They may be justly surprised, too, because the idea of anyone using the time and money necessary to gain a college education and then being dishonest on examinations is quite illogical. The fact remains, however, that it has been done and probably will be done again in the coming examination.

Some students who cheat try to fool the teacher only; they seem not to mind letting their fellow students know what sort of tactics they use. Apparently their ideas of honesty have been moulded to suit the needs of the occasion. Their "still, small voice" of conscience was probably stifled when but a whisper. Cheaters in this class are in school to get through,—the easiest way possible.

Another sort of student who will cheat if he gets a chance is the one who tries to fool the teacher and his fellow-students. He realizes the dishonesty involved, but is quite willing to forgive a little waywardness in himself,—if he can get by with it. He does recognize that there is some stigma cast upon one who cheats and, therefore, tries to do the dirty work as privately as possible.

Occasionally we read attacks on our modern youth with some arguments based on cheating done in the colleges nowadays. It is probably a fact that there is much more of this going on now than formerly. There is a rather satisfactory reason for this difference, however. The college students of yesterday were far fewer and were all in college for an education. Now the colleges are drawing on a much larger class of people. Students come for athletics, extra-curricula work, social activities, the prestige of a degree, etc. Yet, now, as formerly, the student who comes to college with a serious purpose in view doesn't cheat. He is the real college student.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

We've uncovered a bit from the honorable Frank Baker's dark past. When he was young he was once asked in an examination to give three reasons why the earth was round. He handed in the following: "The book says it's round; my teacher told me it was round, and a man told me it was round."

Men are more valuable than women. Every man has his price but brides are given away.

Chink Jones has given up all other college work to make a good mark in French.

Did you hear about Jane Duke's position on the staff? No? Well, she associates with the editor.

Dean: Does the question embarrass you, Mr. Matthews?

Walt: Not at all, sir. It's the answer that bothers me. (Editor—What could embarras Walt?)

Mrs. Cartwright: I want to buy some lard.

Grocer: Pail?

Mrs. Cartwright: I didn't know it came in two shades.

Ing Fell: Did you get on at Winchester? I saw you, but I didn't recognize you.

Betty Wilbur: Of course you didn't; I had too much baggage.

The Echo Staff is losing one of its most competent workers. Miss Edna Baither, one of our staff editors, is leaving us at the close of this semester to delve into the sea of matrimony. Edna has had charge of the regular front-page items. She has not only been a conscientious workerr for the staff, but has creditably looked after the funds of the Y. W. C. A. and has filled her position in the book room most capably.

We are sorry to see Edna leave the campus, but we are sure that she has chosen the right course. We wish you the best of happiness and prosperity in the future, Edna.

Incidentally

—Freshmen are beginning to grow gray and wrinkled, for they have just heard the news that if one is so unfortunate as to flunk two subjects, he will not be invited back to school next semester. Freshmen aren't the only ones who are worried. Lessons are being studied as never before and we trust that the teachers are receiving the benefit of the "good impressions" for which the students are striving. It has been suggested that the book-room and the Y stores put in a supply of midnight oil before next week.

—When the teachers ask what the students think is most necessary to review, the students agree in thinking that the important things are the ones which the teacher thinks are important. Not bad reasoning, at that.

—An exam in music is the subject of a great deal of controversy. The poor, overworked student has awakened to the realization that life is not an empty dream any longer—that it contains some very unpleasant realities.

—A "Bride's Course" is to be offered by the Home Economics department next semester. Watch the moonshiners rush to the registrar's office!

—Prof. Griffitts tells the advanced Chemistry students that their problems are just freshman problems. Get the irony in that "just", freshmen!

—We were glad to see Mary Ella smile again,—we thought maybe she'd forgotten how.

—Cheer up, dormitory girls, things might be worse. Just suppose you lived in the Phillippine Islands where a young couple is always accompanied by a chaperone who walks between the young people, and where the girl's family always helps her to entertain the young man.

—We understand that the library is giving New Year's greeting cards to some of the couples. The cards run something like this: "Let's start the New Year right by moonshining,——not in the library."

—Mrs. Snodgrass is starting a zoo. She already had some interesting specimens among the fair damsels entrusted to her care. Now she has some goldfish and a canary.

—The sweet odor of hydrogen sulfide has been permeating the Carnegie atmosphere at intervals lately. If we had to choose between firecrackers and stink bombs probably the former would be chosen. Gas warfare is inhuman. So is this odor.

FRED HOPE PLEDGE FUND

Last November the students of Maryville College were both honored and thrilled to have a visit from Fred Hope, our own missionary in Africa, who was then on furlough. Many of us, after listening to his inspiring addresses, signed our names on the dotted line and signified how much we were willing to subscribe for the advancement of Mr. Hope's splendid work.

At that time the pledges received amounted to $1343.50. The total paid up to date is $976.20. That is, of the $1343.50 subscribed only $367.30 is lacking. This indicates that students are paying their pledges in a gratifying way. During the past few days over a hundred dollars has been paid. Those students who have not yet paid their pledges are requested to settle this debt to Mr. Hope as soon as possible.

and take account of what we have; "presumption is in favor of the thing that has been."

Here are a few of the thoughts the Dean re-emphasized in his address: "The final aim of education is character.—There is no easy or royal road to knowledge or mastery useful life is not pleasant. The useful life is not pleasant—The main factor in human progress is the Christian church.—Friendliness and sympathy take time, but are worthwhile.— Because you agree with the thoughts of someone who takes the trouble to think does not make you a thinker.—Be progressive, but don't throw away the experience of the ages."

Lights that Fill the Skies with Commerce

THE air map of America is now in the making—on the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so to-morrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

A majority of the beacon lights used in airport and airway illumination have been designed and manufactured by the General Electric Company, whose specialists have the benefit of a generation's experience in the solution of lighting problems.

Juniors Win Soccer Tournament Spectacular Game Wednesday

Class of '30 Again Wins Class Soccer Championship. Beats Sophs 2-1

CAPTAIN PEARSON FORCED TO SPEND MOST OF GAME ON SIDELINES DUE TO RECENT ILLNESS. OLIVE CLOPTON, JUNIOR FORWARD, STARS.

(By Polly Covington)

Station P-O-L-L-Y, of the Highland Echo, Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn., broadcasting from the Alumni Gym the results of the final game of the Girls' Soccer Tournament on Jan. 9, 1929. Now my unseen friends of the radio audience I will not undertake to present to you the game play by play but instead will give only the most important details.

As you doubtless know, the sophomores play the juniors to decide the championship. The line-ups are as follows:

	Sophomores	Juniors
L. F.	R. Laughead (1)	G. Caulton
C. F.	Fullerton (c)	O. Clopton (2)
R. F.	H. Bowers	V. Boyd
L. Wing	B. Rodgers	L. Lovette
R. Wing	V. Carter	F. Crabill
L. Half	W. Lowery	E. Hunter
C. Half	D. Bassell	R. Buchanan
R. Half	M. Lowery	E. Burns
L. Fb.	C. Cushman	M. Haynie
R. Fb.	H. Meinich	E. Nash
Goalkeeper	L. Wright	H. Crowder

Substitutions: Juniors, E. Hampton. Referee: G. Weller.

Both teams are on the floor warming up,—the referee blows the whistle and the shin kicking contest is on. The game is being played at a fast and furious pace. Capt. Pearson is seen pacing up and down the side-lines tearing her hair as she urges her team on to scalp those sophs. Unfortunately she is kept from the game by a recent attack of flu but nevertheless is in uniform and what time she doesn't dash up and down the sidelines she is imploring Coach Queener to please let her play.

Capt. Pearson's efforts are rewarded for Olive Clopton inspired by the pathetic spectacle on the sidelines sends the ball over the line "where the streets are paved with goal." But Ruth Laughead retaliates and the score stands 1-1 as the whistle blows for the end of first quarter.

The ball is back in center and the second quarter commences. Still more kicks and hard knocks ensue for this is the last time one gets a chance to sock another and not have at least a guilty conscience. Clopton becomes inspired again and the ball is kicked for a goal again. My friends, hear the howl of the junior's side as the goal is scored. They're backing their team to a man. This added score seems to wake the sophs and they fight harder than ever. And the whistle blows ending the first half with the score 2-1 in favor of the juniors.

Station P-O-L-L-Y, of the Highland Echo, Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn., broadcasting the second half of the junior-sophomore game which decides the Soccer Champions of Maryville College. The referee signals and the ball is placed in center and the war is again on. Haynie, Crowder and Clopton of the juniors and Laughead, Cushman and the Lowerys are doing remarkable bits of work. Those sophs surely are keeping Helen, the junior Goalkeeper, moving around but they are unsuccessful in scoring and the third quarter ends with the juniors still leading 2-1.

The fourth quarter begins and we find Capt. Pearson in her old place, keeping up the same old fight. The sophs are kicking everything possible to score but alas it's impossible. We see the fourth quarter coming to a close and they are unable to score. This is by far the best soccer game of the past two seasons and as the final whistle blows the score decides in favor of the junior team as the champs, and so we conclude our program for the evening ladies and gentlemen—I thank you.

The Old Timer Says

That wrestling they put on at the basket ball game was about as interesting as anything we've had between halves. The tumblers were good, but of course you can't expect one of the tumblers to get hurt.

All of which is the reason the chronic moonshiners want bigger and better wrestlers.

Somebody told me there was going to be a football banquet. I guess they're right, because there hasn't been one yet.

I wonder if Mr. Proffitt has considered selling season tickets to the townspeople for our basketball games. It might work.

One of those Frosh coeds sat next to me at the opening game last week. I learned a great deal about basketball,—and other things.

I heard one of them giggle excitedly to her friend, "They call him Suitcase; isn't that precious?" Tough break, Slim!

Lots of freshmen saw their first college game of basketball the other night; I wonder how many of them know how to keep score yet. Yes, the score counts just the same as it did at old Wampus Hollow High.

Can't help wishing that our old friend Jean McMurray were cavorting on the floor when I see boys like Neippe throwing them in from the center. Reminds me of the time Maryville played two extra five minute periods to beat Tennessee on our floor. Jean tossed in no less than five from the center space in ten minutes. And from his performance the other night it looks like he was keeping in rare form.

There was a soccer game the other afternoon, but I guess the girls were trying to get even with the fellows for pulling a game the other night and not telling them anything about it.

Anyhow, we weren't invited.

SURVEY COURSE IN HOME ECONOMICS

What is popularly known as the bride's course in home economics will be offered here next semester.

It is a course in simple home meal planning and practical cookery. To make the course available to all who want it there will be no prerequisites. It is designed especially for juniors and seniors, but will not be confined to those classes. To keep the class small enough for valuable instruction, and to use the laboratory equipment to best advantage, more than twenty students cannot be accommodated.

Knoxville "Y" Bows To Maryville's Quintet

Variety of Floor Combinations Used in Winning 32-23.

Jan. 8.—Tonight the Maryville basketeers met their first outside opposition. The Knoxville Y.M.C.A. had a good team and a large crowd watched a close game. Up until the last few minutes of the game scoring was close. Maryville then forged ahead so that when the final whistle blew she was leading the opponents with a score of 32-23.

Members of the home quintet acquitted themselves nobly against the strong "Y" team. J. D. Davis and "Tillie" Bird were outstanding players. K. Davis played a nice game and was high point man. He placed to his credit 4 field goals and 3 fouls.

EXTEMPORANEOUS SPEAKERS CHOSEN

Interest has broken out on the Hill in a form of activity which has heretofore been practically unknown in Maryville. The extemporaneous speakers made an exhibit of their wares Saturday night in literary societies. For once there were uniform programs in all the societies with each meeting in its own hall.

The occasion for this uniformity in programs was extemporaneous speaking contests in which each society chose its representative for the final contest when the college representatives will be chosen.

The general subject matter was politics,—a subject of live interest on the Hill.

But even with the same purpose in view and the same subject to be discussed the programs of the societies varied somewhat. The Alpha Sigma chose as its representative, John Weinand, a senior and former president of the society. The judges were taken from outside the society.

The Athenians, true to their forerunners of Athens, chose three representatives by popular vote. These were Roger Rusk, Robert Wetmore, and Frank Hutchinson.

The Theta Epsilon society had only one member to try for the place. This was Ruth Laughead, from the last year's freshman debating team.

The Bainonians had more contestants but chose only one. This was Louise Overly.

The date for the final contest has been set tentatively for February 2. This will be a joint meeting of the societies where one boy and one girl will be chosen to represent the college.

The successful aspirants in this contest will accompany Mr. Queener to the Pi Kappa Delta Convention in Kentucky this spring and take part in the contests there. Also Mr. Queener hopes to arrange for some contests with neighboring colleges of East Tennessee. The latter is not arranged but is being planned.

HOPES FOR GIRLS' GLEE CLUB FINALLY REALIZED

The girls' Glee Club of Maryville College will hold its first meeting of organization sometime during the week beginning January 13. Approximately twenty girls selected from the most talented singers in the college will compose the membership of this club. Miss Henry will be the club director.

Mary Chris Benn is one of the girls who has been leading the efforts for the organization of a girls' glee club. She is confident that the girls' club will soon "make itself heard" hereabouts. Singers will been enlisted partly from the voice department and partly from among those not studying voice, but who show themselves worthy of membership. Luck to you, ladies!

"What's your room-mate like?"

Birmingham-Southern In Good Form To Beat Highlanders 39-27

NEIPPE, BIRMINGHAM CENTER, MAKES 14 POINTS. MARYVILLE PUSHES VISITORS HARD DURING FIRST HALF, AND SCORES 18 POINTS.

BEST GAME SEEN HERE LATELY

January 11—We saw the Highlanders go down to defeat before the smooth Birmingham Southern combination in the Alumni Gym here tonight. The local lads showed lots of spirit but were outclassed by the boys from Alabama. Naippe, Birmingham captain, led the scoring with six field goals and two foul shots, and played a sensational game throughout. Bird of Maryville, and Sargent of Birmingham stood next in the scoring with twelve points each.

In spite of the fact that the Maryville five did not seem to be able to break down the defense of its foes, the game was one of the best ever played on the home court. The main difficulty as seen by several observers was in the failure of our men to turn the ball lose at the critical moment. This cannot be blamed on any particular players, but seemed to be a general breakdown in the element of the game known as speed. It is hoped that the passing of the season will show great improvement along this line.

The opposing defense was the best we've seen on this floor in a long while. Maryville broke through occasionally for a bit of stellar floor work, but the Southern sons did not allow much scoring at close quarters. The home team kept up the rapid pace set by the invaders for the first half, holding the score to 21-18. The second half saw Birmingham in good form, gradually piling up the eleven point lead.

Kemp Davis, the fly-weight forward, played a great game, but was beaten down by the big boys from Birmingham in the last quarter when he took more punishment than a sparring partner of the Manassa Mauler. J. Davis played his usual steady game at running guard.

The visitors should receive a word of appreciation for the good spirit they showed throughout the contest, and for the compliment they paid our cheering section. They said we had the best spirit of sportsmanship they had encountered on their trip. This in spite of the fact that several fellows forgot themselves long enough to question some of the referee's decisions.

The line-up follows:

Maryville		Birmingham
K. Davis, 4	f.	O'Brien, 2
Bird, 12	f.	Sargent, 12
Waddell, 7	c.	Neippe, 14
Reed, Capt.	g.	Currie, 2
Davis, 4	g.	Black

Substitutions: Maryville, Vincent, Jarvis, Wooten; Birmingham-Southern, Summerford.

Referee: Crittendon, Tennessee.

Saturday at the Societies

Bainonian

Due to the postponement of our program last Saturday night for the extemporaneous speaking contest, "Women in Politics", the program for January 19 will be the same as announced before,—a radio program. The main theme of the program will center around the meaning of the word Bainonian,—Traveler. We are promised lots of good music, and other entertaining numbers so—"We'll meet you at Bainonian."

Alpha Sigma

The program secretary has been able, during the holidays to sign up some high priced talent, and he has booked them for appearance here next Saturday night, January 19. The names of those in this galaxy of stars have not been revealed, so one number of the program has been listed as simply—"Extra Special".

2. Alma Mater
3. Roll Call
4. Duet—Cook and Smith
5. Al Jolson - - Chilly Bowles
6. Extra Special - - (?) (?)
7. Alpha Sigma Advance - - - Max Hurst

Theta Epsilon

Out for Theta Saturday night to start the New Year off just right! Our program wil be given by the new girls. We have seen by previous programs how really capable they are.

Come and see this play, "Our Aunt from California":

Felicia Needey - Mildred MacKenzie
Rosalie Needey - - Nellie Aills
Sally Needey - Marion Nooman
Mrs. Needey - Lillian Thromby
Miss Wilcox - - Lucile March
Mrs. Merry Muntoburn - - Virginia Crider

The program will be completed by special music.

A large number of prayer groups meet for several weeks. Attendance is compulsory at the morning chapel service which during the meetings lasts about fifty minutes; night attendance is voluntary but amazingly large; there is wonderful group singing under a trained leader; definite opportunity is given for making and registering life decisions for Christ and service.

Professor George A. Coe, in his suggestive little book, "What Ails Our Youth?" indicts the denominational college for not attempting to demonstrate the salutary result of religion permeating the whole plan and structure of education, insisting that few, if any, denominational colleges and academies take religious education to be their primary function, but that "what we see happening here is competition with state institutions upon the basis of secular standards instead of competition between a religious and a secular standard." Recently Dean Walter S. Athearn, speaking in Pittsburgh, made a similar charge. Such estimates by men like these should give us pause. This paper aims to set forth no general conclusions, but its writer comes from Maryville convinced of a real and intelligent effort to have vital Christianity and true education grow into one structure. The February Meetings effect but a concentration of the emphasis running through all the year at the hands of an able college pastor, a Christian faculty, an excellent and developing Department of Bible and Religious Education. Professor Coe's statement is doubtless true in too many institutions; but adjustments similar to that at Maryville will be found in more than a few of our colleges. The lack of constructive religious emphasis in many so-called "state or secular school" departments promises to be a greater peril.

If this is important, in the development of our educational technique, equally significant to the understanding of youth's attitude to religion may be the student reaction to the presentation of the claims of Jesus. Of their interest there could be no doubt. And not only interest but response also. That the vast majority of seven hundred fifty American students, in the absence of any high pressure methods, would definitely register a forward step in response to plain and demanding propositions, augurs much for youth and the future of the Christian enterprise. And it signifies the essential presence of the Spirit of God.

In one of our issues last Fall we appealed to the various clubs to do something of the sort that the Knoxville Club has done. We are glad that this club has set the pace and we hope that many others will see fit to do something of value to the college before the next semester is over.

Prayers for February Meetings Ascend from Many Parts of World

Parents Especially Pleased by Emphasis Placed on Religious Life.

The prayer meeting enlisted in be half of the February Meetings is a world-wide one. Every year a large number of letters and telegrams are received that tell of prayers that are ascending in behalf of the Meetings. The following extracts from such communications received last year show how widespread and how earnest is the interest of friends and former students in the Meetings and in their success:

The oldest living alumnus, New Mexico: "I have the College Meetings in mind. My wife and I will remember these meetings each day at our family altar. May God abundantly bless the College and the Meetings."

A former member of the faculty: "My thoughts turn to the College in these opening days of the February Meetings. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and he will not fail us now."

A father: "I am glad to join my heart with yours in earnest prayer for a definite decision for Christian lifework for your students. You will not consider it selfish if I put special stress on one, my only son, who was given us in answer to prayer. We are hoping that God may use him, and that the influence of the Meetings may be helpful in that direction."

An alumnus in Princeton: "I assure you of never-ceasing prayer for the Spirit's power to be manifested in old Maryville. The thought constantly recurs to me that, though dear Dr. Elmore is so sorely missed, yet he is enjoying these February Meetings more even than any he has conducted."

An alumnus in Texas: "Maryville students and faculty are in the midst of the annual February Meetings. How I wish that I could be with you on this occasion! Our old College has a way of twining our hearts about her. My prayers are that you may have the most helpful meeting that you have ever experienced."

An Ohio alumnus of 1894: "May God grant that this series of meetings may be the richest in the deepening of the spiritual life of the entire student-body and in the number of those who are brought home to God."

A New Jersey alumnus of 1896: "I have been thinking today that the time for the February Meetings must have about arrived with you. May the blessing of God be with you all at this time, and his Spirit move the hearts of students and teachers alike to seek his will and guidance."

A Birmingham mother: "Of course, my own little freshman daughter is always on my heart; and while she does have high ideals and is a professing Christian, yet I am very anxious that she should grow spiritually as well as mentally and physically; and so I am glad for these Meetings."

A Chattanooga Sabbath-School teacher: "I had such a good letter from one of your boys the other day. He is all aglow with interest in the coming Meetings. I assure you of my own prayers for the February Meetings, and of my deepest interest in them."

A California leader: "I remember how, when I lived in Tennessee, my old friend, the late Charles M. Alexander, spoke in such glowing terms of Maryville College, as he also did in later years. I am wondering whether the College stands on the old Bible lines as it did in the other days. Do you still have the evangelistic meetings in behalf of the students?"

A New York leader: "I wish all colleges would take the initiative as you do, and place the emphasis on evangelism as effectively as you do in Maryville. I think of you often and always with love and affection; and I will not forget to pray for the February Meetings this year."

An alumnus of 1923 in Wisconsin:

SUMMER SCHOOL CREDITS

Take nothing for granted regarding summer school work. Credit is not allowed for summer work done in non-accredited schools. Credits may be earned in accredited schools at the rate of one semester hour for each week of the term, or a total of twelve hours for the twelve weeks' session. Arrangements for summer study should be preceded by consultation with Dr. Gillingham.

Varsity Debate Team Chosen This Morning

Extemporaneous Speakers t Be Heard February 16.

January 28—By the time thi goes to press those who had hoped to be college debaters will have had a chance to prove to the judges what they can do. The try-outs for the varsity debate team are to be held today beginning at 8:30 o'clock. The subject for this year is, Resolved: That there should be a substitute for trial by jury. The number of old debaters is small but the try-outs may reveal some material in the new recruits. This year eight men and six women will be chosen to represent the college in varsity debating.

The freshman try-outs were held last Monday and the following men were chosen to represent the college in freshman debates: Clarence Bratsche, Lea Calloway, Paul Edris, Fred Gabbard, Alexander Jones, E W. Luckhart, Lloyd Overly, and Robert West.

The following were selected for the girls' team: Nellie Aills, Anita Ellerbee, Ruby Hitch, Kathryr Hodges, Ruby Lee Johnson, Charline Nicholson, Julia Terry, and Lucy Ann Voorhees.

The extemporaneous speaking contest has been postponed until February 16, Saturday night after the February Meetings close. The representatives from the societies have already been chosen and the college representatives will be chosen at this meeting of February 16. This will be a joint meeting for the boys' societies and a joint meeting for the girls' societies.

Freshman Chemistry Exam Papers Reveal Startling Knowledge

e. g. Burning Flint a Test for Carbon Dioxide; Oxygen Has Strong Odor.

Oxygen has a strong odor; it extinguishes a flame.

Hydrogen is prepared by freezing air.

Test for carbon dioxide by a burning flint.

Hydrogen is produced by formation of sugar.

Molecules are tiny participles.

Test for carbon monoxide: Canary plus Co equals no canary plus Co.

Oxygen can be prepared by hydrochloric acid on hydrogen chloride.

A strong acid is one that will not make a light burn bright.

Hydrogen can be liberated from all carbonates, etc.

Reduction is burning wood giving off different elements and substances.

Filter paper is an indicator.

Combustion is where there are a lot of greasy rags piled together and the air can't get through them. The air can go just so far and then it starts back. The air going in and coming out heats the rags and the rags get hot. Then they burst into flames.

A hydrate is a water remover.

Hydrate means water solvent.

Atoms can expand and travel.

Atoms are composed of exceedingly minute particles called elements.

An atom is a discrete part of a particle.

Two zincs plus two hydrochloric acids plus two chlorides will produce hydrogen.

An interesting incident was also reported in an account of an experiment performed in the laboratory. It read: We slid into a test tube of hot water and shook.

Don't fail to see the play tonight.

Important Changes In Home Ec Requirements

More Room for Free Electives Now Available

An important change has been made in the requirements for graduation in Home Economics. Heretofore, 130 hours, 45 of which were in home economics, have been required. The student had no opportunity for any electives, and in many cases had extra hours to take in foreign languages. Hereafter, 126 hours, 36 of which will be in home economics, will be required. Of the required hours in other subjects, three hours in education will be added, and three hours in biology and three hours in social science will be dropped. Eight hours will be available for free electives.

The course will no longer be known as "Smith-Hughes", since the State Department of Education of Tennessee and a number of other states have officially stated that "no high school under our supervision is operating under the Smith Hughes law so far as home economics is concerned." It will now be possible for those desiring to meet the requirements for home economics teachers to graduate with 36 hour in home economics instead of 45 and still keep in line for the ful Smith-Hughes course if they so desire. The same high standards wil be maintained, and elective courses in home economics will be offered for those who desire to complete the Smith-Hughes course.

Green Walls in Library Shield Many Strange and Amusing Sights

(By Sarah Moore)

For the benefit of the freshmen and of any other uninitiated students, we wish to announce that Maryville College has a full-fledged museum that is well worth an hour's visit. The museum has been open for a year or so, but it appears that comparatively few of the students know what lies behind those green walls at the left of the Librarian's desk in Thaw Hall.

Behind those walls lies a bewildering and fascinating assortment o objects from all over the world contributed by numerous friends o the college and assembled through the untiring efforts of Dr. Wilson and Miss Ethel DeHaven. Anything from a Philippine bolo knife to a Bulu translation of the Bible i found in this small musuem.

The first exhibit encountered a one enters the door is the Indian display, mainly of weapons and implements of stone. Tiny arrowheads graceful spear points, and clumsy battle axes there are—all carved and chipped from flint and stone There is an iron tomahawk, rude—but deadly, that was found along the banks of the Tennessee River There are some ingenious shell fishhooks, made by the Chinook Indians in Oregon. On one shelf lies a row of small hideous faces—fragments of carvings from an ancient Aztec temple. Each face is thick-lipped and heavy-lidded— sneering and awesome.

If the little Aztec gods are awesome, the little models of the Chinese gods are somewhat comical. The God of Wealth evidently is intended to be an awe-inspiring figure, but more easily succeeds in provoking mirth. The ferocity of his black beard and belligerent attitude is brought to naught by his huge goggle eyes and conspicuous "bay window." Speaking of gods, whoever wrote the legend on the card beside which rests Hotei San, a little gray Japanese god, had a sense of humor. The card reads: "Hotei San, God of the Stomach; healer of all stomach trouble; very much in demand by Japanese children." Well, we have our patent medicines, and the Japanese have Hotei San, so all the world is well cared for.

Besides the God of Wealth, there are many other interesting things in the Chinese exhibit. There are tiny, dainty shoes of rose and blue with gold embroidery that were fashioned for children and women with bound feet. There is a graceful Chinese teapot carved from stone. On the same shelf is an object which must be tremendously useful to the small Chinese, and which should be immediately adopted for American chidren who are trying to learn their numbers. This object is a calculator and writing pad. One part of the compact little folio is made up of several wires or which are strung tiny beads to aid in one's arithmetical calculations The other part is given over to space for carrying brushes and ink and for mixing paints.

The little Japanese god Hotei San, sits surrounded by lovely objects from his native land, so h never grows lonely. There are beautiful pieces of lacquer work—red and black and gold—; there is a bronze censer from a temple; a beautifully bound copy of the Buddhist scriptures; and several pipes—two "ladies" pipes among them.

India is represented by numerous tiny models of the different castes of that country's peoples—low caste, Brahmin, and Parsi. There is a strip of embroidery from Kashmir and a Hindu peacock fan, edged with peacock feathers and decorated with bronze green beetle wings that glow steadily.

In the exhibit of articles from Mexico is a pair of boots such as one reads of in western novels—high boots with heavy carved brass rowel spurs.

In the Syrian exhibit one recognizes the names of places associated with sacred history— chests beads, cups, and knives of olive wood from Jerusalem; hammered brass vases and embroidered tapestries from Damascus; and cones from the cedars of Lebanon.

From Africa, West Cameroun comes a spoon and fork of solid gleaming ivory carved by the natives of the Frank James Industrial School. The natives of that region must be excessively rich, for even their "tom-toms" are made of mahogany.

Even the heathen have their vanity cases—but in this instance the vanity case is used for carrying a substance used in much the same way our chewing-gum is used. This vanity case is a box, some four inches long, of brass inlaid with silver. It is used for carrying beetel nuts, which the Mohammedan people of the Philippine Islands use. From the same Islands comes a splendid collection of baskets, boxes, vases

Girl Singers Elect Officers, Begin Work

Will Probably Give Program in April as Y. W. Benefit.

An ancient and honorable institution, discontinued since 1924, has been recently revived. The Girls' Glee Club, rumors of which were said to perturb the hearts of the Maryville Glee Singers, is at last a fact. Organization was completed last Monday afternoon when the following officers were elected.

Mary Chris Benn - President
Mary Elizabeth Woodard - - Business Manager
Lois Miles - - - Secretary
Ann Smartt - - Librarian
Fronie French - Publicity Chairman

At present the Club has only eighteen "tried and true" members

First Sopranas—Mary Chris Benn, Ann Smartt, Charlotta Hultquist, Lois Miles, Addie Pearl Hendricks.

Second Sopranas—Eleanor Kuhlman, Jane Duke, Mary Elizabeth Woodard, Ruth Blake, Jeannette Moore, Marjorie Nelson.

Altos—Naomi Agans, Vera Coy, Fronie French, Lois Lovette, Lillian Gillespie, Mary Elizabeth Deadrick.

Under the direction of Miss Frances Henry, plans for a very attractive program are under way. The program should be ready by the first of April, when it will probably be given as a Y. W. benefit number. There will be a classical group, a group of popular songs, and probably a sacred number.

Lowell McDonald, Guard, Chosen Football Captain For '29 Season

CAPTAIN McDONALD

Football Men Elect Pilot for Next Year From Class of '30. Has Served Alma Mater Two Years in the Line.

In the absence of the customary football banquet, the football men elected their leader for the 1929 grid season by secret ballot last week, and when all had cleared away, the result showed that Lowell McDonald, stalwart guard of the 1927 and '28 combinations was the man honored with the captaincy for next year.

It is evident to all who saw Mac perform on the gridiron last season that there is not a harder fighter nor more able player than he. He was kept out of the last two games of the season, but up to that time he had played twenty-six quarters.

The Highlanders realize that the coming season will be a hard one and they have shown good judgment in picking this veteran of many football battles to be their pilot. Lowell is a popular man on the campus and is assured of the backing of the entire student body when he trots on the field to fight again for the Orange and Garnet.

"Little Old New York" Is Evening's Offering

Noted Men to Appear in Cas Of Alpha Sigma Play.

Tonight Alpha Sigma will attempt to gain the coveted Theta Alpha Phi trophy a second time with the play "Little Old New York". It is a delightfully old-fashioned play of the time when the smoke of steamboat funnels had begun to darken the river air. It is light enough and merry enough to provide diversion for the fortunate and solace for the unfortunate; and it has strength enough to meet the approbation of the critics.

Chilton Bowles, as leading man, carries the role of a gay young American sport who is defrauded of his rightful inheritance by an attractive lass from the Emerald Isles,—none other than the inimitable Nellie Caldwell. The supporting cast brilliantly portrays some notable figures in American history, as Washington Irving, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and John Jacob Astor. But dazzling and bewilderingly bright among these characters, which seem paltry, even insignificant, in comparison, blaze forth Reginald Voorhees and Lloyd Overly. They will regale the spectators with a pugilistic encounter.

AD-WRITING CONTEST

Those of us who are occasionally tempted to fuss and fume at the inapt and inane wording of some of the Echo advertisements are now to be given a chance to write an ad "as she should be writ." Furthermore, if our efforts are sufficiently superior to those we are accustomed to see in the Echo, we will have a good chance to win one of four prizes ranging from one to five dollars.

Ads must be written about Learbury College Clothes. The ads may include drawings or any artistic lay-out, so long as no colors are used. Copy should be mailed or brought to Proffitt's Department Store, sponsors of the contest, before February 25. Winners will be announced in the Echo on March 4.

The class in Applied Psychology on the Hill will judge the ad-writing efforts. The first prize will be $5.00, second prize, $3.00, and third and fourth prizes $1.00 each.

T. T. ALEXANDER CONTEST

January 28— The preliminaries for the T. T. Alexander prize of $100 have been held and the finals will be held tomorrow morning in chapel. Three persons will speak in the finals. Edith Woolsey, junior, will speak on "The Resurrection"; Viola Petitt, junior, will speak on "The Atonement"; and Anna Lou Miller, senior, will speak on "The Resurrection".

This oratorical contest is under the supervision of the Bible department, and only religious subjects are chosen. The contest alternates, being for boys one year and girls the next. A prize of one hundred dollars is given to the winner by a friend of the college who desires to remain anonymous.

THETA ALPHI PHI PRESIDENT COMING

Members of Theta Alpha Phi, dramatic fraternity at Maryville College, expect a visit from the national president of their organization, Professor Clarence L. Menser of Knox College, in the near future. Preparations are being made for his entertainment during his stay in Maryville.

Professor Menser's success with dramatic work at Knox College has established for him a nation-wide reputation in that line. For seven years the Knox Players have been in great demand in various large cities in the Middle-West including Chicago where his productions have appeared with great success. Dramatics have taken an unusually large place in the activities of Knox College students. Knox is one of the few colleges of its size to have a fully equipped theater.

Signal honor came to Professor Menser recently when he was asked to represent Knox in the newly organized "University Directors' Council" of fifteen University directors of dramatics. No other liberal arts school was represented. Previous to Professor Menser's connections at Knox, he was with the public speaking department of the University of Utah.

MARYVILLE BANQUET AT PRINCETON, MARCH 23

Robert H. Wood, H. Gordon Harold, and Henry G. Welbon, students at Princeton Theological Seminary were sent as a deputation team to Milford, New Jersey on Sunday, January 20. Those composing the team were all members of the Maryville Class of '27. Those of us who remember "Betty" and "Dot" Keown, Luther Hammond, and Gordon Jeffries will recall that they came from Milford. It was an unexpected privilege for the Princeton delegates to meet some of their classmates in their own home town.

Those who met the team were "Betty" and "Dot" Keown and Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hammond. Mrs. Hammond was formerly Miss Phyllis Anderson of Chattanooga. The visitors from Princeton were royally entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hammond. A delightful afternoon was spent by all in discussing the news of Maryville.

A banquet for Maryville students in this section is being planned. According to the tentative plans which have been made the banquet will be held at Princeton on March 23. It is hoped that all alumni and former students of Maryville who can possibly do so will attend. Those who think they can help make a "grand reunion" are asked to write Wilbur Franklin, 209 Brown Hall, Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, New Jersey.

Don't fail to see the play tonight.

Safe and Sane Wiring

The college needs too many things for us to make a practice of talking about them. In most cases we prefer to let evolution take its slow, ambling course without wasting any ink in complaints. For four years, however, we have seen the same makeshift lighting arrangements used in connection with all the college dramatic productions, and the same system was used before the writer put in his appearance here. We have yet to see a production in which lighting effects play any significant part that has been put across without any hitch in the lighting.

For any who may ever have wondered why the electrician could not get the footlights or the flood lights working correctly, a trip back-stage would provide ample evidence in defense of that harassed individual. Probably such a trip would be of interest also to a state wiring examiner.

The first glance back-stage on the west side reminds one of little Johnnie's "'lectric labor'tory". Wires to the left of us, wires to the right of us,—and usually only one person knows which goes where,—and he is not always sure. They begin in the room back-stage where they are connected in various ways to the main switch-board of the chapel. From here they go out the door, along with everything else, to the secondary switchboard, a puzzle within itself, whence they dive under the floor through a trap door. This is conveniently located where everyone walks. Other wires go by any convenient route to top-lights, floor lamps, etc. It looks as if someone must have ingeniously arranged a temporary maze of wires whereby the lights may be controlled,—in a fashion,— until more permanent arrangements can be made. The trouble is that the same arrangement is used year after year to the inconvenience of actors, stage-hands, and electricians.

An adequate switch-board with wall and floor plugs located at the necessary points would do away with this mess of wires and relieve much of the congestion in the already rather small space at the side of the stage.

—o—

Bob Expresses Himself

January 11, 1929

To the Editor:

In last week's issue you asked for more action. This is not a story of action but an expression of a student's opinion.

The purpose of education is to teach one how to live. To be able to live properly one must know how to play. The present need in America today is young men and women prepared to teach people how to really enjoy life.

The young people are criticized for the fast pace they are living and we hear many condemnations of dancing and automobile rides. May I ask the critics what provision they make for educating the young people in play?

A college graduate is supposed to be able to enter into the life of the community and become a leader in its social activities. Maryville has prepared young people to go into the world as teachers, preachers, and missionaries, and thus has contributed much to the welfare of mankind. There is now a demand that Maryville shall furnish the world with leaders who can develop the side of an individual's life which is now so greatly neglected.

We have first class athletic teams and great advancement has been made in the physical culture of the girls, yet we are not being taught how to be the highest type of social beings. Our social life is being neglected.

This is not a petition for more hours in the gym where we play the rather boisterous and unrefined game, "snap." This letter is an attempt to point out a need. We need a social director, who knows how to play and who can teach us how to play.

Last year an effort was made to teach us how to conduct ourselves in the dining hall. The plan failed not because of any mistake in the plan but because we did not wish to act like well-mannered and cultured young people. It was an indication that we need training in the art of living.

I realize that the salary of the social director would be an added item on the college payroll. I believe, however, that the college wishes to make the life of the student happy and wholesome and to give the world graduates who are prepared to live a full life and who can lead others into a more joyful and worthwhile life.

An efficient social director could devise means of instructing us how to play and live so that we would enjoy living.

Robert W. Jones, '30.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

"What did you make on the exam?"
"D. Proud of it."
"Yeah?"
"Stands for 'dandy'."

Now is the time when all good fathers come to the aid of their sons' pocketbooks.

Found in an exam paper: "Shakespear's immoral plays are a heritage for future generations."

Corridor Song: "I'll Be Loving You, Hallways."

Our idea of using one's brains: A Scotchman, invited to a golden wedding, presented his host and hostess with a goldfish.

"Do you work here?"
"No, ma'am. I'm the boss."

We advise the freshmen to keep their cunning little caps until they find out their grades. Such forethought might save additional expense.

Tabloids are to newspapers what fleas are to a dog.

Our idea of the improbable: Prof. Ellis putting "True Story" in the college library.

Four more months till another final. Oh, my, my, my, my!

After we pay our bills we should like to adopt for our slogan "A Bigger and Better County Home!"

Now I sit me down to sleep,
I hope my chum my notes will keep.

Lady to tramp: Here is a nickel, my man. Now don't go out and get drunk.

Don't fail to see the play to night.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

1. That the second semester will be more interesting because there will be more debates. The forensic program will open early this spring and the aspiring young orators are beginning to look forward to the first contest.

2. That the judges for the try-outs today should know whether or not to make a substitute for the jury system.

3. That speaking of the judges' part in the try-outs, they all seemed to be resting comfortably while my worthy opponents railed at them. I guess it was just an indication that the debates are going to be good this year. I thought at the time though how great it would be if we were only in the House of Lords where we could have easy chairs.

4. That the freshman teams chosen last Monday show up very well. But they will have to go some to beat the freshman teams of last year. The freshman teams did not lose a debate last year. That is a good precedent for the others to follow.

5. That, without dimishing the interest in other contests, debating and other forensic contests are as interesting as any intercollegiate athletic sport. It requires the backing of the school and student body to win debates just as much as it does to win football games. A number of times last year the Y. W. C. A. auditorium, where debates were held, was filled and some people could not get in.

6. That, there should be more debates in the literary societies.

7. That, since examinations are over we will have more time to put off what we can do tomorrow. But psychology tells us we can learn more by the spaced method.

Incidentally

——There was an audible sigh of relief all over the Hill when the last exam was finished on Saturday There was a feeling of light-heartedness after the nerve-racking seas on of cramming. Now the teachers will have to get to work. Luck to them! May they be light-hearted, too,—and charitable and generous!

——Of course, our troubles are not yet over. For the report cards will tell their tale.

——If they must economize on report cards, we might suggest giving the students theirs, and not sending any to the parents. That would save envelopes and stamps, too—as well as the feelings of some of us.

——Isn't it a wonderful feeling no to have to study again until the next exams?

——Bainonian girls made some excellent resolutions at their meeting a week ago. If they all keep them, this Hill will be so changed that we won't feel at home.

——In Biology class the other day, Mrs. Olin asked why resting buds are formed in the fall. One budding genius suggested that it was so that they would be ready the next spring. Well, why not?

——Someone must have been in a terrible hurry to get away from their exam,—or to get to it. Whatever their destination, they left destruction in their path,—the glass strewn all over the porch at Thaw Hall looks like the leftovers of a slapstick comedy, where the hero has just jumped through the door in order to evade the villain and save the heroine.

——Morgan Biggs celebrated his birthday with much pomp and ceremony. The faux pas he made was not including Miss Darby in the guest list.

——If anyone needs buttons sewed on, Nellie Caldwell is very efficient in that line.

HIGHLANDERS LEAVE FOR LaFOLLETTE, UNION, L. M. U.

BASKETBALL

Dr. James Naismuth, formerly of Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A., now with the University of Kansas is the originator of basketball. He devised the game in 1892 and it was first played in the winter of that and the succeeding year. The greatest difficulty encountered was lack of suitable quarters in which to play the game. Practically no schools or colleges were equipped with buildings or basements large enough, and with ceilings high enough to introduce this new sport. In recent years, however, basketball has come into its own—even rivaling football in some parts of the nation for popularity and gate receipts, and magnificent gyms and field houses have been built at great costs to take care of the ever increasing crowds of fans.

Basketball games are never postponed on account of bad weather—unless of course, a situation should develop such as marred the L. M U. game here, a few days ago—when the roof insisted on having the rain come through and splash all over the floor. That case, however, is exceptional—and no doubt the trouble in question will be remedied.

The fan gets a greater personal thrill out of the game because of his closer proximity to the players. He is able to follow the plays more closely than in football, and has the advantage of being comfortably seated and protected from inclemencies of weather.

Every year the rules committee meets and consults with leading coaches from outstanding schools. Changes in rules are discussed and if adopted, they are incorporated in the official blue book of basketball.

The only marked change this year in the rules has been that affecting the dribbler and defensive guard attempting to break up the dribble. Up till this time, the tendency has been for officials to favor the dribbler, giving him more license than is rightfully his. Consequently, the guard or any defensive player attempting to break up a dribble has been the recipient of most of the fouls—usually on a charge of blocking the dribbler. The rules plainly call attention now to the fact that the man dribbling the ball shall make an attempt to go around the defensive player—never into him—thus equalizing the responsibility a little more. Nothing makes a game more spectacular than a clever dribbler, but the opinions of many coaches are for a fast passing team—because, after all, dribbling is individual work and the ideal team is one in which every man functions perfectly with his fellow teammates—coordination as a unit rather than personal brilliancy.

The Old Timer Says

McEver was a good football man—

He is still a good football man, only he plays with a larger ball and without the cumbersome padded uniform.

Somehow it got noised around that Maryville was having a little cage tilt with the Orange and White, and about fifty Highland backers managed to tear themselves away from their exam preparations long enough to witness the fray.

At the L. M. U. game the "scrubs" were very much in evidence.

Which reminds me of the Arkansas Traveller and the man who didn't fix his roof because it was raining.

Nobody in the world can pivot for so long at a time as our "Tillie".

At the wrong time.

This boy MacDonald has a big season ahead of him through which to pilot the Highlanders, but remember, Mac, Columbus had a good sized ocean.

Of course Columbus didn't have to face Vandy.

If you don't want to read this stuff, why didn't you quit up further—you might as well read it all now.

It must be great to be one of these "leaders" on the Hill that we hear so much about, but it does look like they could have learned about being a leader doesn't mean leading a girl to a game and mooning around like the game was being played in the next town.

We crave more noise from our windjammers at games—we appreciate the music they give us and think they should be given more of chance to strut their talent.

Somebody says J. D. got put out of the game for giving the ref a dirty look. Brute Crow disagrees, asserting that the referee already had one.

Wish I'd been along the time the hospitable prof asked Louie if the fellows had seen their "repository of man's imperishable gifts to posterity" and Captain Reed answered that they hadn't seen anything at all except the swimming pool and the library.

Coach Thrower's cinder path artists are working out already. Looks like Maryville will put out another good track team this year. A chance to beat U. T.!

"What a hollow feeling one has when one enters this 'Temple of Yearning'," punned Vincent on the way into the dining hall.

"I wonder what Vincent meant by 'entered'," queried Slim on the way out.

But then you can't fill Waddell anyhow, Coach says.

CASH-REGISTER-PHONE SYSTEM IN PROFFITTS

Proffitt's Department Store, known to the students as the "Students Store" has just recently installed a complete new system of National Cash Registers and Telephones for Charge Authorization.

The management of this store, determined at all times to give their customers the most efficient service possible, realized that with their business steadily increasing, the most modern system available was necessary. After careful investigation the National Cash Register System was decided on and has just been put into use during the past week.

This system of telephones for authorizing charges is the very last word in modern store equipment, being used only in the larger and more progressive stores. With the new phones the salesperson merely calls off the name and amount and the charge is immediately authorized from the office, avoiding all unnecessary delays.

With the new cash register every customer will be given a ticket or cash receipt with each purchase which carries such information as amount, date, department, and from whom purchased. Then in case of error, exchange or credit this receipt for cash paid will give all necessary information regarding the previous transaction.

Tennessee Wins Over Maryville In Thrilling Cage Contest, Score 30-23

Orange and Garnet Boys Put Up Great Game to Fall Before U. T. Quintet in Knoxville Tuesday Night. Delaney Finds Basket Frequently, Davis in Good Form.

In a spectacular game played Tuesday, January 22 at Jefferson Hall, the Tennessee Vols defeated Maryville Highlanders by a 30-24 count. The Vols met worthy foemen in the persons of a fighting Orange and Garnet aggregation and were forced to keep up full steam in order to eke out a close margin of victory.

Maryville got off at the start on the wrong foot and at the end of the half were on the light end of a 13-6 tally. At the start of the second half, Coach Britton sent in his shock troops—"Buddy" Hackman and "Wild Bull" McEver. The "Wild Bull" butted his way about the floor, and almost succeeded in turning a basketball game into a football game. Meanwhile, the Highlanders were busy in their own fashion and knotted the count at 16-all. Coach Britton sent his regulars back in and steamed things up to finish the game at 30-24.

"Bobby" Dodd was the whole works for the Volunteers—playing a remarkable offensive and defensive game. For the Highlanders J. D. Davis, Delaney and Kemp Davis all showed up remarkably well although the entire team played heads-up ball.

Win Over King, L. M. U. Lose to "Cincy"

On Friday night, January 18, L. M. U. invaded the Alumni Gymnasium and came away with the small end of a 34-16 figure. The game was closely contested during the first half, but the Scotties broke away in the final canto to win hands up. Bird with three double-deckers and four in six attempts at the foul line, and K. Davis with four two-pointers and two out of four free throws tied for high scoring honors, each having 10 points.

Between halves J. James and H. E. Simpson, representing Alpha Sigma and Athenian Literary Societies respectively, staged a little boxing match, in which Jesse emerged the victor.

As a preliminary to the L. M. U. game, the "Bulldogs" snowed the Southern Methodists under by a 24-6 score. White showed up well for the "Bulldogs".

Cincinnati "Y"

January 26—In a thrilling exhibition of cage technic, the Cincinnati "Y" five came from behind in the second half of the performance here tonight and beat the Highlanders. Years of experience together enabled the visitors to overcome an early lead by the Maryville quintet, and after the first part of the second half, Cincinnati was not in danger. Welch, Cincimati center, was the outstanding man on the floor. He was forced to leave the floor toward the last of the game with an injured knee.

The Highlanders played a fine game and all were well repaid for their interest. Excitement ran high during the whole contest.

Lineups:

Maryville	Pos.	Cincinnati
Delaney, 6	F.	Welch, 8
Bird, 1	F.	Ross, 18
Waddell, 6	C.	Schraff, 2
Davis, 4	G.	Goldmeyer
Reed, 3	G.	Reubenow, 2

Substitutions: Maryville, Vincent 1, White 4, Cherry. Cincinnati: Dakin 10. Referee: Crittenden, Tennessee.

MARYVILLE MAT MEN TAKE MATCH 20-8

First Meet for Highlanders Shows Good Material. Crawford Loses Decision After Hard Battle.

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 26— The Highlander wrestling team met the Knoxville "Y" at Knoxville and won four out of six matches here today, winning the meet by a score of 20-8.

Billie Crawford, Maryville lightheavy entry was outweighed by Kelly, "Y" representative, by 35 pounds, and lost the decision after two extra three minute periods, but his opponent was unable to get a fall. Jimmie Cox, visiting special, made a record fall on his man in one minute. Wilson, Maryville's heavy hope, looked good against Conner of Knoxville whom he outweighed 34 pounds.

This is the first mat meet the Highlanders have entered, and the results are certainly gratifying. It is our wish that we may see some of our men in action before the year closes.

Full results of the meet are as follows:

Name	Wt.	Advan.
Kelley, K.	174	31½ sec
Cox, M	123.	21 sec
Lee, K.	118	10 sec.
Shaw, M.	143	30 sec.
Hurley, K.	143	1:20 sec.
Wilson, M.	195	5:41 sec.
Conner, K.	171	1:6 sec
Johnson, M.	135	2:43 sec.
Galloway, K.	135	20 sec.
Crawford, M.	139	51½ sec.

Two extra 3 minute periods resulted in 12 seconds advantage for Crawford and 25 for Kelley.

Watkins, M., won by default.

MISS JACKSON WELL

We are glad to say that the report which has reached the Hill that Miss Emma Jackson, former matron of Baldwin Hall, was very ill is not true. She is at the Sheldon Jackson School, Sitka, Alaska. The Verstorian, the school paper, has just recently been received at the office from her.

A wreck was reported on the Knoxville pike Tuesday night before the game,—Cliff Overly was riding in it.

Prayers for February Meetings Ascend From Many Parts of Worl

"My wife joins me in saying that our hearts are with you for a great victory during the February Meetings."

A North Carolina father: "I want you to know that you shall have my prayers and my cooperation in this Meeting, because I am interested in my son's soul's salvation, and in that of every other student in Maryville College. I am writing my son about this Meeting."

A Middle Tennessee father: "I certainly do appreciate more than words can express your school's attitude toward its students' welfare. My earnest desire is that much and lasting good may be done through your efforts to bring the students into closer relationship to Christ."

An alumnus in a University: "The February Meetings will be starting soon. I am praying that they will impress the Christian Way of Living deeper into the already abundant religious life on College Hill. It is not difficult to notice the differences between Maryville College and this institution in this respect."

A father in East Tennessee: "I have written to my son and daughter and asked them to use this opportunity to lead some of their friends to Christ. I am glad to send my children to Maryville College, for I know that they are in the care of a Christian influence that points them to the highest and best in life."

A former professor in Maryville: "The blessed month of February with its Meetings has come again, and I am thinking of you, dear old Maryville, the faculty, and the students. May God's blessing be with you and with the big circle on the campus. I want you to feel that I am with you in spirit."

An Asheville minister: "Having two daughters with you, I am glad to feel that their attention as well as mine is called to this special season. It shall be our earnest prayer that the results of these Meetings shall flush with new tides of life every class-room and assembly time; that no doubt shall be felt; and that a new sense of God's presence and love may come to every heart. It is refreshing to note the continued primary emphasis that Maryville College preserves in the things of the heart."

There are many other such letters and telegrams that pour into the College office during the Meetings. The prayer-meeting in behalf of the February Meetings is certainly a very large and impressively sincere and earnest one. It reaches from College Hill to the ends of the earth.

Athenian-Alpha Sigma

Athenians and Alpha Sigs will meet together Saturday night to choose the college men representatives in the line of extemporaneous speaking.

Bainonian

Most of us had the pleasure of seeing, sometime ago, a very quaint and life-like group of Marionettes. We are glad to know that this pleasure is available again, although in a slightly different form. The marionettes which are going to perform for Bainonians Saturday night are guaranteed to be life-like, but it is doubtful about their quaintness, for they are Modern Marionettes. It will be interesting to see the outcome of this competition with Columbus.

Willie Nell Howard, Peggy Bird, Marion Allen, and Marjorie Abshear are in charge of this program.

Chemistry Club

The Chemistry Club met on January 15 and elected the following officers:

President - - Ira R. Morrison
Vice-President - - David Marston
Prog. Secretary - Thomas Whitehead
Recording Secretary - Alice Renegar
Treasurer - - Walter Headrick
Editor - - - Paul Copley

After the election, Thomas Whitehead gave an interesting and well prepared talk on "William Richards, the Great American Chemist." A chemical crossword puzzle was worked by all present.

PITTSBURG PASTOR SPEAKS IN CHAPEL

January 18—Rev. Hugh Thomson Kerr, pastor of Shady Side Presbyterian Church, Pittsburg, Pa., since 1913, addressed the chapel audience this morning. Rev. H. T. Kerr is well known to radio audiences everywhere, since many of his sermons have been broadcast from KDKA.

Dr. Kerr is a son of Canada. He graduated from the University of Toronto and then attended Knox College, in the same city, for a year before coming into the States. He now holds the responsible position of President of the Presbyterian Board of Education, in addition to his important pastorate.

Rev. Clifford E. Barbour, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, introduced our visitor Rev. Barbour was at one time an assistant to Dr. Kerr in Pittsburg He was elected a college director a short while ago by the Synod of Tennessee meeting at Chattanooga.

Dr. Kerr emphasized the fact that we live in a world of faith. Witness the New York stock exchange. A bank is a temple of faith. We are all instruments of God's will. God's will is inviolate and flows on century after century. Lay a straw parallel to the Gulf Stream and the Gulf Stream will flow through it. The idea that scientists deal with reality and Theology and Religion are up in the air is wrong.

trays, and hats, all woven by the natives. The designs and coloring are beautiful.

In one section are piled old Bibles—little, big, and huge—that tempt one to go through their pages and try to read the queer print.

Scattered about among the tables are several spinning wheels. There is also an old loom.

In fact, there is quite enough in Maryville's museum to keep one entertained for an hour or so.

Ministerial Association

At the meeting of the Ministerial Association on January 23, various committeemen gave their reports. A goodly number were present and a meeting of interest and inspiration was enjoyed by all. Dr. Crothers will speak to us next week and will answer all questions concerning the ministry that are brought up.

How Literary Are Our Literary Societies—and What About It?

Former Athenian Launches Severe Attack on Present Order of Things

Saturday before last, a former Athenian appeared on the program in the Athenian Hall and proceeded to give his honest opinions concerning the present status of the society. His criticisms were not calculated to entertain or amuse, although he introduced his talk in a "jocular" fashion. One thing is certain, however. He has stirred up some thought and quite a bit of discussion among Athenians.

Alpha Sigs did not have the privilege of hearing this address, but would probably be as deserving of the criticism brought forth as are the Athenians. For this reason, we have decided to set forth the speaker's principal criticism of the present Athenian Literary Society (and incidentally, the Alpha Sigma), along with a defense of the Athenian, "as she is", prepared from arguments presented by various members to the editor. Quite a few Athenians seem to be in favor of many or all of the suggestions made by the speaker. The defense given below, however, indicates the opinion of those who believe that the Athenian is not in need of serious reformation.

The Attack	The Defense
A member of a literary society is no better off than a non-member. He is not necessarily a better speaker, debater or a more literary person. His membership gives him absolutely no distinction.	A member of a society is better off than a non-member in that he knows the pleasure of fellowship with his fellow society men. Though the society may not help very much to make him a better debater or orator, it does give him a touch of college spirit he gets nowhere else.
There is no difficulty in getting into a society. Indeed, there is nothing but a big contest between the societies at the first of each year to see who can get the largest number of the new men. There should be a membership limit, say, fifty men. There should be strong competion among those on the waiting list in trying to "make" the society. The qualifications of men desiring membership should be carefully looked into before and after they arrive at Maryville.	It is not likely that the spirit of the societies would be improved by limiting the membership. There is very little desire among the members to make of the societies select groups of the most proficient debaters and orators in school. It is impossible to deal with new students before they arrive on the Hill. In receiving new members it is customary to consider the new man's qualifications,—as an all-round fellow.
The societies do not demand enough preparation from those on the programs. They are often given short notice or asked to appear whether they have prepared anything special or not. This applies equally to musical numbers, orations, and debates. If the society demands a good program, men will prepare their parts on it. College orators and debaters who need the practice and the society's criticism are not asked to present their work on the program.	The justice of this criticism is generally recognized. Sometimes there are numbers on the society programs that have not had enough preparation, but they are in the minority. The present practice of printing programs in the Echo a week ahead helps to make the men get ready for their part. Most men do not enjoy listening to long and eloquent orations and debates as a regular diet,—as the critic would have it.
There are too many mid-winters. If the Athenian and Bainonian would give one play together during the year and the Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon would give one, they could put more attention on that one play and make it a better production. As it is, the mid-winters are supposed to give members a chance to display their dramatic talent, but in reality they give a great many a chance to make "jack-asses" of themselves.	There is very little student complaint about too many mid-winters. The students attend and seem to enjoy the plays; the societies make good use of the money made, if any; the players enjoy their work and all make very creditable performances. Any who have seen the mid-winters so far given will admit the injustice of the latter part of this criticism.
Athenians take pride in the fact that most of the college debaters and orators are drawn from their society. This is no fault or virtue of the society because one gets no training in debate or oratory in the society meetings. There is no coaching of men by the fellow society members to help them make the team, as there has been in the past. Whatever one learns in these lines must be learned elsewhere than in the societies and is it not one of the major purposes of a literary society to produce orators and debaters?	The Athenian Literary Society is still proud of the fact that most of the college orators and debaters are drawn from her ranks. It does not try to take the credit for developing them, however. At one time this may have been a necessary function of the society, but now there are classes in debate and oratory which draw all the fellows who are seriously interested in these subjects. Is it necessary now for the societies to duplicate the work of these classes? Is it not possible that the function of the society has changed in the last decade?
There are not enough real literary programs during the year. How is it possible to justify the name "Literary" society when practically all the programs are of the light sort, fashioned primarily to entertain rather than develop members in literary lines? It is not necessary to have a great many musical numbers and vaudeville skits now since there are other organizations on the Hill to develop one in a musical or dramatic way. An occasional light program is O. K., but this should not be a regular thing.	This criticism seems to embody the real cause of the whole trouble. If the present societies are not living up to the name "Literary" and yet the societies are filling a real need on the Hill, would it be of any great consequence to drop the adjective from the names? The majority of members who have spent a week in school work and study prefer rather to be entertained at the end of the week than to listen to would-be debaters or orators go through their paces. As to the other organizations on the Hill being able to take care of the natural desires of the whole student body for music, dramatics, or entertainment in general,—that is preposterous.

Varsity Debate Squad Selected Last Monday

Six-Hour Ordeal Undergone by Judges Before Making Their Decisions.

January 28—Today a miniature debaters' convention took place at Maryville. This was in the form of try-outs for the varsity debate teams. From 8:30 a. m. until 3:00 p. m. the judges listened to discussions on the question, Resolved: "That there should be a substitute for trial by jury." Eight men and six women were chosen to represen the college. The following compos the men's team: William Graham, Travis Hitt, Florian Hopkins, Howard Hull, J. Stuart James, Robert Jones, Forrest I. Robertson, and Algie Sutton.

The following were chosen for the girls' team: Naomi Agans, Vera Coy, Mildred Crawford, Margaret Mevis, Alice Renegar, and Betty Jane Sharp.

The judges were Dr. Hunter, Prof. Knapp, and Prof. Davis.

Prof. Queener says the teams are by no means as strong as he would like to have, but he will begin work almost immediatey, training for the meets. The first debate is to be held February 25.

A slight rearrangement was mad in the freshman squad. Homer Mc Cann has been substituted for Alex ander Jones. Mr. Jones feels tha he cannot go on with debating this semester

Student Writes Of Work In Sorbonne

Allan Herdman, Student Here Last Year, Now Studying In Paris.

Allan Herdman, a student here last year, is now studying in Paris at the Sorbonne. In a letter received from him he states that he likes his work very much and hates to think of leaving in July. He is very much pleased with Paris. He passes Notre Dame and sees the Seine river every day.

He enjoys considerable social life as part of a group of congenial American students. They go to theatres, etc., together.

He writes: "I am following three courses at the Sorbonne: Litterature Contemporaine, Litterature Classique, and l'Histoire Contemporaine, each of which has two sixty-minute lectures and one private lesson of interrogation and review each week. The lectures are given in enormous auditoriums with from 200 to 400 students in attendance. The private lessons are given in classes of only four or five students. Then we have a sixty-minute lesson each week of composition based on the corrections in a five-page composition written each week; another weekly lesson is an hour of conversation consisting of an oral summary of some book we have read during the week; lastly, there are two thirty-minute lessons in phonetics. This last is very

Typographical Errors Often Furnish Amusement; Majority Removed in Proofs

(by Edwin Buchanan)

When you see a little mistake in the Echo don't stop to exclaim, "Oh, what a paper!" and proceed to denounce the printer, the staff, and especially the poor editor. If all the mistakes were allowed to remain that are made when the copy is first set up there would be some cause for kicking.

The first corrections and alterations in copy presented by both staff members and non-staff members are made before the copy is set up in type. In this copy-reading process, punctuation marks are added or subtracted, words capitalized or decapitalized, spelling corrected, and in some cases, articles practically rewritten for the purpose of better conformity to the Echo style, or for better readability. Sometimes an article gets to the printer without proper correction by the staff editor. In such cases it is sometimes necessary to make as many as fifty corrections in one column of type,—all on account of the carelessness of some people in regard to tenses, word capitalization, sentence structure, punctuation, etc. Needless to say, correction of such careless errors is not a pleasant task for our long suffering linotype operator, for it involves the resetting of all the lines in which there are errors.

The most humorous mistakes that are found in the first proofs and which seldom get into the paper are genuine typographical errors; errors made in the setting up of the copy. An examination of the proofs of the Echo for the past four months reveals many words of novel spelling.

It appears that the word "Maryville" is one requiring frequent correction. Here are a few of the forms in which the word has appeared in the proofs: Mariyvll, Mayville, Marville, Mayrvile, and Marlvlie.

Some of the chance word deformations sound like the utterances of some sufferer from a cold, such as those of the originator of "Sprig has came." Words like "attended", "and", "opening", and "present" have been set up as "atteded", "ad", "openig", and "preset". A few other mistakes found are suggestive of pre-prohi days, e.g. "shomehow" and "shampionship". We find a refetence to an automobile as an "atomobile". Possibly we will have our "atomobiles" some day when some of our freshman chemists discover a good way to make use of atomic power.

We read in the original proof of an article concerning the girls' point system, "500 pints are rewarded with a sweater." In another place we read about coach "baling out" someone instead of "bawling" him out.

It is surprising how many times the most simple words can be misspelled. Take for example the word "the". It appear at least once in every proof sheet of the Echo in one of these forms: th, thd, hte, te, he, eth, or thee. Who would recognize "abllts" to mean "ballots", or "consideirng" to be the word "considering"? One writer in trying to picture the utter destruction of our opponents football team by our line referred to its "devastating work". In the proof it read, "demonstrating work".

Following is the way a familiar nursery rhyme appeared when first set in type; incidentally, this rhyme did not appear in the Echo, being cut from the article it appeared in for lack of space.

"Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
How I wonder hat ou ar;e
Up abovet he orld so high
Like a diaomnd in hte sky."

(Editor's note: One should not get the idea from the preceding article that the linotype operator who sets the Echo copy is especially proficient at coining new words. These mistakes referred to were gathered from over a hundred proof sheets and are the most conspicuous that could be found. We have seen some fellows in Carnegie who could make more comical mistakes than these in the course of typewriting one sheet of a letter; a typewriter requires about one-tenth as much attention and manipulation as a linotype machine.)

RECENT GRAD NOW HOLDS RESPONSIBLE POSITION

It is interesting to know what men do after they leave Maryville. W. W. Haggard is one who graduated at Maryville a few years ago and now has an enviable record and position.

After leaving Maryville, he received his Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of Michigan. He also has done graduate work at Columbia University and the University of Chicago. Since then he has been principal of Petoskey High School, Michigan, for two years, Arthur Hill High School for three years, Senior High School of Rockford, Illinois for four years, and now is superintendent of Joliet Township High School and Junior College in Illinois.

Mr. Haggard has also done a great deal of work in various organizations. His educational system is highly reputable and maintains a high standard at Joliet.

Those students who saw "The King of Kings" last week were very agreeably surprised at the quality of the music which accompanied the picture. Mr. Judkins, manager of the Palace Theatre, has installed a "Photo-Tone" device which supplies synchronized music with each picture. No longer will the pathetic scenes of a melodrama be accompanied by the strains of "Yes Sir, That's My Baby"; battle scenes will no longer be seen accompanied by "You Are My Song of Love".

In an article last semester it was announced that this equipment would be installed sometime before Christmas; it has only recently been put into use, however.

Vander Meulen Begins Fifty-Third Series of Meetings Tomorrow

Meetings Still Retain Spirit Implanted Years Ago by Dr. Bachman.

The fifty-third series of February Meetings begins tomorrow. They were first held as distinctly Maryville College meetings in 1877. The leader of those first meetings, known all through this region and his church for learning and devotion, has long since gone to his reward, and the youngest of the students who attended can now look back upon almost a life time of striving and achieving. An institution that has lived so long, growing all the time in interest and influence, surely commands the respect of all.

Dr. Nathan Bachman, for many reasons called one of Maryville's greatest benefactors, conducted those first services. Our own President Wilson was one of those who decided for the Christian life. There is no telling how much that one decision has meant for Maryville College and for the world.

"Dr. Bachman was an apostle of love and gentleness and loyalty and vision. He appealed dispassionately but earnestly and most wisely to the manliness and the womanliness of the students. Like Goldsmith's village preacher, he sought to allure to brighter worlds and lead the way; but sought first to lead the young people to nobility of character through the transforming power of religion, and to usefulness of service through enlistment under the Great Leader."

These first meetings determined the character of all the following series, and many thousands have been helped by them to better living. All of us can count upon very definite and invaluable good from the approaching series. We live in a Christian country, in the midst of comforts, blessings, and opportunities peculiar to Christian civilization.

However far from perfect our civilization and our national life may be, we owe the best that we have to the fact that our civilization is Christian. Holding aloof from Christ and His church is a course not easily justified for any one living in the midst of the blessings He has brought to the world.

Dr. Vander Meulen brings to his work the fruits of learning, experience, maturity, contact with the busy world, and knowledge of men. He will set forth the simple gospel truths. The undecided may find help to a clear understanding and definite decision in the shaping of life and conduct. Older Christians have the opportunity to learn more of the things of the Kingdom. We may look to this season of discussion of the principles of the Christian life for more enlightenment, stronger faith, and a deeper earnestness.

The music is always a most enjoyable and helpful part of the meetings. Mr. Stringham is just the right kind of leader for the singing, and Miss Adkins will help with her spirited work at the piano. Best of all is our own part in the singing with this fine leadership. Every one will want to be at every meeting, and to be on time so as to get full benefit of the opening service.

The leaders we can count upon. Shall we all do our part?

HIGHLAND QUINTET MEETS THREE TEAMS TO WIN TWO GAMES

Lafollette Strollers, L. M. U. Beaten by Maryville on Recent Trip. Lose to Union 21-20.

WHITE, BIRD, SCORE BIG

The Highlanders did a little barnstorming last week and cleaned up in two of the three contests, their solitary defeat coming by a scant single-point margin.

The LaFollette Strollers, a strong independent aggregation, were met and defeated 43-37. Bird and White lead Maryville's attack and rung up scores consistently throughout the game.

In the game with L. M. U., the Scots faced a 15-10 lead at the end of the first half, and L. M. U. appeared to be working smoothly. Nothing daunted, however, the local cagesters came back with a rush in the final stanza to win handily 22 to 15. They achieved the remarkable feat of holding the foe scoreless while they themselves collected an even dozen points.

The other game with Union College—well, we'd rather not talk about it. Union managed to luck out a 21-20 win—on a good-sized floor they couldn't have stayed with the flying Scots five minutes. The floor was one of these two-by-four affairs, almost completely enclosed by a gallery, which rendered accurate shooting impossible to a team not accustomed to its pecularities.

T. T. Alexander Prize Awarded in Halves

Judges' Decision Gives Petitt and Miller Equal Honors.

January 29—The finals for the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest were held this morning in chapel. This year the contest was for women. There were three contestants in the finals due to a tie in the decision of the judges in the preliminaries. Edith Woolsey, junior, spoke on the "Resurrection". Viola Pettitt, junior, chose for her subject "The Atonement". Annie Lou Miller, senior, spoke in "The Ressurrection".

The judges, Rev. W. T. Swaim, Rev. B. B. Lavender, and Rev. W. M. Gilliam, all ministers from Knoxville, decided that there was a tie for first place between Viola Petitt, and Annie Lou Miller.

The prize of $100 offered to the winner in the contest will be divided equally between the two. It will be given when the other prizes in the school are given out during commencement week.

This oratorical contest is an annual contest alternating for boys one year and girls the next. Last year the $100 was won by William Rogers, senior.

CLUB PICTURES DUE BEFORE FEBRUARY 12

All Class Pictures Must Be In One Week Later.

The Chilhowean announces that clubs and other organizations will be given until February 12 in which to submit their pictures. Whenever a convenient time is selected the editor should be notified, and he will arrange it with Mr. Webb. Promptness and dispatch are urged in order that the year book may be issued at an earlier date than last year. The staff offers complete cooperation, and asks that this matter receive the immediate attention of club and organization editors and presidents, not to mention the harassed treasurers.

Juniors likewise must have their pictures in by the 12th, and sophomores and freshmen will be given only a week later. Members of these classes should make dates at Mr. Webb's studio. Reprints may be secured upon the payment of 35 cents.

The junior class produces the annual, and yet the editor finds himself worried and anxious about the undue delay in their pictures. He earnestly and fervently requests them to "snap into it!"

Give Us Music!

At the last Student Council meeting there was some discussion brought up concerning the installation of a piano in the lobby of Carnegie. All present seemed to think the idea quite reasonable and after expressing this opinion, left the matter up to President Thompson to see what could be done.

We hope Tommy will meet with no serious difficulty in getting the authorities to accede to this request from Carnegie musicians. It is only just that there should be a piano in the boys' dormitory. There is at least one in each of the girls' dormitories, and surely no one will say that musical ability and appreciation are limited to the fairer sex. There are many fellows in the hall who can play a piano, more or less, and there are many more that can appreciate good music when they hear it.

There is no better way to promote an enjoyable period of fellowship than through the agency of music. Group singing can do much to make life seem more worth living. Occasionally there has been such singing in the Carnegie lobby, but the occasions have been rare and far between. It takes a group of fellows in the first place to start the music when there is no piano. Given a piano, however, one fellow can soon have the group together, bellowing and having a great time in general.

There is plenty of time after supper before study hour begins for such a social period in the lobby. Especially is this true now, when the short days of Winter cause supper to be eaten at five o'clock, and cause everyone to prefer to be inside rather than out.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

The teams have been selected to represent the college in intercollegiate debates this year, but this does not mean that those who were not selected failed. Only a limited number can be used in actual debate, but the others have received some valuable training and experience which prepares them for better work next year. In many schools rating high in debate the students conduct societies which train them especially for debate.

—:—

Professor Queener's idea of "The ber can be used in actual debate, for a true literary society. I have long been of the opinion that the programs of the literary societies on the Hill should be more literary or else the societies should be designated by another name.

—:—

The speakers in the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest had no no tion of being eliminated as is evidenced by the fact that there wa a tie in the preliminaries and als in the finals. This always makes it hard on the judges.

—:—

New Athenian" would make a core and the two freshman teams there are now thirty college debaters on the Hill. It is little wonder the place is so "agreeable".

—:—

The library is the debater's gymnasium. Nevertheless, the debater needs to become an athlete at least an hour each day in order to win on the platform.

—:—

Somehow the debaters this year should raise the percentage of victories above the record of last year. In the last season Maryville won 59% of all the debates in which representatives participated. The Pi Kappa Delta officials consider 60% a very good average.

—:—

You will have the opportunity to meet the debaters individually through this column in the next issue of the Highland Echo.

Incidentally

——At last we know our fates—and doubtless our parents have been warned to expect the worst. The only thing remaining is to live up to the resolutions that we've made several times over—that we'll do better next semester. It can be done, you know.

——But even with exams over, life is not a carefree dream. Take for instance, that unfortunate moment when Miss Hale walks into the room while you are struggling to make a piece sound a little as the composer intended it.

——Kipling should have put something in his "If" about "If you can stand in line, and not grow impatient." The last week has been quite hectic in this respect. No more lines till next Fall.

——There are some new P. H. D.'s on the Hill—better known as Practice House Dolls. They say that they have to work once in a while. Believe it or not.

——"The Brides' Course" is progressing famously. There is sympathy expressed, however, for Fancher's and Mary Chris' husbands,—that is, unless they really have a weakness for salt instead of sugar in their cocoa.

——Maryville officials got out their snow-shovels and road-scrapers last Friday morning. It was discovered however, that the propects of becoming snowbound were utterly false.

Changing Horses

AT the portals of our large cities—New York, Baltimore, Detroit, and soon Cleveland—a semaphore halts a luxurious flyer drawn by a puffing steam engine. A simple switching manœuver, and electricity takes charge. A giant electric locomotive, quickly under way, glides silently into the home stretch with its long string of Pullmans.

Like a thoroughbred it makes the run—tirelessly. Passengers alight in a clean terminal—clean because there is no smoke or soot.

Another milestone in transportation—another event in the life of the iron horse!

Civilization is progressing, with electricity in the van. How far this advance will take us, is a problem for our future leaders. It is for them to develop and utilize new applications of electricity—the force that is pointing the way over uncharted courses, not only in railroading, but in every phase of progress.

The G-E monogram is found on large electric locomotives and on MAZDA lamps, electric vacuum cleaners, and a multitude of other appliances which serve us all. It is the mark of an organization that is dedicated to the cause of electrical progress.

RALPH LLOYD WRITES CONCERNING MEETINGS

Edgewood Presbyterian Church
Edgewood, Pittsburg, Pa.
January 23, 1929

President Samuel Tyndale Wilson,
Maryville College,
Maryville, Tennessee.
My dear Dr. Wilson:

It is with great pleasure that I learn of Dr. Vander Meulen's coming for the February Meetings. He is quite an unique and outstanding preacher among Presbyterian churches and your Meetings with him ought to reach a high-water mark in the long history of February Meetings.

Maryville College will be much in my thoughts and prayers during these next weeks, for the days I spent with you last year remain vivid in my memory. I think of certain young men and women who did not take the forward step which they should have taken last year, but I sincerely trust that they may be led to do so unreservedly this time.

Cordially yours,
Ralph W. Lloyd.

COACH THROWER TO START TRACK WORK

Meets With Tennessee, and L. M. U., Assured. Conference Meet Scheduled.

It will not be many days until Coach Thrower makes the first call for track men. Already a score of aspirants to cinder honors are to be seen working out in the gym, or doing road work in the direction of the college woods. All of which means that Maryville is going to have a track team again this year.

Manager "Shorty" Shaw is arranging a series of attractive meets, and will soon be able to announce a definite schedule. We meet the University of Tennessee the first Saturday in April, and Chattanooga, and L. M. U. later.

The Conference meet at Emory & Henry, May 3, closes the year.

A particularly attractive trip is planned if the showing of the team deserves it. The second Saturday in April, the Tech Relays are held, and Coach Thrower is contemplating the entry of a couple of dash men and a medley relay. Such a chance will be well worth working for.

There are more vacancies in the ranks of the track team than there have been in some years. Those from last year's team who will have an edge on the first string places are Taggart, hundred, two twenty, four-forty, and broad jump; Williams, hundred, two-twenty, and broad jump; Holman four-forty, half-mile; Peterson, half-mile, mile; Headrick, high jump, discus; Houston, two-mile; Millsaps, javelin; Crawford, high and low hurdles, broad jump. These places are by no means secure, and anyone who can run or jump, or throw weights, or who would like to learn to do these things should answer Coach Thrower's call and begin training. Just because it is college competition, there is no reason you cannot meet it.

There are especially large gaps in the pole-vault, middle and long distances, so if you ever did anything in high school, come out and prove it—and more for the Highlanders.

The Old Timer Says

Why not a snake dance between halves of a basketball game some night? It would at least be a change.

Psych exam reveals startling fact—two seniors last year couldn't tell how the scoring was counted in football.

And then again I dare say there are some who sat on the back rows at the last basketball game who can't tell who won the game.

"Will the boxing gloves that wandered away from Bartlett Hall under somebody's arm please come home? Sadly missed by—"Benny Prince."

Anyhow, Speedy will help the track team.

Earl Blazer doesn't know whether to go out for baseball or take psychology.

I understand Davis will play baseball.

Guess the freshmen took all the dumbells out of Bartlett. The competition gets worse every year. Nobody loves a dumbell.

Peggy Bird enjoys horse-back riding, so her friends tell us. She treats her horse as she would a person, no doubt, because the time the horse got its foot caught in the stirrup, Peggy said (very properly), "Well, if you are going to get on, I'll get off."

And so, far, far into the night.

DISAPPOINTED SENIORS MAY ATTEND LECTURES

First Home Ec Class for Men Forced to Turn Away Applicants.

Home Economics, 35A, for young men of the junior and senior classes is attracting much attention. Already the maximum enrollment of twenty-four has been reached and there are nearly a dozen on the waiting list.

Although the enrollment is restricted to twenty-four, Miss Meiselwitz, who is in charge of the class, states that any senior man who wishes to do, may attend the lectures which will be given at the "a" period on Saturdays. Of course no credit will be given for such attendance, but it is certain that these lectures will be highly beneficial and many senior men will probably avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing them. The lecture-room is on the fourth floor of Science Hall.

Following is a tentative plan of the lectures to be given:

Food and its uses.
Digestion.
Good and bad nutrition.
How to select daily menus.
Foods for some abnormal conditions: colds, fever, high blood pressure, etc.
Diets for building up or reducing Technique of ordering in public.
Table etiquette.
Home entertaining and the duties of the host.
Camp and breakfast cookery.

Of the semester, eleven weeks will be devoted to cooking, four to cloth ing, and two are still open. The course will be repeated next Fall.

New Students on The Hill

No doubt most of us have noticed a number of new faces on the campus and in the classrooms this semester.

Fourteen former Maryville students who were out of school the first semester have returned. We are glad to see the faces of our old acquaintances on the Hill.

Nine new students have registered for the second semester, thus making a total of twenty-three of our present students who were not here for the first semester's work.

COMPETITION KEEN IN GIRLS' CAGE TEAM

Sophs Due to Win, But Dope May Fail. Interest Lacking in Co-ed Athletics.

Coach Lynn Queener, like every other coach since the time of Adam, is whipping her team into shape. The girls are practicing regularly each week to turn out a team that will cop the class championship in the inter-class tournament which comes off sometime in the near future.

Neither the class teams nor the varsity have been chosen yet, but it won't be long until the contestants for the various positions will know their fate.

Last year the freshman team won the championship- and the sophomores the soccer championship. This year the same soccer team retained its crown. Will the former frosh retain theirs?

HI-TRAILERS HIKE INTO CHILHOWEES

February 4—Six Hi-Trailers returned this morning from a strenuous fourteen-mile hike from the Chilhowee mountains with the negligible assistance of Peirce's "Hardly-Able" for a mere thirteen miles of the way. It is rumored that this is their Second Missionary Journey into this forsaken section.

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that the stress and strain of the hike to the mountains on Saturday was likewise alleviated by a similar assistance. We hope that the four who were left at Judge Gamble's cabin will not be compelled to walk in.

LAW CLUB MEETS

January 31—The Law Club met in Athenian Hall tonight. Interesting talks were made by Sam Hatcher Travis Hitt, and Joe Sharp.

The secretary and treasurer, Bruce Hunter, left school at the end of last semester, and Joe Sharp was elected to take the place vacated.

It was decided that a picture should be made Monday, February 4, for the Chilhowean. This picture is to be made of the entire club, grouped as at a trial in the courthouse.

There will be no meeting the week of February 4. The following week, Judge Gamble will speak.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission announces the following open competitive examination:

JUNIOR PATENT EXAMINER

Applications for junior patent examiner must be on file with the Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C., not later than March 5.

The examination is to fill vacancies in the Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

The entrance salary is $2,000 a year. Higher-salaried positions are filled through promotion.

The duties are to perform elementary scientific or technical work in the examination of applications for patents; to see what the alleged inventor thinks he has produced that is new; and to see that the disclosure is complete; and to investigate the prior art as represented by patents already granted in the United States and various foreign countries and by the descriptions in technical literature.

Competitors will be rated on physics, technics, mechanical drawings, and the optional subject or subjects chosen. The optionals are (1) mechanical engineering, (2) physical and organic chemistry, (3) chemical engineering, (4) civil engineering, (5) electrical engineering. French or German, or both, may also be included if desired. Qualifying in the language test increases the probability of appointment.

Full information may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or from the secretary of the United States Civil Service Board of Examiners at the post office or customhouse in any city.

February 3—The vociferous requests in the dining-room for a snap seem to have been rewarded. Although everyone left supper supposing his efforts to have been in vain, the word was later passed around that there would be one. There was.

NIGHT FOOTBALL

Night football will come into national prominence in 1929. Several schools have played football at night in the past as an experiment, and so satisfactory were the results that it is believed that night footbal has come to stay.

At least it will be brought into the national spotlight next November when Coach Knute K. Rockne's Notre Dame eleven meets Coach O. M. Solem's Drake University, Missouri Valley eleven at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, which all of us remember as being the scene of the Dempsey-Tunney fight.

It will be Chicago's first night game of football. There will be brilliant pyrotechnics. There will be spectacular devices never before thought of in connection with a gridiron contest. Just imagine the team on defense trying to solve the mysteries of the hidden ball at night. It is hard enough to follow the ball in bright daylight, so Chicago is expected to turn out to the tune of one hundred thousand spectators to view this battle.

Two other Missouri Valley conference schools are considering nocturnal equipment for the 1929 season, and it won't be long before night football will become popular. (College Humor Service.)

Thousands of young men in the United States earn their way through school. Some of them play football and even attend classes on the side.

MOVING SEASON ON IN CARNEGIE HALL

Familiar Faces of Last June Reappear at Opening of Semester.

The beginning of the second semester marks a number of changes in the personnel of Carnegie Hall. Several of the old men are moving out (for various reasons), and a number of new men are coming in.

Among the men who are coming in this semester we find our old friend Julius Caesar, alias Taft McKee. Julius has some exciting taes to tell of his adventures since leaving Maryville last June. Since that time he has been selling books to the Indians in Oklahoma. Caesar's face glows with excitement as he tells of selling "Standing Cow" a book written by I. Will Milk. We're glad to have Julius back with us this semester.

Clarence McCurry comes to our junior class from Tusculum College. We have some fine fellows from Tusculum and we believe that McCurry is another one.

The freshman class is strengthened by the following new men in Carnegie Hall: Frank Garmen and James Fenimore, room 117; Hubert Deatherage, room 116; Thomas Dixon, room 203; Allan Foreman, room 336.

A number of men have changed rooms for the second semester. Those changing and their new room numbers are as follows: Storey and Hubert Taylor, 401; R. A. Young, 321; Goodson, 338; George Osborne and Cook, 339; Furgeson and Tefteteller, 310; Shaw, 317; Marley, 33; Deffiaven, 124; Peacock, 16; Murray, 102.

Mr. Mac expresses the desire that these men remember exactly where they belong and that the other men forget the changes that have been made.

STAFF MEMBER SHOWERED

January 28—A bridal shower was given this evening in Baldwin Hall for Edna Baither, one of our former staff editors, who is to leave us in a few days.

The shower began with a progressive supper, each course of which was served in a different Baldwin room. After the last course a number of beautiful gifts were showered upon the bewildered Edna who received them most graciously in spite of her surprise. The presents were varied, and each was the sort that a young bride would most desire. In view of the fact that Katherine Hoxworth, one of the hostesses, is also leaving our campus this semester, a gift was presented to her.

The entertainment of the evening was in the form of a mock wedding made hilarious by the unusual characterization of the country preacher portrayed by Fancher Smartt The other members of the brida procession were: the bride, Jan Duke, veiled in a yellow dotted window curtain; the groom, "Patsy" Zachery, dressed in "his Sunday best"; the father, Virginia Crider flower girl, Edith Kitts.

The shower was attended by a number of the campus "elite", including two of the Baldwin matrons, Mrs. Snodgrass and Mrs. Graham. We mustn't forget to mention the presence of "Little Joe", a byelo baby presented to the bride-to-b at the close of the evening.

Chemistry Club

January 31—At the meeting of the Chemistry Club tonight, Mr. Griffitts gave a fine talk on "The Periodic Classification". New life is coming to the Chemistry Club with the new semester, and big things are planned for the semester. At the next meeting, February 19, Prof. Howell will present a stunt night of his own which will be as interesting as educational.

valuable in reducing and smoothing out our American accent.

"The system here is very different from that of Maryville, the responsibility being placed entirely on the student. No attendance record is kept at our classes and one need never open a book so far as routine work at the Sorbonne is concerned, but at the day of reckoning, sometime in February when the semester exams take place, woe to the one who has not closely followed his course. There are two parts to our exams: an oral exam lasting only a few minutes in which the professor proposes certain questions, and a written exam being a dissertation on some subject of the course."

A Home In The Cumberlands

A portrayal of a bit of mountain life by Fancher Smartt, member of the Writers' Workshop.

Editor's Note:— The following story is one based on character development. It is especially interesting because of the mountain dialect contained in it. There is no particular plot unfolded herein; rather, we are introduced to a situation and a class of people with which we may not be familiar. The story takes us through one day of mountain life.

Mrs. Mabry is a mountain woman of more than ordinary ambition and inspiration, who desires greatly to see beyond the mountain walls, yet loves her mountains dearly; Cynthia Mabry is a girl of twelve, keen-sighted, ideaistic to a certain detent, and endowed with her mother's love for the mountains and desire for something better than that which she knows and understands; Wes Mabry is an ordinary, short-sighted man of the mountains; and Governor and President, six year old twin boys.

+ + + + + + + + + + + +

"Well, Governor, hit beats me how airy a body could fidget his maw like you allus do, er git into as much diviltry as you allus can—hit's beyond me ter know what causes hit, er whar you git hit—from yer paw, I reckin."

With these words Mrs. Mabry pulled a little bit of a boy from beneath a heap of old wheels and pieces of iron which had been at one time a rattletrap machine wagon. He had crawled under there to hide from President, his twin brother, who just at that minute appeared around the corner of the barn, breathless, but his eyes beaming as he spied his brother being extricated from the pile of rubbish by his mother. He yelled, "I see yer—Caughtcha!"

Mrs. Mabry and her two sons were standing in the barn lot of their mountain home which was situated twenty-eight miles from the railroad, and six miles from the "meetin' house." They were in the very heart of the Cumberland mountains, and in most respects were typical mountain folk. Their house was a small log building, with one big room and a lean-to behind, while the barn, several hundred feet away, was made on something of the same order, but was in a slightly more dilapidated condition. The chicken house and smokehouse presented somewhat similar appearances of delapidation; but about it all was a certain cleanliness and attempt at order which made one wonder, as he first looked at it, if perhaps someone had begun to clean up the place, to change it all into something better, but had gotten only far enough to indicate that such a reform had been undertaken. The yard was swept clean with the brush broom, made of cedar boughs tied together, standing neatly against the corner of the smokehouse. The porch was clean, giving evidence of recent scrubbing, but one plank was loose and the steps were leaning to one side, as if ready to fall.

The barn lot was cluttered with old pieces of machinery, several piles of wood, and an old wagon. Here it was, near one particular pile of rubbish, that Mrs. Mabry and the two six-year olds were holding forth.

"Now if you two git into inny more scraps er tight places you can jist git out the best you can. And Governor, you needn't go a yelling 'Maw' ter me if you do, fer I've got somethin' else to do ceptin' a watchin' you younguns." But even as she said this she grabbed the two children to her and hugged them tightly. "But that's all right, yor Maw's boys, ain't yuh? I love you even if you do might nigh run me to death sometimes." And kissing each of them she put them down and turned toward the house.

As she was walking along looking about her, Mrs. Mabry suddenly thought of how different things had been before she was married. She had been pretty then—that was

DR. J. C. ECKLES HONORED ON HIS 84TH BIRTHDAY

February 10—In the meeting tonight Mr. Stringham announced that this was the eighty-fourth birthday of his old friend, Dr. J. C. Eckles, who was sitting near the front of the chapel at the time. The congregation rose in honor of Dr. Eckles and Mr. Stringhoam dedicated his solo to him.

Dr. Eckles is the father of Mrs. Nita Eckles West, head of our expression department, and of Mrs. C. F. Crowder.

Echo Staff Again Has New Members

Three Soph Cubs Chosen; Still Three Vacancies To Be Supplied.

February 7—Today there was a meeting of the joint Student Council—Highland Echo—Faculty committe which has to do with the selection of staff members for the Echo. The regulations governing the conduct of the Highland Echo which were adopted by the entire student body last year specify that there shall be an editor-in-chief, three staff editors, two junior associate editors, six sophomore cub reporters, and ten freshman apprentices. Due to vacancies that have been acquired since the beginning of the present school year it had become necessary to select three sophomore cub reporters, a staff editor and two freshman apprentices.

The only vacancies that were definitely filled by the committee today were those in the sophomore cub section. The three new reporters are Howard Hull, Edwin Buchanan, and Hessie Keaton. These people were elected with the concurrence of the members from each of the three bodies represented on the committee.

A number of possible candidates for the other positions that are open were discussed, but it was decided that no action would be taken concerning them until after each of these people had been interviewed.

A committee was selected to draw up an amendment providing some workable process for amending the regulations. This necessary section was overlooked when the regulations were first drafted, along with several other provisions that should have been originally included. This proposed amendment will be presented before the Student Council at its next meeting.

DOUBLE CAPTAINCY FOR BASEBALL TEAM

Gabbard and Bird to Share in Honors of Highland Nine. Unique Arrangement.

Maryville is to enjoy the distinction of having two captains for her baseball team this year. In the election of pilot for the coming season, Gene Gabbard and Tillie Bird tied for the honor, and it was decided that since Gene would not pitch every game, and Tillie would probably be on the diamond most of the time, the captaincy should be divided. Gabbard will be in command when he is in the game, and Bird will take the reins when Gene is on the bench.

Gene has played four years for the Highlanders, and is a great mound artist. We are all looking for him to toss some diamond victories our way in the coming months. He had a major part in the hurling for last year's State Champs.

Tillie Bird, that all-around athlete from the surrounding metropolis, has played four years under Honaker's tutilage, and it is with pride that we see him share the highest honor Maryville's nine can offer. The shortstop position will probably engage Tillie's attention for the season, for he is a veteran at the midway post, having performed creditably throughout Maryville's thousand per cent season. Bird is also noted for his ability to "smack the apple on the nose".

Everybody is anxiously awaiting the time when he will see the Highlander nine in action, and although the students do not expect another perfect season, they would like a majority of the games to come their way.

All power to you, Gene and Tillie, let's have another real team!

JOKES IN FEBRUARY MEETINGS

"The Bible says that Jesus cast the seven devils out of Mary Magdelene; but she is the only woman from which we know the devils are cast out."

"One of these old-fashioned hour glasses is like a bachelor,—the longer it stands, the less sand it has."

"And the sun kisses the apple on the cheek, until it blushes like a maiden receiving her first proposal, only the colors don't come off."

Dr. Bartlett Visits Chapel Thursday, A.M.

Leader of Four Meetings is Son of Former College President.

Dr. Wm. Thaw Bartlett, who led us in prayer Thursday morning, is unknown to most of us although there are many strong ties that bind him to Maryville. Dr. Bartlett is the son of the third president of Maryville College, Dr. P. Mason Bartlett, who served so loyally as president from 1869 until 1887. He is also related to Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, the donor of Thaw Hall. The present Dr. Bartlett has the distinction of being the only man ever born on the Hill, in Baldwin Hall, and thus, in Dr. Wilson's words, "he is a real native of the hills." He probably knows more about Maryville than any of us do, having lived here during his childhood, up until his graduation in the Class of 1901. After graduating here he attended the Union Theological Seminary in New York City for one year, and the McCormick Theological Seminary at Chicago for two years.

Upon the completion of these courses he occupied the pulpits of various Presbyterian churches. More recently he has taken a very active part in evangelistic work, conducting services all over the United States. He was the leader of four of our February meetings during the years 1912, 1916, 1921, and 1925. Thus he has kept in close touch with the activities of Maryville and has taken a large part in serving the College.

His interests at Maryville are centered not only in the College, but in the fact that Maryville is the home of his mother, Mr. P. Mason Bartlett. Mrs. Bartlett is an accomplished musician, and although she is over eighty years of age, her interests are varied and active. It might be interesting to note here that she originated the popular term "moonshining" when she was matron of Baldwin Hall.

The occasion of Dr. Bartlett's recent visit was to celebrate, with his mother, the anniversary of his father's birthday, which was on February 6, 1820. Until recently Dr. Bartlett and his wife have been living in Chattanooga, but they have now moved to Sweetwater, Tennessee. Dr. Bartlett will leave soon to conduct a series of services at Auburn, Illinois, in the church of Mr. Stringham, the song leader of the current February Meetings.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETS IN BARTLETT

February 10—College Hill girls were given the rare opportunity this evening to attend a Christian Endeavor meeting. Many of these girls are loyal Endeavorers at home, but are necessarily inactive ones while here.

There has been discussion every year concerning the formation of a society for college students, but for some reason it has not been done. As president Gilmore said, he would like to get girls interested in C. E. work, but it was impossible (for several reasons) also unnecessary.

Shumate Brothers To Sing Here Saturday

Vocal and Instrumental Music To Be Heard in Final Lyceum Program.

Four brothers, all with natural musical talents plus years of study and professional experience, make up the Shumate Brothers Quartet, which will appear here Saturday, February 16. All kinds of music from beautiful overtures to popular hits of the day are presented on a program rich with novelties and surprises.

The Shumates have had an exceptional opportunity to develop ensemble playing and singing, inasmuch as they have studied and played together from earliest childhood.

The saxophone held a fascination for the Shumates, and the tones and technique which they achieve on this instrument are remarkable. Each of the brothers uses the same make of instrument, and the blending of the playing is rich in color and shading.

In addition to the saxophone music there is a brass quartet which consists of two trumpets and two trombones.

As singers the Shumates are tremendously popular. Lewis Shumate, as the soloist of the company, always makes a distinct individual hit.

The Shumate Brothers have one of the most popular entertainment companies of its kind in the field today.

Wherever the Shumate Brothers give their popular entertainments, the critics grow enthusiastic. A Maryville audience will have an opportunity this Saturday evening to judge if these critics are correct.

As the Irshman said: "Who called the son-of-a-gun, a piper."

Seniors View June With Troubled Eyes

"Where Do We Go From Here?" Is Provoking Question.

INDECISION PREVALENT

Course in Experience Should be Added, Sarah Says.

(By Sarah Moore)

On our campus are some ninety students who will soon leave the campus, perhaps never to return. (Pause for a burst of tears.) These same students are joining in a frantic chorus these days, appalled by the approach of the days when they shall be thrust forth into the cold, cruel word, and are singing, "Where do we go from here?"

The question becomes more important as the weeks roll by. Among the seniors, however, are some who have already settled the vexing question. A few will step immediately into places toward which they have been looking for several years. Some will exchange this campus for another. But for the most of the seniors it is still a vexing question: "Where do we go from here?"

One enterprising senior made an extensive list of the professions and technical positions and checked them off, vainly searching for a job. Lawyer? No. At least three more years of study necessary. Doctor? Same. Newspaper work? Experience necessary. And so on, until the list finally narrowed to teaching. Aha! Here was the ideal profession. But, in some states experience is necessary. So this senior came to the sad conclusion that he should have attended a college where Experience was taught.

In somewhat similar fashion each senior comes to the conclusion that the world is extremely reluctant to honor with a pay envelope a graduate who has had all the advantages of higher education. This attitude, so think the seniors, is highly ungrateful. Here they have splendid plans for bettering the world and for improving the morals of the nation, and the world does not seem anxious to listen. They could easily advise Mr. Hoover concerning prohibition; they should like to tell Mr. Bruce Barton how to write and Dr. Fosdick how to preach sermons—and they get a circular letter from a teachers' agency telling them that a position might be secured if they pay a dollar down and a dollar for the rest of their natural lives! In that fashion does the world appreciate genius!

The seniors are disappointed. They would be even more crestfallen if they knew what was to come in the next few years. Lofty thoughts of world reform will be in the dim past, and such vexing problems as the high cost of groceries, and the possibility of a new suit and the liklihood of a raise will occupy them.

And so the seniors wonder bitterly if a thorough knowledge of anything is not better than a college education.

C. L. Menser Visits Theta Alpha Phi

National President of Dramatic Fraternity on Chapter Visitation. Malcom Miller Also a Guest.

February 8—The local chapter of Theta Alpha Phi was honored by a visit from the national president, Professor C. L. Menser, of Knox College, Illinois, today. Mr. Menser is making a tour of the chapter in this part of the country in order to form a closer contact between the local and national organizations.

A number of students gathered in the auditorium in Thaw Hall to meet Mr. Menser, who talked to them about the place of dramatics in the lives of the common people, and the part college people can play in raising the general standards of professional theatricals. He also outlined the purpose of the fraternity on the Hill, saying that unless its

Brief Reminders of Eleven Great Sermons

The Adventure of Religion
(February 5, evening)

Hebrews, 11:8—By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went.

Adventure appeals to every red-blooded person and the greatest adventure is that of religion.

There is the adventure of accepting Christ, involving courage and faith. These are involved in coming into intimate relationship with one who is unseen and divine.

There is the adventure of high service. Men who have tried all sorts of adventure have found the greatest in the building of character with the help of Jesus Christ.

There is the adventure of death. What may we expect? Nothing, except by faith. Christ has promised Eternal Life; the Christian does not fear death. To him it is the Great Adventure.

The Price of Christianity
(February 6, morning)

Matthew 16:24—Then said Jesus unto his disciples, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

Salvation is free, but there are subjective costs.

Deny oneself; that is, deny the lower self. One may be unwilling to deny himself now and unable later.

Take up His Cross. This should not frighten non-Christians. It does not mean we must bear some physical infirmity, but merely that we share the burdens of others.

Where is the man's pride who wishes to live a selfish life?

Follow me. Many would-be leaders balk at following anyone. To follow does not mean to slavishly imitate, but rather to obey Him. People dislike to obey, but this is part of the price; we must make His will ours.

Temperamental Religion
(February 6, evening)

Phillipians 2:4—Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

There is no set form of religious thinking. There are many different views. It is well that there are various churches representing these various views, but they are all parts of one great church. There are various sorts of Christians.

There are those of an intellectual temperament. An appeal to the reason is best for them. God has need of such men.

There are those of emotional temperament. The greatest appeal to them is through the heart. One can love more people into the Kingdom than he can argue into it.

There are those of practical temperament. They go about doing good at all times,—are practicing Christians. Christ belonged to all three of these classes.

What Lack I Yet?
(February 7, morning)

Matthew 19:20—The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

What is the distinction between the Christian and the moral non-Christian?

The moral man's judgments are inadequate. He judges himself by sins of commission rather than of omission. He judges by external rather than by internal standards. He judges by averages. "I am as good as the average man."

The moral man expects to be saved by his goodness. The Christian does not. The best men are the most humble and conscious of sin.

The non-Christian wrongs God and his fellow-men. Christ calls to all as from the top of an infinitely high mountain. The moral man is very little nearer Him than anyone else.

Feeding Among the Lilies
(February 7, evening)

Solomon: 2:16—My beloved is mine, and I am his: he feedeth his flock among the lilies.

Here is good advice for ladies. Choose a practical man for a husband, one who can be counted upon to "be feeding his flock". Don't marry for money. Money above a certain amount cannot give happiness.

More advice: choose a man who has some love of the beautiful in life, who "feeds among the lilies"; one who does not look upon children as so many more to be fed and clothed.

This passage gives a suggestion of Jesus as the Good Shepherd. God sends us food and light; he doesn't hand it out in a prosaic way, either. Consider the beauty of the harvest fields and of the sunset. Jesus taught in the language of the heart, a language that still lives.

The Yellow Streak
(February 8, morning)

Matthew 26:22—And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began everyone of them to say unto him, Lord is it I?

Man does not know his capacity for good or evil. Men that now think themselves too strong to yield to temptation may be fallen tomorrow. There are many such examples in history. The disciples realized their human weaknesses.

The Bible points out the danger. We are at all times subject to influences which we have seen lead our companions astray. Some of us may be already slipping; there is no limit to the depths to which we may fall. The only safety is in accepting Christ as our Saviour.

The Vacant Chair
(February 8, evening)

2 Kings 4:10—Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a chair,

A Time for Decision

The series of meetings now in progress surely gives promise of being a red-letter series in the history of the meetings. Dr. Vander Meulen's addresses are exceedingly forceful and convincing. We hesitate to print such bare skeletons of his sermons as we are including on the front page; we would like to print each one of them, word for word, so that we could preserve the thoughts with which he has been clinching his arguments and his appeals. We hope, however, that what little we do include may help us recall the related thoughts which are omitted.

Now is surely the time to think seriously concerning the religious part of our lives. A forward step today may be a natural impulse; we should not inhibit it. Our natural religious craving is a talent bestowed alike on all; to bury it now may mean to lose it forever.

——O——

A Word to The Workshop

In this issue we are printing an entire story which was written by a member of our Writers' Workshop. Ordinarily we do not have space enough to print rather lengthy stories such at this one, but this week it is different. The February Meetings now in progress cause a scarcity of news except such as concerns the meetings themselves, making it possible to include this story in this issue.

We are glad of the opportunity to print some of the Workshop's work. In the first place, it will serve to show to the student body a sample of the work being done by Workshop members. Possibly everyone knows there is such an organization on the Hill, but few see any evidence of its work. Although there is considerable more-or-less literary work produced there during the year it does not come forth into the light.

A second reason why we are glad to print some of the writers' work is that we hope to arouse them to a sense of greater responsibility and use to the college. The College Players present plays during the year; the Glee Singers put on a concert or two; the debaters appear often after the February meetings; our various athletic teams perform before us. The Writers' Workshop, however, writes and writes,—for the pleasure and, perhaps, the improvement of itself.

Why cannot the Workshop publish a monthly magazine? We have no fear that it will compete with the Echo,—there is a distinct field for both. Subscriptions would be voluntary, but would be sought for if the magazine be made sufficiently meritorious. Such an undertaking might appear as too much of a business-like undertaking to our poetic and temperamental writers, but probably there are business men on the Hill who would help.

If the Workshop does not desire to undertake such a project as yet, it should at least publish a book of its best work at least once a year. If such a thing were done, and done well, there would be enthusiastic buyers and Workshop members would have more incentive to put out good work.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Permit me, your honor, to introduce circumstancial evidence that there will be an argument started with malice aforethought.

—:—

Meet Mr. Florian Hopkins. For further credentials of his ability see "Whose Who at Maryville College", but for our immediate purpose it is enough to know that he is president of the Maryville Chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, and is an able debater. He was a delegate to the Pi Kappa Delta convention in Ohio last year.

—:—

I didn't want to tell this on him, but Mr. Hopkins is also a great eater. On one occasion while we were out on a debate trip we spent the night at a hotel where we found European style of service. For breakfast, instead of choosing a few optional dishes for a fixed price, Mr. Hopkins ordered the entire menu for that fixed price. I had to get another table.

—:—

The vice president of Pi Kappa Delta is Forrest S. Robertson. To start an argument with him is to admit you are wrong.

Betty Jane Sharpe is secretary and "Peggy" Mevis is treasurer. Betty Jane was on the team that won over Carson-Newman last year after having lost all their notes, speeches, and dresses before they arrived.

—:—

An interesting recruit is revealed in the person of Vera Coy. She copped first place among the girls in the tryouts. Although not a member of Pi Kappa Delta she is ahead of most of the members in that she already has a diamond.

—:—

Last year when the Tennessee Wesleyan girls seemed to doubt the number of magazines quoted from, it was Alice Renegar who graciously informed them that she could not bring the entire library upon the platform for proof, but they could go down stairs and read a while if they wished to.

—:—

To win on names, first let Jesse James himself wade into them and then Travis Hitt 'em.

—:—

More evidence to be introduced next week.

Incidentally

——The past week has meant a great deal in the lives of many of us. We have gained more serious purposes, and have become better acquainted with ourselves and our beliefs on religious subjects.

——The show of hands of those who had attended every meeting showed that the students are not slow to appreciate the good things that come to them. If just to sing out of the new song-books and under Mr. Stringham's leadership, the meetings would be worth-while. But to centralize our thoughts on one stirring theme, Dr. Vander Meulen's inspiring sermons could not be improved upon.

——In all the classes where the students are arranged alphabetically, you should see the look of delight on the faces of those who are permitted to sit right on the front row where the teacher can give them particular attention. (What's wrong in this statement?)

——Surely everyone has seen the bright yellow dresses on the campus. The girls who don't wear them must wish they did, for it is undoubtedly a good advertisement for the ones who do not yet possess the prerequisite for the Bride's Course—a diamond solitaire.

——The men—would it be a breach of etiquette to call them the Grooms?—prefer to wear their uniforms in the privacy of the kitchen. The first lesson they had in selection of clothing suitable for every occasion was the purchase of aprons of a subdued shade of green—to match the kitchen furniture.

——The girls' basketball teams have been selected. The freshman team presents a particularly formidable picture because of the presence of four crimson haired players. None of the other members appear particularly meek and humble, say the Sophomores, very anxious to keep their laurels of last year.

——The girls, who came staggering out of the gym last week, had discovered to the enjoyment of others how very little equilibrium they had.

——"Daddy" Webb has had a big family this last week of college students, who are anxious not for creditable likenesses, but for pictures which flatter them to a marked degree.

——The heart-shaped boxes in the Drug Stores serve as an ever-present reminder to the boys that Valentine's Day is not far in the future. The question foremost in their minds now is "How many pounds can I afford to buy?"

——The waitresses have decided and resolved to keep law and order at their tables. Why? Because they're human, too—they like to go to Snaps once in a while.

MILLIGAN FIVE MEETS HIGHLANDERS HERE FRIDAY

fifteen years ago—and she was never lacking in "beaux". The one brightest spot in her girlhood had been her trip to Cousin Gertrude's city home. Months of preparation preceded the actual event, and when she came back, after a two week's stay, she felt that she had had enough excitement to last her the rest of her life.—For she had gotten a glimpse into a different kind of life, one which her mother had pictured to her as a child, but which she had never expected to experience for herself.

All this had come to her vaguely, yet certainly, while she visited her cousin, for there was nothing dull or slow about her mind, and she had exceptional reasoning ability for her age. After she returned home it always remained with her as a touch of something different from all else she knew, and as a sort of sacred treasure.

But it took education to learn about those things, and she had been given no chance at an education, so things seemed to drop there. But deep in her heart Mrs. Mabry knew that there was something in life bigger than the things she understood, and as she sang to her babies at night, or told them stories which her mother had told her, she tried to add some few words which might inspire them to experience for themselves the reality of the ideal which she had perceived but a glimpse of.

But to return to Mrs. Mabry's meditations—When Wesley, who was now her husband, had "courted" her, it had all been different, and she would have laughed if anyone had even hinted to her that he might change someday, and that things might come to the place they had come to. She knew the Mabrys for generations back had been no-account men, but Wes had seemed different, somehow.

Now he loafed around, barely making a living for his family, drinking a great deal, and doing nothing unless the "spirit moved him", and for the last few years the spirit had been very slow about speaking to him. His farm had been neglected until they could barely make a crop on it, and Mrs. Mabry wondered where next year's food and clothing were coming from if something weren't done.

As yet, we have made no mention of the third child in this family, which, unlike most mountain families, was made up of only three children and the father and mother. This was a girl, Cynthia Rose, who at this time made her appearance in the doorway of the Mabry home.

"Well, I'll say, Cynthy, I had might nigh begin ter give ye out—hit's took ye a powerful long time ter get to the store and back. I commenced lookin out the windo fer ye afore 10:30. But hit war a long trip and six mile afoot ain't to be hit off in sich a leetle time. Did yer paw come all the way back with you?"

"No'm, Maw, he said he thought he'd drop in ter Miss Wattses fer a few minutes and see how the old man uz a gettin along. He said he'd just set a spell with 'em to see if maybe he cud kinder cher im up a mite. They say he's been right smart low. I come from thar by myself."

"Ain't he a comin' home fer dinner?"

"No'm, he sed ter not wait on him—he'd jist git a snack at Miss Wattses."

"Mom, hit seems like the trees is powerful purty this mornin'—hit may sound silly uv me, but I've been a watchin' the leaves a turnin' ever since they first commenced, and right now they remind me of a pitcher I seen at Miss Asy's house onct. She allus did have more pretty things than might nigh inny body, hit seemed to me. This yere pitcher wuz a showin a stretch uv woods sumpin' like our woods, with the trees a turnin different colors, and hit all a lookin' like somebody had jest throwed a lot a' colors all mixed up over might nigh ever tree.

"I reckin I kinder allus notices them kind o' things, Mom. Onct I mentioned hit to Pap, and he said hit wuz strange what quare notions I cud git in my head. So I never said no more about hit.

"Here's the extry poke o' sody you sent fer."

Mrs. Mabry's answer was gentle and motherly as she said,

"Now Honey, don't lissen to nobody if they tell you ye've got quare notions, fer ye hain't. I allus wisht somebody'd a told me all about purty things and things like that, and that I cud a had purty pitchers and things. If Maw hadn't a died so soon I reckin' maybe she would a done it. Hit might nigh broke my heart when I knowed you wouldn't git no chanct to go to school and larn all about them kind a'things.

"Sometime, when the boys gits older we're all a goin to take a trip down to yer cousins in the city, so's you can see what folks outside our mountains is a doin'. If we had the money, now hit would be nice to move somewhars whar we'd be near enuf to a school fer you all to get some schoolin'. I'd allus aimed to do that, but somehow, Cynthy, ever-time I'd think about moving away from the mountains, I'd git a kinder funny feelin' in my throat, and feel like I jest couldn't go away. Then whin Miss Asy said she'd larn you in books I might nigh cried fer joy I wuz so glad ter think that at last a child a'mine would git to steddy books. But after she got sick and couldn't, I couldn't see no other way to do hit, sence the school house at the Bluff had fell in and they warn't a havin' no school thar. Even that is 8 mile away tho. And so you've not had even a lettle grain o' book larning. Hit's a shame too."

Soon after dinner Mrs. Luttrell, one of their nearest neighbors, who lived about three miles away, came over.

"Why I do say, if it hain't you, Miss Josie. Hit seems like a turrible spell since I've seed you," cordially greeted Mrs. Mabry.

"Cynthy, pull Miss Josie up a cheer. How's yer man and the kids?" said Mrs. Luttrell as she took off her black bonnet and settled herself in the chair.

"Well Miss Mabry, I'm powerful glad to see ye. I've been a settin' off to come over fer a week er more, but the chillerns is jist now got well enough fer me to git off. Last night I says to Abe, 'Now I'm a goin' over to Miss Mabry's tomorrow if I have to shet up the house and take all the younguns with me.' You know, Miss Mabry, hits a sight the way a body has to work to keep a pack o' younguns a growin'. Mine allus did seem weaker'n might nigh everbody else's ter me, and hits tied me up turrible at home. How's yourn a gittin' along?"

"Governor hain't been so peart fer the last day or so, but he's might nigh hisself agin terday and the rest uv um is up and a scoutin' it. Hit allus did seem to me that Governor wuz sicklier than President, and I cain't help but a feelin that hit's because o' their names. I knowed that a president wuz higher'n a governor, but I never thought about hit a makin' no difference when I named em."

"Well now, ain't that a shame. Hit shore wears a body out a runnin' fer 'em, more'n ever when they're sickly.

"My oldest gal, Carrie Victorie, you know, halp her Pap dig taters t'other day, and if I do say it she done more work thun two o' them lazy no count Qualls boys that's been a workin' fer Abe sence Joshua, by oldest boy tuck ter haulin' logs. I never could see what got into him ter make him pack up and leave jest when his Pap needed him as bad as he did. But the boy's got money in his head, and he thinks he'll git him a new set o' harness fer the mule when he makes enuf. Hit's that Tucker gal agin that's a causin' it—I been a feelin' hit ever sence he started a goin' over thar to see her regular come Sunday evenin'. That Knowles boy has been a settin' up to her a powerful lot lately, and hits that what's a drivin' Joshua on, fer he ain't been like hisself sence folks has started a guyin' him about a lettin' t'other feller git a head him."

"Don't hit seem ter you like they start a settin' out powerful early these days, Miss Josie?", questioned Mrs. Mabry.

"Yes, Miss Mabry, hit does, but thar ain't nuthin nobody can do ter put sense into ther heads—hit jest seems like ther right mind leaves 'em when you try to tell 'em innything.

"But did I tell you about Josie Pearl, my least un? She tuck the measles a month ago yisterday, and they lodged in her years—Yes, hit wuz pitiful ter see the little thing a sufferin' with yearache, but she's a gittin better now, and I 'low her hearin'll be back as good as ever soon. She does love so good to come over here with me ter see you'uns, but I wuz afeard ter let her walk hit terday, fer she ain't but four you ricollect, and bein' sick too."

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in further discussion of various topics:—children, neighbors, crop, chickens, and the like. As soon as the sun gave signs of the nearness to the close of day, Mrs. Luttrell took her departure.

"Do come back, Miss Josie", Mrs. Mabry said. "Hit's a sight how close weuns air not to git over no more'n we do. But during crop time, a body don't have time to do much neighborin', hit pears like. But come whin ye kin."

"I will, Miss Mabry. You come. Drop in on yer way to the store sometime."

That night afer supper, Cynthia moved over by her mother, who was darning socks under the not too bright light.

"Mom," she said, "I reckin me and you has about as good a time tergether as innybody—don't you figer we do? You're powerful good to us kids, and I 'lowed hit wouldn't do no harm if I told you so—tho hit may sound silly ter you."

"No, Cynthy," was Mrs. Mabry's reply, "Hit don't sound silly atall. They couldn't nobody help but be good to kids when they've got the kind youuns is. Hit's a sight the way I'm allus a flying off and a posterin' you whin I lose my temper. I reckin hit's jest human nature, but hit seems to me sometime like I've got a powerful lot uv it."

"Well, Mom, you ain't got nairy a bit more'n you need. Miss Luttrell and all t'others cain't hold no candle ter you whin hit comes ter doin' things fer yer younguns."

"Cynthy, honey me and you is the only wimmin folks on this place, and hit's up to ter us ter kinda keep things a movin', I reckin. I'd allus hoped to have a little gal uv my own someday what'd be ter me what you air, tho I ain't good at a saying them kind o' things even ter my own gal, so me and you'll have ter work tergether. And maybe sometime they'll be schoolin' in the mountains, and you kin git learnin enuf fer both uv us like I've allus wanted. Hit ain't right fer you ter miss hit all, and that's the reason I'm hopin' and a prayin' that hit wont be long til hit'll come.

"Now you better run crawl in the bed, honey, fer hit's a gittin purty late. We'll git ter the arnin' by sun up in the mornin' so's we wont be at hit all day. Run along honey."

And as she continued to darn worn-out socks, Mrs. Mabry's thoughts took many shapes. She pictured her daughter with a pretty white dress on, similar to a picture she had seen once, one made with lace on it; her hair neatly combed and plaited, and in her hands a book, signifying her daughter's graduation from grammar school—and her entrance into the ranks of the educated. She had many little dreams about her daughter. But she also dreamed of twin sons, many years hence, going to school together, and getting for themselves, also, that which she had been denied.

The End

Smoky Mountain Cage Meet At Kingsport, Feb. 28-Mar. 2

Milligan and King, Tusculum and Emory and Henry Scheduled For Opener. Maryville and Carson-Newman Fight It Out March 1.

According to the Knoxville News-Sentinel, the Smoky Mountain Conference basketball tournament will be held in Kingsport, Tenn., February 28, and March 1 and 2, at the Babyns-Bennett gymnasium, one of the finest courts in East Tennessee.

The tournament will be sponsored by the civic organizations of Kingsport and will be under the direction of Coach LeRoy Sprankle, of the high school there.

The finals will be played March 2.

Jack informed us the other day that he thought he was beginning to like Jane a little now.

Exchange Comment

(by Elizabeth King)

The student publication of the Mississippi State Teachers' College has a clever title—"Student Printz". Though only a five-column paper, the accounts of interesting campus events, editorials, jokes, cartoons, and miscellaneous articles, generally fill up the paper leaving only a limited space for advertisements.

"The Kentucky Wesleyan Undercurrent" runs two front-page columns in each issue which deal with news of other colleges. One is entitled, "The Inter-Collegiate Press Box"; the other, "The Intercollegiate Exchange." Similar to the Highland Echo, the entire third page is given to athletic articles with a regular streamer head across the top of the page. The "Wesleyan Purp", a cut of a huge bull-dog wearing a sweater with a big W, always has a comment about present day affairs—wise or otherwise.

"The Cumberland Collegian" contains in each issue, a column called "Literary Chat". Under this head, various books are reviewed, educational questions discussed, and the idiosyncrasies and eccentricities of noted authors are revealed.

The "Brackety-Ack" of Roanoke College devotes practically the entire third page of its five-column paper to the Alumni Department and advertisements, and the entire last page to Sports—and advertisements. The editorials are snappy and worthwhile.

BRIEF REMINDERS OF ELEVEN GREAT SERMONS

and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us that he shall turn in thither.

A chair is among the friendliest of objects. It is a sign of hospitality. There is the vacant chair of neglected responsibility. Pilate tried to wash responsibility from his hands. Many have vacant chairs at church.

There is the vacant chair of love's loss. We hear of perfect lovers on the screen. How about Father Jacob, or Browning? Those that lose their loved ones remember them especially by the chair in which they sat.

There is the vacant chair of God's redeeming love. It awaits anyone who will take it.

The Capacity for Religion
(February 9, morning)

Matthew 25:28—Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents.

Every man is given a religious capacity. Anthropologists, psychologists, and biologists admit the inherent presence of religion in man. This is one of the distinguishing features of man from the brute. To attempt to hide one's religious instinct is to become less a man.

Great men of all time have been very religious, e.g. Moses, Paul, Homer, Plato, Tennyson, Washington, etc.

The capacity for religion may be lost. Parasites become what they are by losing their better qualities. Unless we take steps to preserve or develop it before we are thirty it is apt to be lost forever.

The Investment of Time
(February 9, evening)

Psalms 90:9—For all our days are passed away in thy wrath: we spend our years as a tale that is told.

Some people are misers with their time. They will give none of it to the Church. They spend it all on themselves, never taking time to help others.

A larger class is that of the spendthrifts. They waste their time recklessly. Money may be regained, but time is gone. They spend with no forethought for the future, either for old age on earth or for the life to come. This is the cause of many failures in marriage.

The wise Christian invests to make dividends in this world and the world to come. In our life we may write a love story or a story of adventure; we should write it for both worlds. One safe investment is in bringing men to Christ.

A Woman of Understanding
(February 10, morning)

1 Samuel 25:3—Now the name of the man was Nabal; and the name of his wife Abigail: and she was a woman of good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance: but the man was churlish and evil in his doings; and he was of the house of Caleb.

This address of Dr. Vander Meulen was very unusual and striking. It was almost entirely in the form of conversation of a man explaining all the steps leading to his conversion through the infuence of his wife. His indifference to the affairs of the church was slowly overcome. His arguments in resistance to his wife's "preaching" were the more amusing on account of their great trueness to life.

This sermon was delivered in the New Providence Presbyterian Church, and was aimed more particularly at the married men present who might be rather indifferent to religious things.

Battles of Defense
(February 10, evening)

Isaiah 28:6—And in that day shall the Lord of hosts be—for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate.

The greatest battles of history are those in which people are fighting for the protection of their homes. Results of such battles seem to indicate the hand of providence as an aid to the defender.

One of the great modern battles of defense is that around the modern home. The home is imperiled. Women are the greatest defense fighters. They should not neglect the home and children in their modern "freedom".

God gives strength in the battles of the individuals, whether the battle involve fortunes or souls. Jesus often turned aside from the multitude to help the individual.

aims were to promote interest in and appreciation of better dramatics, it was a failure. The local president echoed the words of the national president in regard to the aims of the fraternity and expressed the wish that all who had the desire to become members of the fraternity might apply themselves creditably in working toward that honor.

The meeting adjourned to a meeting of the fraternity, where Mr. Menser addressed the members on subjects of keen interest to them. A group of Theta Alpha Phians took the visiting president and Mr. Malcom Miller, of Knoxville, on an inspection tour of the college stage facilities, including a very interesting visit to the wardrobe closets on the second floor of the chapel.

In the evening Mr. Menser and Mr. Miller were entertained for dinner at the Druid Hill Tea Room by Theta Alpha Phi, represented by Mrs. Cartwright, Miss Sarah Moore, and Mr. Jesse Peirce.

Chaliapin Concert Cancelled

Due to the poor advance ticket sale the concert of Feodor Chaliapin which was to have been at the Lyric theatre in Knoxville this last Saturday night was called off. According to the Knoxville Journal a four thousand dollar house was necessary in order to break even. Last Wednesday the total ticket sales amounted to only eleven hundred dollars, a little over one-fourth the amount necessary to prevent the concert's being a financial flop.

It is regrettable that a city of Knoxville's size is unable to support a concert of the type Chaliapin would have supplied.

NEWS FROM THE OTHER COLLEGES

Girls Must Make Grades

Girls of the University of Kentucky will not be allowed to live in sorority houses unless they have made their standings in the previous semester. The grades must be listed on a card, certified by instructors, and then presented to the dean of women before the girls' names can be placed on the house list.

Flu Keeps Students at College

Because of the prevalent influenza epidemic, the surgeon of Clemson College has recommended that the week-end permits be temporarily suspended. This recommendation was carried out, and the week-end leaves are suspended until further notice. Thank goodness; Maryville has had her share of the flu.

Martha Is Honored

Martha Washington College in Abingdon, Virginia, has recently been admitted to membership in the Phi Theta Kappa, a junior college honor scholarship society, which is designed especially to foster a spirit of devotion to study and to scholarly ideals among the students of accredited junior colleges.

Does Dutching Delight?

The student body of Southern College in Lakeland, Florida, is facing a sensational issue. The question is: shall they inaugurate the modern "Dutch Treat" system, or permit the gentlemen to continue in their legendary prerogative of gallantry towards the fair coeds. There is much discussion pro and con among them.

A Change of Name

The year book of California State Teachers' College of Pennsylvania is to have a new name. At present it is called "The Calnorsean". A prize of $10.00 will be given to the student who shows the most ingenuity in submitting a clever title.

Opera at CarsonNewman

The combined glee clubs of Carson-Newman College presented the light opera, "Iolanthe", by Gilbert and Sullivan, on February 5.

State Tournament at U. T.

The Tennessee state basketball tournament, which in former years has been held in Nashville, will be held in Knoxville, March 7, 8, 9, in Jefferson Hall.

Y.M.C.A. Book Shelf in Library

The Y. M. C. A. of Roanoke College, Virginia, has inaugurated a novel feature in the form of a "Y" book shelf in the college library. Books conducive to a broader knowledge of world affairs and dealing with subjects of international interest make up the material on this shelf.

"Craig's Wife" Is Next Attraction In Chapel

Practice, Delayed Ten Days, Now Rushing on Theta Midwinter.

During the February meetings there was a lapse in play practices for the two remaining midwinters, but now practices and preparations are underway.

"Craig's Wife"—the Theta Epsilon midwinter will be given next Monday, February 25. The story is that of a selfish woman and is expressed in the words of Miss Austin, who says, "People who live to themselves, Harriet, are always left to themselves." The play is considered one of the best productions of the day. The setting is laid in a sumptuous home; special scenery is being planned for the play. An able and talented cast will make this play one of the best of the season.

Varsity Has Seven Debates Scheduled

Four Triangular Debates are on List. Two Freshman Meets Coming.

The debaters are now beginning to try to form in words the ideas they have acquired about the jury system thus far. Although definite assignments of who will participate have not yet been made for some of the debates, the following schedule has been announced by Professor Queener:

King-Tusculum-Maryville triangular debate, March 5.

A single debate with Centre College here, March 11.

A dual debate with Milligan College, March 22.

L. M. U.-Emory and Henry-Maryville triangular debate, March 25.

Berea-L. M. U.-Maryville triangular debate for girls, March 29.

A dual debate with Berea College, probably April 10.

There will also probably be a dual debate for boys with the Teachers' College but the time has not yet been set.

Professor Queener who is governor of this province plans to take a debate team and an orator of both men and women, and probably an extemporaneous speaker of both men and women, to the Pi Kappa Delta Convention to be held at Transylvania University, Lexington, Kentucky, April 8 and 9.

Two freshmen debates are:

A dual debate for boys with University of Tennessee, April 5.

A dual debate for girls with Tennessee Wesleyan, April 12.

Leading Scientists Write For Institute

Smithsonian Report Contains Wealth of Material on Modern Science.

Sometimes the best literature may be buried where no one knows about it. To a large extent this is true concerning some of the best scientific writings of the present day, written especially for the non-technical reader. There is a volume printed by the U. S. printing office annually that contains a wealth of information concerning the latest scientific progress, written often by the very men responsible for the progress. This is the annual report of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D. C.

"The General Appendix" contains these various scientific papers. It has been customary to include such papers since 1880. The number of these has increased as their value has been revealed until at present over seventy percent of the book is taken up by the appendix.

It seems that comparatively few people are aware of the existence of these reports. The latest one included in the library is the 1927 report, a gold mine of information for anyone desirous of "keeping up with Science". The contents of this volume are given below.

1. The Accomplishments of Modern Astronomy—C. G. Abbot.
2. Recent Developments of Cosmical Physics—J. H. Jeans.
3. The Evolution of 20th Century Physics—Robert A. Millikan.
4. Isaac Newton—Prof. Albert Einstein.
5. The Nucleus of the Atom—J. A. Crowther.
6. The Centenary of Augustan Fresnel—E. M. Antoniadi.
7. Soaring Flight— Wolfgang Klemperer.
8. Is the Earth Growing Old?—Josef Felix Pompeckj.
9. The Coming of the New Coal Age—Edwin E. Slosson.
10. Geological Climates—W. B. Scott.
11. Geologic Romance of the Finger Lakes—Prof. Herman F. Fairchild.

Ambitious Poets May Win $25 Prize

Mrs. James E. Caldwell, Chairman of the Fine Arts Department, Tennessee Federation of Women's Clubs, is offering a prize of twenty-five dollars for the best poem written by a college student of Tennessee. The poem must be signed by name of student and college and sent to Mrs. Clara Cox Epperson, Chairman of Division of Literature, Cookeville, Tennessee, not later than April 1, 1929.

No student may submit more than three poems. Postage for the return of the poems must be inclosed.

New Knowledge Breeds Masculine Independence

Boys Getting a Big Kick In Mastering the Science of Cookery

(by Forrest Robertson)

When the revolutionists overthrew the government of France and set up a new system of management, the monarchists placed as many officials as possible in the new offices, hoping ultimately to make France an absolute monarchy again.

But France turned out to be a very liberal republic. We believe this bridegroom's cooking course is going to be a somewhat similar experiment. If the college believed that this course was going to help matrimonial matters any it must have made a mistake. The outlook now is that most of the litigants will turn to be bachelors, no matter how far advanced they thought they were before. In fact some of the members have begun to boast that they don't need any women anyway. There is live discussion of forming a Bachelor's Club. Arrangements have even been made for a page in the annual and a picture will be made this week.

Now there is some reason for this attitude. Men, on College Hill especially, are beginning to realize that they can live independently. There has been a great deal of talk recently of the independence of the modern woman but very little has been said about the independence of the modern man. In reality, however, the man has been the one who has had his hands tied. Some of the members of this new cooking class, pioneers in the field, are beginning to realize for themselves and show the world that women are non-essentials in this life,—at least so far as cooking is concerned. Men can cook alone.

If one should unwittingly find himself in the "Mess Hall" on the third floor of Science he might hear Pectol say: "Them's the best biscuits I ever did eat." Or the voice of Bill Grayson, "Robbie, let's us swap two biscuits just to see how much better yours are than mine." Of course Al Tull would break a glass occasionally and Roger Rusk would spill his biscuits when he burns his hand,—having little effect

Home Ec Boys Among Twenty Groups Yet To Be Photographed

February 15—Today only 12 clubs and organizations have been shot by Mr. Webb. These are the four literary societies, and the Alabama, Chattanooga, Florida, French, Georgia, Knoxville, Kentucky and North Carolina clubs. This leaves about twenty more group pictures to be taken before the annual can be turned in to the engravers.

Nearly all of the individual members of the classes have been photographed and the editor requests that the delinquent ones attend to the matter as quickly as possible as all of the panels have been set up and ony about 8 more pages are needed to make this section complete.

This year there will be a novel picture presented. The boys' Home Ec class is going to try to break the camera by presenting themselves in their beautiful "green and white checkered aprons to match the furniture."

Short Summaries Of Last Eight Sermons

High Costs of a High Life
(February 11, evening)

Luke 14:28—For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?

We have been seeking to reduce the high cost of living, but it still costs dear to live most greatly, most worthily, on earth; it costs high to have a high life. In living their highest life, mothers have paid the price of suffering, of care, and of death to give us life.

In living their high life, Lincoln and Washington and others have paid the price, through work, through battling great odds, through bloodshed, to give us our Nation.

In living our high life as disciples of Jesus we have a high cost and we must count it before building. But then giving the high cost for Jesus will bring our tower of religion, a thing of beauty, and of safety, from which we can look out and see.

In the house of our life should be the first story, of material needs, the second, of culture and music, and the third, the tower of Religion. Count the cost and build to live High.

Wasted Years
(February 12, morning)

Joel 2:25—And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpillar, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you.

The locusts have eaten up precious years in the lives of many men. We can crush a single locust, but in huge numbers of them we are helpless.

Among the years that the locust have eaten are the years of failure. This may be financial failure or vocational failure. Failure is often compensated for by a strengthening of character.

There are the years of sorrow. Character may be strengthened by these years, too. "Come unto me, ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

God can restore the wasted years of sin. Christ came to save the world. Some of the most influential Christian evangelists have been saved from a life of sin—the years that the locust hath eaten have been restored. The loving Father is waiting to welcome the return of the prodigal son.

The Future Man
(February 12, evening)

Isaiah 32:2—And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

The man of the future shall be a stay against the drift. Sometimes we shall have to be a stay against the drift of heredity tugging in our blood. Some of us shall be a stay against the political drift, as were Roosevelt and Bryan and others. Others must be a stay against the drift of church corruption, as was Martin Luther, and as was Jesus who put himself against the drift of sin in having the cross at his back. Any dead fish can float with the tide—be a stay against the drift!

The man of the future shall be a shelter against the heat like rivers of water in a dry land and the shadow of a great rock. Lincoln stood out in the dry land of greedy humanity. Grover Cleveland against Tammany Hall. Young people are too much on the edge of Christianity when they should get in the center and be free from quibbles. Follow where he leads by joining to a Great Cause—and fight!
(February 12, evening)

Highways to God
(February 13, morning)

1 Chronicles 29:18—O Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this forever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare their heart unto thee.

There are some poor motives for becoming a Christian. The business man may join a Church for the effect it will have on his trade or his social standing. Other motives are good, such as a desire for social and individual betterment or for giving joy to ones parents. There are three principal motives, however.

The first is Fear. This is used less now than formerly. It is still a legitimate motive, however. We cannot conceive of wickedness being allowed to go unpunished.

The second motive which brings men to Christ is that of Hope, or the sense of what is right. This is made evident largely through our conscience. We know what we "ought" to do. The proper thing to do then is to come to Christ, "Just as I am".

The third motive is that of Love. Men may be led to Christ through the love of a brother, or mother, or sweetheart. The big highway is through the love of God revealed in Jesus. God so loved the world that He gave His son for us all.

A Blessing and a Curse
(February 13, evening)

John 3:1-2—There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews: the same came to Jesus by night.

Nicodemus, a rich man, heard of this Jesus of Galilee, and was open minded and fair, and came to him to seek his truth. We admire his fairness. Such fairness is needed today, for prejudice is in its way, prejudice of the established, of old against new, of old people against young people; prejudice of the exclusive sects, of science and politics, each branch bigoted against all outside itself.

But Nicodemus was afraid—afraid.—He came to Jesus "by night". Position—pride—society— all these had their fingers on his heart and held him back. To seek the truth and light before the world he was afraid—afraid—, and came by night. And so with these Meetings. In our urge to come to Jesus, we must be brave, we must come by the light, we must come now, for each urging put down makes it harder the next time. To those who come, these meetings will be a blessing; to those who come not, they will be a curse. Come now.

The Necessity for Action
(February 14, morning)

Hebrews: 12:17—For ye know how that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.

Students are prone to put off a definite stand for Christ because of several reasons. They do not appreciate the terrible effect of sin on their character. They dread the cost of such a stand; the putting away of things they like to do. They think there is always time later on.

Every student now has a good chance for salvation, but nobody has an indefinite number of chances. Our lives are bounded by three superimposed circles.

The first circle is that of Time. It is of uncertain size and is con-

585 STUDENTS MAKE DEFINITE ADVANCES

February 15—This morning 582 students expressed their determination to either become Christians or else to make some definite advance in the Christian life, if already Christians. 65 students took the initial step into the Christian life. 517 professed to make a forward step.

There can be no such definite accounting of the total good effect the meetings have had. Those not making a forward step must surely have been influenced by the sermons of the past ten days.

Meetings Over, Everything Depends on You!

Vander Meulen's Sympathetic Understanding Wins Many Recruits.

BATTLE ONLY BEGUN

Teachings of Past Meetings Should Serve as Lasting Inspiration.

The February Meetings of 1929 have passed into history and for some students it is the last series they will be privileged to attend. Most of the students, whether this was their first or their last opportunity to attend, feel that there could scarcely be a more inspiring series.

The Meetings have ended but their spirit will go on forever. Such stirring, masterful sermons as Dr. Vander Meulen has presented during the past several days cannot die out of the hearts of those who have been drawn irresistably closer to God. Dr. Vander Meulen has left a deep impression on every heart that truly yielded to his appeal. In the interviews with which he crowded his days while among us, many have received great help and wise counsel in matters pertaining to their spiritual welfare. There are few who are better qualified to advise young people about the religious life. Dr. Vander Meulen has had rich and varied experiences since he himself was a college student, but he has also remained young in spirit and still has the keenest appreciation and deepest sympathy for youth and its problems. This feeling that he understands our troubles is what endears him to us.

We have been dwelling on the mountain tops of the spiritual world and we have been allowed to drink deeply of the reviving Water of Life which is freely flowing there. Now that the Meetings have closed we must strive to maintain our position on the heights to which we have risen.

Some have started on the Christian life for the first time; others have reconsecrated themselves to a definite Christian work; and still others have vowed to give up sins which are separating them from God. Whatever our vow has been we must now show to the world that we are living up to it. Perhaps the immediate results will not be as splendid as we imagined they would turn out to be and perhaps we may fail or meet obstacles and become discouraged. When such trials come we may find help and inspiration by bringing back to our minds the picture of Dr. Vander Meulen as he stood upon the platform, speaking words of cheer and comfort for all who sincerely try to follow in the way of Life. Let us, in spirit, keep him for our constant companion; with such a companion we will find it harder to do evil and easier to do the works of God.

SUBJECTS FOR BATES' ORATIONS ANNOUNCED

The Bates' Oratorical Contest this year will be open for men of the junior and senior classes. Six subjects have been chosen which may be used by contestants. These are:

1. Not by Bread Alone.
2. Society's Responsibility for the Criminal.
3. John Bunyan, the interpreter.
4. Citizenship Between Elections.
5. The Smoky Mountain National Park.
6. Woodrow Wilson and Idealism in Government.

All manuscripts must be handed in on or before April 2. Men who had not previously considered entering this contest still have time to do so, at least if they are already acquained with one of these subjects. The prize of forty-five dollars was won last year by William Rogers, '28.

The meetings weren't as successful as usual because they didn't get us out of the first two classes Friday.

The Workshop Replies

Last week there flowed from the editor a very interesting editorial on the failure of the Writers' Workshop to publish a collection of its productions.

At the outset of this defense, let us recognize the fact that such a volume or volumes would be very desirable. The Workshop has discussed the proposition several times, and agreed that it is a worthy aspiration. So, however, is a football stadium.

It may be that the writers on the Hill are a bit poetic and temperamental at times, but they do not soar to heights unknown in their enthusiasm to put before the student body their humble efforts as writers. We must confess that the editor has done this in suggesting that a production of a literary nature would not conflict with the Highland Echo. Evidently the editor's business experience is limited, or at least he failed to confer with the business manager before making his suggestion.

A magazine would of necessity have to depend on the generosity of the advertising contributions of the business men, and the manager of the Echo or the Chilhowean will agree that the town of Maryville cannot stand a great deal more advertising. The writers are much too poetic to attempt it. And the other "business men" on the Hill who would be anxious to sponsor it would be sadly lacking in the quality ascribed to them by the editor.

Let us not deal longer in generalities, but stop to consider the facts. Such a publication as has been suggested would cost at least two hundred dollars, a month,—a conservative estimate. Granting that through high pressure salesmanship, the manager was able to sell a hundred dollars worth of advertising, would three hundred members of the student body pay thirty-five cents a copy for it? Not when the Golden Book and others sell for less.

The editor should not have ended his imaginative schemes so soon, however, for he might have happened upon a plan that would be much more in keeping with the financial status of the students. If someone deeply interested in things literary would give the college an endowment fund of sufficient magnificence to partially bear the financial burden, the much dreamed of and hoped for publication would certainly become a reality.

Until the time when such a magazine is made possible, however, those who care to do so are invited to read the offerings of the Workshop which are in the library. Professor Ellis will be glad to show anyone where the Writers' Workshop table is.

At Thanksgiving are we more thankful that we are here than we are for the fact that the turkey is here.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Now we again go to chapel the first thing in the morning. What's to break the monotony of four straight classes?

Bill Graham: (at the end of the debate) I can tell you how much water runs over Niagara Falls to a quart.

Interested Audience: How much?

Bill: Two pints.

Little Howland Hussey and Bobby Hunter were discussing the merits of their respective teachers. Howland thought he had concluded the argument by declaring, "You and your teacher don't know what 'incomprehensible' means!"

"Oh, I know," remarked Bobby sedately, "it means 'income tax'."

Eight little students, making earth a heaven,
One moaned "What is Love?",
then there were seven.

Al Tull: Miss Meiselwitz, these jellies all seem the same flavor to me.

Miss Meiselwitz: But you can tell the difference by the labels.

Al: I never thought of tasting the labels.

Mr. Stringham entered Pearsons' Hall the other day when Miss Molly was putting the last letters in the big box in the hall.

"Miss Molly," he exclaimed, "you don't mean that you keep your hope chest down here!"

"You can smile when you can't say a word", asserts one of the songs used during the meetings. Professors will soon become suspicious of smiles.

Incidentally

——The school united in sympathy with Dr. Vander Meulen in his "great sorrow". Something really should be done to help him remember such an important thing as his pajamas!

——The students felt a distinct sorrow at saying good-bye to their good friends, Dr. Vander Meulen and Rev. Stringham. The personalities of these two men has that quality which makes a person think that he has known them personally for a long time. So, with the chautauqua salute, we told them good-bye with the hope that we may meet again very soon.

——You can't keep a good Mann down. Take Speedy Mann for instance—no longer eligible as a member of the basketball team, he returns in the official capacity of referee for the scrubs.

——The collegiate wrestling won a victory over the Grecian form when Billy Crawford got the best of Topolian. These two "glorified flappers" in their short struggle gave the audience something new in the way of wrestling thrills.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Most worthy opponents, honorable Judges, Ladies, and Gentlemen:—

—:—

Bob Jones is not superstitious, but he always wears a little good luck pin while debating.

—:—

I suppose Mildred Crawford is the midget of the team. Perhaps, though, I should say Mascot.

—:—

Then here comes Bill Graham down from Michigan with a new idea. He says stop crime and the faulty jury will remedy itself.

—:—

Ruth Laughead argues that the "law" is all wrong. That sounds to me like the "head" is all right.

—:—

Oyez! Oyez! Word comes that Algie Sutton will be in the fight again this year.

—:—

"Peanut" Hull is the one who wins on "good looks". After Mr. Hull made his debut last year the young ladies bored me to death for several days asking who that good-looking debater was.

—:—

All debates on the Maryville platform this year will be informal. One need not be late on account of a collar button or embrassed by renting a Tux.

—:—

This will hold good for the freshman debates too.

—:—

The freshman class is well represented in debate at Maryville. A majority of the debaters are freshmen. The count by classes stands: freshmen 16, varsity 13.

—:—

Here is the freshman boys' team: Clarence Bratsche, Lea Calloway, Paul Edris, Fred Gabbard, E. W. Luckhart, Homer McCann, Lloyd Overly, and Robert West.

—:—

Here is the girls' team: Nellie Aills, Anita Ellerbee, Ruby Hitch, Kathryn Hodges, Ruby Lee Johnson, Charline Nicholson, Julia Terry, and Lucy Ann Voorhees.

—:—

Time and space does not permit me to acquaint you with the past record of the freshmen. I must be content to give briefly what they may do in the future.

——A new star came into the limelight Friday night. The audience was delighted to see Brute Crow come out on the floor, and they know that he would have made that basket if the ball had only been a little smaller or the basket a little larger.

——St. Valentine started a riot when he chased the snakes out of Ireland," so one of the boys said. He wondered what snakes had to do with candy anyhow.

——We wonder what there is about Pearson's Parlor that makes it so desirable that the girls will spend all morning reserving it for moonshining period?

——Times have changed. Back in the good old days of the 10th century it frightened a girl to death if a boy took her home in a roundabout way. Isabel Cannon suggested in English Lit class that today a girl would think that she wasn't making a very good impression if a boy took her home too directly.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

"I thought I was going to make an A in moonshining last semester, but I flunked and have to try it over again."—Hayden Laster.

"Are you going to sing or are you going to fool us again?"—Billy Crawford to quartet.

"We haven't any hammer and screw driver on the fourth floor since Clouser has gone."—Paul Copley.

"Sure, we made them ourselves. They melt in your mouth." Roger Rusk, proudly displaying the first biscuit made in boys' Home Ec class.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God, in His infinite mercy and wisdom, has seen fit to call unto Himself the father of our beloved friend and classmate, George Fiegel, be it resolved that we, the members of the sophomore class, assure the bereaved family of our heartfelt sympathy and prayers.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be read in chapel, a copy printed in the Highland Echo, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL IS BIG ATTRACTION THIS WEEK

Highland Quintet Starts On Tour Of East Tennessee, Smoky Mountain Tournament Next Week

Milligan Meets Fate Of Other Highlander Foes Losing by 22-17 Score

Shots of Both Teams Go Wide During First Period, But J. D. and Kemp Finally Find Basket.

VINCENT PLAYS REAL GAME

February 15—The Maryville Highlanders continue undefeated in the Smoky Mountain loop by virtue of their 22-17 victory over the Milligan Buffaloes tonight on the floor of the Alumni gymnasium. Carson-Newman, King and Milligan have been defeated. The remaining two schools, Tusculum and Emory and Henry will be met very soon, and if the Flying Scots maintain the pace, both of these opponents should be crushed.

Milligan was tough sledding from the very start. The lads from Johnson City exhibited a defense that permitted the locals to score but 9 points in the initial canto, the score at that period of the game standing at 9-6. The Buffaloes couldn't get their eyes correctly focused on the hoop and missed a good many shots that looked pretty easy.

They came back in the second half and staged a desperate rally, knotting the count several times. But the Scots staged a drive in the dying moments of the game that produced results and came through with a five-point margin.

Both teams exhibited air-tight defenses, and chances for an open shot anywhere near the basket were at a premium. K. Davis led the home team with seven points—two double-deckers and three free throws, while Morley with six points was high for Milligan.

In the preliminary game, the Bulldogs were hard-pushed to upset the classy Prospect High outfit to the tune of 22-16. Ferguson for the Bulldogs played a nice defensive game besides contributing three goals from the floor that helped out at critical times.

The line-up:

Maryville—22		Milligan—17
Bird, 1	f.	Morley, 6
Delaney, 5	f.	A. Grant, 5
Waddell, 2	c.	Taylor, 1
J. Davis, 5	g.	C. Grant, 2
Reed	g.	C. Grant, 2

Subs: Maryville, K. Davis, 7; Vincent, 2. Milligan, Lacey, Woods, 3.

Individual Scoring Totals:
Bird—97
Waddell—69
K. Davis—51
White—37
Delaney—35
J. Davis—35
Vincent—22
Reed—10
Wooten—4
Calloway—3
Cherry—1

These figures include the Milligan game of last Friday night.

Ing Fell issues a challenge to all boxers in his class. Those who qualify must meet the requirements as follow: bald-headed, 157 pounds, use three flower perfume, have "it", ministerial student, ex-book salesman, and majoring in Greek.

(Sports Extra)—Battling Kid Fell retains laurels in his class due to failure of promoters to find suitable opponent.

Wrestlers To Have Meet Here With Knoxville Y. M. C. A. Feb. 28, 7 Classes

FIRST WRESTLING MEET EXPECTED TO DRAW LARGE CROWD.

A week from Thursday, Maryville will present its first wrestling meet to the students and townspeople in the College Gym when the Highland mat men meet Knoxville's "Y" representaitves. It is expected that a keen interest will be manifested in this meet, and if sufficient interest is shown it will probably be the beginning of intercollegiate wrestling here.

The student body knows comparatively little about the art of wrestling, and a few pointers will not be amiss. Each match lasts ten minutes, and in order to win, a man must pin the shoulders of his opponent to the mat or have more than one minute's time advantage. If neither gets a fall on the other, and neither has a time advantage two extra three minute periods are played, and if neither obtains a fall or a time decision the referee's decision decides the match.

No bone breaking holds and no hold that is punishing the opponent are allowed. All other holds are sanctioned.

The scoring in Inter-Collegiate wrestling gives five points for a fall and three for a time decision. The team accumulating the most points wins the meet.

Maryville will enter the following men next week:

Name	Weight Class
Nick	115
Cox	125
Crawford	135
Shaw	145
Watkins	158
Headrick	175
Wilson	unlimited

Knoxville will use these men:

Name	Weight Class
Lee	115
?	125
Mayor	135
Hurley	145
Fields	158
Kelly	175
Sizemore	unlimited

(and he weighs 210 pounds)

Referee, Tom Cash, Tennessee Wesleyan College.

Admission is twenty-five cents.

Short Summaries of Last Eight Sermons

stantly becoming smaller. There are too often tears in the last chapter. We must accept Christ before the circle closes.

The second circle is that of capacity. It is smaller than that of time, usually. Our hearts and minds, now receptive, may be closed to all appeals when we become older, unless we make the first step now.

The third circle is that of opportunity. We are often prone to let the best opportunities slip by. Each opportunity refused makes it harder to accept one later.

The Face at the Lattice

(February 14, evening)

Judges 5:28—The mother of Sisera looked out at a window, and cried through the lattice, Why is his chariot so long in coming? Why tarry the wheels of his chariots?

We would guess that a woman's face looked out through the lattice. For it is woman who has the burden of sorrow; it is woman who bears the shame when things go wrong; it is woman who waits for the boy to come home, for her loved ones, to share in their sorrows and in their victories.

It is a face of anxiety that looks out. He is out there fighting, sometimes against God, but the face stays there, sometimes smiling when the heart is breaking.

It is a face of Love that looks out. Mother Love and God's Love make the best in life. The choosing of ones companions when entering college determines the secret of ones real college success—choose the right ones for the face of Love. Your mother believes in You—is waiting at the lattice.

The Body of Jesus

(February 15, morning)

1 Corinthians 11:24—And when he had given thanks, he broke it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me.

We know very little about the body of Jesus. It must have been a strong body to stand all the strains Jesus endured. It must also have been a beautiful body.

The body of Jesus was, first, a gift to man. Jesus was not merely a teacher. The atonement distinguishes ours from other religions. The gift of Jesus' body is a guarantee of God's friendliness.

Jesus' body is, second, a challenge. It was broken for you. It is for us to carry on the work he began. It is better to lose in a cause which must ultimately win than to win in a cause that will ultimately lose.

Handball Should Attract Many Men

Two New Courts in Bartlett Give Ample Chance to Play Favorite Indoor Sport.

The "Y" has spent a little money and a great deal of time putting handball courts in the little gym on second floor of Bartlett, and the fellows are invited to make use of them whenever time and ambition permit.

Handball is one of the best indoor sports that can be indulged in. The rules that apply are much like those of tennis, and all the equipment that is necessary is a small rubber ball. Anyone can master the fundamentals of the game in an afternoon, and it would pay those who want to limber up a bit for basketball or track to expose themselves to a few rounds of handball.

Those who worked up an interest in boxing and then had to give it up on account of somebody stealing the boxing gloves should find handball attractive. It is practically impossible to steal a handball court, and tennis balls are more plentiful than gloves.

The Old Timer Says

The College Maid Shop offers outing pajamas for sale. I wouldn't mind buying some if I knew when and where the outing is to be held.

Vincent says he'd rather have a game than practice because he has to work in practice, and in a game he gets to warm the bench.

Somehow I can't feature our dads getting so enthusiastic about Latin, unless they are willing to substitute a page of Virgil for a big league baseball game some Saturday afteroon.

And even then I'm not so sure that a thrilling struggle with a Greek verb, for instance, would have the same effect on an audience as the drop kick you made in the last five minutes of the final game of the season.

Of course all of us are not going to be preachers.

Lives of athletes all remind us
We can make ourselves a place,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on somebody's face.

Coach Honaker has a new radio and claims the record for reception. He got twenty-seven fiddlers' contests in one night. Seems like Coach is getting pretty high toned, going in for the "old masters" this way.

If Thrower doesn't put in a call for track men pretty soon the weeds on the track will be so big the boys will think it is a game of hide and seek.

Maryville's swimming instructor will close his forced vacation in a few weeks, it is rumored. I see by the current papers that nearly a hundred Europeans have lost their lives in the last month through water disasters. All of which means that the swimming pool is still south of Bartlett.

This for the frosh, who have never seen it.

Billy Crawford doesn't know whether to go out for track or fall in love. He ought to be able to tell by this time, because he has tried both a number of times.

Thrower Issues Call To Track Candidates

Warm Weather Will Find Many Aspirants to Cinder Honors Pounding the Track.

Coach Thrower will meet all prospective track men in Bartlett Hall at 4:00 o'clock on Tuesday.

All who are interested are urged to come out and show what they can do. Already the old men, and some new ones, are finding that a light work-out every day helps put them in shape for the real work ahead.

Several vacancies are going to show up in the field events, and aspiring freshmen would do well to line-up for instruction in these events.

Track is just beginning to find its rightful place among Maryville's athletics, and under Coach Thrower's expert guidance it is expected to reach even greater heights in the future.

Such things as a training table, a trip to the Tech relays and a comprehensive schedule of meets, make track one of the most attractive branches of sports we have, and Coach's call for candidates should meet with a ready response.

Dingling Brothers Darnum Dailey Circus Coming to Town Soon

Definite Date Not Yet Divulged But Promise of Spectacular Stunts Holds Interest.

The annual "Y" circus will be held about the middle of April, and promises to be even more spectacular than usual.

There will be the customary drills, tumblers, girls' gymnastics, and so on, but there are to be several new features such as Leon Brown in his world famous Hang for Life, the nationally known thrilling, exhilerating, dive of Death Defying Dora, bareback riding, and tight rope stunts.

This year, as in other years, the literary societies will be asked to put on a stunt, and the one winning first place will be awarded a prize to be announced later.

Anyone who has a particular accomplishment in this line will please see any of the physical directors or Jack Coughlin, who are advance representatives for Dingling Brothers Darnum Dailey Circus.

The clowns have already started work on their faces for the great occasion and it is reported that the company is to import either a steam calliope or a second hand organ to furnish the necessary atmosphere of hilarity.

The grand procession will find within its ranks creatures never before presented to the public eye, the sawdust rings will contain amazing feats of athletic skill and endurance, and the special features threaten to dazzle everyone with their deliberate daring.

Don't miss "Zap", the wonder man. He eats, sleeps, dreams, walks, talks, and does as other people do, and yet he's human! And many other startling wonders will be shown for the first time.

It is time for all who are interested in the circus to start work on what the company hopes will be the biggest and best year for the followers of the saw-dust.

Watch for further announcements.

Coed Basketeers Start Tournament

Coach Queener Picks Class Teams and Arranges Schedule.

OPENING GAME THIS WEEK

The girls' basketball teams have been chosen during the last week by Coach Lynn Queener, and the annual basketball tourney will begin this week, when the juniors and sophs clash.

The senior girls are not putting out a team this year, so the competition is among the frosh, sophs and juniors.

The members of the respective teams are:

Frosh—V. Crider, captain; S. Thomas, manager; H. Littlejohn, M. Absheer, A. Buckboard, C. Foster, M. Gamble, C. Hultquist, D. Cable, V. Heidle.

Sophs—C. Cushman, captain; L. Wright, P. Covington, V. Osborne, G. Wallace, M. Lowry, W. Lowry, R. Laughead, M. Hitch.

Juniors—L. Lovette, captain; O. Clopton, manager; M. Haynie, I. Croley, E. Burns, F. Crabill, V. Hultquist, R. Batt, V. Boyd, E. Nash.

Don't forget the junior-soph tilt Wednesday at four o'clock.

Night Before Last

Viola Pettit, Bainonian, and John Weinand, Alpha Sigma, are First Representatives of College in Extemporaneous Speaking.

February 16—Tonight a joint meeting of the Athenian Literary Society and the Alpha Sigma Literary Society was held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium in Bartlett Hall.

The program was in the nature of an extemporaneous speaking contest with three contestants from each society. The meeting was presided over by J. Hayes Williams, president of the Athenian Society with Franklin Roberson from the Alpha Sigma acting as recording secretary.

The Athenian representatives chosen in a contest at an earlier meeting of the Athenian Society were: Frank Hutchinson, freshman, Robert Wetmore, sophomore, and Walter Headrick, senior.

The Alpha Sigma representatives were Jesse James, sophomore, Frank Baker, junior, and John Weinand, senior.

The contest was held to select the college extemporaneous speaker, and the judges were unanimously in favor of Mr. Weinand who will represent the college in all extemporaneous speaking contests and go with Prof. Queener to the Pi Kappa Delta Convention at Lexington, Kentucky in April.

The judges were Professor Knapp, Professor Howell, and Professor Kiger.

Professor Queerer explained that he hoped to make the position of extemporaneous speaker one of the most sought after within a few years.

The girls' literary societies held a joint meeting tonight in Bainonian Hall. The purpose was to choose the college extemporaneous speaker for women. Lois Miles, president of the Bainonian Society, acted as chairman.

There were three Bainonian speakers and one from Theta Epsilon. The Bainonians were Louise Avery, Anita Ellerbee, and Viola Pettit. Ruth Laughead was the single representative of Theta Epsilon.

Miss Petitt won the decision of the judges and will represent the college in intercollegiate extemporaneous speaking contests, and in the Pi Kappa Delta Convention at Lexington, Kentucky. Miss Petitt is a junior. She tied with Anna Lou Miller for first place in the T. T. Alexander Oratorical contest earlier in the year.

The judges Saturday night were Dr. Hunter, Miss Gamble, and Miss Jewel.

Theta Epsilon—Bainonian

Theta and Bainonian will have a joint meeting next Saturday night. Miss Basset will give us a stereoptican lecture on "Beauty Spots of Europe". This will be an interesting review to those who have seen these places and willl show the rest of us what to see when we go;—Let's see them!

Alpha Sigma

Alpha Sigma wishes to congratulate John Weinand, who last Saturday night won the Maryville College Extemporaneous Speaking Contest. This honor gives him the right to represent Maryville in the contest at the Pi Kappa Delta Convention, to be held at Lexington, Kentucky in April.

At the meeting this Saturday night, the new officers will be sworn in for the Spring term. Other numbers on the program will be announced later. Alpha Sigs, Let's Go!

on the biscuits, however.

Again you would hear some gallant offer: Miss Meiselwitz, won't you have a biscuit and some preserves with us?" And then hear her say, graciously: "Thanks, but I don't dare."

It is claimed by some now that the value of anything should be regulated by the amount of work put into it, or the hardship it costs, regardless of its immediate usefulness. We think this may be true to some extent in "masculine pies".

NEWS FROM THE OTHER COLLEGES

New Stadium

The University of Tennessee will have a new stadium of 10,000 seating capacity, on Shields-Watkins field, before the next football season. This was the decision reached at the recent meeting of the new Athletic Council, which was unanimous in favor of the proposed enlargement.

Photoplay Appreciation

A new college course in "Photoplay Appreciation" will be introduced into the curriculum of the University of Southern California. This course is designed to give an accurate conception of the photoplay as an art form and as a social institution. Lectures dealing with the history and evolution of the photodrama, critical analysis of modern screen stories, and the social significance of the photoplay, will be stressed.

Meetings at Asbury

During the two weeks of February 4 to 19, the students of Asbury College in Wilmore, Kentucky, had the opportunity of participating in a midwinter revival. The Rev. Tony M. Anderson, an evangelist of national repute, was the leader of these meetings.

A College Decalogue

A recent editorial in the Cumberland Collegian, sets forth a list of ten things that Dean Clark of the University of Illinois states he would do if he had to go through college again. This is his list:

1.—Develop concentration— work harder but not so long.
2.—Learn to work while others are around.
3.—Stress learning how to get information rather than the information itself.
4.—Find more difficult tasks to do.
5.—Learn to speak in public.
6.—Learn to play some athletic game.
7.—Learn to do one line of work particularly well.
8.—Get better acquainted with instructors.
9.—Take fewer courses which are strictly practical.
10.—Have an avocation which brings close contact with men.

GIRLS HEAR SEXTETTE

February 25—Most of the girls on the Hill took advantage of the unusual opportunity of attending church in town tonight and heard the Knox College Sextette at the Presbyterian Church. This concert was enjoyed by everyone.

There were restrictions, of course. The girls had to go to town together and sit in a group to themselves. Oh, well—.

"The Poor Nut" Will Be Last Midwinter

Athenian's Rollicking Comedy Next Monday Night Will Close The Season.

The last midwinter of the season will be presented next Monday night by the Athenian Literary Society. Athenian's play, "The Poor Nut", will provide a snappy closing play for a season of exceptional brilliancy.

"The Poor Nut" is a story of college life, the scenes being laid on the campus of Ohio State University. The plot is centered about a track meet between Ohio State and Wisconsin. The four scenes are laid in the University book store, the trainer's tent, the official boxes at the corner of the stadium, and the living room of the Psi Sigma house. The "mental states" of the hero and the humorous turns throughout the play promise a real night of entertainment. The cast of characters follows:

John Miller (The Poor Nut) - Bob Anderson
Marjorie Blake (an Ohio State girl) - - - Alice Rhea
Spike Hoyt (Capt. Wisconsin track team) - Jack Coughlin
Julia Winters (Miss Wisconsin) - Betty Jane Sharpe
Wallace Pierce (Capt. Ohio State track team) - Hayes Williams
Coach Jackson (Coach, Ohio State) - - Russell Gilmore
Magpie Welch (Ohio State cheerleader) - - - Leland Gilmore
Prof. Deming - - Stanley McCool
Colonel Small (Prop. University book store) - Tommy Thompson
A Freshman - - - Billy Mayer
Track men, cheering group, and Betty, Reggie, and Helen, three Ohio State girls.

Practice House Now Stripped Of Mystery

Ambitious Sophomore Finds Paradise For Prospective Home-Makers.

CLEANLINESS THE SLOGAN

Girls Learn How to Squeeze Every Cent Out of Almighty Dollar.

(by Hessie Keaton)

"Say, look yonder—What's that bed up there for?" said I one day as I came from the back of Thaw Hall.

"Up where?"

"Aw, up yonder," said I, pointing to a window through which I could see a "double decker" bed.

"That's in the practice house—where the girls keep house."

Since we were both freshmen, that's all I ever knew of the practice house; but now, among other advantages that we sophs have over freshmen, I have the "inside dope" on the practice house; for I've been seeing things,—and hearing things! When I approached one of the practice house girls with questions concerning its nature, she gave me this reply:

"Come on up; you'll love it,—really it's awfully attractive.

"Step carefully there, the maid has to scrub these steps at least every other day," warned my guide as we ascended the immaculately clean steps that led to the home-maker's paradise. At the head of the stairs she opened a door and I was ushered into the reception hall. As she led me from one daintily furnished room to another I tried to think of adjectives that would properly describe the lovely things that I saw. The apartment has seven rooms and two baths. Pictures of some of our "campus killers" occupied prominent places in the rooms belonging to the girls. From the kitchen came delicious smells. The living room impressed me as a room that was really lived in. All of the girls welcomed me graciously. When I questioned them they gave so much information that in desperation I clutched one in a vice-like grip and cried for "facts first". And the facts were these:

At present there are six girls in the practice house. They are: Anna Rowe Templin, Lutie Toole, Mabel Blackburn, Ruth Pearson, Mary Wynn, and Fronie French. All of these girls are majoring in Smith-Hughes work. While in the practice house the girls practice food selection and preparation, household management and budgeting. Misses Gertrude and Elvira Meiselwitz supervise; the former oversees the food selection and preparation, and the latter has charge of the house in general.

The girls are divided into groups, there being two girls to a group. Simultaneously there are three duties to be performed: housekeeper, cook, and maid. Each group takes one duty; one member of the group is called the head and the other the assistant. Since their stay is only eight weeks (January 28-March 25), each group spends only 2 2-3 weeks on each duty. The housekeeper is general manager and hostess; the assistant housekeeper is host and aids the housekeeper in managing the house. The cook plans the menus, does the marketing and prepares the food; the assistant cook helps with the cooking and takes care of the kitchen. The maids set the table, serve the meals, wash the dishes, do the laundry work, and scrub the stairs. The entire house is kept as clean as a hospital.

Visitors are welcome from three to five o'clock any day. Every Thursday night the practice house has two "formal guests". Here are a few of these fortunate guests: Miss Hansen, Miss Green; Coach and Mrs. Honaker.

"Now don't think it's all work," said Fronie French, "We try to make it a model home. In the evening after supper we play the piano and sing,—read the newspaper and talk. We talk about clothes, love affairs, and our future. We often discuss high brow things, too."

Wasn't it Wordsworth who said that poety is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feeling recollected in tranquility? Then can't we safely

Life Work Conference To Begin This Friday

Dr. Timothy Stone, Head of Presbyterian Seminary, Chicago, Will Speak.

PROMINENT LEADERS HERE

Meetings Will Be Held Under Auspices Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A.

The eighth annual Life Work Conference will begin here this Friday, March 1, and continue through March 3. It will be held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y.W.C.A. Since the choice of a vocation is one of the outstanding decisions to be made during one's life, these two Christian organizations on the campus have deemed it worthwhile to call again to the Hill a number of competent men and women to aid the students in making wise choices for their vocations.

The problem of life work is a most serious and difficult one, and one in which every college student has a vital interest. Two years ago a questionnaire was given all the students at Maryville regarding their interests in various subjects. The subject of life work proved the most popular, and, no doubt, a similar result would be obtained if such a questionnaire were submitted to the present student body.

So, in the interests of those who wish advice and guidance in connection with vocations, this conference will be held. The leader will be Dr. Timothy Stone, President of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Chicago, Ill. Dr. Stone is one of the really outstanding men in the Presbyterian Church. He has a number of degrees earned at various institutions. He was, for nine years, pastor of the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church in Baltimore, Md., and is now pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church in Chicago, which pastorate he has held for twenty years. He is the author of several books on religious subjects. We are indeed fortunate in having Dr. Stone with us for this conference. He will arrive Saturday morning, March 2, and speak at the morning chapel service on "Facing the Future". Saturday evening at 6:30 he will talk on "Making the Most of Life".

Sunday morning Dr. Stone will preach at the New Providence Church, and Sunday evening he will close the conference with his address on "Seven Cardinal Virtues of Life".

Another influential leader of the conference will be Rev. Gilbert Lovell from New York. Mr. Lovell is giving his life to vocational work. He directs the Department of Life Work of the Board of Christian Education, with headquarters at New York. He is also on the Board of Foreign Missions, and for several years Mr. Lovell was a missionary to China. He will open the conference Friday morning with the topic, "Choosing One's Vocation". Sunday morning he will address the congregation at the Methodist Episcopal Church, and for Sunday afternoon he has chosen the subject, "China!", which he will deliver to the students and many friends interested. Mr. Lovell was here a few years ago, and the older students will be pleased to learn that he will again lend his help and experience to all those needing vocational guidance.

Another friend of Maryville, Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, one of the directors of this college and pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church at Knoxville, who gave the baccalaureate sermon last June, will address the undecided groups at the vocational group meetings.

Rev. Elmer C. Gabbard of Knoxville, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church will talk Friday evening on the "Business of Life". We wish to extend a welcome to these four men who have so kindly agreed to sacrifice their time for us.

Group Leaders

In addition to these four prominent leaders, we are to have leaders for the individual conference groups. They will endeavor to show the merits of their particular class of work, and to aid anyone who is

Theta Epsilon Presents CRAIG'S WIFE Tonight

In The Chapel

Message From Hope Gets Across By Air

Radio Greeting From "Darkest Africa" Picked Up In North Carolina.

February 19—Tonight Dr. Wilson received a radiogram from Fred Hope announcing his safe arrival in Africa. The message was transmitted from amateur station FQPM in Africa and was picked up by F. M. Whitaker, 816 Wilkerson Avenue, Durham, N. C. The message was received by Mr. Whitaker Saturday, February 16, at 6:15 P. M., Eastern Standard time. The delivery from North Carolina was by mail.

The message reads as follows: "To Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, Maryville, Tenn. U. S. A. Am back for sixth term. Had a good voyage. All well here. Greetings to students. Very best to you.

Fred."

This is the first message Mr. Hope has succeeded in getting across to Maryville. He has tried on two previous occasions.

When the message was read in chapel, Dr. Wilson made some remarks about the Radio Relay League's policy of sending messages free of charge. There was a general murmur of surprise, indicating that very few have heard of the A.R.R.L. and its work.

There are thousands of radio amateurs scattered over the country who are operating radio transmitting stations licensed by the government. These amateurs now operate their stations on very low wave lengths, so that they never interfere with the broadcasting which is picked up by the ordinary receiver. These stations are owned and oper-

U.T. Entertains Y.M.C.A. With Banquet March 5

Annual Event Is to Promote Spirit of Fellowship Between Schools

For the fourth consecutive year the Maryville College Young Men's Christian Association has been invited to Knoxville to enjoy a banquet and fellowship meeting with the University of Tennessee Y. M. C. A. The meeting is to be held at the St. John's Episcopal church on the evening of March 5. The Maryville Y. M. C. A. was first asked to meet with the Y of the University in the Spring of 1926 and the invitation has been renewed yearly. These banquets have for their purpose the promotion of good fellowship among the men of the two institutions. They have proved very enjoyable and profitable to all in the past and this year promises to be no exception.

The hosts are to bear the cost of the banquet while we are to furnish the entertainment. The Dixie Vagabonds have agreed to appear on the program and there will probably be some interesting speakers and other forms of entertainment.

Of course there is a limit to the number of Maryville men who can be accommodated and this limit has been set at thirty-five. There may be more than thirty-five who would like to attend but it is understood that the most regular and faithful Y members will be given preference. About fifty men from U. T. are expected to be at the banquet.

It is customary for Maryville to sponsor a similar meeting and this will probably be held sometime during the latter part of April.

60 FORSAKE HILL TO HEAR ROSA PONSELLE

February 23—About sixty students of the Maryville music department went to Knoxville tonight to hear Rosa Ponselle, the famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Miss Ponselle is one of the greatest singers now living. Her concert at the Lyric Theatre marked the close of the series of artist concerts sponsored by the Tuesday Morning Music Club of Knoxville.

Writers' Workshop Attempting To Remedy Lack Of Shakespeares

College Scribes Find That The Business of a Playwright Is Far From Being a Sinecure.

(by Sarah Moore)

At three o'clock in the afternoon of February 13, 1929, there sat about a long table in the psychology laboratory a group of twenty-five people. These were the members of the Maryville College Writers' Workshop, and they had decided on a new experiment. All of them had bewailed the scarcity of Shakespeares in this world and had decided to remedy the universal deficiency. They would become playwrights! So here they sat about the table discussing ways and means.

The first necessity of playwrights, as any well-informed person knows, is a plot. Accordingly, each of the group was asked to give at least one pet idea that might conceivably grow up into a healthy plot. Quite a number of ideas were brought forth. Newspaper incidents, really truly ghost happenings, love stories, tales of trials and of hynotisms, furnished ideas for varied germ-plots.

Then the twenty-five were divided into groups of five and sent out with instructions to hatch out a plot, tend it carefully, and bring it back full-fledged sometime in the near future.

On the campus now are these five devoted groups, patiently tending their plots. If one could hear unobserved, any group in the process of writing a play, one could not fail to be instructed in the mystic art of playwriting.

Let us stand by one group as they are in the midst of their work. The conversation sounds like rapid fire artillery. They cannot decide whether the villain should be ugly or handsome.

One states positively, "Well, I think he's repulsive. Ugly face, long arms. Oh, he looks like an ape."

"He certainly does not. He's melancholy and dark. We've got to let him be a little fascinating, so that the heroine won't run him off on first sight."

"Well, all right. Only he's ugly."

Then comes the important matter of names.

"Do let's name the leading lady Daphne!"

"Daphne! Of all names. Sounds daffy to me."

"Well, then, Mary or Elizabeth, if you want something substantial."

"Well, let's think over it a while."

"The villain's got to be named."

"Hum."

"Hum."

"Aha! I have it. Name him after the author of a book on grammar."

"Hear! Hear!"

Finally comes the great problem of disposing of the characters. One, more bloodthirsty than the rest, insists that the small child in the play shall be drowned. There ensues a heated argument: "To drown or not to drown."

One, exasperated, asks: "What is this thing going to be anyhow? Farce or tragedy."

"Please don't make it a farce. It's so childish."

"On the other hand, I think that when college students go around wanting to drown innocent children it's childish, and idiotic!"

"Well, then, Polly Anna. Go ahead with your 'appy hending."

"An idea! Why can't we make the child twins? Drown one of them and save the other."

And so it goes.

Twenty-five people are learning to sympathize with Shakespeare. Their slogan is, "We're on our way, even if we don't know where we're going."

Aged College Truck Now On Its Ninth Years' Continuous Service

Pinched Once For Speeding. Has Hauled Logs, Moonshiners, Cows, Hogs, Coal, Bricks, Professors' Furniture, Etc.

(by Edwin Buchanan)

During the February Meetings we were urged to be more faithful and virtuous and were spurred on to work. If any one wants a good example of this, follow the lead of the old gray White truck of Maryville College. It is a 1920 model, purchased new in April, 1921, and was the best obtainable at the time.

During the first year it was used for hauling logs and week-end parties from place to place. Robert Milling, a world war veteran, was driving at the time. During his term as chauffeur he was pinched at 5:00 A. M. by the Maryville police force for speeding. He was travelling at the terrific rate of 30 miles an hour (at that time the speed limit was 10 miles per hour). After this exciting little incident, Prof. Proffitt had the gears changed so that it would not attain a greater velocity than 25 miles an hour.

This worthy truck hauled Thaw Hall (in small quantities, of course) from the railroad station and from Knoxville. This task took 1½ years but the truck held out. It has moved various members of the faculty from house to house. For instance, Dr. Rogers has been moved about five times in the last four years, and Prof. Hunter,—well to quote Brownie, "We don't know whether he pays room rent for the truck or not."

Once during a short vacation, a party rode up to Walland in the omnibus and just about the time they were ready to start for home, a wheel came off, and of course, the moonshining couples had to walk home.

Brownie recalls other interesting experiences with the truck. For instance, there have been times when about two dozen moonshiners would ride over to the U. T.-Maryville football game with Mr. and Mrs. Brown as chaperones, returning late at night.

It carried over 100 girls to Montvale and back at the beginning and end of the summer holidays, and many is the time that it has been the means of transportation for a boisterous group of seniors having a party out at Cades Cove or Wildwood.

It hauled 40 girls somewhere and back again and 35 boys up to a Carson-Newman football game, not to mention the cows and hogs it has carried over to Knoxville to meet their doom.

During its whole term of service, however, it has not had any serious accidents, although it has skidded into a ditch several times. Once, while laying cinders on our race track, a boy fell under the truck and the wheel came within a few inches of his head before the truck was stopped. This is the nearest to a tragedy that has ever occurred.

Brownie said that he had hoped to trade the old bus in on a new one this year, but it couldn't be done and now he thinks that it will be used as long as it will run. Messrs. Brown, Irwin, and Goddard are the official drivers although college fellows drive it as much, or more than the hired and liveried chauffeurs.

In spite of reckless driving and hard usage, it has been overhauled only once, and we wonder that it is still running today. How would you feel if you had to haul from 1600 to 1800 tons of coal to the college every year?

Well, luck to you, old Faithful: we hope you will stay with us until Niagara falls!

What Is Your Solution?

Many poor soles would be comforted if someone would devise some ingenious method for doing away with the water hazards on the walk leading to Pearsons Hall. The walk is a succession of hollows from the postoffice to Pearsons. These hollows do not reveal themselves until after a rain, at which time they make the before and after eating processions marvels of dexterous foot-work. Of course at night there is nothing to do except to follow vaguely conceived notions as to where the deepest water lies and trust to luck. Here one does not have even the advantage of a radio compass or drift indicator.

The walk is here. Whatever errors were made in its construction are now hardened into rock. No amount of coaxing or manipulation will restore its former bloom and plasticity of youth. What is to be done with the old sinner?

Some may suggest that the entire walk be jacked-up on one side and left at an angle. Others might suggest drain holes in each hollow. Still others might suggest deepening of the holes, so well begun, to serve as supplementary gold-fish ponds. This, of course, would entail the building of a new walk elsewhere.

Whatever your idea or ideas, write them out and drop them in the Echo box in the front doorway of Anderson. We will print the best and most original suggestions. Do not let the matter of cost or practicability hinder your inventive genius.

—O—

One More Idea

Last week the editor received a sound and severe panning from one of his staff-editors who happened also to be a member of the Writers' Workshop, the defendant in the case of an earlier editorial. Ye editor's poor, unbusiness-like propositions concerning a magazine or annual publication from the workshop were flung back at him, sadly mutilated and covered with the irrevokable evidence of figures. As it stands, it seems that the magazine idea is all off until someone gives us enough money to make it practical.

Though fearing another attack, we venture another suggestion. A supplement to the Echo, same size and number of pages, devoid of ads, and filled with the literary efforts of students both in and out of the Workshop could be put out twice a semester for ten or fifteen cents additional on each student's bills.

The attack on the editor's business ability was the unkindest cut of all, because it was not original.

Mr. Peirce will retain his position on the staff.

Ministerial Association

At the meeting on Wednesday evening, February 20, a different type of meeting was tried out. Mr. Cook led in an open discussion on the question, "Should We Play or Live Our Parts as Ministers of The Gospel." Our quartette added very much to the success of the meeting.

"No, I never had any Chemistry before I started taking it, either."—Prof. Griffitts.

"We have the gongs fixed now, so please get to chapel on time."—Dr. Wilson.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Answer discovered in English literature: "In 1658 the Pilgrims crossed the ocean, and this became known as 'Pilgrim's Progress'."

Devices for which the world is waiting:

1.—A permanent shoe polish.
2.—Chewing-gum that will not lose it flavor.
3.—A reliable forecast of what the Dean will ask in ethics tests.
4.—An unbreakable date.
5.—An unstewed prune.
6.—Liver and onions without the liver—and onions.

(Editor's note: Any other suggestions will be gladly accepted and printed—if printable. Address to "Highland Flings".)

Poor men and poor umbrellas generally get left.

A dentist is the only man who can, with impunity, tell a woman to close her mouth.

Love is like eating mushrooms. You never know whether it's the real thing until it's too late.

"Everything I tell my girl goes."
"Yeah?"
"Yeah. Everything I tell her she tells her room-mate, and then it goes everywhere."

They've painted everything on collegiate Fords but this: "Ketchup with my jar, you can!"

"So your friend the aviator has quit the business. Why?"
"Too many jay-fliers."

"But, papa, he says he can't live without me."
"Tell him to think up a new one; I told that to your mother."

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Pi Kappa Delta is a fraternity of debaters and orators; but even at that it is hard to figure out how some of those fellows get into it.

Governor Queener of the Kentucky Province lives at Maryville.

—:—

There are four degrees of rank in Pi Kappa Delta. Mr. Hopkins, president of the local chapter, is the only one who has attained Special Distinction around here.

—:—

Mr. Hopkins is the only man on the Hill who has a diamond. They are thick enough to be stylish around the girls though.

—:—

Pi Kappa Delta holds a national convention every two years. This is also good training for the students who intend to be senators.

—:—

The English style of debating takes the place of "the funnies" in the Forensic Magazine.

—:—

The opening gun of the debate season will be fired at Teachers' College here Thursday night. If we can confound "the Teachers" first thing I think we will be able to "get by".

—:—

There are two chapters of Pi Kappa Delta in Tennessee. There is one at Maryville and one at Tusculum.

—:—

The Pi Kappa Delta question for debate this year for both men and women was the first choice of the Maryville Chapter. This does not mean, however, that Maryville is a dictator.

—:—

You have heard of court-room demonstrations when the verdict was rendered. Our extemporaneous speaker, John Wienand, was so overcome with emotion when the decision was read that he had to leave the room.

—:—

Also congratulations to Viola Pettitt. Viola was accustomed to scenes.

—:—

Here's to the debater in Orange and Garnet!

Highlanders Have Good Prospect Of Winning Smoky Mountain Tournament at Kingsport Thurs., Fri., Sat.; Carson-Newman First Opponent, Friday

BRILLANT PLAYING BY YEARLINGS BEATS JUNIORS 25-1; SOPHS ALSO WIN

Sarah Thomas, Frosh, Leads In Scoring. Juniors Miss Crowder and Pearson in Line-up. But Are Outclassed. Soph-Frosh Battle Not Yet Set.

Sophomore-Junior Game

The annual Girls' Basketball Tournament opened last Wednesday afternoon with the junior-soph encounter. The juniors were unable to get their bearings throughout the game and consequently they held the smaller end of the 40-16 victory.

Grace Wallace, plucky little sophomore forward, led the field in scoring, looping 7 field goals. She was followed by Louise Wright, associate forward who found the goal six times. Olive Clopton led the scoring for the juniors with 8 points to her credit.

The lineups were as follows:

Sophs, 40		Juniors, 16
L. Wright, 12	c.f.	O. Clopton, 8
C. Cushman (c) 7	l.f.	I. Crowley, 6
G. Wallace, 14	r.f.	M Haynie, 2
B. Farrar	c.g.	L. Lovette
R. Laughead	l.g.	E. Burns
M. Lowery	r.g.	F. Crabill

Substitutions— Sophs: V. Osborne 2, P. Covington 4, D. Bassel 1, B. Rogers, H. Meinich; Juniors: V. Hultquist, E. Nash, R. Batt.

Referee: Grace Weller.

Freshman-Junior Game

Just six months ago the upperclassmen had quite a few laughs watching the freshmen hunting the College Seal in the lily pond and trying to buy their chapel seats, but maybe they didn't make the sophs and juniors sit up and take notice when they defeated the juniors 25-1 Friday afternoon in the second game of the Girls' Interclass Tournament. The juniors bowed for the second time in recognition of the lower classmen's basketball ability and the sophs were sitting on the side lines awe stricken at the basketball tactics displayed by the frosh in the freshman-junior game.

The freshmen showed remarkable team-work. Their three forwards are very accurate and the guards showed no mean ability in keeping the ball out of the enemies' territory.

The juniors as yet haven't had an even break with luck but they showed a remarkable improvement over the way they played in the soph-junior game.

Sarah Thomas was the leading scorer for the freshmen, scoring 12 of their 25 points. Captain Crider followed with eight points. Olive Clopton rang up the lone point scored by the juniors.

The line-up was as follows:

Juniors, 1		Frosh, 25
O. Clopton, 1	c.f.	S. Thomas, 12
I. Crowley	l.f.	H. Littlejohn, 5
M. Haynie	r.f.	V. Crider, (c) 8
L. Lovette (c)	c.g.	C. Hultquist
R. Batt	l.g.	C. Foster
E. Burns	r.g.	V. Heidle

Substitutions— Frosh: Absheer, D. Cable; Juniors: E. Nash, F. Crabill.

Referee: G. Weller.

The Old Timer Says

The noise in Carnegie was noticeably abated by the absence of some three or four basketball men. Mr. Mac is looking exceptionally well, due no doubt to several good nights' rest.

"Red" is going out for track this spring. Betty says she thinks those suits are so becoming to Red's type. Not denying that, doesn't love do wonders?

Bob Thrower admitted he was in love once.

Why limit it to once, Bob?

There is a big vacancy in the two mile, according to Coach. Louis Blair says there is a vacancy at Sing Sing too, and he stands more chance of filling it.

The fellow that invented aerial darts should be made to play the game. As far as I can learn it is a cross between volley ball and tennis with some of the attributes of handball thrown in. It should have been called "glorified ping-pong for co-eds."

After all I suppose the girls should play their basketball games in private. At least it keeps the fellows from coming to any definite decision about the abilities of the fair basketeers.

It is also consoling to the boys that the girls did not see the intermural contests.

Merle Delaney is looking forward to a big year at the hot corner. No, dear frosh, that doesn't mean he is going to moonshine in the entrance to Thaw.

When we think of our last basketball game of the season coming Tuesday night, we realize there have been all too few games at home. Well, cheer up, the baseball season is just around the corner.

Remember the tournament next week-end. It might be a help if some of the organizations could send a wire to the boys just before the game. Winning that tournament means something to us.

Keen Rivalry Marks Intermural Contests

80 Men Enter Amateur Cage Classic; Finals To Be Held Thursday.

Maryville's annual intermural basketball tournament is in full sway, with Pope, Storey, Simpson and Blazer taking their men into the second round this morning. The semi-finals come tomorrow and the finals on Thursday. Anderson is still in the running, having drawn a bye in the second round.

The elimination went as follows: Pope 10, Williams 8, Wilson 7, Blazer 19; Storey 14, McDonald 10; Anderson 15, Teffeteller 12; Simpson 12, Gabbard 10.

A great deal of interest is being shown in the tournament this year. About eighty men participated in the first round, the largest number taking part in any intermural contest here.

Debate Thursday Night

The opening debate for Maryville will be held Thursday night in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium with Teachers College. Our representatives in this debate will be Robert Jones, and Travis Hitt. Mr. Jones is a junior and Mr. Hitt is a sophomore. Both are members of Pi Kappa Delta.

The contest is to be a non-decision debate, but Professor Queener believes it will be an added stimulus to the debaters and to the Maryville audience for opening the season.

The question for this year is one that should interest all, Resolved: That a substitute for trial by jury should be adopted. Our team has the affirmative and will attempt a plan for the reconstrction of the administration of social justice.

Last year the debates were well attended. Sometimes a great many were turned away because there was not room enough.

Wrestlers Will Have Meet Thursday Night

Knoxville "Y" Will Try to Recapture Lost Laurels in Alumni Gym at 8 P. M. Twenty-five Cents is Admission Price. Thrills are Guaranteed.

This Friday night the Knoxville "Y" sends its wrestlers to meet our matmen in the first wrestling meet Maryville has engaged in at home.

Billy Crawford promises some clever work in the art of strangling, and the heavyweight class looks interesting with Don Wilson on the docket to meet the 210 pound bimbo from the Smoky City.

There will be seven matches in the meet, and the weight classes will be 115, 135, 145, 158, 175, and unlimited. The men in the respective weight classes for the Highlanders will be Nick, Cox, Crawford, Shaw, Watkins, Headrick, Wilson.

Competition will be keen, since the local boys won over Knoxville a few weeks ago, and the invaders are seeking revenge. A capacity crowd will no doubt be on hand when Referee Tom Cash opens the meet at 8:00 P. M.

Proposed Amendments to The Regulations Governing The Conduct of The Highland Echo

To amend Section IV, entitled "Vacancies" by changing the title to "Appointments, Vacancies, and Dismissals" and by striking out the present Section and substituting for it the following three articles:

Article 1. None of the appointments to the editorial staff or the business managerial staff is to be made without the consent of the prospective appointees.

Article 2. Vacancies in the editorial staff are to be filled by the Joint Committee on Selection (II:2) in keeping with the following principles (1) no appointment is to be made without consent of the prospective appointee, (2) due notice is to be given of the vacancy through the columns of the Highland Echo, and applications are to be called for. Persons thus applying are to be given first consideration in the filling of the vacancy, but the committee is not bound to make its selection from such applications. With these principles in mind the committee may use its discretion as to the details of each specific instance of filling of vacancies.

Article 3. Action for dismissal of any member of the editorial staff may be initiated by any one of the three elements in the Committee on Selection. When charges are preferred, the accused, if he wishes, is to be heard by the Joint Committee, and upon the concurrent unfavorable action of the majority of the staff representatives on the Committee and a majority of one other of the elements in the Joint Committee, his connection with the staff is severed.

To add Section XI, entitled "Amendments"

Section XI—Amendments

Any interested party may propose amendments to the foregoing regulations, presenting them either to the Student Council or the Faculty, and after one publication in the Highland Echo, such amendments become effective upon the joint approval of the Student Body and the Faculty.

Respectfully submitted by a subcommittee of the Joint Committee on Selection,

Frank Baker, for the Student Council,
Jesse Peirce, for the Editorial Staff,
E. R. Hunter for the Faculty.

Adopted by the Faculty, Feb. 21, 1929.

Well, it looks like the rainy season has really begun, at last.

CAGEMEN WIN OVER KING AND TUSCULUM LOSE TO E. & H. AND MILLIGAN ON TRIP

Win From Carson-Newman in One-sided Tilt 57-24, Saturday. "Slim" and "J. D." Star for Highlanders.

February 22—A weary Highlander basketball team returned to the Hill today from a strenuous trip through East Tennessee and Virginia. The boys broke even—winning two and losing two. Tusculum and King were beaten, while defeats were suffered at the hands of Milligan and Emory and Henry. It was a very successful trip, in view of the fact that four games were played in as many successive nights. None of the first three games were sinecures and as a result, the Scots were in no condition to give the ordinarily mediocre Emory and Henry team a hard fight.

Tusculum College, the first opponent, vainly attempted to stem the Orange and Garnet and came out losers to the tune of 35-30. Bird and Waddell captured high scoring honors, while J. D. Davis and Capt. Reed scintillated at their respective guard posts—turning in a fine defensive game.

Milligan, smarting under the reverse taken on the local floor, was all primed for the invading Maryville men, and eked out a 22-19 victory in what was declared to be the best game ever played at Johnson City. The locals got off to a good start, but the Buffaloes stampeded their way to the fore and finished a nose in the lead. The score was tied no less than four times in the last half, so the spectators were kept at the fever point of excitement. Delaney, Vincent, and J. D. Davis showed up well—but it must be said that the whole team played heads-up ball at all times during the fracas.

King College essayed to throw the proverbial monkey-wrench into the smooth-working Highlander machine, but was repulsed 33-13. King was sitting on top of the world at half time 11-7—but a stern chase in the second half netted the locals enough counters to win comfortably. The game was rough and tumble—no fewer than three King players being ejected via the personal foul route. White and Bird took high scoring honors for the evening.

When the Scotties got to Emory, Virginia, to meet the Emory and Henryites, they were physically exhausted—dead on their feet. Three strenuous games had worn them down and as a consequence they went down by the score of 33-20. Emory and Henry got off to a 12-2 lead in less than 10 minutes, and thereafter the chase was futile as the local boys were too tired to get around on the floor.

NINE OF THE TEN BEST ARTICLES AVAILABLE IN THE COLLEGE LIBRARY

1. Reconstruction and Prohibition—by A. Lawrence Lowell—Atlantic Monthly. The crisis in American history brought about experiments in legislation: the Civil War brought the 14th Amendment, the European War the 18th. President Lowell of Harvard discusses and compares these twin challenges to thoughtful citizens.

2. Prospects for Peace—Charles A. Beard—Harper's Magazine—An able historian's authoritative statement of the forces which make for continued peace in Europe today. Dr. Beard shows in how many ways war-making has become more difficult than in 1914.

3. Our National Library—Herbert Putnam—Review of Reviews— The librarian of the library of Congress tells how original book collections of our legislative fathers have in recent years become a center of research and information with an unprecedented wealth of collection and activities.

4. A New Latin-American Policy—Raymond Leslie Buell— Forum. The close approach of Hoover's administration calls for a new definition of the Latin-American policy, and Mr. Buell of the Foreign Policy Association states it tersely as a challenge to our State Department.

5. Is The Plant a Sentient Being?—Sir J. C. Bose—Century Magazine That animals are walking plants and plants nothing less than anchored animals is the recent discovery which the famous Hindu scientist tells about in this article which reveals the unity of all life.

6. Unpublished Poems of Emily Dickenson—Atlantic Monthly. It will be an exciting announcement to admirers of Emily Dickenson that some 150 unpublished poems of hers have come to light wrought in the same style that has set her name so high. The Atlantic Monthly prints ten of them.

7. Is America a Christian Country?—by Charles Fiske—Harper's Magazine. Although most churchmen think of this as a Christian country, Bishop Fiske emphatically denies that it is, marshals evidence to clinch his point, and calls for a real Christian revival.

8. Through the Brandenburger Gate—by John Palmer Gavit—Survey Graphic. Formerly only the Kaiser—now everybody rides through its central portal. A full length portrait of a democratic republic in the making, leading feaure of a special number "Ten Years of the New Germany".

9. Lincoln and the Youth of Illinois.—Ida Tarbell—Good Housekeeping. One of the leading authorities on the life and times of Lincoln throws new light on his deep insight into the heart and mind of Youth and explains the confidence young people had in him.

SPANISH CLUB MEETING

The Spanish Club held its first regular meeting since the election of new officers and the time was taken up mostly with business.

Senor Frank Baker was re-elected president of the club and he has several new and interesting plans for promoting the idea of the Spanish Club being entirely Spanish and not half English. Each meeting is more interesting than the former "and a good time is had by all". So why not have every eligible student take part in it?

Witham from the Law School of the University of Tennessee will confer with students interested in law. Mr. W. R. Woolrich from the Engineering School of University of Tennessee will lead a group preferring the engineering line of work. Dr. J. A. Thackston, Head of the Department of Education at the University of Tennessee, will address prospective teachers. Those desiring help in Religious Education and Social Service Work will meet with Miss Ruth E. Phingst from the Knoxville Y. W. C. A. The vocation of Home Economics will be explained by Miss H. Ellen Cowan, who has been a Home Demonstrator in Kentucky since her graduation from Maryville in 1928. All students interested in medicine will confer with Dr. R. B. Wood, a practicing physician of Knoxville. Mr. Zollie Howard, City Editor of the Knoxville News-Sentinel, will lead a group of aspiring journalists. Mr. Henry G. Trent from Knoxville will talk with all students desiring a more extensive knowledge of business administration.

The main purpose of this vocational conference is to guide the student in the choice of his life work and to promote Christian Ideals in his choice of work. It is earnestly hoped that everybody will avail himself of the opportunity thus afforded, and that many benefits both present and future, will be realized.

Practice House Now Stripped of Mystery

say out of the practice house cometh poetry shown by this contribution from Miss Meiselwitz:

The P. H. D.'s

They say they work—well do they?

Did you ever get up in the dark of the dawn
Before the heat gets ambitious?
And wake yourself up to the tune of
The carpet sweeper?

And pursue the milk man?
and the ice man?
and the grocery man?
and the mail man?
They do! !

Did you ever try to make a dollar buy food for eight
And set the table perfectly straight?
An chase that calorie all over a meal?
And wash dishes until you're dizzy and do accounts?
and dust furniture?
and study—incidentally—
Until the next alarm clock rings?
They do! ! !

ALICE WHITE FILM EXPONENT OF CHARM AND PEP

Alice White. Just ten letters that spell also: Pep. Vivacity. Verve. Charm. Personality. Appeal.

And Alice White has every one of these. She uses them all, moreover, in "Show Girl", her first leading role picture from First National, coming to the Palace Theatre, next Monday and Tuesday.

Alice used to be a script girl and it is now an old story—how she had a test made, which she didn't like, but which brought her an interview and later a contract with First National Pictures.

It has been told how Alice perked up, decided that her place was in front of the camera and not behind it, began to dress the part "on and off", became the little flapper-ingenue to the top of her bent, gained a host of new friends, proved she could act and never for a moment doubted that she would win to stardom.

That done, she is now determined to become not only a star, but one of the most popular stars in the world.

College Window Gives Moonshiners on Hill Some Public Notice

Couples Dragged Forth Into The Lime-Light of Public View.

(by Elizabeth Murphy)

I didn't think the meanest man in the world would ask a poor, forsaken College Widow to write an article on Moonshiners, but that's just what has happened. I'm a good sport, though, so here goes.

Since a certain pre-eminence is due the editor-in-chief it is entirely fitting and proper that he should be mentioned first. Jack is a cautious lad. For three years he has been patiently awaiting his Ideal—and accepting no substitutes. But just before it was too late, Jane came along. She evidently fulfills all the requirements, and Jack says she was worth waiting for.

Izzy Cannon deserves prominent position, too. Her diamond was the first of the epidemic of sparklers which has taken the Hill by storm this year. Linton is to be congratulated as an enterprising young man.

As perfect examples of what leading parts in a midwinter can do to one we have Betty Jane and Red. They never have been the same since "Romeo and Juliet". Even the casual observer can detect the genuine love-light at all times,—but we sometimes wonder who is going to be boss in that family.

Speaking of midwinters— last Monday night we saw some extremely realistic acting in the last act of "Craig's Wife". Could it be possible that Doris Niles and Bob West could have practiced outside of rehearsal hours?

Blue Wienand is one of our constant lovers. He and Christine have stuck it out for the last four years, and apparently are thriving on it. It's beginning to look like a permanent proposition to us.

Jimmie Cox and Lois also deserve an everlasting place among the faithful and true. And they, too, seem entirely satisfied with the arrangement.

Paragraphs could be devoted to Shorty Shaw and Lois Crotwell—but the whole idea can be boiled down to three words, "Ain't love grand?"

We noticed that Willie Nell and Hayden scorned the Undecided group in the Life Work Conference. However, that was no surprise to us.

In the opinion of most of us the prize for shining eyes should go to either the Dickerson-Stearns team—or to their rivals, French and Jones. But now we are beginning to wonder if Reggie Voorhees and his girl won't walk off with the honors.

Louise Avery and Morgan Biggs seem to get a lot of fun out of life. More power to them!

Ed and Mary Ella are another pair of old faithfuls. Somehow we believe they are going to stick, and we surely hope so.

Ed Driscoll and Eva have an advantage over most of the moonshiners—for they live in the same home town. They, at least, aren't sorry when vacations come.

John and Marion don't seem to take it so hard as most chronic moonshiners do. This is an admirable characteristic and a worthy example.

Anne Smartt and Emil Farr are our newest recruits,—but aren't they doing nicely?

Someone said that Farmer Watkins and Margaret Brigman were seen together, but there is no positive proof of this. Moreover, there is a rumor that Ruth Houghton and Porter are progressing to the class of veterans. Also, someone heard it said that Conchita would like to moonshine with Earle if he would only give her some encouragement.

Bill Berry has settled his destiny, and would be glad to give helpful information to anyone genuinely interested.

Living at the Practice House has taught Anna Rowe and Lutie what moonshining in its pure, unadulterated form is like. Carl and Doc wish they would move back to town.

Mary Davenport isn't a full-fledged member of this ancient and honorable organization any more, but on bank holidays Corky is very likely to be one of the conspicuous points of interest on the campus.

Smiles Heard on The Hill

(George Brown)

The average person never stops to reflect when he looks upon a smiling face that the smile might also be heard as well as seen. Although I do not see the smiles on the faces of those about me as I walk about the campus, I hear and feel the smiles when they speak. A smile has just as must charm and beauty when heard as when seen, but many of us overlook this remarkable fact. It is impossible for a person to utter one word or syllable through smiling lips without leaving traces of the smile in his tone. Because of this fact, I have learned to look for smiles in voices.

The human voice is one of the most expressive things in the world. It expresses a smile in all its various forms as accurately as does the human countenance. Through pitch, inflection, and tone color, the ear is able to determine what actuates the smile. On the campus I hear many smiling voices; some greeting me, some greeting others. And in each of these voices the smile is plainly heard.

George Brown Comes Here After Five Years In School For Blind

Only Blind Student on Hill Sees Many Things Through Sound.

George Brown, the writer of the accompanying article, is the only blind student on the Hill. He did not enter until the beginning of the present semester. His entry was made possible by a scholarship from the Tennessee School for the Blind, located in Nashville. George attended this school for five and one half years.

George now rooms several blocks off of West Main Street, and makes the trip regularly to and from school without assistance. He knows his way about the campus perfectly. He knows over fifty students by their voices.

George, like most blind people, has a highly developed sense of hearing. He can not only recognize people by their voices, but he can tell what sort of person he is hearing or whether that person is blue or happy. He says he can hear the smile in a voice easily enough, but that there are as many different sorts of smiles as there are people. He says he can now distinguish between the genuine and the sarcastic smile. Another interesting fact he points out pertains to a person's way of walking. He says most emotional people take short, quick steps. The egotist sets his heels down hard and walks with a peculiar stride.

Mr. Brown does his writing with a typewriter. The use of this instrument was one of the first things he learned after becoming blind. He writes much more rapidly thus than we can using a pen, so his blindness is no disadvantage in that way. He says if he make a mistake his fingers tell him immediately, whereupon he makes the correction.

He sometimes uses the Braille system in taking class notes. The letters are made with the aid of a strip of aluminum which clamps across the paper. Dots are punched in the paper with a small stylus. This makes a raised dot on the other side of the paper. In reading the raised dots the reading is done from the back side of the paper, so that everything is read backwards from the way it was written.

George's blindness came about seven years ago as the result of a chain of misfortune. At that time he was working as a barber. A sudden attack of appendicitis seized him on Saturday. The next day he drove 164 miles with a bursted appendix. He did not see a doctor until Monday. Physicians did not know what was the matter and did not operate until Friday. They had little hope for his recovery, but he pulled through in spite of the poisonous effects of gangrene. A subsequent attack of other pneumonia so weakened his condition that a sec-

Opening Debate is a Non-Decision Affair

Maryville Involved in Several Debates Tomorrow Night.

The debate season for Maryville was opened last Thursday night, February 28, with a non-decision debate over East Tennessee Teachers' College, on the subject, resolved: That a Substitute for trial by jury should be adopted. The visiting team was composed of Mr. Carr and Mr. Barrie who were accompanied by their coach, Mr. Cox. Maryville was represented by Robert Jones and Travis Hitt. Professor Queener presided as chairman.

The debate should be considered a success for an opener. We believe it is a good idea to have the first debate a non-decision contest.

The visitors were pleasant, interesting, and presented their arguments in an easy style and manner. Mr. Carr had a peculiar wit all his own.

The Maryville team was able to uphold the affirmative to the extent of almost revolutionizing our system of justice.

This same team, Mr. Jones and Mr. Hitt will go to Tusculum College to debate the affirmative of the same question Tuesday night in the triangular debate with Tusculum College and King College. William Graham and Forrest S. Robertson will defend the negative against King College on the home platform the same night.

The debate will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

UNUSUAL ATTENDANCE AT CHEMISTRY PROGRAM

Magical Program, Delayed by Explosion, Enjoyed by 85 Students.

February 26—This evening the Chemistry Club presented a very interesting program featuring stunts of chemical magic by Prof. Howell. The meeting was well attended, there being eighty-five members and visitors present. All the seats in the Chemistry lecture room were filled and several people had to stand up during the entire program.

While the Constitution and By-laws of the club were being read by the secretary for the benefit of new members, Y. Topolian breathed hydrogen gas on his vocal cords. This has the effect of making a man talk like a woman. After the reading of the Constitution, Topalian was asked to read a line of the club pledge. The effect was ludicrous to say the least.

This was followed by Prof. Howell's stunts. Among the best was the demonstration of spontaneous combustion, making fire burn under water, showing the action of voltcanoes and the making of smoke rings.

This program was to have been given last week, but unfortunately while Prof. Howell was preparing an experiment to show that water will cause an explosion, the chemicals exploded and burned Prof. Howell so severely that he was unable to perform the stunts that evening.

The chemistry club is one of the more recently organized clubs, but it shows promise of becoming one of the "livest" organizations on the Hill. About twenty-five new members were taken into the club at the last meeting and several more are expected to join soon. President Morrison is really in earnest about the welfare of the club.

New Locker Rooms Finished at Last

Coach Plans Opening Night For Near Future.

The work on the basement of Bartlett Hall has finally reached maturity. Coach Honaker plans to have an opening night in the near future. This event was planned for the 26th, the night of our last game of the season, but, due to weather conditions, it was postponed.

The new work gives many improvements over the old basement. Two hundred steel lockers with combination locks give every athlete and gym student a safe place to store his valuables while he is making the "loop" or attending his gym class. Stationary benches are to be placed between every row of lockers within the next few days.

Another added feature is the large room which is reserved for use as a lobby and trophy room. This room will serve as a display room for the trophies won by the boys as well as for the pictures of the various athletic teams.

Fifteen showers are included in the equipment of the new basement.

In addition to the above mentioned features are a large storage room, a dressing room for the teams, and an office for Mrs. Queener.

All of the rooms are finished in gray plaster, making an attractive as well as a much needed improvement in the Y. M. C. A. building.

Music and Expression Departments Provide Eight Graduate Recitals

Seven Star Players Will Make Individual Appearances In Three Recitals.

This Spring seven students will graduate from our expression department. The graduates will appear in three recitals, the first of which will be presented on March 18.

Everyone who has seen the plays put on by the expression department remarks that the plays are characterized by the splendid acting. In these graduate recitals we are to be given the opportunity to see and hear at their best some of the stars in these plays. The recital programs are as follows:

March 18

The Merry Merry Cuckoo - Marks
Ada Belle Campbell
Quality Street - - - Barrie
Alice Rhea
The Valiant - - - - - Hall
Forrest Robertson

April 15

Jeanne d'Arc - - - Mackays
Mary White
The Wedding - - Kirkpatrick
Roberta Hickman

Graduates and Post-Graduates in Piano Will Supply Five Recitals.

There will be two graduate and three post-graduate recitals in piano this Spring. The names of those in the music department who will appear in graduate recitals are: Anita Allen and Lois Miles; post-graduates are Marian Johnson, Fancher Smartt, and Garnet Manges. The first recital will be given by Garnet Manges on Monday night, April 1; the others will follow on April 22, May 6, May 13, and June 1.

Class Lessons

The class lessons henceforth to be given by Miss Hale on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock began last Monday. In these lessons an opportunity is furnished to the pupils to appear before one another and to become familiar with the compositions of the most celebrated composers. Anyone desiring to attend these informal meetings will be welcomed, whether he is a member of the music department or not; these class lessons are open not only to the pupils of Miss Hale, but also to the pupils of the assistant teachers.

BERTHA M. RUSSELL, '24 WINS DISTINCTION AT UNIVERSITY OF BOSTON

Word has come to the Hill of a notable distinction that has come to Miss Bertha M. Russell, '24, who is working for her Master's degree in the school of dramatic art of Boston University. The religious play written by Miss Russell has been adjudged the best presented by a student in the school this year and is to be given public presentation by the Fine Arts Auxiliary as their Easter production. It will be directed and costumed by professionals and a stage set made for it by a professional designer.

The play called "The Feast of Faith" is a one-act production requiring about forty minutes for production. The story is the story of the maiden Rhoda and her share in the miracle of Peter's release from prison.

Miss Russell was prominent in dramatic and speech work during her college career. She won the T. T. Alexander Prize and the Bates Prize in Oratory, was a member of the Maryville College Players and graduated in Public Speaking. Since her graduation she has been teaching at Central High School in Chattanooga where she has been in charge of Public Speaking and Dramatics.

Brilliant Suggestions Plentiful Concerning Pearsons Walk Repair

Following Ideas Guaranteed Practical by Their Proponents.

Highland Eko;
Deer Editer—

I am only a freshman, but I was considerable intrested in yure riteup pertaning to the miniatoor lakes which form on the walk leeding to Pearsons Hall whenever the rainfall presipitates itself downward. To be frank and honust with you, I am convinced that this task is one reciquiring the brain of a Seenyur—but sinse there are no brains of that descripshun around as I rite this letter, I will undertake to make a helpwurthy suggestion.

I believe that the Seenyur males should be organized into squads. Each squad should be ecquipped with blotters, and just after each rain, they should proceed to blot up the bodees of water. Then the blotters cood be wrung out and laundered carefully by the girls, and if kept away from the mothz, wood serve a long time. Spongez cood be used, too, but they wood be much more expensive, both in inishul cost and upkeep, and then they are very, very hard to iron, on account of there pecooliar construction and lak of strate lines.

To cleer up eny queschun that may be razed as to where wood the blotters come from in the furst place—I wood sugjest that each Seenyur let it be nown that he is thinking about buying some life inshoorance, and enuf blotters wood be received thru the male to last menny a day.

Thanking you for this chanse of expressing myself without being afreight, I remain

Bob West suggests turning the walk over and using the other side. He says it couldn't be much worse. If this is impossible he would endorse the segregation of all chewing gum from Baldwin Hall which could not only be used for paving the walk, but also for repairing the leaks in the roof of the swimming pool.

—H2O—

Bob Klutz has a simple and effective suggestion. He says that when the walk is submerged everyone should stalk along vigorously, setting the foot squarely in the center of each puddle. In this way the walk would be kept dry by the splash system. Really, it seems to us that this idea is old,—at least we've been hitting the middle of the puddles consistently,—hardly on purpose, however.

—H2O—

Hayes Williams believes there is enough rain here to make water power feasible if the receptive power of this walk for rain were made useful by the construction of a dam

Annual Life Work Conference Ended

Many Noted Leaders Spoke to Students Regarding The Choice of Their Vocation.

The Annual Life Work Conference just ending has been one of the most successful of its kind. This conference is held at Maryville each year under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. in order to guide students in the selection of their life work. For this purpose leading men and women over the country were selected as leaders.

One of these leaders was Mr. Gilbert R. Lovell of New York, who addressed the student body in chapel Friday morning on the subject, "Choosing One's Life Vocation". Mr. Lovell spoke at the Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday morning at the regular church hour.

Another interesting leader of the conference was Dr. Elmer Gabbard who spoke Friday morning in the chapel on "The Business of Life". Dr. Gabbard is pastor of the Fifth Presbyterian Church of Knoxville.

Dr. John Timothy Stone spoke in chapel Saturday morning on "Facing the Future". Dr. Stone is one of the most prominent Presbyterian ministers in the United States. He was pastor of Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church in Baltimore for nine years, and is now pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and president of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary. Dr. Stone made an address in the chapel Saturday night on "Making the Most of Life". He also spoke at the New Providence Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

Group Meetings

After chapel services Friday and Saturday mornings, addresses were made to different groups, by leaders in various lines of work. Most of the students attended some one of these group meetings both Friday and Saturday.

Dr. Clifford E. Barbour of Knoxville addressed the undecided group Friday morning and Dr. Stone a similar group Saturday. Dr. Stone also addressed the group interested in the ministry Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Zolly Howard, editor of the Knoxville News-Sentinel, gave some useful advice to those who might take up journalism, and those desiring a broader view on life work.

Dr. Avent spoke to the large number of students interested in the teaching profession. He also met with Dr. Barnes' psychology class, since Dr. Barnes was ill Saturday.

Mr. H. B. Witham, a Professor in the Law School of the University of Tennessee, addressed the students planning to make law their profession. There were two young ladies in this group.

Mr. Gilbert R. Lovell spoke on foreign missions to one group and Mrs. Margaret J. Hoff on home missions to another group.

Mr. Paul B. Parker met with those interested in coaching Friday.

Those interested in the study of medicine met with Dr. R. B. Wood of Knoxville.

Mrs. Verton M. Queener met with the girls desiring to know more of physical education. Miss Ruth E. Phingst met with those interested in religious education Friday morning and met with the social service and business groups Saturday.

Miss Ellen Cowan, a graduate of Maryville in 1928 who has been doing home demonstration work in Kentucky since graduation came back for conferences concerning household management and home economics.

A great many students took the opportunity of hearing Mr. Henry G. Trent on business problems.

Miss Laura Hale of our own college met with those who were especially interested in the art of music.

Private Conferences

Perhaps best of all were the many private interviews that students took advantage of with these experienced leaders. "Y" members were assigned to help the leaders get in closer touch with the students in a systematic way. Private interviews were arranged for through representatives of the leaders. This enabled a great many students to take advantage of the opportunity of talking over the problems that confronted them.

It is difficult to estimate the amount of good accomplished in the Life Work Conference, but it certainly seems to pay for the effort expended on it.

Another Chance for Frosh

Freshmen who wish to compete with the present freshman apprentices for a position on the staff of next year's Echo will be given an opportunity to do so during the last two weeks of this month. This provision is made in article 3, section II, of the Highland Echo regulations. Any freshmen who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity should notify the editor this week.

—O—

Staff Changes

March 1—The vacancy left when Edna Baither went forth from the staff was filled today at the meeting of the committee on staff member selection. Forrest Robertson, who served since the first of the school year as junior associate editor, was moved up into the position of staff editor. This places him in general charge of the front page copy: Five or six reporters will be directly responsible to him.

Edith Nash was elected to the position of junior-associate editor in the place of Mr. Robertson. We believe that Miss Nash will prove to be a valuable asset to the paper.

Incidentally

——The choir has new chairs. Now our choristers can shift their positions without making any movement audibly prominent.

——The Glee Singers' concert at Everett High School was called off on account of inclement weather. Friday night was a great night for ducks.

——The Y. M. C. A. fellowship banquet will be held tomorrow night at the St. John's Episcopal Church.

CINCI CONSERVATORY HONORS MISS HALE

The Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, acting upon the recommendation of its official Board of Directors, has just notified Miss Hale, head of our music department, that for the study she has done since graduation they have voted to confer upon her the degree of Bachelor of Pedagogy, and have requested that she be present at the commencement exercises of the Conservatory early in June to receive special recognition of their action.

Miss Hale has spent many Summers studying in Cincinnati and other large conservatories under the greatest masters and is truly worthy of the high honor bestowed upon her by her Alma Mater.

The fine work of our music department and the high standards maintained in the course of study are abundant proof that the action taken by the Conservatory is a recognition which Miss Hale highly deserves and we heartily congratulate her.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

The battle over juries has been launched.

—:—

Non-decision debates are better because every debater goes home conscious of victory.

—:—

These non-decision debates remind me very much of the debates in the Senate between Senator Borah and Senator Reed.

—:—

We have a reversal of the order of court in these debates. The "moonshiners" get to hear the jury on trial.

—:—

If the late comers had just been sitting down in their chairs as they came sliding them in it would have looked like a train of box-cars in the days of hoboes.

—:—

Bob and Travis will invade the camp of the enemy Tuesday night when they go to Tusculum College.

—:—

I think we should adopt that old house-wife plan: "You can't come home unless you bring the bacon."

—:—

We will also celebrate Mr. Hoover's inauguration by holding the tryouts for college orators today, Monday.

—:—

If you have a radio, be sure to tune in for Mr. Hoover's inaugural address or one of our orations at least.

—:—

That muttering you hear is static.

—:—

The debaters are meeting once each week now to talk over matters and show that they are backing each other up as one team. Good strong support from the audience will help to quiet the knees while on the platform.

—:—

It was interesting the way, Bob fooled the opposition by rubbing the back of his head like he had forgotten.

—:—

This was just one of his old tricks. He always fools the "Teachers" that way.

—:—

The next debate will be a decision debate. The dramatic point will be when those two men race across the platform.

—:—

That may be dramatic but the suspense is over.

"That's nothing; neither have we seen the sun shine like this for several weeks."—Roger Rusk.

"In New York there are more Germans than in any other city except Berlin, more Jews than in any other city, and more Irish than in any other city except Naples."—Billy Mayer.

"A young man's fancy turns in Spring to what a young woman's fancy always turns to."—Hayden Laster.

"She made him what he is today."—Leland Gilmore.

Maryville Nosed Out One Point In Smoky Mountain Conference Tournament

Basketball Season Over, and Deck is Cleared for Baseball, Track, Tennis

Intermural Honors Still Uncertainty

Storey and Simpson Take Their Men Into Finals Tuesday.

The finals of the Men's Inter-Mural basketball tournament, from present indications, will be played off tomorrow afternoon. The finalists are Capt. Simpson's team and Capt. Storey's team, and a hard battle is looked for. Both these quintettes have been going strong—eating up all opposition.

Following is a summary of the games played thus far: (The teams will be referred to according to the names of their captains.)

In the preliminaries Pope defeated H. Williams, Blazer defeated Wilson, Storey defeated McDonald, Anderson defeated G. Gabbard.

Tri-finals—Blazer defeated Pope, Storey defeated Anderson, and Simpson, being drawn in an odd bracket, did not have to play.

Semi-finals— Simpson was drawn to play Blazer, and won out. There being only three semi-finalists, Storey went into the finals without playing.

Finals—Storey versus Simpson.

The Coeds Explain Aerial Dart For Us

Much Interest Being Displayed In Modern Game. "Glorified Ping-Pong" a Misnomer

Just now it is quite the thing for a girl to be able to "paddle a dart". One may start any conversation right by asking: "Had your game today, old thing?" And yet, some have probably not given up a few minutes sleep or a little moonshining in order to gain a fuller knowledge of this celebrated game. It is for these that we reveal the technicalities of the game.

The game of aerial dart may be played either outdoors or indoors. The equipment is simple: a net, a paddle, and a dart. The top of the net must be six or eight feet from the ground; in lieu of a net, a cord will do. The dart is a very small device made of rubber and feathers which help keep it moving in a straight course. The dart has two characteristics which may be summed up in the words "elusive" and "ornery". Fifteen points win a game. Points can only be made by a member of the team which serves. The idea is for the one who serves to knock the dart over the net into the court of the opponent. If it hits the floor on the other side, or should the opponent fail to return a serve, the server gets one point for his side. The game may be played with one dart and two players, or one dart and four players. The dart is not allowed to bounce as in tennis, but must be kept in the air.

Highlanders Stage Thrilling Comeback, But Lose To Emory Henry By 27-26 Score

Waddell's Long Shots Furnish Thrill of Tournament as Maryville Pulls Out of Hole in The Second Half.

Kingsport, Tennessee—(Special to the Highland Echo)—The Highlanders lost the Smoky Mountain Tournament here tonight by a score of 27-26, and furnished one of the most spectacular comebacks in cage history. The half ended 18-4 with Emory and Henry in the lead, and Maryville looking mighty bad. However, as Coach Honaker told the boys in the dressing room between halves, no team could be as lucky for a whole game as the Emory quintet was during that first period, and the Highlanders would find the basket by the law of averages, for they surely hadn't been able to loop them in up to that time.

In the second half Maryville got working together and slowly but surely pulled the score up to a tie, with "Suitcase" Waddell tossing the ball through the basket from all directions, and the rest of the team giving him a world of room for his shots. The guards were doing great work in holding the Emory-Henry men to a low score during this time. Bird and White were also helping out in the scoring.

During this exhibition of the Maryville spirit, the crowd was in a frenzy. The small handful of Highland rooters outdid themselves in their determination to see the game go their way. Maryville lead in the last two minutes by 26 to 24, but Emory caged one and tied the score with a minute to go. The playing was fast, but with the timer's gun in the air, there was a question as to whether Bird, of Maryville, was charging or was blocked, or, as Syler decided, out of bounds, Murray, head referee, called a foul on Bird. The game ended with the shooting of the foul.

Whether or not the boys would have won in an extra period is an interesting speculation, but those who witnessed the game from the stands could not be convinced otherwise. The fact that Maryville lost a close game in no measure detracts from the statement that it was the best game that has been seen in this part of the country this year.

The Highlanders played consistent basketball all through the game, although in the first half their shots rolled off the rim, bounced out and did everything but fall in the basket. The Emory-Henry five played tight ball, finding the basket too consistently to last. They have a fast team and deserve a great deal of credit. During the second period, however, the Highlanders completely outplayed the foe in every department of the game. Vincent played his best game of the season. J. D. Davis and Bird, playing their last game for the Orange and Garnet, put up a real fight—the kind you read about. Captain Reed did not play the entire game, but scrapped for the ball with a will that set a pace for his men, while he was there. "Slim" Waddell took the prize for the evening, collecting 15 points and high point honors. Waddell missed very few of his long shots, and played a game that will be talked about in basketball circles here for a long while.

The line-up follows:

Name	No.	Name	No.
Hale (c.)	17	Reed (c),	3
Farmer,	17	J. Davis,	7
Pendleton,	3	Waddell,	11
Bailey,	8	K. Davis,	4
March,	15	Bird,	9
Ashworth,	11	Delaney,	12
Moore,	18	White,	8
Mackey,	16	Vincent,	10
		Calloway,	6

WRESTLING MEET

February 28—The wrestling meet held here tonight was a big success. Maryville's matmen won by a score of 18-8, but did not have everything their way by any means. Every match was full of excitement and the fans added a lot of enthusiasm to the meet.

Benny Prince, the flyweight representative, deserves special mention, since it was his first appearance on the canvas square. He was substituting for Jimmy Cox who had an injury which prevented him from participating. Although Ben lost his match, he showed plenty of real fight.

The prize hold of the evening was demonstrated by Art Shaw, who threw his man in four minutes, using a combination half nelson and cradle hold.

Lusby Nick's match would have been the fastest bout on the card if his opponent had not suffered a pulled shoulder in the first few minutes.

The real fight of the meet took place when Captain Watkins spent seven minutes trying to get his man to wrestle on the mat, so that his holds might be of some use to him. Time and again the Highlanders' head man would have the visitor in a dangerous position, and then allow him to crawl off the mat, and obtain a break. Finally, however, Farmer persuaded the man to wrestle on the mat, and won by a fall.

Walt Headrick tried in vain to find the combination that would pin Kelly's shoulders to the mat, but Kelly was too good, and won the referee's decision.

The final bout between the two big boys was pretty even. Neither seemed to be able to get the other in an advantageous position, and they did most of their wrestling on their feet. Don Wilson, Maryville's pride, had defeated Conner in Knoxville earlier in the season but was not able to close in on him this time. They were compelled to face each other for two extra three minute periods, but even then the referee could not name a winner, so the match was called a draw.

Billie Crawford did not get to wrestle because Knoxville's man did not want to meet him tonight, due to an injury of some kind, and Maryville received 3 points.

TWELVE ENTRIES IN ORATORICAL CONTEST

Last week's Highland Echo carried an announcement of the Bates Oratorical Contest for men of the junior and senior classes. The following men have signified their intention of entering the contest.

Edward DeHaven, Hayden Laster, Jesse Peirce, Frank Baker, E. Osborne, Forrest Robertson, Bob Anderson, Algie Sutton, Florian Hopkins, John Weinand, Walter Courtenay, Edward Driscoll, Hubert Welsh.

According to Professor Hunter this is the largest number to enter the contest in several years.

The Old Timer Says

Billy Crawford sure must have looked "in the pink of condition" Thursday night. At least to Knoxville.

Slim Waddell is going to give the batters some practice again this year.

Never could figure out why the girls held secret basketball practice until I saw one of them in the outfits they play in, the other day.

Imagine a girl's chagrin when she arrives at the gym to find that she has forgotten to wear—no fool'n'—her middie tie.

One of the girls on the way to the "synthetic dancing" class claims they all dress that way. Well, now, of course—.

But then. I've had my credulity taxed quite often in such things.

Basketball season is over, and we surely are proud of our team. Congratulations, Louie, on the way you piloted the boys, and the example of strict training and fair play you set.

After the first three rounds Thursday night I heard some disillusioned spectator say to his neighbor, "I didn't know the state allowed boxing without gloves."

FINAL ATTEMPT TO WIN THETA ALPHA PHI CUP TONIGHT

Tonight the Athenians make their final attempt to win the highly coveted twenty inch trophy cup which the Maryville Chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatic fraternity, presents to the Literary Society which stages the worthiest mid-winter of the year. The cup must be won three times, but not necessarily in succession, by any society before it becomes the permanent possession of that society. The cup was won last year by the Alpha Sigma Literary Society on the merits of their play, "So This is London."

The judgment of mid-winters is based on selection of play, stage management and scenery, and acting. The judges are: Dr. E. R. Hunter, Mrs. Jennie Edwards Veech, Mrs. Helen Schiebler Cartwright, Nellie Caldwell, and Jesse Peirce. Ony the faculty members of this committee are permitted to vote on the selection of the play.

MARYVILLE-Y.M.C.A. GAME

February 26—The Highlanders closed the season in rare style tonight, taking the measure of the fast-stepping Knoxville Y. M. C. A. basketeers by a 37-20 score. The date was originally scheduled with the redoubtable Emory and Henry team, which either unfortunately or prudently found it necessary to cancel. So the Knoxville "Y" boys cheerfully volunteered to come over and help furnish the entertainment.

Honors between the two teams in the two previous games have been even—but Maryville successfully demonstrated her superiority in tonight's clash. Knoxville "Y" battled hard at all points of the game but could not cope with the sturdy defense and lightning passwork of the locals.

The first half was evenly contested—both teams fighting hard to break through the others defense—and ended 10-8, Maryville leading. But in the second stanza, things took on a different aspect—and the Scots looked like a bunch of Flying Finns as they scored point after point, to finish far in the lead, 37-20. The whole team, played well—especially in the second half, while Knoxville "Y" made her most serious bid for victory in the first half.

The line-up:

Maryville		Knoxville "Y"
Bird, 8	f.	Burge, 3
Delaney, 1	f.	Cox, 4
Waddell, 7	c.	Bennett, 5
J. Davis, 5	g.	Shanton, 4
Reed (c.), 2	g.	Mitchell, 2

Substitutes: Maryville, K. Davis 8, White 6, Vincent, Calloway; Knoxville: Murphy 2, Snodderly.

Brilliant Suggestions Plentiful Concerning Pearsons Walk Repair

at one end. In this way a hydro-electric plant would take the place of the present smoke factory, whence cometh our heat.

—H2O—

Underwood suggests that the walk be covered with cinders. Late comers to breakfast make a track of it anyhow.

—H2O—

Pope has a novel idea. He suggests that the class of 1929 build a new walk and leave the old one for use by freshmen only. This would probably be ruled out, however, on the grounds of cruelty.

—H2O—

Courtenay suggests life-bouys at all the principal holes with Jack Coughlin on duty at all times during a rain. Moonshiners would be required to wear a green light on the port and a red light on the starboard on rainy nights. This would prevent disastrous collisions.

—H2O—

The undersigned would suggest that, since the swimming pool adjacent to Bartlett Hall would seem to be fated to continue indefinitely a thing of the past and of the future, but not of the present, a long-felt need and vacancy in the lives of all could be filled by constructing a swimming pool from the aforementioned depressions in the Pearsons walk. A few muscular and loyal freshmen armed with picks would suffice to break up the concrete and join the depressions of the walk into a contiguous and homogeneous excavation, and we need but rely on the customary and prevalent atmospheric precipitation to keep it filled. Of course, as the Echo remarked, this would entail building a new walk to serve the ends of perambulation to and from Pearsons.

College Widow Gives Moonshiners on Hill Some Public Notice

A discussion of moonshiners isn't complete without at least a mention of that little group of loyal souls who do their moonshining strictly through the correspondence method. Those who look with longing eyes at the brow of the Hill on Monday afternoon and at the balcony Monday night; whose thoughts are always on the Dear Departed; and whose by-word is, "This time last year——."

Altogether, the institution of moonshining is a noble one, and it will continue as long as cedars grow on College Hill. For who could imagine Maryville without it?

IDEAL GIRL PROGRAM

On Sunday, March 10, the girls who attend the Y. W. C. A. meeting will find out what characteristics and qualities Maryville College boys think the Ideal Girl must possess. Six college boys have been asked to write descriptions of their Ideal Girl and these descriptions will be read at the Y.W. meeting, Sunday. Of course, the boys' names will not be attached to their papers. Girls, let us see how we measure up to the standards which our boy friends hold for the Ideal Girl.

Novel Scoreboard In Gym

The gymnasium of Kentucky Wesleyan College has a novel feature in the form of an electrically operated score board. It is so arranged that both teams are presented with their lineup and their position. The switches are worked from the press table, flashing the names so that the spectators can see just who made the particular play. The time is given by minutes in a clock-shaped figure at the top of the board, showing just how much time remains in that part of the game. This scoreboard was patented by an alumnus of the college.

Girls Hear Essays On "The Ideal Girl"

Intelligence and Good Looks Stressed in Portrayal of Ideal Girl.

BLONDES NOT PREFERRED

Knowledge of Home Ec a Real Necessity; Boys Take No Chances.

Y.W. had an unusually large attendance Sunday afternoon. The attraction may be attributed not to the glorious spring sunshine but to the unique subject for discussion, that of the Ideal Girl. One of the professors and five boys from the student body were asked to write essays on this subject, which promised to be both interesting and helpful to the girls.

By glancing over the group of girls assembled and by using one's imagination, the different attitudes that the girls took in regard to the subject of an ideal girl could be readily discerned. First, there were the proverbial "moonshiners" who wore an expression of complete placedness, seeming to silently shout: "I know what His ideal is—yet I am curious to know what others think." The next group of girls present were those who earnestly desired to know what these boys' ideals are, and possibly many, after hearing the ideals, resolved to acquire a thorough knowledge of home economics and become, as near as possible, a five-foot-five brunette. Finally there was the indifferent, defiant type who appeared as if they would feel much better about the matter if they could say to the jurymen: "Since I've heard what your ideal girl is, it will be a pleasure for me to give you my opinion of an ideal boy." It makes no difference, however, what attitudes these girls had regarding the subject, all were equally impressed by these essays. Some of the general impressions the girls received are the following:

1. In order to be ideal, a girl must be a Christian.

2. The ideal girl is usually a good looking brunette about five feet two, proportionately built.

3. A thorough knowledge of home economics is necessary—aye, even vital, according to one of the writers, who asserted that numberless young men were reaching premature graves because of improper food given them by social pups.

4. To be ideal one must endeavor to develop a charming, pleasing personality to go with one's looks. It seems that Dumb Doras, however beautiful they may be, are a degenerating race. And girls, do not take too seriously the statement that girls possessing both personality and looks are as scarce today as the famous Siamese twins!

5. If you are not a lover of outdoor sports, acquire a taste for such without further delay. Do not neglect this point for it was repeatedly stressed.

6. To be ideal one must be intelligent. Many girls were impressed by this statement: "My ideal girl must be intelligent and good looking. The greatest of these is good looking, because her face cannot be changed, but she can be taught something by me."

7. Be economical. It seems that some of the young men harbor gruesome visions of great financial losses and bankrupt sales as a direct result of the incompetence and deficiency of their future wives.

8. To be an ideal girl the following adjectives and phrases should apply to one: bright, vivacious, earnest, charming, inspiring, efficient, good looking, sweet, good natured, kind, a lover of home life and children, Mother's chum, Daddy's queen, a pleasing manner, and gobs of horse sense! !

In addition to the above points which were much more elaborately enumerated and fully discussed by the boys, the girls learned that "woman holds and controls the destiny of mankind" and also that "Dan Cupid, when he hits the mark, always Mrs. it."

Naturally after having heard of the ideal girl from six representative types of the opposite sex, the girls needed a few simple words of consolation and encouragement. These were aptly supplied by Mrs. Clopton who told the girls that if they won their husbands by their personalities and were honest and frank in everything, they (boy and girl) would be happy.

STUDENT COUNCIL HAS NEW PRESIDENT

March 13—Due to the resignation of the former president, Elbert Thompson, the Student Council held an election tonight. Harold Holman, senior, was chosen by the body as their presiding officer for the remainder of the school year.

Thompson stated as his reason for resigning that he had too much work on his hands and was not able to devote the required time to the office.

Holman is a popular man on the Hill and is a worthy representative of the student body.

Vagabonds Kept Busy Presenting Programs

Etowah Appearance Delayed by 17 Feet Rise in Little Tennessee.

March 15—The Dixie Vagabonds presented their fifth complete prog- Etowah tonight. The entire evening's program was received enthusiastically. On account of the Little Tennessee River being up seventeen feet above normal level, the Niles ferry was not running. It was necessary to telephone for cars to come after them to the other side of the river. The Vagabonds crossed the river on the railroad bridge.

The return trip was made on the Flamingo with special orders to stop for the quartet to get off just this side of the river.

Saturday, March 9, the quartet left the Hill and put on a program in Greeneville. Sunday they sang in both morning and evening church services. After a varied day of exercise, loafing, and sleep Monday, they put on a program in the auditorium of the East Tennessee State Teachers' College at Johnson City. The largest audience before which the Vagabonds had sung, outside of their appearances here on the Hill, was assembled to be entertained.

The program was the best so far to be put on. Various members of the audience came back-stage after the program to compliment the quartet. Miss Ruth Gamble of Maryville who heard the program says it was by far the best program of the year at the Teachers' College.

"Father" Clouser, who has changed his headquarters from Maryville to Johnson City, assisted before and during the program. He supplied bed clothing, stationery, shoe polish, etc., before the program and tried in vain to supply a spot light during the program.

Expression Department Gives Stage Furniture

Gifts Will Reduce Production Cost of Plays.

During the past week, Maryville College has been the recipient of a very lovely and useful gift of furniture from the Expression Department. This furniture consists namely of a davenport, two chairs and a table, and is to be used whenever needed in the college dramatic productions. Such a gift not only aids in the stage setting itself, but also lowers the cost of production. Heretofore, the organizations giving plays were forced to borrow furniture, but with this timely donation such borrowing and consequent higher cost of production will be avoided. Organizations will have the privilege of using this furniture with no charge whatsoever. Not satisfied with stopping at this gift, the Expression Department, according to Mrs. West, will add more articles for the stage as soon as possible.

Another improvement which has been made by the Expression department is the installation of a telephone to be used in plays. It is so wired that it can be placed at any desired position on the stage. This effective type of wiring also permits the sound of the bell to come naturally from the telephone itself, so that there is no amateurish or back-stagey effect.

Sarah Finds Evidence Of Literary Progress

Prof. Ellis and Miss DeHaven Proud of Books, Both Old and New.

(by Sarah Moore)

It is distinctly embarrassing to wait one's turn at the librarian's desk in Thaw Hall, and then when Professor Ellis comes hurrying toward you, all set to serve you as soon as possible and make way for the next—under those circumstances it is distinctly embarrassing, I repeat, to falter out at length, "I would like to see you about—the library."

"The library?" inquires Professor Ellis politely.

"The library", I repeat helpfully.

Then there follows a conversation in which neither Professor Ellis nor myself knows what I want.

Then Professor Ellis suggests, "Would you like to know something about the number of books here, and the kind of books, and how many are being read, and matters of that sort?"

I am quite relieved. Prof. Ellis has penetration. He knew what I wanted before I knew myself.

Acquiring the information was easy after that, and I learned many facts concerning our library.

There are now 30,393 volumes on the shelves in Thaw Hall. That is a good start for a library, one is obliged to admit. Of that number 5,664 have been added in the last six years. Most of the new books have been purchased, but a good number have been contributed by friends of the college.

"How many books have been added in the past year?" I asked.

Professor Ellis went to his file and took out a paper. "Here is my report for 1927-1928."

I read, "Books acquired during year 1,341; periodicals, 133."

"You would be interested to compare the report of 1922," added Professor Ellis.

The report for that year read, "Books acquired, 179; periodicals, 84."

"That's a respectable progress, rather," smiled the librarian.

"But do the students really use these books," I inquired.

For answer, Mr. Ellis pointed again to the report of 1928, which read, "Books and magazines 'charged out', 40,938." Then he walked to his desk and pulled out a long drawerful of library cards. There were approximatey 250 of them. "Those are the books now in students' hands. The number of books charged out does not vary much. Every Saturday we have a large number of calls for fiction and biography which the students read over the week-end."

"Does each department of the college order as many books as it wishes?"

"Well, hardly. However, there is a certain sum set aside for each department according to the number of students. Then that department orders as it chooses. We are from time to time adding new books

Graduate Recital Tonight In Chapel

Everyone Invited to Program Given by Three Students of Expression.

The first expression recital of the season will be held tonight at eight o'clock in the chapel. Three students will appear in this graduate recital: Ada Belle Campbell, Alice Rhea, and Forrest Robertson.

Ada Belle Campbell will read "The Merry Merry Cuckoo", a one-act play by Marks. Ada Belle has played both in "The Lucky Break" and "Graustark"; she was stage manager for the play, "Applesauce".

Alice Rhea will read a cutting of the three-act play, "Quality Street", by Barrie. We are all well acquainted with the excellent talent Alice has contributed in the leading feminine roles in "The Thirteenth Chair" and "The Poor Nut", this year.

The third number on the program is, "The Valient" by Hall, to be read by Forrest Robertson. Forrest's ability has been displayed to us in the past in the plays, "The Lucky Break", "Graustark", "Romeo and Juliet", and, "The Thirteenth Chair."

The outstanding talent of each of these readers will speak for itself tonight. The Expression Department cordially invites everyone to attend.

NEWS FROM THE OTHER COLLEGES

U. K. To Give Opera

Plans are being made for the first opera in the history of the University of Kentucky. Shubert's Rosamund will be presented during the week of April 15, sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha, men's honorary music fraternity, and Phi Beta, women's honorary musical and dramatic sorority. One hundred people will be included in the cast and a special chorus of dancers will be incorporated in the opera.

Ten Sport Commandments

1.—Thou shalt not quit.
2.—Thou shalt not alibi.
3.—Thou shalt not gloat over winning.
4.—Thou shalt not take unfair advantage.
5.—Thou shalt not be a rotten loser.
6.—Thou shalt not ask odds thou art unwilling to give.
7.—Thou shalt always be ready to give thine opponent the shade.
8. Thou shalt not under-estimate an opponent, nor over-estimate thyself.
9.—Remember that the game is the thing, and he who thinketh otherwise is a mucker, and no true sportsman.
10.—Honor the game thou playest, for he who playeth the game straight and hard, wins even when he loses.—The Southern.

JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET

The annual social function of Maryville College is to be held on May 2 in the form of the Junior-Senior Banquet.

Present plans are to hold the banquet at Whittle Springs Hotel, Knoxville. Definite announcement of the place awaits the consent of the faculty.

It has been decided that the members of the junior and senior classes who go to the banquet shall go in busses and not in hired cars as previously. The decision was made partly from an economic standpoint.

Work on Theta Alpha Phi Play in Progress

"Beyond The Horizon" Includes Stars of Past Plays.

The daily grill for the society mid-winters has ceased, and there has been a rest for the actors, but it is not to last. The senior benefit number will be a play given by the Theta Alpha Phi dramatic fraternity. Eugene O'Neills', "Beyond the Horizon" has been selected by the committee and the characters have been chosen. At present the rehearsals for the first act are well under way.

"Beyond the Horizon" reveals the love and passion of a sea people transplanted from their natural habitat to a farm house in the open country.

As evidence of the fact that this play will be played up to the standard of Theta Alpha Phi plays we need only to introduce a few of those now working on the play. Mrs. Helen Cartwright is director. She directed "Applesauce" for the College Players and everyone remembers its success. Mrs. Jennie Veach is taking the part of Ruth. Both Mrs. Veach and Mrs. Cartwright are instructors in the department of expression

The two brothers who are at first as "thick as theives" are Frank Baker and Jesse Peirce. They are both remembered in plays of this year. Evelyn Sherrod is the mother, Mrs. Mayo, and Forrest I. Robertson is "Pa". They played the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Crosby in "The Thirteenth Chair". Also Mr. Robertson was Prince Gabriel in "Graustark" and Miss Sherrod starred in "Craig's Wife".

Ed Sprouse who is taking the part of Dick, the sea captain will be remembered for the part he played in "Little Old New York", but better for his part in "So This is London", given last year.

College Orators Are Chosen In Tryouts

Robertson and Fitzgerald Will Represent M. C. At Lexington.

The final representatives of the college in forensics were chosen Monday in the contest for College Orators. Forrest I. Robertson and Mary Fitzgerald were selected, both of whom are from North Carolina. Miss Fitzgerald won forty dollars in gold as prize for second place in the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest in 1927. Mr. Robertson is a junior and a member of the debate team.

There were four participants in the contests, two boys and two girls. Mr. Robertson spoke on the subject, "Give the Laborer a Chance". Walter R. Courtenay spoke next on the subject, "The Home". Following this was Miss Fitzgerald's "The New South." The last was given by Lucy Lee Silcox on "National Apostacy".

The judges for the contest were Professor Knapp, Professor Queener, Professor Davis, Professor Howell, and Professor Kiger.

The East Tennessee Oatorical Contest will be held at Maryville this year, April 10. Also these representatives will go with Professor Queener to the Pi Kappa Delta Convention to be held at Transylvania University, Lexington, Kentucky, April 8 and 9.

Mrs. G. P. Cartwright has recovered from her recent illness, and has taken up her duties as instructor in the Expression Department.

Season of Debates Is Well Under Way

Maryville Debaters Suffer Defeat in Opening Tilt.

JURIES UNDER FIRE

Next Debate at Chattanoogo on March 18.

Since the last issue of the Highland Echo was published debating has been in full swing. Some have been non-decision debates and others have been decisions against us but this has affected neither the ardor of the debaters nor the attendance of friends.

Lose to King

For the first time in several years Maryville lost the King-Tusculum trophy in a triangular debate March 5. Last year and the year before Maryville won from both colleges. All the debates this year are on the Pi Kappa Deta question, resolved: That a substitute for trial by jury should be adopted.

Our negative team composed of William Graham and Forrest I. Robertson lost to King College on the home platform. The two to one decision was not an overwhelming defeat for our team. Mr. Graham made his first intercollegiate debate, and acquitted himself very well. There were some breaks against us.

Professor George A. Knapp presided over the meeting, and Professor H. G. Myer, and Professor A. M. Withers of the University of Tennessee and Professor Miller of Knox College acted as judges.

Lose to Tusculum

Our affirmative team composed of two men, Robert W. Jones and Travis Hitt lost at Tusculum. The decision was a one-man decision. Robert and Travis had debated together for the opening debate of the season. Professor Queener accompanied them to Greeneville.

Open Forum

The next debate in order was the Open Forum debate with Centre College March 11. This was a single debate,—an annual debate with Centre alternating in its place to be held. It was the fifth of such debates. An interesting thing about it this year was that it was participated in only by sophomores.

Maryville had the negative in this debate and was represented by Travis Hitt and Jesse James. The plans of the debate varied from the ordinary plan in that it was thrown open at the end to any one in the audience who wished to ask either side questions. A number of questions were asked from the audience. The debate as a whole was encouraging.

Girls Triangular Debate

The next was the girls' Carson-Newman-Teachers' College-Maryville debate of March 15. An interesting feature of this debate was that all teams traveled from home. Another was its method of being judged. A debate between any two of the three was judged by five members of the faculty from the other chool. The contest on the Maryville platform was between Carson-Newman and East Tennessee Teachers College. Miss Pouder and Miss Ichaer debated the affiirmative for the East Tennessee Teachers, while Miss Brown and Miss Jenkin upheld the negative for Carson-Newman.

Dr. Orr presided and the judges were Professors Knapp, Davis, Kiger, Howell, and Queener. The decision was three to two in favor of the negative for Carson-Newman.

Representing Maryville in this debate were Miss Coy and Miss Renegar with the affirmative at Carson-Newman. Miss Sharpe and Miss Mevis upheld the negative at East Tennesee Teachers College.

The next debate will be a boys' debate with the University of Chattanooga at Chattanooga March 18. For this trip William Graham and Jesse James have been selected. Professor Queener will go with them.

Book Due In Four Years

Several days ago a student in the California State Teachers College of Pennsylvania, walked out of the library with a book in which the return date was marked as usual. Imagine her surprise, however, on discovering that this date was February 29. By the time this date rolls around again, she will have had plenty of time to "digest" the book.

The Promptness Campaign

Since the installation of the new and accurate bell-ringing clock in the Dean's office, the faculty has been getting more and more in earnest about promptness. Dean Barnes recently told his Ethics class that he can now order the chapel doors locked when the tardy bell rings without a pang of conscience; he even beieves the plan is ethical. He explains, however, that the bells were previously rung by pushing a button in the office and then the pusher might have erred several seconds, thus unjustly depriving some students of their chapel privilege; now the bell rings exactly on time and late students must suffer the penalty of their tardiness here as in any other business.

The first morning that the door locking plan was tried caused over fifty cuts to be recorded against students who were late. The next morning there was an unusual amount of earnestness shown by all in getting to chapel on time. As the Dean would say, "the end justifies the means."

We hope they don't try any such plan at the dining hall. Such a thing would be "just too bad", especially at breakfast. There is one thing at the dining hall that we as students should remedy. That is the necessity for repeated ringing of the bell before sufficient quiet is secured for the returning of thanks. If everyone would stop walking or talking when the bell first rings, the business of eating would be expedited, more time would be gained for conversation and appearances would be vastly improved.

Incidentally

——Hall parlor doors are now standing open, inviting romantic moonshiners into cool sanctums for periods of exhibition to hall passers-by. Better not shut 'em, either, big boy!

——We hope all the moonshiners who were not mentioned in our article in the last Echo don't feel too much hurt. A college widow, or window, either, can't be expected to see and know everything.

——Chemistry offers its problems to everyone, especially freshmen. Prof. Griffitts says that never before has he had a class that absolutely could not digest them. Oh well, Chemistry is getting more complex all the time.

——The Glee Singers put on their concert at Everett High School Friday night, March 8. With the exception of a few songs which still require work, the program was very good. Jimmie Holland says it was the best program he has ever seen the Glee Singers put on.

——Before this concert there was a last minute rush for a chaperone for Fancher. After considerable telephoning to Miss Mollie at Dr. Stevenson's, Miss Gamble was secured to fill the vacancy.

——Frank Baker furnished fifteen minutes entertainment for the boys' Home Ec class while he tried to cut a chicken's leg off. Despite unfair tactics while Miss Meiselwitz' back was turned he was given a hearty round of applause when the tenacious member was finally amputated.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Mary Cohran says, "If I get a "B" in Ethics test this time, I'll just know the Lord gave it to me."

"Where did you find this wonderful 'follow-up' system? It would get money out of anybody."

"I simply compiled and adapted the requests for money my son sent me from college."

Walter: Betty, the book is just marvelous! When I get through reading it I think how puerile, how insignificant is man.

Betty J.: Huh! I don't have to wade through 400 pages to know that.

Cecil Hardison, among other members of the Workshop was preparing a synopsis of Act One of a Great Play. This is what he finally evolved:

1. Resistance
2. Insistence
3. Persistance
4. A kiss stance
5. Assistance
6. Desistance

"What kind of shoes d' you think I ought to wear with these golf hose?" "Hip boots."

Some boys sleep at home; others go to class.

In an exclusive interview with Jack Coughlin, our noted swimming instructor and rising John Barrymore, he gave the following information as to what girls had given him:—

Fits
Encouragement
Red Neckties
A Pain
Advice (sisterly and otherwise)
The Air.

"Celery is brain food", say dieticians. We can pass the buck gracefully, this time. Miss Darby's to blame for that "D" in—oh, well—those "D's".

Miss Keller (when Linton Coulter came in late to "e" class):

Mr. Coulter, I think I shall have to consider six tardies an absence.

Linton: Er ah, Miss Keller, I have a blister.

Vera Coy: First time I ever heard her called that.

ALUMNUS STUDIES JUVENILE MINDS

W. W. Cruze, '28, now taking graduate work in psychology at U. T., is engaged in research work concerning the minds of delinquent children.

Mr. Cruze is experimenting at the Juvenile court and Dentention Home in Knoxville to determine the relation of intelligence to delinquency. He is working for a Master of Science degree at the University of Tennessee. His master's thesis will be on the results of his investigations. He will also probably write an article for publication in some magazine. This is probably the first time such tests have been made in the State.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

These triangular debates are rather disastrous to the losers.

—:—

In the first triangular debate we held the fort better on the side of the triangle where we did not have any team.

—:—

If we had just had the decision before the debate began it would have been easier to prove that "judges" disagree.

—:—

We had only one judge at Tusculum. He was unanimously in favor of Tusculum.

—:—

King won over both Maryville and Tusculum, showing again the tyranny of Kings.

—:—

The height of sarcasm is to congratulate the loser on how well he did.

—:—

It is delightful to discuss a question in open forum style. Still, since you can't lose, you don't get that deserved kick out of it—afterwards.

—:—

The Open Forum gives the audience a chance to get a little information.

—:—

It is too bad the questions can't be asked the other way round.

We didn't know Jesse was a poet, however, until he gave that about the old maid who kissed the jury system.

—:—

For women the scene opens with the enemies of each other in charge of our platform.

—:—

The visiting schools just decided to arbitrate the question.

—:—

For variety in debates this year, instead of having more than one question, we just vary the form of judging.

—:—

Success always depends on good judgment anyway.

—:—

In time we hope to broadcast our debates so that everybody may get the benefit of them.

—:—

The last representatives in forensics have been chosen. These are the college orators.

—:—

Mary Fitzgerald will speak for the women. That will keep her busy.

—:—

In oratorical contests for men Forrest S. Robertson will represent Maryville.

Work Helps Grades

A recent survey at the Armour Institute of Technology disclosed the fact that students who earn part or all of their expenses get better grades than those who do no extra work. That is consolation to a number of us hard-working mortals.

Sophs Get Cage Title by Defeating Frosh 24-19

Coeds Attract Large Crowd as They Engage in Finals of Interclass Tournament.

The sophs have seen and conquered. The finals of the girls' interclass basketball tournament have been held since the last issue of the Echo, and they provided a highly exciting time for the crowd of spectators that was privileged to attend. The scoring was close throughout the game, neither team having more than a five point lead at any time.

Captain Cushman, of the soph sextet, was the outstanding star of the game, dropping in 14 points to lead in the scoring. Next in the scoring was Sarah Thomas, frosh forward, with ten tallies.

"Cricket" Foster, protege of Coach Veach of Maryville High last year, handled herself like a veteran and kept the scoring under control at all stages of the game.

Famous War Aviators As Technical Advisers In Filming "Lilac Time"

"Lilac Time" will be shown at the Palace Theatre next Thursday and Friday, March 21 and 22.

Ghostly hands of the World War are paying interest on the debt it owes one of its heroes.

The story is that of Capt. Stanley C. Campbell, whose shattered body and nerves have been made whole again in Hollywood. Strangely, and justly, the very war which exacted so costly a toll is providing the means for his "comeback".

For Capt. Campbell, Canadian-born University of Michigan boy who shot down ten German combat planes and eight balloons, who was decorated with the Medal Militaire by France for capturing a machine gun emplacement, whose wounds cost him a total of four years in hospital, makes his living by helping directors avoid technical mistakes in the filming of motion pictures of the war.

Capt. Campbell refuses to be called a hero.

Track Work Uncovers Wealth Of Material

Maryville's prospects for turning out a good track team this year seem unusually bright. There are some vancancies in the relay team and in the longer distances, but there is a wealth of new material so the coach should experience no great difficulty in finding men to fill these positions. The loss of Speedy Mann in the mile and two mile was a severe blow, but several new men are showing up well.

The following is a list of the events and the old men who are out for them:

100 yard dash—Williams, Taggart.
220 yard—Williams, Taggart
440 yard—Taggart
Half mile—Holman, Peterson.
Mile—Peterson, Houston.
Two Mile—Houston.
Shot Put—Headrick, McDonald, Carper
Discus—Headrick, McDonald, Carper.
Javelin—Millsaps.
Low Hurdles—K. Davis, Crawford.
High Hurdles—K. Davis, Crawford.
Pole Vault—K. Davis, Peirce.
High Jump—Headrick.
Broad Jump—Taggart, Williams, Crawford.
Relay—Taggart, Williams, Crawford.

Among the new men the following are making a good showing and will cause the old men many sleepless nights before the final team is selected:

Overly, Annich, Fischback, Vincent, Williamson, Barr, Don Wilson, Dan Smith, Farr, and Wetmore.

Maryville has only one home meet scheduled. This is with L. M. U. April 20. The complete schedule is as follows:

April 6—Tennessee—there
April 13—Tech Relays
April 20—L. M. U.—here
April 27—Chattanooga—there
May 4—Smoky Mountain Conference at Emory, Virginia.

Williams Chosen As 1929 Track Captain

The Athletic Board of Control met some time ago and appointed Hayes Williams track captain for the season. Williams takes the place of Mann, last year's distance ace who is not in school this semester.

Hayes is well liked by the fellows, and is a crack dash man, running the hundred and two twenty in fast time. He has been clocked at ten flat for the hundred.

Captain Williams played baseball last year and ran the dashes in track. This year he has given up baseball and is devoting all of his time to track, so it looks as if we can expect the dashes to be going Maryville's way this Spring.

Last week Hayes was called home on account of the serious illness of his father, but reports from him indicate that his father is recovering slowly. Hayes hopes to be back very soon.

THE TENNIS SEASON OPENS

"I believe that in the future practically all of the ranking tennis players on this side of the water will be college men," says William E. Hinchliff, coach of tennis and squash racquets at Yale. "At Yale it is estimated that two-thirds of the students play tennis. The number of courts could be doubled again and there would still be too few. The preparatory schools of the country are filled with brilliant young players. It takes no stretch of the imagination to see them playing tennis and continuing their interest in the game when they matriculate at the higher institutions of learning.

"Speaking of tennis in a general way, I would like to point out the fact that the dope is upset in tennis probably less than in any other sport. When both players are in trim and fighting for all they are worth, you will have a hard time finding a sport that brings such consistant victories to the admittedly better player. It is a sport where one can work with one's game at practice and feel confident that the breaks of the game will have little or no effect on the outcome of contests." (College Humor Service)

Word comes from Phoenix, Arizona, where the Tigers are holding pre-season training that John Stone is hitting the ball at the same fast clip he did when we saw him in action on Maryville's diamond for four years.

John is heralded by Detroit sports writers as one of the greatest finds of the season, and we who know him agree. No matter how far he goes in the big leagues, he'll always be remembered as Maryville's best all-round athlete.

ALL-AMERICAN BASKET BALL TEAM PICKED

For the first time in sports history, an All-American basketball team has been selected.

Joe Godfrey, Jr., Sports Editor of College Humor and well known sports authority, with the cooperation of 200 college basket ball coaches has done for basketball in his All-American selections what Walter Camp did in starting the annual choosing of All-American college football teams. Mr. Godfrey traveled all over the country, seeing as many of the major quintets in action as possible, and for the rest he has relied upon the composite judgment of the college coaches. Here is the first All-American five:

Forward—Hyatt—Pittsburgh
Forward—Schaaf—Pennsylvania
Center—Murphy—Purdue
Guard—Wineapple—Providence
Guard—Pickell—Arkansas
Alternate—Churchill—Oklahoma

Hyatt hails from Uniontown, Pa.; Schaaf, from Philadelphia; Murphy from Marion, Ind.; Wineapple, from Salem, Mass.; Pickell, from Pocohontas, Ark.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Fellows are taking lots of interest in track these days. There are about as many track candidates as there are baseball men.

This man Vincent looks mighty good in the high jump.

The freshman baseball enthusiast who attended coaching class last week is playing lots better baseball, and it is rumored he expects to coach professional baseball when he finishes his career on Maryville's diamond.

What an inspiration these youngsters get from attending upper-class lectures!

Well, we can't wise-crack any more about the swimming pool. Of course, there's Jack Coughlin.

Coach sprang a good one the other day on the disasters resulting from hesitation: A boy who stuttered was out hunting squirrels with his father, and seeing one of the elusive animals, he said, "There goes a s-s-s-s, aw shucks, it's gone in the hole."

CARNEGIE HALL MAY HAVE PIANO

The rumor continues to circulate that the men are to have a piano in Carnegie Hall!

It seems that the truth of this rumor will depend upon the success of Mr. McCurry's attempt to secure one from the music department. In case the department has more pianos than are needed for the students of music, it is probable that the men will be allowed to have one for use in the dormitory.

Carnegie Hall is the only dormitory on the Hill which does not have a piano, and this improvement, if added, will mean much to the men in the building.

Baseball Prospects Good as Men Report

Schedule Uncertain, as Many Smoky Mountain Schools Fail to Produce Teams. Clemens, Stone Missed Greatly In Line-up.

The baseball lookout for the Highlanders is as yet a little muddled. There are a good many candidates, and many of them are showing nice work, so no definite idea of the team that will start can be had at this time. It is pretty certain that the five letter men from last year's squad will again fill their respective positions, but outside of that, nothing can be said. These letter men are Gabbard and Bird, who share the captaincy, J. D. Davis, Delaney and Blazer. Hayes Williams, the Alabama flash, captain of the track team, was a letter man as well, but the urgency of his presence on the track team was deemed sufficient to restrict his activities to that sport, and a good man is lost to the diamond.

From present indications, the first game will be with the Knoxville Smokies, sometime early in April, and the Scots are going to shoot everything in an effort to take the measure of the Sally Leaguers.

Pitchers: Gabbard, Blazer, Park, Hintze.

Catcher: Teffeteller, Tolliver.

First Base: J. D. Davis, Knick, McCulloch.

Second Base: Blazer, White, Logan, MacMillan.

Short Stop: Bird, Smith, Robertson, Payne.

Third Base: Delaney, "Red" Wooten.

Outfielders: Watkins, Banks, Blazer, Johnson, Calloway.

Night Before Last

The following officers were elected in Bainonian Saturday night:
President - - Margaret Lowrance
Vice President - - - Selma Baird
Secretary - - Elizabeth Campbell
Program Secretaries - - -
Jane Glascock, Lucy Ann Voorhees
Sergeant-at-Arms - Kathryn Hodges
Phonicity Chairman - Louise Carson
Critic - - - Elizabeth Myers

After the election an interesting dramatic program was presented, the chief feature of which was the one-act play "It's Ripping"; and it was ripping!

Last Saturday night the officers for the third term were installed by the regular candle light service in Theta Hall. After the installation, Thetas visited the Bainonian program. The following will hold office for this term.
President - - - Anna Lou Miller
Vice President - - - Ruth Weiss
Secretary - - - - Elizabeth King
Treasurer - - Virginia Osborne
Program Secretaries - - - -
Dorothy Keller, Marjorie Nelson
Editor - - - Ruth Chenoweth
Publicity Chairman - Nelle Caldwell
Critic - - - - Doris Niles
Sergeant-at-Arms - Virginia Crider

Bainonian-Theta Joint Meeting

On Saturday night, March 23, Theta and Bainonian will have a joint meeting in the Y. W. auditorium. A program consisting of Southern Mountain Ballads, sponsored by the Writer's Workshop, will be presented. The Writer's Workshop is engaged in compiling a Maryville College collection of Mountain Ballads and the program promises to be very interesting.

A short business meeting for the installation of Bainonian's new officers will be held in Bainonian Hall at 6:45, preceding the joint meeting.

Athenian

March 9—Tonight was election night in Athenian Hall. The long ballot system was used for the first time in this election. This greatly speeded up the process of election.

The following men were elected to serve for the last term:
Roger Rusk - - - President
Benjamin Prince - Vice-President
Joseph Sharp - - - Secretary
Eugene Gabbard and Robert Jones - - - - - Critics
James Cox - - - - Editor
Florian Hopkins - Sergeant-at-Arms for practically every department."

"Have you any odd or valuable copies of old books?"

"Yes, a number, I think. However, they are kept in the museum for safekeeping. Miss DeHaven can tell you about those."

So it came about that I presented myself before Miss DeHaven, who was busy at her desk in the museum. I knew what I wanted this time, so Miss DeHaven promptly showed me to the case where the old volumes were kept.

The first volume shown me was the chief prize of the collection—a Vulgate edition of the Bible, printed in Lyons, France, in 1521. It is a huge affair, with crude woodcuts adorning its pages. It is, of course, in Latin, and on its pages are margined notes, in Greek, in Dr. Isaac Anderson's handwriting. How those ancient people scorned common everyday English!

"Imagine anyone studying the Bible in Latin," I exclaimed in horror. (I was never a remarkable Latin student.)

"Oh, yes," calmly explained Miss DeHaven, "the poor theological students of those days studied in anything but English. Here, you see, is a Greek New Testament, printed in 1531. Here is another textbook which the poor fellows used. It's 'Critica Lacra" which is obligingly translated, or "Observations on the Primitive Hebrew Words in the New Testament." It was printed in 1650. Oh, of course, it's in Latin.

"Aren't there any old books in English? Yes, here's one I'm terribly proud of. It's a first edition of a book by Sir Isaac Newton, "Observations upon the Prophecies of Daniel and the Apocalypse of St. John."

"Any more? Yes, we have the Bible in Bulu."

"Let me see if I can translate it."

Bulu, however, is a non-sensical language without rhyme or reason, and few consonants, so I did not attempt to translate it.

There are books and books. But I prefer English.

"The lives of great ministers", was the subject for discussion at the meeting of March 13th. Morrison, Fell, Dixon and Edris spoke. Our special music committee gave us a rare treat, singing "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer."

MARRIAGES

Recently the announcements of five marriages of former Maryville students have come into the office.

Miss Mary Ann Nuchols, a graduate of 1927, was married to Clifford Giffin, September 23. Mrs. Giffin is a teacher at Lanier High School.

Miss Marion Lois Painter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Painter of Memphis, and graduate of 1925, was married to Robert Lucian Hamilton December 25. Miss Painter is also a graduate nurse from Battle Creek, Michigan. Mr. Hamilton is a former student of Maryville and will graduate in the Spring from Memphis Medical College.

Miss Vera Scales, neice of Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Moore of Vernon, Texas, and graduate of the college, was married to Curtis Robert Renfro, January 31. Mrs. Renfro was a former president of Y.W.C.A. while she was here.

Miss Maude Davis of Maryville was married to Mr. P. P. Paine February 15, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. McMurray. Mrs. Paine was an assistant in the Maryville College Maid Shop.

MR. ROGERS HAS HIS OWN IDEA OF WHAT A MAN SHOULD WEAR

Some nuts have got a habit here in New York—I doubt if it has reached your home town for most of your States have asylums—it's to go bareheaded on the street.

Now, these nuts have worn something on their heads ever since their mothers tied hoods under their chins, but they have never attracted any attention, so they let it rain down their necks to show people that they bathe.

If your head hasn't got enough in it to carry a hat, why all the sunshine on it in the world won't do it any good.

We have a scene in our show where another comedian and myself come out with dress suits and barefooted, no difference from being bareheaded on the street. Only we get paid for attracting attention and being funny.

Let women leave off something, they do it much better than men. Every time a woman leaves off something she looks better, but every time a man leaves off something he looks worse.

Will Rogers.

Valuable Advice To Girls Concerning Clothes, Direct From Home Ec Department

Small Wardrobe Can Suffice For Any Girl If Care is Used In Its Selection. Most Mistakes Now Made in Every Day Wearing Apparel.

(By Sarah Moore)

Miss Elvira Meiselwitz, head of the Home Economics Department, is a most satisfactory person to interview on the general topic of what the well dressed Maryville co-ed will wear, since she herself so well exemplifies the subject. She is young, diminuitive, and blonde, and might be taken as a fairly representative type of a Maryville girl, if it were not for the fact that she is a Maryville faculty member.

When I stated my errand and told her that I thought most of the feminine element of the Hill would be much interested in what she said, she laughed and said, "Oh yes. I'll be glad to give you whatever you want. I have several things I'm very anxious to tell Maryville College girls."

"First, they'd like to have a few pointers on how to choose clothes, I suppose?"

I supposed they would, "And," I added, "what minimum of wardrobe is necessary for a well-dressed college girl."

"Well, about choosing clothes. I suppose most college girls would be surprised to know that a dress should be only a background for their own personality. In other words, the girl's the thing, and not the dress. This, of course means deciding on one's type—feminine, athletic, sophisticated, and so on—and emphasizing, within the limits of good taste, one's own type. Too, I think clothes should emphasize one's best points and conceal one's bad points. For instance, any girl with lovely red hair should consider it her first duty to dress up to her hair.

"When one starts to dressing up to one's best points, a study of color is soon found to be necessary. My advice is to find one's own color, then stick to it in all choice of clothes. The accessories, then, such as hose, hats, gloves, and shoes, will serve to go with a number of dresses. Please don't misunderstand me and think that sticking to one color scheme means only one color in all one's wardrobe. Taking our red-headed girl, again; her color scheme might be founded on a warm tan. All her accessories would be in that color, and her general-wear coat. To vary it however, she might have an afternoon dress of soft green, her school dress of a lighter tan, her hiking outfit tan, and her evening dress of green or gold.

"I think one may be well-dressed here at Maryville with a very limited wardrobe. Of course, every girl should have a hiking costume, an evening dress, preferably on very simple lines, a dark silk ensemble for church, a lighter and more festive silk for "dress-up" occasions, and one or two light-weight woolen dresses for school wear. I know that wardrobe sounds very small, but it can be done. I've seen some really wonderful results accomplished with such a wardrobe. For instance, if one's evening gown is of conservative color and cut, the addition of sleeves transforms it into a lovely afternoon dress. And various collar and cuff sets will transform one woolen dress into as many dresses as one has different collar sets.

"What is the biggest sin Maryville College girls commit in the matter of clothes? Grooming! They do not see that every little detail of their costume is absolutely right before they leave their rooms. Stockings not quite clean, dresses not quite dainty, run-down heels, too much cosmetics, foundation garments showing, and so on.

"They aren't so very bad about such matters, I must say, but they might improve. As long as I'm on the subject of what not to wear, I'll tell you two things that really should not be done: heavy sweaters should never be worn with very light georgette dresses, and metal hats are not for daytime wear.

"However, I think Maryville Col-

First Graduates of Year Present Recital

Expression Students Present Excellent Program.

The first graduate expression recital of the season was attended Monday night by a well-filled chapel, and was greatly enjoyed by all present. Three selections were given by the graduate pupils, Ada Belle Campbell, senior; Alice Rhea and Forrest Robertson, juniors.

The outstanding characteristics of the three speakers were the poise and grace evidenced during the recital. Each appeared completely at ease and master of the situation. The recitations were unusually effective because the speakers lived the various characters they portrayed. The transition from one character to another was obvious, and yet easily and smoothly brought out.

"The Merry, Merry Cuckoo", written by Jeannette Marks, was the first number on the program and was read by Ada Belle Campbell. The story centers around a pathetic old Irish couple, with the husband on his death bed and his faithful wife endeavoring to cheer him in his last hours by imitating the cuckoo, the song of which he loves to hear, much to the secret delight of the eavesdropping neighbors. The story is full of pathos and sweetness which accompanies readings pertaining to old people. Ada Belle brought out most vividly the five characters and made them realistic in every respect.

The second reading by Alice Rhea was one of a contrasting nature to the first selection. She read excerpts from the play, "Quality Street" by James M. Barrie. "Quality Street" is the story of a young girl, who after her lover goes to war without proposing to her, loses all hope of becoming his wife, and settles down with her sister to the life of a schoolmistress. Ten years later he returns and is surprised to see how she has changed, at least with regard to outward appearances. Through an amusing character representation of a fictitious niece, she regains his love and the story ends with both "living happily ever after." The individualities of the five characters were well portrayed.

Forrest Robertson selected for his reading, "The Valiant", a one-act play by Holworthy Hall. This reading was the most dramatic of the three and was presented in an admirable manner. It is the tense description of a young man condemned to death on a murder charge, who will not give his right name, the only chance for a retrial, because of the dishonor it would bring upon his mother. It is a tragic picture of sacrifice in which the irony of fate makes the condemned man a victim of circumstances. None but favorable criticisms can be offered to Forrest with regard to his remarkable characterizations and the way in which he commanded himself. "The valiant never tastes of death but once."

Hayes Back After Week With Father

The many friends of Hayes Williams are pleased to note that he is back with us after an absence of over a week.

On March 12, Williams received notice that his father was seriously ill with paralysis. Hayes went home immediately and did not return until March 20.

The latest reports state that Mr. Williams' condition is improving, although he is still unable to speak.

Hayes is the captain of our track team this year. We welcome him back to the Hill and extend to him our best wishes for the speedy recovery of his father.

The vesper choir will feel distinctly hurt if everyone doesn't come out next Sunday night to hear the special music it has been working on for several months.

Dr. Wilson Back After Two Weeks in North

Attends Meeting of General Council; Visits Friends in Various Cities.

March 19—Dr. Wilson returned today after an absence of two weeks spent in the North. His main purpose in making the trip was to attend a meeting of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church which took place in Philadelphia. This committee is composed of twenty-five leaders of the denomination whose business it is to make arrangements for the General Assembly which is to meet on May 23, at St. Paul Minnesota. This was the last meeting of the board before that date and its proceedings required two days of Dr. Wilson's time.

At the meeting of the Council Dr. Wilson renewed his friendship with Dr. Hugh Kelso Walker, Moderator of the General Assembly; Dr. Lewis S. Mudge, Stated Clerk of the Assembly; Dr. Robert E. Speer; Dr. John Timothy Stone, and others. Dr. Stone mentioned the favorable impression he received of Maryville College during his recent visit here.

Dr. Wilson spent several days in visiting friends of the College in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. He included Atlantic City in his itinerary.

In New York City he encountered extreme temperatures and was kept in with a cold for some time. The thermometer was down to zero for awhile and then it became the warmest that it has been at this time of year for several years.

At Nutley, New Jersey, Dr. Wilson called on Superintendent Paul R. Radcliffe of the city schools. Dr. Radcliffe graduated from Maryville in the class of 1909 and later had charge of the Preparatory Department for two years. He spent the day entertaining Dr. Wilson, showing him the excellent school system which he heads.

Bewley Is Phillipine Educational Director

Educational Standards Being Raised Under Direction of M. C. Grad.

The students of a college like to know that those who have graduated from their Alma Mater earlier are not failures. Here is an example of a comparatively recent Maryville graduate who has achieved notable success. This is Luther B. Bewley who is now director of education in the Phillipine Islands.

Mr. Bewley has brought about some great advances in the educational system of the Phillipines. The writer has just recently read the twenty-eighth annual report of the department of education of which Mr. Bewley is the head. Some of the worthy improvements show that, while less than half of the children have an opportunity to obtain an education, the percentage has been raised somewhat in the past year. There was an increase of more than twelve percent in the vocational schools. Also the report says the educational standard or qualification of the teachers has been raised. The salaries are still too low and the funds available for school purposes are yet inadequate.

Mr. Bewley recommends to Congress among other things, that permission be granted to municipalities to impose local taxes for school purposes; that an increase of at least a million dollars in the insular appropriations for 1929 for extending elementary education be made. He says this would be a step in providing school facilities for the two million children of school age who are not in school. Another recommendation is that a fund be made to provide a definite source of revenue for the provincial schools.

First Debate Victory Comes at Chattanooga

Two Sophs Gain Victory. Both Milligan Debates Go Other Way.

The debates for Maryville are in full swing now, and interest was added to the situation by our first victory for the season last Monday night, March 18. This success came at the hands of the negative team of sophomores, William Graham and J. Stuart James who went to Chattanooga Monday to debate the University of Chattanooga. The question was worded slightly different from the Pi Kappa Delta question, being, resolved: That a bench of three or five judges should be substituted for trial by jury. The decision was unanimous in favor of Maryville. Professor Verton M. Queener, debate coach, accompanied the team to Chattanooga.

This was the second debate for each one this season, Graham having debated against King College, and James having participated in the open forum debate with Centre College. The debate was the annual single debate with the University of Chattanooga. The boys came back smiling and happy with a report of a pleasant trip.

Lose to Milligan

This success was dampened somewhat, however, in the dual contest for girls with Milligan College, March 22. In this contest our girls lost both at Milligan and on the home platform.

The debate here was between our affirmative team composed of Vera Coy, and Alice Renegar, both sophomores, and the Milligan team composed of Betty Crow and Nancy Cantrell, both seniors. The visiting team was one of the best we have heard on the platform this season. The debaters were well prepared and had a clear and distinct style of delivery. They were accompanied by Miss Kathleen Adams, debate coach for girls at Milligan College.

The judges were Professor Withers of the University of Tennessee, Mr. Northcut from Knoxville High, and Mr. Coe from Knox Junior High. Prof. E. W. Davis presided.

Professor George D. Howell went with our negative team to Milligan. On this team was Mildred Crawford, and Ruth Laughead. The decision was a two to one vote for Milligan.

First Glee Club Trip Will Last Three Days

Trip Will Carry Club Beyond Chattanooga For First Concert, Wednesday.

Day after tomorrow the Glee Singers will leave the Hill about chapel time on the first trip of the year. This will be a three day trip carrying the club thirty miles beyond Chattanooga to Richard City, Tennessee. This concert at Richard City will be presented on the first night, Wednesday. The other two concerts will be presented at Cleveland and Athens on the return trip from Richard City. The club will return to the Hill Friday night after the Athens concert. The bus in which the trip will be made is the newest, largest, and best equipped one owned by the White Star Line here at Maryville.

On April 4, the club and quartet will appear at the Palace Theatre. The Dixie Vagabonds will be featured during the afternoon performance and the Glee Singers will sing at the night show.

The home concert has been set for May 16.

Trips are pending to Madisonville, Vonore, Alcoa, Morristown, and Erwin.

New Manager Elected

At a recent club meeting Kenneth Davis was elected to serve as the club manager for next year. This election was made this early in order that the new manager may become familiar with his job before taking over the managership.

Will the boys be denied the privilege this year of presenting the lady friends with flowers for Easter use? Of course, the stationery stores have lots of cards brim full of sentiment, but why not try something new? Easter bunnies from Wright's or a campus egg hunt, for instance.

Bingling Brothers, Darnum Daily One Ring Circus at College Gym Tuesday Nite

Big Feature is Michigan Tumbling Team Here on Tour of South; Other Attractions Make Enormous Crowd Assured. Clowns, Band, and What Not Have Arrived For Fun Festival.

The Bingling Brothers Darnum Daily combined shows are scheduled to appear with their thrilling one big ring circus at the College Gymnasium tomorrow night at seven thirty.

Amidst a blare of trumpets, beating of drums, the twang of age-old sawdust, and the braying of a silk topped announcer, the seventh annual circus will be officially opened.

Nothing has been spared in the way of toil and expense to make this the biggest, best, most exciting circus in town this year. The clowns will be there to engender spontaneous laughter and heighten the hilarity of the atmosphere.

There will be fencing—watch these disciples of Doug Fairbanks direct their dexterous thrusts in search of vulnerable spots! Other things too numerous to permit of detailed description will delight the eye, deafen the ear, and delay the breath.

The special feature of the session will be the spectacular, super-human acrobatic stunts of the Michigan Gym Troupe of Ypsilanti, Michigan. Those who saw them in action three years ago will readily recall the thrilling, exhilerating exhibition of athletic skill they displayed.

They will cause you to gasp with wonder and amazement at their tumbling on the mats, work on the parallel bars, and execution of daring on the horse.

Don't miss this opportunity to enjoy a night of fun and frivolity at the college. All these big attractions for the small sum of twenty-five cents, one fourth of a dollar—a quarter! two bits! In fact the price is so insignificant, you can't afford to stay at home. Remember, Tuesday night, March 26, at 7:30. (College Students 10c!)

Come early to avoid the rush, as seats will not be saved after 7:30. Please leave children over 90 years old at home—they might not enjoy it. Bring all the rest!

(Proceeds go to the physical education department.)

Twenty Colleges Give Their Opinions As To Point System Success

Question of Extra-Curricular Work Regulation May Come Up Soon

(Editor's note: Further information concerning the point system may be found on page two.)

Bates College, Lewiston, Me., uses the point system and lets the student council attend to its administration. At this college the women are better able to handle their situations than the men. There is still a tendency to overwork on the part of certain outstanding students.

The point system is administered by the faculty at Earlham College, Richmond, Virginia. The student is allowed to choose a certain amount of activities in which he desires to participate. The system has no effect on student politics.

The faculty and students administer the system at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill. This college reports beneficial results in regard to scholarship. Students are brought into prominence in certain fields who would remain in the background but for the point system.

At Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., there is no specific point system, but the faculty does control student participation in athletic activities on the basis of scholastic standing.

Tusculum uses the point system, but has difficulty in checking up on students. Offices in various student organizations are graded as major or minor.

Duke University, Durham, N. C., allows no student to participate in any extra-curricular activities if his scholastic work is below standard.

At Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a joint faculty-student committee administers the system. Difficulty is encountered in checking upon students. They find that it discourages students from taking more work than they can handle.

At the time the letter from Emporia College, Emporia, Kan., was received, the students were just beginning to agitate a scheme for using the point system. They had turned it down once on the grounds that no satisfactory control could be devised.

Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga., uses the system under the administration of the student government association. They report beneficial effects on scholarship and no trouble from politics in student elections.

A similar joint faculty and student committee administers the system at Muskingam College, New Concord, Ohio. They feel that the system is necessary and beneficial.

The student government association at Howard College, Birmingham, has charge of the point system at that college. They find that the distribution of honors has a restraining effect upon politics in student elections.

Other colleges which were written concerning this matter had either tried the system without good results or had decided against its use for certain reasons which they give.

Park College, Parkville, Mo., has tried the system, but only found it to be cumbersome.

Parsons College, Fairfield, Iowa, discontinued the use of this system because it tended to make student life artificial.

Beloit College, Beloit, Wis., says that in their case the point system was unsuccessful and broke down.

At Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., it is believed that a student doing satisfactory work scholastically is able to determine for himself how many outside activities he is able to engage in.

It is believed that students will fairly distribute among themselves the work and honors connected with

Another Point System

What is the point system used in connection with student activities in various colleges? It is a system whereby every position of student responsibility is numerically evaluated according to the degree of responsibility of the position. A certain number is then set as a limit to the amount of extra-curricular work any student may carry. For instance, if one person should be a debater, a society president, a member of the baseball team, and a member of the annual staff the sum of the point values of these offices or positions might add up to be 30 points. If this were the limit set, that person could not be elected to any other position while his points stood at the limit.

This scheme has been adopted in many colleges in an effort to keep from overloading certain students afflicted with excessive popularity and to give other students a chance at positions of responsibility. These objects are worth while ones and some colleges which were written in regard to the success of the system report that these objects are accomplished. Others are not so sure and still others are positively against the idea.

One factor that would argue against the point system is that no one standard or limit could be set which would be equally just to everyone. Some students are capable of handling more than others. Certain scholarship requirements should suffice to keep individual scholarship standing up to a certain standard. If some student happened to get more than he could do his grades would reveal the fact and make it necessary to drop something.

In this issue we are printing reports from various colleges which were written concerning their point systems. Everyone should read these reports because it seems that this matter may soon be a live issue before the student body.

PROMINENT CHEMIST TO ADDRESS CHEMISTRY CLUB

A real treat is in store for the members of the Chemistry Club and their friends at 6:30, Tuesday evening when Dr. J. H. Robertson, Professor of Physical and Analytical Chemistry at the University of Tennessee will speak at the regular bimonthly meeting of the club in the Chemistry lecture room.

Dr. Robertson received his doctors degree from the University of Virginia and has received much renown in the field of physical chemistry, having done much research work along that line.

All chemistry students, especially those of advanced chemistry, are urged to take advantage of this unusual opportunity to hear this able speaker.

EASTER PAGEANT

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. will present an Easter pageant, "The Tree of Life", in Voorhees Chapel, Saturday night, March 30. This is an annual affair put on by the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. This year the Student Volunteers and the Ministerial Association will help in presenting this pageant. On account of this pageant there will be no meeting of the Y. W. C. A. on Sunday, March 31.

FLOATING UNIVERSITY

For the first time in the history of American education regular academic degrees will be conferred on the high seas, according to announcements from the home office of Floating University at 11 Broadway. While the students and faculty of this co-ed travel university are steaming from Penang to Calcutta, the news is made public that a revised charter enables Floating University to confer degrees, beginning with the college year 1929-30.

Accordingly the university will offer programs of study leading to the B.A., M.A., and B.W.A. degrees. The B. W. A. (Bachelor of World Affairs) is a new degree, not conferred elsewhere, and is based on the concept that the study of History, Government, Economics, and Sociology on a world wide scale is valuable training for the student planning to enter public affairs, the diplomatic and consular services, or international business.

To win the B. W. A. the student may take his first two years of college in a land institution, and spend his junior and senior years in an intensive study of the courses in the World Affairs division of the Floating University curriculum. Or the student may spend all four years with Floating University.

The M. A. degree will differ from the usual master's degree, in that individual research and a thesis are required. The student compiles data during the round-the-world cruise, and completes his thesis with the aid of a European or American library.

The B. A. can be won in junior and senior years, with major in literature or art. A few well qualified seniors can be accepted as candidates for the degree in one year, with major in art or literature; French, history, government, economics or sociology; or philosophy, religion and ethics.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

We would like to put a picture of Jesse and Bill in this column.

Bill was smiling when he came in as if he were a tooth paste ad.

—:—

Jesse said he saw one pretty girl in Chattanooga—as he came out the hotel door.

—:—

A new way for getting judges should be invented for stormy nights.

—:—

There should be a great appreciation for judges who come from Knoxville or anywhere else on such a night as that of the Milligan Debate.

—:—

Most people do not know the difficulty in finding judges anyway.

—:—

It is more fun when the judge calls about five o'clock before the debate and says he is going to have to be out of town.

—:—

What would be the result if the majority of debates were just friendly non-decision debates?

—:—

Could a jury render a satisfactory decision for an intercollegiate debate

—:—

It is more difficult to know what to judge a debate on than to judge it.

—:—

A winning part that can be played every time a debate is held at home is to entertain the visitors pleasantly.

—:—

All visiting teams are interested in our method of "moonshining."

—:—

If the "judge" is a "juror" it is useless to spend much time proving that juries are composed of ignorant, incapable men.

—:—

On the other hand I guess he gets a great thrill from being one of the "honorable judges."

—:—

The "judges" are harder to convince than the "ladies and gentlemen."

—:—

One advantage in having three judges for a decision is that it brings more people out to the debate.

—:—

We have not had trouble in getting an audience to speak to, however.

—:—

We know of one girl so interested in having an audience for her debating friend that she got a new date for it. She must have inspired the fellow.

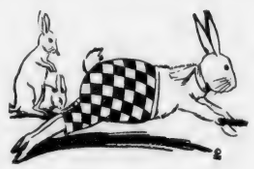
Incidentally

—I am sure that we are all pleased to welcome Dr. Wilson back to the Hill once more. He was probably rather surprised at our unusual promptness in getting to Chapel, though.

—The swimming pool is beginning to warm up now. Some of these hot freshmen must be furnishing the needed calories.

—Ever since it started raining Jack Levin has been warbling melodiously (?). We wonder if it isn't beause pants just wont stay pressed in all this dampness.

—Miss Molly seems to have gone on the war-path reently. She appeared in the girls' halls one night last week with a list in her hand and when she departed there was much wailing and gnashing of teeth among the girls because certain of their "inalienable" rights had been restricted.



—Shorty's and Farmer's Gym classes are soon to decide the touch-football championship of the Hill. Shorty, when interviewed, said he had made no definite plans beyond running Jack Levin at quarterback and Tom and Ed Cooper at halfback. He announced, however, that Farmer's team is in for a rather interesting afternoon.

—Farmer contends that Defendeffer and McCall will make Levin yell 2.98 every time he gets the ball. With a line that averages 160 pounds Farmer claims his team will have a walkover.

—Jupiter and Venus make a brilliant spectacle in the western sky these nights. If they get much closer together, Miss Molly had better be notified.

Sophs Leading In Volley Ball Tourney

Many Coeds Participate In Net Game. Sophomores Plan to Annex Title.

The Co-eds are finding lots of sports to fill in the long afternoons. The latest to claim the attention of the athletically inclined is volley ball. A class tourney is now in progress with the sophomores showing up rather better than the others.

Four matches have been played as follows:

Seniors 2—Juniors 0
Sophomores 2—Seniors 0
Freshmen 2—Seniors 1

The other matches will be played this week, with the probability that the sophs will annex the volley ball title to their basketball honors.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Old Man Pluvius has been knocking us out of a lot of outdoor practice this year.

Since Maryville puts out such good baseball teams, no wonder the other schools in the conference don't want teams.

There is no chance of a tournament, anyhow.

It doesn't look like one home meet a season is giving the track team a big place in college athletics. The tennis team does better than that.

The cost has to be considered, though.

I heard a freshman tell Taggart the other day, after John had led him down the hundred stretch by about twenty yards, "Say, boy, you sure can run!"

And to think, we'd all been waiting so long to hear somebody admit it!

Brute Crow needs only a good arm and about two feet more in stature to make a good outfielder. Of course, a good eye, speed, and a little sense would help out.

A couple of frosh have lived here six months and haven't learned not to wear their high school letters around.

"When I became a man I put away childish things."
"Go thou and do likewise."

The girls would have the last word. At the Y. M. meeting yesterday, papers written by various girls were read on the subject, "The Ideal Man". We don't have room to print the requirements which were set forth, but we will in the next issue. We will sa he has to be pretty good.

Our Psych teacher and Glee Club director of last year, Bob Jensen, is now on the way to Europe with the Dayton Westminster Choir. There are several unusual things about this. See next week's Echo.

Five Students, One Alumnus Pass Examiner's Test Here

Misses Hayes, Buchanan, Rogers, Minton, and Jack Coughlin, Robert Watkins Show Skill In Aquatics. Pool To Be Open Fridays For Red Cross Instruction.

March 19—Four girls and two men passed the Red Cross Life Saving Examiner's test here this afternoon. The girls were Gladys Hayes, Ruth Buchanan and Betty Rogers from the college, and Emily Minton, who graduated here last year. Of the six men who took the test, only two passed it; these are, Robert Watkins and Jack Coughlin (renewal). Ed Buchanan passed it last summer.

Captain Claude Hall, Southern District Examiner, who conducted the examination, said that the girls are doing much better work in swimming than the boys.

The test given to the candidates for examiner classification included the following events:

5 approaches to a dead body.

5 holds to break when a body in distress grabs a life-saver.

5 tows or carries.

(Each of these had to be done in two different ways) Swim 2 lengths on back without using the hands; swim 2 lengths on side with use of 1 hand.

Tread water without use of hands for 30 seconds.

Artificial respiration, 1 1-2 minutes.

Dead man's float, 1 minute.

Carry a body out of water saddle back carry and fireman's lift.

Surface dive for 5 objects in 12 feet of water.

Separate two drowning people who are holding on to each other and tow both safely to shore. Then pull them out on the side without injuring the body in any way.

In life saving the body should not be bruised in any way. If saving a body one should do it in the quickest way and the best way for the good of the drowning person.

The examiners must take the test once each year in order to keep their standing.

Beginning this week, the swimming pool will be open on Fridays to only those who wish to practice for Red Cross Life Saving. Those students who are under eighteen years of age may try for the junior classification, while those over this age will be given senior tests.

Only those who can swim one hundred yards free-style are eligible to try for Life-Saver.

Fellows like to hang around Bartlett in the afternoons now.

PIONEER COLLEGE FLYING CLUB KEEPS PLANES BUSY

"An average ten hour flying course costs in the neighborhood of three hundred dollars," says Robert B. Bell, president of the Harvard Flying Club, in the April College Humor. "The chief value of a flying club is that it allows a student to pile up flying time at a reasonable cost, cutting the price of a course nearly in half.

"The Harvard Flying Club, Incorporated, is the senior college flying organization in the country. Its first plane, flying only six months of the year since 1926, has flown nearly four hundred hours, and many pilots have been trained and licensed, all without serious mishap of any sort. This has been largely due to the success with which it has solved the main problems which will face every college flying organization; namely, the problem of finance, and the problem of operation.

"The primary aim of any flying club should be to keep its plane or planes actually in the air; to pile up flying time and to train pilots. That this may be done, some standard organization and well-defined rules are needed. It is hoped that this article will be of some interest and value to those who are contemplating the formation of flying clubs in other colleges and localities.

RACE RELATIONS COURSE GIVEN AT COLUMBIA

Leading Teacher-Training College in America Takes Important Step

(by R. B. Eleazer)

An educational development considered of unusual significance by the friends of better race relations in America is the introduction at Columbia Teachers' College this year of a credit course on "Negro Education and Race Relations." The course, which was under the direction of Miss Mabel Carney, took the form of five weekly lectures beginning February 11 and open not only to those enrolling, but also to any others interested. The attendance ran into the hundreds.

The subjects were Negro Life and Education in the United States, Private Effort in Negro Education, Public School Education for Negroes in the South, Social Background of American Negro Life Today, and Race Relations in the United States.

The introduction of this course at Teacher's College is considered most important in view of the fact that those taking the course are teachers, who will be in position greatly to influence the thought of the next generation. Efforts are being made by the Interracial Commission of the South to secure the introduction of similar courses in other teacher-training institutions. Atlanta, George.

PERPETUAL STUDENT DIES

New York, N. Y. (By New Student Service). William Cullen Bryant Kemp, "perpetual student" at Columbia University is dead. At the age of seventy-eight this learner who spent over twenty years at the feet of the professors becomes an alumnus of a world that was, for him, mainly a campus. After his freshman year, 1868, there was an interlude in his education during which he acceded to his father's wishes and went into business, but on his father's death he returned to his beloved studies. He reaped the degrees of LL.B., B.A., M. A., LL. M. and B.S. If he had taken the trouble to write a thesis, he might have added a Ph. D. to this list. His last registration was for winter session of 1922, and but for "unpleasant newspaper notoriety" he would have registered for the spring session of that year.

Of course the newspapers continually plagued him, and set various stories afloat concerning the reasons for his perpetual study. One was to the effect that he would be provided with an income of $2,500 each year that he registered. It is very likely, as Columbia Alumni News observes, that the secret died with him.

Seniors aren't allowed to forget that the end or, the commencement is rapidly approaching. Orders for invitations have been made, measurements for caps and gowns are being taken, and, somewhere, the sheep are beginning to get nervous. Alas!

Tennis Enthusiasts After Varsity Places

Kentucky State First On Schedule of Home Matches.

The tennis season is at hand and a large squad of our more proficient racquet-wielders are training daily in preparation for the coming tournament to decide who shall represent Maryville on the court this season. Capt. Pope, Prince, and Coulter, from last year's team, are back again this year. They will form a nucleus around which to build a good team.

The two Gillingham courts have been put in good condition for the benefit of the squad. The courts have been rolled well and new nets and backstops have been installed.

Capt. Pope is arranging an elimination tournament for those trying out for the team. No definite date has as yet been set, but the tournament will be played off in the near future. Those entering are: Shepherd, Bernard, King, Cotton, Schleman, Fell, Brown, Overly, Whitman, Crawford, McCann, Fischback, Miller, Stearns, Sprouse, and Marston.

A good schedule of meets is being arranged. Games have already been arranged with Kentucky State, Vanderbilt, and Chattanooga and others are pending. Our first meet is with Kentucky State, Saturday, March 30, on our home court.

Capt. Pope, who is in charge, says that much interest and enthusiasm has been displayed so far, and that he is well pleased with the fine showing of several of the men. He predicts that this year's team will be one of the best that Maryville has ever produced.

TRACK TRYOUTS ARE SCHEDULED FRI.-SAT.

Full Strength of Team Needed Against U. T. Next Week.

In anticipation of the track classic with U. T. on April 6, Coach Thrower will hold tryouts for all events, both track and field, on Friday and Saturday of this week. Those showing up well will be considered for the meet the following week.

The selection at the tryouts this week is by no means the final track team of the season. Those who produce results will be added or substituted as the season progresses.

It is heartening to note that Hayes Williams is back on the cinders, showing the boys his heels in the dashes. We are expecting a good showing against U. T., as well as in our other contests.

The tryouts will give us some little idea of what we have.

Night Before Last

Saturday night Theta and Bainonian enjoyed a unique and very interesting program of moutain ballads, sponsored by the Writers' Workshop. The students asked to present these numbers were those who have heard the ballads from mountain folk and know best how they are sung. The program included ten different types of ballads by soloists and a chorus, guitar and violin music by Gene Gabbard and Edgar Shephard, and a buck dance by "Grandpa" Ross. Among the ballads were some old favorites like "Hand Me Down My Walking Cane", "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain", "Barbara Allen" and "Jack and Joe."

The Alpha Sigma meeting last Saturday was a real success—an entertaining program, and better attendance than usual. Chilly Bowles sang for us, and Emily Minton read several selections. A new and welcome humorist was discovered in the person of Stewart Buttons. Everybody felt so good after this program that the election went through more smoothly than any we've ever had. The following are our officers for this next term:

President - - - Reginald Voorhees
Vice President - - William Grayson
Recording Secy. - - Frank Baker
Asst. Record. Secy. - - John Peetol
Program Secretary - Morgan Biggs
Asst. Prog. Secy. - Lawrence Somers
Treasurer - - - - Porter French
Censors - - - Hugh Delozier, Max Hurst, Stewart Button
Sergeant-at-Arms - Raymond Alfred Young, Jr.

The fifty Athenians present Saturday night were well entertained by Mr. Berry with a reading plus an encore. Mr. Kim, our Korean delegate gave us a wonderful review of the religious educational work in Korea. Lou Blair sang. We all enjoyed Mr. McCann's review of the accomplishments of the freshman class. In his words, "The freshmen of today will be the seniors of tomorrow" (maybe). We hope the freshmen will not take all motions brought up for parliamentary practice literally, hereafter.

Bainonian

Don't miss Bainonian Saturday night. Our new program secretaries will have charge. It has been rumored that an Easter surprise is being planned, besides some musical numbers and a one-act play entitled "A Pair of Lunatics."

Theta Epsilon

Theta's program next Saturday night, March 30, will be the "Shawl Pageant". Shawls from many different nations will be shown. An interesting and instructive entertainment is promised. We hope that every Theta girl will come out and enjoy it.

SENIOR PARTY AT PALACE THURSDAY

March 21—Over seventy-five seniors attended a closed theatre party tonight. The show at the Palace for the evening was "Lilac Time", starring Colleen Moore. This picture with its accompanying sound disturbances proved to be quite entertaining.

After the show the seniors all went to Badgett-Costner's Drug Store where refreshments were served and a short program presented on which Sarah Moore, Walter Courtenay, "Corky" Crawford, and "Chilly" Webb appeared. "Chilly" and "Corky" were bona fide seniors before this year, but they condescended to put on their act tonight for the entertainment of the class of '29. They succeeded, absolutely.

2 Victories, 1 Defeat Close Debate Season

Emory Wins Over L. M. U. on The Maryville Platform.

OUR VICTORIES OVER L.M.U.

Nine From Here Will Attend The Pi Kappa Delta Convention

The last regularly scheduled varsity debate of the season is past. It has not been a very successful season, but the end was better than the beginning.

The last debate for men was held Monday night, March 25 in the form of a triangular debate with Maryville, Emory and Henry College, and Lincoln Memorial University taking part. The plan was to have all teams debate away from home. The debate on the Maryville platform was between the affirmative team made up of Mr. Hardin and Mr. Wiley from Emory and Henry College and the negative team of Mr. Heberlin and Mr. Fields from Lincoln Memorial University. It was an interesting debate won by the gentlemen from Virginia. Many who heard the debate agree that Mr. Hardin was one of the best college debaters heard on a Maryville platform. Mr. Fields debated against Maryville last year in the triangular debate and Mr. Heberlin was here for the contest with Emory and Henry College.

The judges for the triangular debate were five professors chosen from the faculty of the neutral school. Here, for the contest between Emory and Henry and L. M. U., they were Dr. McMurray, Dr. Knapp, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Orr, and Professor Ellis. The decision was unanimous in favor of the affirmative for Emory and Henry.

The chairman for this debate was Professor Howell.

Lose to E. and H.

Our affirmative team composed of Robert W. Jones and Forrest I. Robertson went to Lincoln Memorial University to debate Emory and Henry College. The decision was won by Emory and Henry.

Professor Davis accompanied the debaters on this trip.

Cognizance should here be taken of the pleasant entertainment given our debaters by Lincoln Memorial. After having been taken over one of the most beautiful campuses of the South they were served dinner at special tables for the debaters and their friends. The tables were decorated in Maryville and Emory and Henry colors. The entire student body in the dining hall rose and gave yells for the debaters and the colleges represented.

Win Over L. M. U.

Our negative team composed of William R. Graham and J. Stuart James who debated at Emory and Henry College against Lincoln Memorial was more successful and won by a unanimous count. This was the second victory for these two Sophomores. Professor Queener went with them. After the debate Monday night they came back to Maryville and attended classes the next day.

Girls Win

The final debate for girls was arranged for a triangle debate with Lincoln Memorial University and Berea College. But Tuesday Professor Queener received a telegram from Berea saying Berea was quarantined and could not participate. It was easily arranged for a dual debate with Lincoln Memorial.

Our representatives, Mildred Crawford and Betty Jane Sharp, with the negative side of the question won a unanimous decision of three judges over Herma Ramsey and Nola Butcher, affirmative speakers from Lincoln Memorial. The judges were Mrs. Hamer, Mrs. Stone, and Professor Distlehort, all from the University of Tennessee. Professor Ellis presided.

The team from Lincoln Memorial was accompanied by Miss Nellie J. Garrison, formerly of Maryville and now teacher of Mathematics at L. M. U. Also Mr. Hatfield, the debate coach, and Mr. Miller, professor of History, were with them. Miss Herron took Vera Coy and Alice Renegar to Lincoln Memorial to debate the affirmative for Maryville. The decision at L. M. U. was two to one in favor of L. M. U.

Bainonians Win Cup

The decision of the winning society mid-winter play has been announced by the Theta Alpha Phi committee, and the cup will be awarded to the Bainonian Society for the presentation of "Graustark", the first mid-winter given this year.

Last year the cup was won by the Alpha Sigma Literary Society. Any society winning the cup three times in succession keeps it as a permanent possession.

Girls As Particular As Boys About Ideals

Personality More Important Than Looks; Others News Also Comforting.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting was unusually well attended Sunday afternoon. The subject for discussion, The Ideal Boy, seemed to possess a universal appeal. They came—some with a notebook and an intent expression as much as to say "If I don't measure up to par I will do what I can to remedy matters." Some had a harassed look. One could almost imagine them saying, "When this is over I just know I will have an inferiority complex". Others came wearing a cynical expression as if they would have one believe that the opinion of mere girls made no difference to them, and a small minority arrived wearing a smug self-satisfied look and with their chests thrown out as if to say, "Look ME over, Big Boy. I just know that I meet the specifications." This latter class surely received a rude awakening for all four girls who wrote and Mrs. McMurray in her talk afterwards, stressed a lack of conceit in the ideal boy.

While there are a number of motives that led the boys to hear these essays, it is certan that all of us received real help from them. The following points were stressed:

1. The ideal boy must be a Christian. This does not mean merely having his name on the Church register. He must go farther than that and be an active Christian. He must have an interest in some organization and give of his means to promote the cause of Christ.

2. He is handsome, of medium height with regular features and should be slightly taller than his wife.

3. A sense of humor is absolutely essential. It seems that none of the girls are desirous of associating with a chronic "grouch" all their lives.

4. He must be athletic. This does not mean that he must be the star of some college team, but that he must have a genuine regard for outdoor sports and clean sportsmanship, must keep his own body in a clean, healthy condition, and must not impair his health, with vices such as smoking and drinking.

5. He must be intelligent. He shall have a college education or its equivalent, a love of good literature, and a deep appreciation for music and the fine arts.

6. The ideal boy must be ambitious. He must have a definite philosophy, a guiding principle, a definite goal in life. He must be an honest, practical business man but must not let his business take up all his time to the exclusion of his wife and home.

7. He must be a lover of home life. He should be a pal to his wife, a buddy to his children, and have enough masculine independence to prevent his becoming henpecked. He should be as genial, kind, and courteous in his home as he is elsewhere. If he follows these simple rules, his married life will simply be a prolongation of the honey-moon.

NEW YORK CHURCH WILL FURNISH $1000 LOAN

The Harlem Presbyterian Church of New York has established a $1000 loan to Maryville College. This church is led by the pastor, Rev. Andrew Richards, who graduated at Maryville in 1918. It is only through those that are trained in a school that the school lives. This loan from the Rev. Richard's church will add to the greater accomplishment of Maryville College.

"Atlantic Highlanders" Organized At Alumni Reunion At Princeton

To those of us in the Atlantic States who look back upon Maryville College as our Alma Mater, news of a reunion was most welcome. The seven Maryville boys at Princeton Seminary banded together, wrote letters to alumni members and former students in this section asking us whether we would be interested in a reunion, and upon their receiving favorable replies, the date of March 23 was set for the notable event.

A Welcome Committee which consisted of Wilbur Franklin, Bob Wood, and Gordon Harold, met us at the station. They had not forgotten the Maryville art of courtesy, and we certainly enjoyed being greeted in "that friendly sort o' way."

At "Headquarters" we met the rest of the Committee: Merlin Usner, Wick Broomall, Henry Welbon, and John Wriggins. We shall long remember No. 210 Brown Hall. About four o'clock tea was served, and how the tea and cookies did disappear! The cries of delight as classmates continued to arrive, the hearty handclasps, and—yea, even the sisterly kisses, made an afternoon of merriment seem all too short.

At 6:30 that evening the banquet took place at Warfield Club. The room was beautifully decorated in the favored orange and garnet. Of course there were many pennants adorning the walls, and one Alpha Sigma member was so liberal as to permit his stuffed owl to perch upon the mantel-piece as a symbol of the Athenian Society. Each table was abloom with bright orange flowers, and the orange and garnet streamers together with "springtime" place cards, created a color scheme that was perfect. No one seemed to know by whom the flowers were donated. Yet somehow, somewhere, the initials of C. G. H. were uttered, and our hearts were touched by Miss Clemmie Henry's thoughfulness. Even secrets do escape at times, and while we do not know by whom "the cat was let out of the bag", we are very glad to be able now to express our "thank you".

In addition to the splendid menu served, there was abundant palaver. Calls were made for "old lady" and "old man", and many of the Maryville yells were lustily given.

H. Gordan Harold served as Toastmaster. His genial manner, his wit and ability, contributed greatly toward the success of the evening's fun. The first number on the program was a poem by Myrtle Ardis written in honor of the occasion. By special request the writer quotes the poem and the encore.

(See page three)

The first toast "Highland Re-Echo" was given by Walter Buchanan (not the "Buck" of '28). As he spoke, he did "make the welkin ring". We listened carefully to his story because we knew that he had been most successful in moonshining as well as in his studies.

Wilbur Franklin next told us that as our hearts were turned toward Maryville, he would sing for us the appropriate selection: "Just A-Wearyin' for You." His sister Eleanor was unable to sing because of a sore throat. We regretted that we could not hear Maryville's nightingale, but we congratulate Wilbur for the treat he gave us.

Betty Keown then gave a toast to "Snappy Snaps". Betty herself is snappy, and her eyes snapped as she gave her toast. She took us back to the days of "catch me if you can."

Gordan Harold arose and showed us a very carefully tied package. Naturally there was a stir of excitement as the mysterious article was unwrapped. We learned that March 23 is the birthday of J. Gordan Jeffries. He was given a toy hand car with the admonition that he seek a partner to help run it. It so happened that the same date is "Pat" Farrar Packard's birthday. No one knew of this beforehand, so we sang "Happy Birthday" to her, and wished her continued happiness in her new role as mother. She is most proud of her baby boy who is now over five months of age.

Judge Boardman gave an alliterative toast to "Maryville Memories". We are very happy to have been able to hear this distinguished lawyer in reminiscences of college days. He impressed upon us the great service that Maryville renders to the world, particularly in the light of spiritual uplift.

Gordan then introduced to us Dr. E. C. McCulloch. He emphasized Maryville's growth during and since his student days. He is a loyal Maryville man, and we are proud to have a member of the medical profession as "one of us." He in turn introduced his able teacher and friend, Dr. John Grant Newman, as the speaker of the evening.

Dr. Newman gave us a talk that was a mingling of laughter and tears. Even as "Professor" Newman he was a brilliant teacher, so today he is a masterly speaker. He had us live with him those days of yore. We learned that then "boys were still boys", that Snap was Maryville's great social game, and that even though only one night a month could be used for moonshining, much work was accomplished in a short space of time. The poems he read to us were created with the brush of a master artist. We shall not forget his pictures of Tennessee, and the great heart of a farmer lad.

The banquet came to a close with the singing of our "Alma Mater" and the giving of a thundering "Howee How" that must have reverberated to Maryville.

Those of us who planned to spend the week-end in Princeton met in order to form an organization. The following officers were elected:

Dr. E. C. McCulloch - President
Rosalie Edmondson - Vice-President
Myrtle V. Ardis - - - Secretary
Merlin Usner - - - - Treasurer

A committee consisting of Roberta Buchanon, Warren Warman, Robert Lockhart, and the Secretary proposed the name of "Atlantic Highlanders", and it was unanimously accepted. A motion was passed that we meet at Princeton annually.

At last the hour arrived for some old-fashioned moonshining. It must have been "On such a night as this" that Jessica and Lorenzo had their now famous love scene. The great silvery orb touched the stately old buildings, and vast estates, with a magic light.

The list of charter members of the Atlantic Highlanders follows:

The vesper choir's Easter cantata was a great success. All the chorus numbers, solos, duets, etc., revealed the fact that considerable work had been spent on their preparation. Candles on the stage furnished a pleasant bit of decoration.

GARNET MANGES GIVES POST-GRAD RECITAL

Miss Garnet Manges, post-graduate in piano, will give, Monday at eight o'clock, the opening recital of a series to be given by graduates and postgraduates of the music department. All lovers of music are invited to attend. This promises to be one of the most brilliant affairs of the music department this year, Miss Manges being well-known and having often delighted Maryville audiences with her talent. She is at present assistant teacher of music in the Maryville City Schools.

Glee Singers Return From Three Day Trip

Train Trip From Chattanooga Causes Tour to Extend Into Three States.

March 30—By one o'clock this morning most of the Maryville Glee Singers were once more snoozing on their own beds. The bus brought them into Maryville at about 12:30 A. M. after what was, in many ways, the best of the three concerts presented on the trip just finished. This last concert was at Athens, Tennessee.

The first concert was presented at Richard City, Tenn., Wednesday night, in one of the finest grammar and junior high schools in the South. The program at Richard City was a distinct success in every way except that the audience was smaller than expected. Richard City was a really marooned town at the time of the concert, the only entrance being by railroad.

The club could not enter the city by bus on account of submerged roads. The trip from Chattanooga was by railroad, through the corners of two other states: Georgia and Alabama. Therefore, it may be truthfully said that the club toured three states; two, incidentally, however.

Thursday morning was spent in Chattanooga. Most of the club members went up Lookout Mountain, many for the first time. The quartet remained in town, broadcasting a forty-minute program from radio station WDOD, beginning at 1:00 P. M. Thursday the second concert was presented at Cleveland. Here, as at Richard City, the club members spent the night in private homes.

Lucy and Helen Horton, both M. C. alumni, were much in evidence at the high school where the concert was presented. Both are teachers there.

Friday morning the club came still closer home to Athens. The quartet sang at the chapel service of the high school in the morning. This day was spent in various ways by everyone. The concert Friday night was an excellent one with which to close the three day trip.

Ruth Chenoweth did creditable work in these concerts. Miss Molly

FRED HOPE'S CHURCH DESTROYED

A radio message has been received through the Presbyterian Board of Missions that the church of Cameron, Africa, has been struck by a tornado and destroyed. This is where Fred Hope has been carrying on his wonderful mission work since he graduated from Maryville and went into the mission service. No lives were lost although a few people were gathered there for some service that was to be held in just a short time.

The report says the natives went to work immediately and soon had five thousand dollars in gold raised to rebuild the church of brick. The church on this site was destroyed a few years ago by fire.

CONCERT TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Invitations have been issued to a twilight concert to be given on Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock in the chapel, this being part of the regular Chilhowee Club program. Miss Hale will at this time present her advanced pupils in a descriptive program which promises to be of unusual interest. The students in the piano department as well as a number of music lovers in Maryville have been invited to attend this program.

All Nature Helps to Make Annual Easter Parade Big Success

Authorities Despair of Ever Substituting Cards for Easter Flowers

SWEETHEARTS ON PARADE

Days of Preparation Precede Maryville's Distinctive Celebration.

(By Mabel Dickerson)

Easter Sunday at Maryville is different from any other Sunday or the Hill and is different from any other Easter anywhere in the world, for we can safely say that no other people have exactly the same traditions and customs for Easter or enjoy them in the same spirit. The very freshness of the dew and the glory of the sunrise calls one out to the sunrise service; the eggs for breakfast are a pleasant surprise; the flowers arriving in the girls' dormitories are greeted with excited pleasure; Easter finery is donned; and often—and then only—is everything in readiness for the big event of the day—the Easter Parade.

Now the Easter Parade is quite a unique affair, and rich with Maryville traditions. It is an institution at Maryvile just as mountain hikes, moonshining, and Saturday night wieners are Maryville institutions. It is the occasion when almost the entire student body blossoms forth in gala apparel, some of the girls wearing flowers, and both sexes with pocket-books which are appreciably leaner. That it is an important occasion is proven very clearly by the amount of preparation and thought before Easter.

Nothing less than Easter clothes would necessitate the girls such anxious hours of planning, such rushing about in the Knoxville stores, such hectic last-minutte shopping on Saturday afternoon, and the eleventh-hour sewing on ensemble suits which just must be finished for Easter morning. We wonder if it's worth it all. But it must be, for it happens every year just as sure as the season rolls around when the little Easter bunnies lay their vari-colored eggs.

The boys, too, have their anxious moments when they wonder if their allowance can possibly be stretched enough to buy these flowers, for he must keep up with the rest of the fellows and his girl must have what the other girls have. The bona fide Easter parade of the boys comes the Sunday before Easter, for they have an aversion to feeling conspicuously dressed on Easter Sunday, and like to be able to have a nonchalant and unconcerned air.

The week before Easter is composed of seven days of useless talk and speculation. What every girl on the Hill is going to wear is of prime importance to every other girl. The weather is a subject of great interest—there are those who are sure that it will rain, others who are just as positive that the sun will shine—optimists and pessimists argue together. And then when Sunday comes along Mother Nature lets her own plan be known.

All of this thought, planning, and preparation occupies more of the co-ed's mind than the study of lessons. This also accounts for her look of abstraction during her classes, and the far-away look in her eyes during chapel. All of this in order that she may display her wares to advantage in the Easter parade!

The girls, flower-like in their bright-colored dresses and hats come tripping down the church steps. Some of their dresses may have the faint perfume of gasoline or mothballs, some of the hats may be recreations of last year's but they all have a festive air. Some of them wearing flowers—by the way, Miss Mollie must have been discouraged this year about ever keeping the boys from spending their money on flowers—some of the girls peeping out from behind a huge bouquet of flowers with a self-conscious air.

Ah, no! For just outside the church door is the stag line, and soon the parade will have a double interest. Not only will it be an Easter Parade with all its accoutrements, but also will have the added zest of being "Sweethearts on Par-

Fifteen For April Fool!

Editorial Remarks are even briefer than usual this week. Being away with the Glee Glub has made it necessary to leave the paper almost entirely in the hands of the staff editors. They have done nobly in supplyig the necessary wherewithal to fill this week's columns.

It was indeed a pleasure to hear the Saturday morning chapel announcement concerning the remarkable degree of liberty and license to be granted to moonshiners this afternoon (Monday). A show in the afternoon and social privileges till 5:30. Hurrah for April Fool's Day! Now if the paper doesn't take too much time, all's well!

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Men Invade Practice House to Learn More of Home Management

Proper Method of Making Up Beds Is Among Various Things Disclosed.

(By Forrest I. Robertson)

In view of my recent opinion expressed in an article in The Highland Echo that the "bride's course for men" was likely to fail of its purpose because of the sudden feeling of man's independence, I now wish to don the whole bonnet of women and change my opinion. Maryville College is not only fitting wives for men, but also men to be good housewives.

Last Thursday Miss Meiselwitz, the champion of the cause, invited her Home Economics Class of twenty stalwart men to the Practice House for some practical home demonstrations. After explaining the theory of what a real home should be she proceeded to show us what it was. She took us into all parts of the Practice House explaining various conveniences and budget reports. She patiently though skillfully taught us how to make up a bed which looked so neat that, to a man, each vowed in his heart that he would make up his own when he got back. Of course, Algie, good fellow that he is, wanted to help but he only slowed up the process by placing the pillow on up-side-down.

Into the kitchen we went, and Ingram got quite an elated idea of himself as he recognized the room he was in and a few of the articles after having had cooking for only a few months. That is an achievement alright. Others were impressed too. Welsh, not because he is lazy but more because he is closely observant, noticed right off how conveniently the salt and soda and other articles were arranged so that they could be gotten without much effort.

To complete the investigation and demonstrations we were led into the spacious dining room, and there we were entertained by two young ladies, Miss Fronie French, and Miss Helen Crowder, who deftly went through the pantomine of breakfast, lunch, and dinner both formal and informal. Of course they used notes as most wise persons do, And it is only fair to Baker to say that he likes things explained right so why should everybody laugh when he requests that it be explained again how to pour coffee out of a tea-pot. Success of this experiment is remembered in every act.

I am thoroughly convinced that this will prove to be the most practical course for hen-pecked husbands that could be devised. While all men do not want to be hen-pecked, some are planning to be husbands. With this idea in view there is no more sensible way of preparing a permanent and real home than for men to become familiar with the principles of Home Economics.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

What has been gotten from the debate season this year?

—:—

Certainly we waited too long to begin winning to get victories.

—:—

We did not win enough to get fame.

—:—

We have not been eloquent enough to exert power.

—:—

We have not asked for special favors.

—:—

Trial by jury has not been abolished.

—:—

Neither has it been reformed.

—:—

The audience has not been informed of everything that it should have been, yet it has not grown weary.

—:—

Nobody has been inspired to write any poetry or euphonistic phrases about our sonorous pesuasion.

—:—

The Senate has not abolished its ules to follow our style of debating.

—:—

Our concurrent lessons, perhaps, have suffered fom it.

—:—

Oratory has not been greatly improved on.

—:—

Then what benefit has come out of debate?

—:—

There has been a building of character.

—:—

Our success from debating is not immediately but in the future.

—:—

He who debates fairly and conscienciously wins even when he loses.

—:—

There has been a fitting of brain-cells to tackle the problems of life.

—:—

"Much as I shoud like to do so, I cannot draw the line around my own favorite students in philosophy, nor the leaders in mathematics, nor those successful in biology; nor can I fairly award the palm to Phi Beta Kappa men who have excelled in all their subjects. It seems to me that stronger than any other group, tougher in intellectual fibre, keener in intellectual interest, better equipped to battle with coming problems, are the college debaters—the men who band themselves together for intellectual controversy with each other and with their friends from other colleges"—Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, Dean of the Experimental College of the University of Wisconsin and former President of Amherst.

VESPER CHOIR

The Vesper Choir is scheduled to sing at the State Convention of the Federated Music Clubs, which is to be held in Knoxville, April 9, 10, and 11 at the First Baptist Church. A contest will be held among junior choirs, but ours will not compete.

On Thursday afternoon, April 11, the choir, under the personal direction of Miss Frances Henry, will sing the processional and recessional, and a group of three songs. The first is, "Gloria en Excelsis" (from the Twelfth Mass) by Mozart; the second, Handel's "Largo", and the third, "Great Is the Lord" by Boex. Miss Adkins and Miss Hale will accompany the choir.

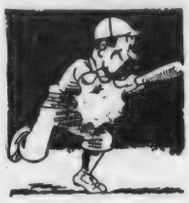
Generating Brain Power



BRAIN power, not horsepower, is the chief operating requirement of the electrical industry.

This requirement must be continuously anticipated to provide leaders for the future. Accordingly, each year, more than 400 picked college graduates come to the General Electric Company for a post-graduate course in electrical science.

With a faculty including inventors and engineers of international distinction, something more than electrical knowledge is imparted to these young men. Here they also find inspiration which prepares them for leadership in this electrical age.

You will see this monogram on the powerful motors of an electric locomotive and on the convenience outlet where you plug in a floor lamp—always and everywhere it is a safe guide to electrical quality and dependability.

Maryville Meets U. T. on Shields-Watkins Field for First Track Meet of Season. Prospects are Good

Racquet Wielders Lose to Ken.-State

March 28—Kentucky State's racquet wielders smashed their way to victory in straight matches in a tennis meet here today. The Highlanders showed plainly their lack of practice, due to wet outdoor courts and no indoor equipment.

Pope, Maryville captain, expressed his admiration of the Wildcats and his appreciation of the experience gained by our team in meeting so strong an opponent. A great deal of the new net material is showing up well, and we shall probably see some very close meets in the future.

The results of the Kentucky State meet are:

Doubles—Pope and Prince, M., lost to Ragland and Seuff, K. S., 6-3, 8-6. Coulter and King, M., lost to Brock and Hamersly, K. S., 6-2, 6-4.

Singles:—Kee, K. S. beat Prince, M., 6-3, 7-5. Hamersly, K. S. beat Coulter, M, 6-0, 6-2. Pope, M., lost to Ragland, K. S., 6-0, 6-1. Crawford, M., lost to Brock, K. S., 6-0, 6-2. King M., lost to Seuff, K. S., 6-2, 6-4.

The track needs more men like Georg—men who are able and willing to wield a rake when the occasion arises.

Highlanders Bow to Knoxville Smokies 5-4; Gabbard on Mound

Smokies Average Last Year's Defeat, But Find Coach Honaker's Boys Measure Up To Professional Standards. Bird Hits Home Run; Delaney and Davis Swat at Fast Clip.

March 30—Maryville College baseball team was nosed out in the ninth inning by the Knoxville Smokies here today.

It was a great game and held the interest of the crowd throughout. Coach Honaker's proteges looked mighty good for early season playing and promise to give as good an account of themselves this year as they did last.

The Smokies led in the scoring by forcing one in in the third, while it took the Highlanders till the sixth to get started. Then Wooten got on and Bird crashed through with a homer over left-field fence. In the eighth, Davis doubled, Delaney tripled, and Watkins bunted to account for two more runs.

In their half of the frame Knoxville tied the score, and in the last turn at bat, earned the winning run.

Gabbard, star Highland hurler, went the full route, allowing only seven scattered singles. He walked two and struck out one. In the words of the News-Sentinel, "He's a fine prospect for organized baseball to keep an eye peeled on."

The preachers are putting out a diamond aggregation this spring. You can tell by looking at Crosby's face.

George Fiegel says he'll make a good track, even if he don't make a track man.

Everyone Fascinated By Tumbling Stunts

Michigan Tumbling Team Makes Hit. Gym Revue Coming Soon.

March 26—The large crowd attending the annual Y.M.C.A. circus Tuesday night declared the event to be a great success. The program, although arranged on three day's notice, was one of the best we have had.

The show opened with a basketball game featuring Long-Distance Cooper, Julius Caesar, Jack Levinne, and Brute Crow. Farmer Watkins acted as official referee. The deciding goal was pitched by Brute Crow from the shoulders of a teammate, making the final score 8-6 in favor of the Parham Hill five.

A wrestling match between 200 pound Brute Crow and 75 pound Don Wilson demonstrated many heretofore unknown methods of attack and gave the circus attenders many thrills. Due to Crow's slight weight advantage, he won the match by two out of three falls.

Sarah Moore and Polly Covington proved to the audience that the girls really are learning the art of fencing after all. Their expert use of the foils caused many a sweet young thing to hold her breath in wonderment.

The big feature of the program was the Michigan Gym Troupe of Ypsilanti, Michigan. These six men are on a tour of the South during their spring holidays and consented to come to Maryville.

The gym team opened their part of the program with pyramid building. Then came tumbling, work on the parallel bars, and expert "riding" of the horse. The boys' breathtaking acrobatic stunts held the audience in suspense and amazement from the time the team took the floor until the end of their part of the program. They demonstrated good talent, both in individual and in team work.

The clown of the tumbling team kept the crowd in convulsive laughter all the time. Everyone was undecided as to whether he should be classed as man or monkey until he appeared at breakfast and proved to be an ordinary human being after all. The clown added his part to all of the team's program, but his funniest act was probably that of wrestling with himself. This act brought tears to the eyes of the observers! And as for playing monkey—this man did everything except swing from his tail! Everyone was sorry to see him get hurt in the latter part of the show. He tore a serious gash in his head on the parallel bars. He stated the next morning, however, that he was feeling fine. The team's next stop after leaving here was at Princeton, West Virginia.

At first it was intended that the circus be held on April 6, and that it be similar to the one held last year, but when the Ypsilanti boys agreed to come here the plans had to be changed.

A gym revue composed of local talent will be held about the middle of May. This event wil be similar to the circus of last year. There will be clowns, stunts, and all the things that go with a circus. The local tumblers, wrestlers, boxers and pyramid builders will show us what they have. The Y.M.C.A. cup will be awarded to the literary society giving the best stunt. This cup was won by Bainonian last year. Admission to the revue will be free. Our local talent proved to be good last year, and we know that we can expect something even better this time.

THE HIGHLANDERS' RETURN

We're marching along the highway of life,
And the signs on the road as we go
Read "Forward" and "Onward" at every post,
If we would follow the road.
Sometimes the way seems dreary,
At moments the path is gay,
But we keep advancing and plodding
From sunrise 'til sunset of day.
Yet always we come to the rest time,
And our load we are eager to leave,—
Because we know on the morrow
We go "onward" and "forward" indeed.

Well, comrades, we're here at old Princeton,
We are seeking to gain a new height,
So let's wander again down Memory Lane,
As our roads come together to-night.

You've failed? You've progressed? You struggle?
Go on, there is great work to do!
We must not give up in life's battle
The goal we've set out to pursue.
There's a hill in the distance? I know it,
There are mountains beyond we can't see,
But there's something behind you,—remember
The Hill that you climbed at M. C.?
Let's tramp for awhile in The Highlands,
Let's stray back to old College Hill,
For it's here Friendship's fire keeps a-glowing,
And radiates cheer and good-will.

Tonight we are pledging devotion anew,
Our faith is as firm as the famed Chilhowees,
Maryville College, your Alumni salute
The Orange and Garnet that floats on the breeze.

—Myrtle V. Ardis

MOONSHINE

It's springtime now in Maryville
And lovers stroll on College Hill,
The girls get flowers,—and the boys, the bill—
Oh, it's springtime now in Maryville!

—M.V.A.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The gymnastic exhibition the other night was not a circus. Why it should have been called one, I don't know. Some of those in charge say it was to overcome some technicality in the rules of the college; others say it was lack of preparation.

Whatever it was, it savored of the sort of business tactics that Maryville College neither supports nor appreciates. Advertisements appeared on the campus and in town selling the idea that the usual college circus would be put on in the gym, and no notices or announcements to the contrary were given.

Neither the students nor the people from town have objected on the grounds that they did not get their money's worth, for the exhibition was one of the best of its kind ever seen here, and deserved a place in our program.

It was merely a question of not getting what they paid for.

Even though a "stunt night" which will be free is to be held later on, the fact is that results of poor buisness principles are hard to erase.

TRIALS PREPARE TRACK MEN FOR U. T. MEET SAT.

Taggart, Williams, Holman, Vincent, Williamson, Crawford, Likely to Show Up Big Against Volunteers.

Track tryouts held here Saturday showed a fast group of cinder artists, and prophesy a close meet with U. T. While a bit weak in some of the field events, the team will stack up well against anything we meet this year. Considering the time of year, all races were run in good time, and the field events promise development.

The outstanding performances of the day were the hundred and two twenty headed by the old standbys, Taggart and Williams.

The hurdles showed that Vincent will not trail Crawford by a great distance in either low or high.

Vincent's high mark of 5 feet seven and a quarter inches in the high jump gave evidence of a smashed record before the season ends.

The half mile was a thrilling race, Holman nosing out Peterson by a few strides. Holman also took the quarter with Taggart, Williams, Absheer and Foreman in close succession.

Williamson ran the two mile in around eleven seconds.

Maryville will give the U. T. team a good meet and will, at least we hope, "bring home the bacon."

About Ninety Ballads Collected by Workshop

Societies Hear Programs In Which Ballads Are Featured.

(By Sarah Moore)

During the last two weeks the literary societies of the Hill have been reminded in an entertaining way of the work of a committee appointed by the Writers' Workshop for the collecting of mountain ballads. This committee arranged a program of such ballads which were presented to the women's literary societies one Saturday night, and to the men's societies on the next Saturday night. The program was enjoyed at both occasions.

Students who knew the ballads from childhood days were asked to give the program. The following program shows the types of ballads sung:

Hand Me Down My Walking Cane - - - - - Chorus
Old Smoky - Willie Nelle Harold
New River Train - - - Chorus
Fiddle Numbers - Edgar Shepard
Prisoner's Song, Willie Nelle Harold
Barbara Allen - Dorothy Franklin
Dese Bones Gwine Rise Again - - Mary Fitzgerald
Little Mohea - Dorothy Franklin
Jack and Joe
Lucky Jim - - - 'Gene Gabbard
Buck Dancing - - - Edward Ross
She'll Be Coming Round The Mountain - - - - - Chorus

To me, all these songs sounded very much as mountain ballads should sound—but "The Prisoner's Song"! To the best of my knowledge and belief a song of the same title, with a few changes in words and tempo was a Broadway "hit" in 1925. Was the Committee on Ballads, to speak vulgarly, trying to put something over on us? But no. I found rather that the mountain version of "The Prisoner's Song" was the original one which Broadway had popularized for a season. To quote from Carl Sandburg in his "American Song Book": "The Prisoner's Song, a 1925-1926 'hit', got its melody from The Ship That Never Returned and its verses from another oldtimer, Moonlight. From the homemade dulcimers of Pine Mountain to the repercussive banjoes and sobbing saxophones of Broadway was a long leap for this old tune. It will be fretted on the keyboards of those same dulcimers when Broadway has again tossed it to the ash cans. The manner and method of its next comeback is anybody's guess."

The files of the ballads collected by the Committee contain two variants of the song, "Moonlight", from which "The Prisoner's Song" got its verses. Another variant is given in "The American Song Bag."

One variant, from Tennessee, begins:

"I am going to the new jail tomorrow
Leaving my true love alone.
With the cold iron bars all around me,
And my head on a pillow of stone."

Then the singer proceeds to blame his predicament on his "black-eyed darling" and sings soulfully:

"Oh, I'm tired of living single,
And I'm tired of living alone.
I am tired of—" and so on.

The singer apparently counts on his handsome features to bring the pity of his "little darling", for he sings,

"When I'm dead and laid in my coffing,
And my pale face turned toward the sun,
Come, kneel by my side, little darling,
And think of the way you have done."

The second variant is from Kentucky. The singer seems to be a girl in this version, yet whoever heard of the heroine of any song whatever setting out for the new jail with its cold iron bars? But apparently she does just that. She seems to have a vivid imagination for she sings:

"I have a fine ship on the ocean
All lined with silver and gold
And Willie is somewhere asailin'
Far off so I am told."

Sung with the proper nasal twang the following lines must have been irresistible to any hard-hearted lover:

"O Willie, O Willie, Sweet Willie,
Where has my Willie gone?
He has gone to the sweet field of Eden;
He'll never, no never, return."

The committee has collected some eighty or ninety ballads and is still wishing for more. Nothing definite has been decided about the final disposal of the ballads, but the Workshop feels that a good work is being done in saving them.

The following have been selected to go to the convention: Viola Petitt, and John Wienand as extemporaneous speakers, Mary Fitzgerald and Forrest I. Robertson as orators, William R. Graham and Forrest I. Robertson for men's debate team, and Betty Jane Sharp and Mildred Crawford as debate team for women.

Professor Queener, Governor of the Kentucky Province will go.

THE EASTER PARADE

ade." They stroll along, not to the blare of trumpets, the beating of drums, or the jingle of the calliope. Their music is to be sure, the occasional honk of an automobile and the grinding of brakes but that is not the real accompaniment. The ringing of church bells, the low buzz of conversation, the friendly greetings, make a low sweet, accompaniment. Nor do the couples walk with a brisk and martial tread—their gait is nothing less than the customary Moonshine Crawl.

And now Easter is over, the gay attire is hung prosaically in the closet, the flowers are fading, the florist bills come in, the clothes bills go home to dad.—Ah, yes—the song is ended—but the melody lingers on.

THE IDEAL BOY

8. In general the ideal boy should be neat, attractive, forceful, not conceited, dreamy-eyed, no sissy, pleasant, silent when he has nothing to say, generous, economical, tactful, honest, and a true gentleman at all times.

Mrs. McMurray, in her talk which followed the reading of the four essays, emphasized the fact that personality counts far more than good looks. She said that her ideal man must be a Christian, speak the truth at all times, be pure in thoughts and conversation, be courageous, strong, just, not conceited, master of himself, sympathetic, progressive, and purposeful.

Maryville Falters in Final Events, Loses to U. T. 49-63

Track Team Shows Up Well Against Ancient Rivals. Taggart And Holman Staged Great Race to Outwit Tennessee's Combination on 440.

Knoxville, April 6—The Maryville Highlanders were beaten here today in one of the best track meets ever seen on Shields-Watkins field. U. T. stayed neck and neck in the scoring until the last two events, when Maryville failed to score the needed points. The relay race was run as an exhibition, since Tennessee already led by a safe margin.

The hundred yard dash, won by Winfrey of Tennessee, was not run in record time, but plenty fast for early season racing. Andees of U. T. trailed behind Williams in the two-twenty, the time being 22.5 seconds.

Stewart ran a pretty mile for Tennessee, and Peterson of Maryville came in second. Pete needs a little more confidence to make him take some firsts.

Davis did mighty well in the pole vault, getting his best height in this meet. However, he was not in the class of Prichett, Tennessee's ace, who went 11 feet, 6 inches before quitting. Ken has a couple more years to go yet, and we are expecting big things.

Carper stepped out to take first in the shot, Millsaps was nosed out of the javelin by inches, and Headrick threw the discus for a second place.

Crawford was up to par on the high hurdles, and crossed the tape in front of U. T.'s entree. On the low hurdles, Vincent got to striding along with celerity, and beat Billy Crawford on the finish to roll up eight points for the Highlanders.

Vincent went up toward the six foot mark, but was too tired to give U. T. springers a chase in the high jump.

Williamson was running his first race, and showed his inexperience by allowing his rivals to get out of striking distance. He had plenty left at the finish, and should have taken second place. As it was Underwood of Tennessee ran a great race in 10:36.

The prettiest race of the day came about the middle of the meet when Andees and Turner had Taggart, of Maryville in a box on the four-forty, and were figuring on an easy race. Holman, Maryville, saved the day by running around the group on the curve. This gave Taggart a chance to sprint on the straight away.

The largest crowd ever to attend a U. T.-Maryville track meet was in the stands when the gun barked for the hundred. The competition was spirited and the score close throughout. The events, winners, and records are.

100 yard dash—Winfrey, (T), Williams (M), Time: 10:1 sec.

220 yard dash—Williams (M), Andees (T), Time 22.5 sec.

1 mile—Stewart (T), Peterson (M), Time 4 min. 36 sec.

Pole vault—Pritchett (T), Corbett (T), Height, 11 ft. 6 in.

Shot put—Carper (M), Hugg (T), Distance, 35 ft. 1 in.

High hurdles—Crawford (M), Johnson (T), Time: 16.7 sec.

Low hurdles—Vincent (M), Crawford (M), Time: 26.3 sec.

2 mile—Underwood (T), McLaughlin (T), Time: 10 min. 36 sec.

1-2 mile— (T), Peterson (M), Time: 2 min. 5 sec.

High jump—Johnson and McGuffy (T), Height: 5 ft. 10 in.

Discus—Edwards (T), Headrick (M), Distance 113 ft. 10 in.

Javelin—McGuffy (T), Milsaps (M), Distance, 148 ft.

Broad jump—Corbett (T), Taggart (M). Distance 21 ft. 2.5 in.

440 yard dash—Taggart (M), Holman (M). Time, 53 sec.

Maryville also lost the relay race, using three men who had been in two or three events before. The final score was 68-49.

There will be a meet at home this week, when Maryville meets L.M.U. The one man track team they had last year will probably be along again, but he is enough to worry any six men of ordinary ability. So the fellows are looking for a big scramble for the first places next Saturday. Let's get out there and show the boys we are back of them and expect them to deliver the goods.

Lois Miles, Senior, Elected May Queen

"The Conspiracy of Spring" to Be Made Public on May 1st.

(by Edith Nash)

If there is any truth in the old proverb that "April showers bring forth May flowers", Baldwin lawn should be a very suitable setting for the array of organdie frills and dainty ribbons on May the first. In fact, we are sure that Baldwin lawn will be the center of all the fair Maryville lads and lassies,—clad in their Sunday best to witness the crowning of the Queen of May. Not only will the Queen be crowned, but she and the King will be accompanied by beautiful attendants, together with the tiny brown earth sprites, velvety-winged butterflies, and the sweetest and most gorgeous flowers of all woodland.

Much preparation is being made to make this May-Day program successful in every way. Of course, the first thing which had to be done was the election of a candidate from each class for Queen of May. The seniors chose Lois Miles; the juniors, Mary Ella Sullivan; the sophomores choice fell to Virginia Osborne; and the freshman representative is Virginia Crider. During these "trying" days many of the more comely maidens stood before mirrors considering their possibilities (or impossibilities!). As for the young men,—well, this May-day affair is really a girl's game,——yet there are a lucky few!

At a recent meeting of the student body Lois Miles, the senior candidate, was elected Queen in accordance with an established tradition. The other candidates will be the attendants.

Virginia Sting has charge of the program which promises to be unusually good. A one-act play, "The Conspiracy of Spring", will be given. The characters are:

The Queen—Spring - - Lois Miles

Maids-in-waiting

Arbutus - - - Gladys Hayes
Trillium - - Mildred McKenzie
Hepatica - - - Jane Duke
Zephyr - - - Nellie Caldwell
First Earth Sprite - - Mary Lovette
Second Earth Sprite - - - Roberta Hickman
Third Earth Sprite - - - - Mildred Crawford
Robin Redbreast - Jeannette Moore
Butterfly - - - Lois Cupler
Rivulet - - Marjorie Nelson
Blue Sky - - - Margaret Haynie
Dawn - - - Mildred Taylor
Flower Folk
Little Earth Mortal - - - Marion Huddleston

The Y. M. and Y. W. will serve refreshments. (Advice to freshman: Be sure to bring your pocketbooks!)

VESPER CHOIR DRAWS STORM OF APPLAUSE BEFORE MUSIC CLUBS

The forty members of our Vesper Choir appeared on the program of the Federated Music Clubs on Thursday afternoon at the First Baptist in Knoxville.

This organization in their vestments marching in dignified processional down the aisle of the large church, made an imposing opening, after which they sang Handel's beautiful Largo and Great is The Lord by Boax. These numbers, given without direction, were led only by Miss Henry's lovely voice, she also taking the solo parts. Miss Adkins accompanied.

As the last notes of the recessional died away in the Amen there was a prolonged pause as if the listeners hesitated to disturb an effect so beautiful, then a storm of applause broke forth that showed the true appreciation of the audience.

In fact so enthusiastic were they that at the end of the program an invitation was extended the choir to give a concert in one of the large Knoxville churches, demonstrating

"Beyond The Horizon" Is Theta Alpha Phi Senior Benefit Play

Thursday Night Is Date For Presentation of Pulitzer Prize Winning Play.

The Theta Alpha Phi Dramatic Fraternity presents "Beyond the Horizon", as the senior benefit play, Thursday, April 18. This drama by the peer of American dramatists, Eugene O'Neill, won the Pulitzer prize in 1920. The author portrays with painstaking clarity the grim reality of life. A fragile young poet afflicted with the wanderlust and on the verge of making a sea voyage over the world finds that his love for a young daughter of the farm country is requited. They marry and he settles down to the bitter toil of farming, while his brother, unsuccessful in his suit for the girl's hand, travels in his place. The brother returns, disillusioned of his love, to discover the dreamer in the most advanced stages of tuberculosis. The wife has tired of her husband's beautiful fancies and she, too nurses a dulled and deadened affection. The story climaxes abruptly with the pathetic death of Robert, the youthful idealist. The play's appeal, for all of its sad gloom, is magnificent.

Next Year's Echo Staff Is Elected

Editor-in-Chief Will Soon Be Chosen by New Staff.

April 5—The Highland Echo Committee on Selections met this afternoon to elect the staff members for next year. Those elected are: staff editors, Jesse Peirce, Forrest Robertson, Edith Nash, and Samuel Kidder; junior associate editors, Edwin Buchanan and Hessie Keaton; sophomore cubs, Bob Overly, Kathryn Hodges, Nellie Aills, Julia Terry, Lucy Voorhees, and Phil Brown.

The work of the various staff members during the past year was reviewed; in the discussion preceding the voting the column inch record of individual work, and the interest shown was given as fair consideration as possible.

The first positions to be filled were those of the four staff editors. In the filling of these positions the Regulations provide that only the two sections of the committee representing the student body and the faculty shall have a right to vote. Therefore, the representatives from the Echo (the present staff editors) withdrew, leaving the filling of these important positions in the hands of the other members. The committee as a whole elected the remaining members.

The election of the editor-in-chief will be held sometime during the next few weeks. The editor-in-chief will be elected by members of the new staff. One of the four staff editors will receive this job.

The new staff as elected is complete. Probably, however, it will be found necessary to fill several unlooked for vacancies next Fall. At any rate the filling of such vacancies has been made easier since the student body's recent adoption of several amendments to the Echo Regulations.

Bob Jensen in Europe in Westminster Choir

Only First Year Man to Make Trip; Is President of His Class.

SANG IN LONDON APRIL 7

Had Enviable Scholastic and Extra Curricular Record While on Hill.

Albert Morini in the Dayton Herald says: "When the Dayton Westminister Choir sailed from New York, March 20 on the Leviathan for its European tour it entered upon a trip which, because of the cities and places in which it will sing, will result in a venture of international significence."

Maryville people will read the above with interest because one of the "sixty surpliced choristers" (as the New York Sun describes the singers) is Bob Jensen, a Maryville man, who will be remembered not only as the young blonde psychology teacher, but also for the popularity and splendid record that he gained as a student.

The Westminister Choir School of Dayton, Ohio was founded by Dr. John Finley Williamson for the purpose of training ministers of music. The ideal of the choir looks for trained leadership in church music, and only Christian men and women are admitted to the choir and sixty of them are on the tour. The choir left Dayton February 8 and appeared in several large cities in the East. On March 6, they sung for Hoover at the White House. The tour calls for engagements in England, Germany, France and Austria Hungary. The first London appearance was at Albert Hall on April 7. The present schedule calls for 37 concerts on the continent, but it is possible that Holland and Russia will also hear the choir. Morini declares that there is no mixed chorus in Europe to compare with the choir. The return to America will be made near the middle of July when the Westminister singers will take up their future headquarters at Ithaca, New York.

As a student here, Bob Jensen made a brilliant record. That he had capacity for leadership is evidenced in the fact that he was director of the Glee Club, President of

E. Tenn. Oratorical Contest Here Friday

Forrest Robertson Will Represent Maryville on Home Platform.

The East Tennessee Oratorical Contest will be held here Friday night, April 19. The colleges in this league are Maryville College, Milligan College, Carson-Newman College, University of Tennessee, and University of Chattanooga. Florian Hopkins of our school is president of the league and Dr. Hunter is secretary.

Forrest I. Robertson, our college orator, will speak in this contest on the subject: "Give the Laborer a Chance". Unless the plans be changed the contest will be held in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium in Thaw Hall. The winner in this contest will meet the winner from the West Tennessee League for the state championship. This year the state contest will be held at Knoxville.

Another oratorical contest to be held on the Hill is the Bates Oratorical Contest. Dr. Hunter announces that only three names with the manuscripts were handed in at the expiration of the time for entering. These were the works of Hayden Laster, Hubert Welsh, and William Barnard. The subject of Laster's oration will be "Not by Bread Alone." Welsh's is "The Great Smoky Mountain National Park", and Barnard wrote on "Citizenship between Elections."

This contest will be held sometime before the end of school, but the date has not yet been set. The winner in this prize contest receives forty-five dollars as a reward.

The University of Chicago claims a record in having the oldest freshman enrolled. The frosh is 72 years old.

Maryville Wins By 100 Points at Pi Kappa Delta Convention. 7 Teams Represent Their Colleges in Contest

Boys Win Six Easy Decisions. Winners Defeat M. C. Girl Debaters.

ORATORICAL HONORS OURS

Viola Petitt Takes First In Extemporaneous Speaking. James Places Second.

The Provincial Pi Kappa Delta Convention held at Lexington, Kentucky at Transylvania University, April 8 and 9 was a great success and very interesting. This was the Kentucky Provincial Convention which includes the seven colleges in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Indiana having chapters in the Pi Kappa Delta Fraternity. These colleges are Maryville, Tusculum, Centre, Kentucky Wesleyan, Georgetown, Franklin, and Transylvania. Each was represented at the convention.

There were forty-nine student contestants, some of whom were entered in two events. Eleven faculty members were there accompanying their teams. Eleven men's debating teams were entered, Centre, Kentucky Wesleyan, Georgetown, and Transylvania each being represented by two. Six rounds were necessary to determine the winners. Six girls' teams were entered. In oratory seven men and four girls were entered. There were seven extemporaneous speakers, all the schools being represented, and five girls.

Maryville won the highest number of points. The standing was as follows: Maryville 435, Transylvania 335, Centre 270, Kentucky Wesleyan 185, Georgetown 135, Tusculum 135, and Franklin 50.

The delegation from Maryville that did this work was Professor Queener, Governor of the Province, and coach in debate and extemporaneous speaking; Dr. Hunter, coach in oratory; William R. Graham and Forrest I. Robertson, men's debate team; Mildred Crawford and Betty Jane Sharp, girls' debate team; Mary Fitzgerald and Forrest I. Robertson, orators; Viola Petitt and J. Stuart James, extemporaneous speakers. This was a new experience for the students but only added to the thrill.

Maryville in Debate

The debating end of the convention took up the greatest part of the time and perhaps attracted the most attention. Dr. Hunter was chairman of the debating—and one of his little odd jobs was to find forty-eight judges for the first round. The teams drew for sides and opponents for the first round. Then the next round they changed sides and opponents. Two losses eliminated a team. The debates were held in classrooms, sometimes with only the three judges and the chairman for audience. There were three rounds Monday afternoon—at the close of which the boys had not lost a debate, and the girls had lost one. The teams succeeded pretty well in remembering when changing sides every hour, not to call their colleagues their opponents, or to prove the opposition's points for them.

Tuesday morning the girls were eliminated in the semi-finals by the champions, which gave them third place, and fifty points for Maryville. The boys' team gave an almost phenomenal performance by winning three more debates Tuesday morning—and thus taking first place at the convention and a hundred points. To win six debates in succession, debating every hour and changing sides each time, is a real achievement in forensic art. Moreover, four of the six debates were three to nothing decisions, meaning that of the eighteen votes cast, only two were against Maryville. Georgetown took second place in boys' debate, and Transylvania third. Kentucky Wesleyan placed first for girls. Surely Maryville has reason to be proud of her debate team.

Maryville in Oratory

The oratorical contests were held Monday night in the chapel. The girls' contest was at eight o'clock. In this Mary Fitzgerald won first place for Maryville. Four students

Campus Is Receiving Its Spring Grooming

New Shrubbery and Flowers Add Beauty for Benefit of June Visitors.

To those on the Hill who possess the faculty of observation it has become evident during the last few days that the annual campus beautification campaign is on. We welcome it heartily as we have in the Springs of previous years for there is really quite a number of improvements which are made with the help of Nature. Nature is ready to do her best now and with a little encouragement from us she will bestow a beautiful campus upon us.

The tulip bulbs donated by the Knoxville club and planted during the Christmas holidays have grown nicely. The beautiful slender tulips in front of Pearsons add yet another attraction in addition to those existing there now.

The shrubs planted recently in the rectangle by the postoffice relieve the harshness of that bare section considerably. Those which were planted around Bartlett were also placed to good advantage.

One of the most promising of the improvements of the gardeners is the work which was done on the high bank along Court Street and the railroad. Vines have been set out at regular intervals on this bare land. In a few years we may expect this part of the campus to present a more pleasing appearance to all travelers on Court Street. The vines will also keep the bank from washing down into the street as it does at present.

More gardening work has been done around Carnegie, including the making of flower beds and sodding in certain places, and there are indications that more is to be done.

While the College is doing all it can to beautify the campus it remains with the students, to a considerable extent, to determine whether it is kept beautiful. It

James, Elected Next Years Y. M. President

Dark Horses Win Over Committee Nominees In Race For Two Offices.

April 9—The election of Y.M.C.A. officers for the school year 1929-1930 took place this evening in the auditorium of Bartlett Hall. About 130 men were present and interest ran high as it always does at Y elections. The voting proceeded in an orderly manner, however, and there was no such disturbance as there sometimes is at this important event.

The president, conducting the election, made it clear at the beginning that every man was expected to vote as he pleased and no one should be influenced by any pressure brought to bear on him by anyone else.

Although a nominating committee had selected two candidates for each office, several men were nominated from the floor, two of those elected being so nominated.

John Taggart and Hayden Laster were nominated by the committee for president. Taggart withdrew before a vote was taken but offered no explanation for his withdrawal. J. Stuart James was then nominated and the vote taken. James defeated Laster by a very slight majority.

Earl Blazer and Carl Story were presented as candidates for vice-president. Stiles McMillan and Morgan Biggs were nominated in addition. Blazer and Biggs were eliminated after the first vote. Story won in the final count.

The nominating committee selected Bob Jones and Tom Whitehead as nominees for secretary and Morgan Biggs was nominated from the floor. Whitehead was dropped after the first vote. Biggs received a small majority in the run-off vote.

John Pectol defeated Homer McCann in the race for the position of treasurer.

Our Vanishing Orators

We do not believe that orators are so few in Maryville. We believe there are enough. But why has so little interest been shown among the men of the junior and senior classes this year in the preparation for the Bates Oratorical contest? Dr. Hunter tells us that sixteen names were given to him some time ago as students entering the contest. A number of these reported only a few days before the time closed for handing in manuscripts that they were almost ready. Yet in the end only three were entered. We do not know the cause for the lack of interest shown but this number is too small for a date to be given to it as a part of the commencement program. Some may regret that they did not work when they realize that they might have won forty-five dollars. Surely it could not be that some think they have no chance to win and therefore there is no use to try. Again they may be disappointed when the contest is over and they realize that they might have written an oration as good as that of the winner. Of course it will make it easier for those who have entered and increase their chances, but at the same time it will decrease the pleasure of winning for someone by the same proportion.—F.I.R.

——Miss Hale attended the meetings and concerts given in Knoxville on Wednesday, Thursday ad Friday by the Federated Music Clubs of Tenessee, and reports enthusiastically concerning the addresses and the fine programs given by leading musicians of the State. Miss Adkins also attended some of the sessions.

——Boys have been informed through the medium of the Carnegie bulletin board that the tennis court behind Memorial is for girls only except at certain very definitely specified times. Other than at these times the boys are not invited, either as players or as spectators.

——The orchestra concert last Monday night was a decided success. The opening number was especially good. Speaking personally, we believe that this was the best orchestral program ever presented on the Maryville stage.

——Miss Butcher's direction was not so emphatic as we have seen it, but the music certainly has not suffered from the change.

——Will some organization please put on a program in chapel before school closes and manipulate the lights without a single hitch? We admit it would be a job with the switchboard equipment that must be used, but we would like to see it done.

——The way Carper and Shepard act when they ride from Knoxville in a dark bus is something terrible. Shepard says it is no wonder that Carper is such a shiek with such technic.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Miss Jewell: What do they call the instrument the French used for beheading people?

Tom Dixon: The Gillette, I think.

Johnny: (asking for the third helping of potatoes)—Mother, pass the potatoes!

Mother: Johnny, you're a little pig.

Dad: Son, do you know what a pig is?

Johnny: Sure, it's a big hog's little boy.

Jesse Peirce: It's all wrong about these Irish being good fighters.

Ed Driscoll: Yeh?

Jesse Peirce: Once up north, my brother and I and two other fellows licked an Irishman. Sure!

Partee: Did you fill your date last night?

John MacKensie: I hope so; she ate everything in sight!

Our Revised Proverb: A bird in the hand is not good table manners.

He: "I've never seen such dreamy eyes."

She: "You've never stayed so late before."—Judge.

Bride: My husband had a hope chest, too, before we were married.

Neighbor: For mercy sake! What was in it?

Bride: A bushel of socks—he hoped some one would darn 'em.

"Say, what's the idea of wearing my raincoat?"

Roommate: "Well, I got your suit on and I didn't want to get it wet."

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

"I've heard plenty of big tales but the tails on these comets are the biggest and longest I've ever heard of."—Dick Spainhour, in Astronomy class.

"I think those Greek poets made mistakes and then just invented rules to make what they wrote all right."—Vera Coy.

"Why does that man stand out in the middle and hold out his arms?"—Margaret Brigman, at the ball game.

"The knockers are still with us."—Dr. Stevenson.

"I want to tell you a little joke."—Prof. Griffitts.

——Miss Mollie put a damper on part of Miss Henry's plans for a big night for the choir in Knoxville. Choir members seemed less surprised and aroused by the last minute prohibition than Miss Henry. They thought such liberty was too good to be true.

——The big national photographic contest being sponsored by the Eastman Kodak Company will probably have some entries from Maryville College. Why shouldn't there be prize-winning pictures from here? There is a wealth of picture material, especially at this time of the year.

By Logic B. Reasons

When you get a thrill out of hard work is being at a Pi Kappa Delta Convention.

—:—

The results from the convention show Maryville in a flying finish.

—:—

Bill Graham says: "I can't believe it is true yet."

—:—

The test of debating comes in beating a good team on both sides of the question.

—:—

Six straight victories against the cream of the colleges equals won pleasure.

—:—

"Any team that does that is good"—Professor Queener, Governor of Kentucky Province.

—:—

Robertson still worries a little because two of the victories were not unanimous.

—:—

Judge Romeo Stuart James suddenly got popular when he won second place in extemporaneous speaking, was elected secretary of the Province, and was at the same time elected president of the Y. M. C. A. back at Maryville.

—:—

When he got lost though, was when he started to ride with that Tusculum girl.

—:—

Then too, we can't keep from thinking of that little "Darling Dog" Betty Jane found.

—:—

We had gone up that way because she dreamed she had seen three red headed men go that way in a coupe.

—:—

To show how composed she was Mary shut her door and slept all morning.

—:—

It was Viola who was so thrilled at seeing one of those fast Kentucky horses, but it turned out to be only white mule.

—:—

What bothered her more was that so many wanted to know if she were sixteen.

—:—

Mildred, of course, being the mascot of the team was just taken along for luck.

—:—

The orators had to ride the horses of a dilemma. It was either miss the banquet or miss the oration victory or miss both.

—:—

Most of them missed both.

—:—

A great amount of the success and pleasure of the delegates was due to the support of our friends and school back at Maryville.

Harold Bird Plays Class "B" Baseball

Knoxville Smokies Borrow Star Shortstop. Gene Gabbard Being Watched by Big Leagues.

"Tillie" Bird, Maryville short stop supreme, made such a hit with Manager Schepner when the Highlanders played his club, that the Smokies asked Bird to play the shortfield position in a three game series with Milwaukee.

"Tillie" surely proved that Coach Honaker knows how to turn out real baseball stuff. John Stone did not just happen to be a ball player. Neither did "Tillie". Honaker just made out well with a lot of natural ability to work with.

Anyhow, Bird's fielding was practically flawless, and he hit the old apple hard enough and often enough to make the "old timers" sit up and take notice.

In the first game of the series Harold knocked a three bagger, in the second round he tapped out a single and two triples. In the last fracas he got one hit.

Playing one game of the series against Columbus, Bird got three hits out of four trips to the plate. The big leagues would pay well for a man with a batting eye like that. Bird is quite likely to go up to class "A" baseball if he wants to.

Gabbard is another protege of Maryville's diamond who will probably get a chance to cash in on his ability as a baseball player. Gene is a real pitcher, with a good arm, plenty of control, and a steady mind. The big leagues are keeping an eye peeled.

Y. W. C. A. ELECTION

In the Y. W. C. A. election last week, the following officers were chosen:

President - - - - Louise Carson
Vice President - Mary E. Deaderick
Treasurer - - Willie Nelle Harold
Secretary - - - - Julia Terry
Nu Gamma Chairman - - - Carol Cushman

The election was considerably less spectacular than that conducted by the Y. M. C. A. Voting was done by secret ballot. The ballot box was placed in the vestibule of Thaw Hall. Some votes were collected which were so evidently of masculine origin that they could not be counted. Man's voice is entirely futile in such feminine matters as this.

Next year's cabinet will be chosen this week.

Yearlings Nose Out Seniors In Annual Interclass Meet

Relay Race Thrills Large Crowd Assembled to See Men Pile Up Points for Respective Classes. Final Score, Seniors 30, Juniors 39, Sophs 22, Frosh 44.

April 13—With Everett Vincent taking four first places to garner almost half of his teams' points, the freshmen today swept through the inter-class track meet to win over the juniors by five points. The final count was: freshman 44, juniors 39, seniors 30, and sophomores 22. The meet was fiercely waged at all times, and a large gallery of spectators was kept in a constant fever of excitement, the climax of which was reached when the final event, the relay, took place.

Williams and Peterson were the sole senior representatives, except in the relay, and between them carried away five first places, a second, and third for a total of 29 points. Billy Crawford and Headrick were unable to be on deck, as they were competing in a wrestling meet at Richmond, Virginia.

For the juniors, Taggart proved to be the big scoring ace, ably assisted by "Big Boy" Carper.

Ken Davis, of the sophomores scored heavily for his team—while his running mate, George Williamson, finished far ahead in what is perhaps the most gruelling event of any track meet, the two mile.

"Diz" Vincent snatched four first places for the freshmen, and, when already well spent, ran fourth position in the relay to finish ahead. His performance was perhaps the most brilliant ever seen in an inter-mural meet and was the determining factor in the plebes' victory. Figuring in 1 1-4 points for his share of the relay, he scored 21 1-4 out of the total of 44 points. Too much credit cannot be given his teammates, who worked hard to take the second and third places—which all meant something when it came to figuring up the totals.

Following is a list of the events and those who took first place in each:

100 yard dash—Williams (S.) 10.4 seconds.
220 yard dash—Williams (S.) 24.0 seconds.
High jump—Vincent (F.) 5 ft. 4 in.
Shot put—Wilson (F) 36 ft. 9 in.
One mile—Peterson (S.) 4 min. 51.6 seconds.
Discus throw—Carper (J.) 99 ft. 6 inches.
Pole vault—Davis (So.) 9 ft. 3 in.
High hurdles—Vincent (F.). 17.3 sec.
Broad jump—Vincent (F.) 21 ft.
Two mile—Williamson (So.) 10 min. 58 sec.
440 yard—Taggart (J.) 55.2 sec.
Javelin throw—Peterson (S.) 148 ft.
Low hurdles—Vincent (F.) 27.4 sec.
Half mile—Peterson (S.) 2 min. 9.6 sec.
Relay—Absheer, Foreman, Bratchie, Vincent—Freshmen.

Baseball Team Lacks College Opposition

L. M. U. First College Game of Season Here Wednesday and Thursday. Interest Likely To Be Revived in These Games

Maryville has found it difficult to get college baseball games this year, due to the fact that many schools have abandoned the national game. However, the two game series with L. M. U. here this week will add the collegiate touch so lacking in games with the pros and semi-pros. Let's get out and back the boys up in this series—we want both games!

April 4—Maryville's Highanders took the heavy end of a 2-0 score in baseball Thursday afternoon on their home field against the celebrated Lenoir City nine.

Gabbard started on the mound for Maryville but was relieved by Park at the end of the second inning. Gabbard had the situation well in hand while he was in the box retiring the opposition on both occasions without a hit.

Park, our southpaw star, held Lenoir City scoreless throughout the game allowing only two hits. He was never in danger. Huffman started on the mound for Lenoir City but was relieved by Summitt at the end of the fifth inning. Both pitched a good brand of ball allowing the Highlanders only three hits during the game, one of which was a double by Smith in the seventh.

The greatest thrill of the game came in the sixth inning when, with Delaney on first, Watkins sent a hot grounder to center field for a safe hit. Delaney went to third. The fielder threw to second to catch Watkins but the ball went wild and Delaney scored. Watkins attempted to score but was caught between third and home.

The feature of Maryville's work in the field was the perfect double play in the second inning, Smith to Blazer to Davis.

The Highlanders lost to the Smokies last Monday 5 to 2. Maryville failed to bunch the hits, and allowed the professionals a few scattered singles. Gabbard pitched the entire game, tossing airtight baseball.

APPLICATIONS FOR BUSINESS MANAGER ARE NOW IN ORDER

Between April 15 and 30 the business manager and assistant business managers for the 1929-1930 Highland Echo are to be chosen. One business manager and three assistant business managers are chosen. Applicants not now connected with the staff should present letters or other evidence of their business experience to the committee on selection. The members of the joint Faculty-Student committee are: Tom Whitehead, Anna Lou Miller, Marion Johnson, and Professors Davis, Walker and Hunter. Applications should be in the hands of the committee by the 24th. In the selection, preference is given to those now on the staff, although their reappointment is not obligatory.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

U. T. as usual won the track meet. That is not surprising, in view of the fact that the university has such a large group from which to pick a team. It was a great meet, and those who did not see it will fail to appreciate that statement.

Tennessee had the advantage at the start, for Maryville took along only fifteen participants, the number that are supposed to be entered in a dual meet, whereas U. T. entered over twenty men. It can readily be seen that men who have already run in two events cannot hope to compete with men who are fresh. Coach Thrower was anxious to see that the contract for next year included a clause to the effect that not more than fifteen men be entered from either school, but since U. T. had nothing to gain and everything to lose, Coach Britton refused. This year we could have beaten any fifteen men they have.

U. T. made just one error in her well planned meet. That came in the four-forty, when Turner and Andees tried to win by boxing Taggart in a pocket all the way round. It leaked in one particular—they forgot that Maryville had two good quarter-milers. Holman saw what was up, and started around the Tennessee men on the corner, running a great deal further than he would ordinarily have to run. This, of course, made a break for Taggart, who jumped out of the hole and finished a stride ahead of Holman. Maryville took first and second.

We hope that some agreement can be reached whereby the two teams will be on an equal footing numerically, and thus make these annual meets more interesting to both schools.

STATE W. C. T. U. SPONSORS CONTEST

The state organization of the W. C. T. U. is sponsoring an oratorical contest on a temperance theme: "Give Prohibition a Chance; the Liquor Traffic Had Its Day!" The plan is to have a contest between college students in the Eastern end of the State in which a winner is determined who will go to Nashville late in May to meet other sectional winners in a state contest, a prize of $100 being offered.

The word regarding this has come to us late, but there is still a possibility of our participation under some such plan as this: Let speakers prepare a six minute talk on the subject somewhat after the order of a Systematic Discourse speech and all the speeches be delivered, perhaps in Chapel some morning, before judges from the Faculty or from the town and a winner selected. This winner would then expand his speech to twice or three times the original length. If the University of Tennessee selects a representative, then these two winners would meet to determine the regional winner. If there is such a contest in this end of the state a prize of $25 will be given the winner. If our contest were to be the only one then the W.C.T.U. organization agrees to pay the expenses of our representative to the state contest at Nashville.

This contest is open to men and women both and to students of all classifications. A tentative date might be set at April 26. There must be as many as five entrants in the local contest to satisfy the conditions of the W. C. T. U. Professor Hunter is in charge of the plans for this contest; students who wish to enter it or who wish to discuss entering it are requested to see him before noon Wednesday, the 17th.

Saturday Night Societies

Bainonian—Athenian

The semi-annual celebration is about to be held for the last time this school year. Bainonians and Athenians will have their joint meeting in the Y.W.C.A. auditorium next Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock. One number on the program that has been highly recommended is a short play entitled "The Eligible Mr. Bangs". There will be readings, and an orchestra, with lots of good eats besides.

Theta Epsilon—Alpha Sigma

The Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma joint meeting next Saturday promises to be quite a bit different from the usual. The program secretaries have arranged the program to include:

Saxophone Trio
Alpha Sigma Quartet
Chalk Talk - - Corky Crawford and Charles Webb
Theta Epsilon Quartet
Hawaiian Guitar - - - - Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz
Reading - - Nelle Caldwell

It is hoped that many of the members of both societies will come to the meeting for it's the "best thing of the season."

RESOLUTIONS

April 3, 1929.

Whereas, God in his infinite love, mercy and wisdom hath seen fit to call unto Himself the father of our beloved friend and classmate, Cyril Brown, be it resolved:

That we, the members of the junior class herewith extend our heartfelt sympathy for his loss.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be read in chapel, a copy printed in the Highland Echo and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Respectfully submitted,
Eva Thomas,
Mary Elizabeth Deaderick,
Linton Coulter.

PI KAPPA DELTA CONVENTION

were entered in this contest and Mary must have been inspired by some magic, judging from the beautiful way in which she delivered her oration on "The New South".

The men's contest was held at nine o'clock. Seven students were entered in this. Professor Queener, who presided characterized the contest as one of high calibre. Maryville failed to place in this.

Maryville in Extemporaneous Speaking

Tuesday morning the contests in extemporaneous speaking were held. The general subject was "Politics". Viola Petitt, our girl representative, spoke on "Ma Ferguson in Politics" and won first place in a contest in which five girls were entered. Somehow a number of the girls had already picked Viola as a dangerous competitor before the contest started. started.

J. Stuart James spoke in the men's contest in which seven people were entered. He spoke on "Corruption in Politics" and won second place.

The banquet was a rather interesting part of the convention. This was held Monday night at the University. At this time J. Stuart James was elected Secretary of the Kentucky Province. Mr. James also acted as a judge for three debates in the tournament.

Another person in whom we are interested was Miss Margaret Lewis who graduated from Maryville in the Class of '27 and is now teaching at Transylvania. She acted as a judge in the extemporaneous speaking contest for girls.

Our delegates left the Phoenix Hotel at two-thirty Tuesday afternoon and arrived back at Maryville at midnight.

Professor Queener, governor of the Province, expressed his satisfaction with the success of the convention as a whole and with Maryville's part to make it a success. He said that the work of Dr. Hunter in taking charge of the tournament was absolutely invaluable. Professor Queener is now beginning plans to go to the National Convention to be held at Wichita, Kansas, next year.

Second Expression Recital is Tonight

Mary White, Roberta Hickman, and Evelyn Sherard on Program

Monday night in the chapel there will be given the second recital for graduates in expression. At this time there will be presented three graduates of the department.

"Jeanne d' Arc" by Mac Kaye will be presented by Miss Mary White. In this selection there is a portrayal of Jeanne's call to service and the time that she receives the vision to have Charles crowned. This is a dramatic offering and will be enjoyed very much. Many will remember Miss White because of her outstanding part in "Applesauce".

"A Wedding Day" by Kirk Patrick is a humorous account of a man getting ready for his own wedding, and who has the terrible misfortune of losing his collar button. All the troubles are well told by Roberta Hickman who played the leading part in "The Thirteenth Chair" and the part of the nurse in "Romeo and Juliet". This is the first humorous selection in the recitals and Miss Hickman will interpret it in a capable and pleasing manner.

The third number is "The King's Henchman" by Millay, the selection of Miss Evelyn Sherard. This will be interesting to many studying English, for it is Miss Millay's most outstanding work. This selection is dramatic. Miss Sherard played capably the lead in "Craig's Wife", and she will be remembered for her part in "So This Is London."

The expression recitals are always anticipated, for the excellent work of the department has established its merits and those of its graduates.

CAMPUS IS RECEIVING IT'S SPRING GROOMING

seems that many of the boys still think those large green metal receptacles which are located at various places on the campus are for letters and packages. If all the orange peels, banana peels, apple cores, or what have you, which are annually strewn over the campus were laid end to end they would reach from the Dean's office to—well, what's the use in measuring it. If you don't believe they would reach somewhere you surely haven't seen much of certain sections of the campus. It shouldn't be necessary to mention such a thing to college students. If we are to have a beautiful campus each of us will have to help make it so.

He attended school at Winston-Salem, North Carolina last Summer, and intended to come back here as teacher, but an opportunity for study at Dayton presented itself and he went there. He has lived up to his reputation for hard work, while there. The director say that Bob is better developed physically than almost any one else in the choir. He was president of his class this year, and the fact that he is the only member of the first year class that was permitted to go on the tour makes us feel that we may expect great things of him.

Maryville is further represented in the choir school by Ruth McMurray Keen, J. Alvin Keen and Isabel Brown. Bob Jensen is the only Maryville man to make the trip.

Standing Changed In Local Pi Kappa Delta

Three Members Receive Additional or Advanced Degrees.

FOUR ELIGIBLE TO JOIN

New Plan Would Have College Pay Debaters' Dues.

The forensic season just ending has given rise to changes in the standing of three members in the Maryville Pi Kappa Delta chapter. The strict constitutional requirements which became effective for the national organization last July have made advancement more difficult.

Forrest I. Robertson, vice president of the local chapter, will be advanced to the degree of Honor in debate. He will also receive the Order of Oratory. Mr. Robertson has won enough decisions to be advanced t o the degree of Special Distinction, but under the new constitution this high honor can be conferred on only those who have had three years' experience debating on the varsity team, and hence goes only to seniors. Mr. Robertson also won his freshman debate with the University of Tennessee, but this cannot be used in computing advanced standing.

Betty Jane Sharpe, secretary of the local chapter, will be advanced from the degree of Fraternity to that of Proficiency in debate. Miss Sharpe who is a senior, became a member of Pi Kappa Delta last year.

The other member whose standing will be changed is J. Stuart James. His degree will not be changed, but to his Order of Debate will be added the Order of Oratory. Mr. James took second place in extemporaneous speaking for men at the convention at Lexington, and this entitles him to the Order of Oratory. Mr. James has the distinction of being the only member of the team who has never lost a debate.

As soon as Mildred Crawford wins one more debate she will be eligible for the degree of Proficiency.

Those who are being considered for membership and who will probably be invited to join Pi Kappa Delta this year have done excellent work.

William R. Graham will be eligible for the degree of Proficiency. He has won enough decisions for the degree of Honor but this is given only to those who have qualified in the required number of debates and have been members of the varsity team for at least two years.

Mary Fitzgerald is eligible to come into the organization in the Order of Oratory. She tied for first place in the oratorical contest for women at the convention.

Viola Petitt is qualified for the Order of Oratory also because she won first place in the extemporaneous speaking contest for women at the convention.

The other member of the team who will probably be invited to join is Vera Coy. Miss Coy is a sophomore and has participated in three debates this season.

Pi Kappa Delta is the largest forensic fraternity in the United States. Certificates for teaching and coaching debate or oratory are given to those who qualify for it, and a bureau is now being established to aid its members in securing such positions.

It is the only fraternity that selects a national or uniform question, and the only one that has national conventions. Professor Queener is working on the following plan. One-half the initiation fee to be paid by the college from the debate fund as usual; a local membership fee to be paid in full by the college for those making the team and possibly for members trying out for the team; other members to pay their own dues or be listed as inactive members. These fees would be used to defray local expenses.

No More Cooking In Boys' Home Ec Course

Everyone Satisfied So Far With Newly Added Course.

Miss Elvira Meiselwitz has concluded her part in the Home Ec. course for men which was begun this semester. The cooking and food selection lessons are over. From now on the course will deal with clothing selection, color, materials, etc.

The course has been undertaken largely as an experiment. Comments regarding the course which were recently asked for by Miss Meiselwitz indicate that the experiment has been highly successful. These comments were written by class members and handed in unsigned.

"It is what every man, whether married or single needs."

"This course has so far proved an excellent survey of the more essential points of correct living for men."

"To me it has been the most practical and enjoyable course of my entire college career."

"I think the course should be taught more extensively. It is practical and gives some things that would never be gotten anywhere else."

"Being only a man I cannot criticise the course because it lies in a field that I know little about. Personally, it has proven itself worthy."

"I am of the opinion that the course should be enlarged to admit all senior men, as it is of inestimable value to anyone entering the social and business world."

"I know of no other place where a man can get the essential points of social etiquette that will brand him as a gentleman or a bore when he enters his chosen line of work."

"There's not 'enuff' of it. I'm for a course for bigger and better hubbies."

Cox and Watson Win Oratorical Contest

Next East Tennessee Contest Will Be At Milligan.

April 19—The eastern division of the Tennessee Oratorical League met at Maryville College at 4:15 p. m. today. The president, Florian Hopkins, presided. At the roll call the following representatives responded: Carson and Newman, Prof. E. W. Sydnor, Mr. Truett Cox; Chattanooga, Prof. Louis F. Snow, Mr. Brantley Watson; Maryville, Prof. E. R. Hunter, Mr. Florian Hopkins; Milligan, Prof. C. M. Eyler, Mr. Victor Allen; University of Tennessee, Mr. David Warner; Tusculum, absent.

It was voted to take the 1930 meeting and contest to Milligan College and Prof. C. M. Eyler was designated as secretary, and Mr. H. F. Johnson as president.

The contest was held at 8 o'clock. Mr. Daniel Martin, the Tusculum representative, having arrived after the afternoon meeting, was entered on the program; the program follows:

The Unknown Soldier, David Warner
University of Tennessee

Indifference - - Brantley Watson,
University of Chattanooga

Capital Punishment - Daniel Martin,
Tusculum

Give The Laborer a Chance - -
Forrest Robertson, Maryville

The Dream of The Ages - -
Victor Allen, Milligan

The Mark of Cain - - Truett Cox
Carson-Newman

Dr. Wilson presided.

The judges, Rev. Roy E. Early, Mr. B. L. Glascock, and Mr. James B. Hedge, selected Mr. Brantley Watson and Mr. Truett Cox to represent the Eastern Division at the state contest to be held at the University of Tennessee, Friday night, May 3, 1929.

A banquet for the debaters was held afterwards in Science Hall.

Post Graduate Piano Recital Tonight at 8

Marion Johnson, Junior, Will Present Varied Program of Piano Numbers.

On Monday night, April 22, at eight o'clock in the chapel, Miss Marion Johnson will give a post-graduate recital in piano. Miss Hale, head of the Music Department, says: Marion is a great favorite on the Hill, and those who have heard her play, know that a treat is in store, and are looking forward to this event. Needless to say, with such a recommendation from the head of our music department, a large audience is anticipated to verify this statement. Hearing, as well as seeing, is believing.

This recital, which is the second post-graduate recital of the year consists of the following numbers:

"Gavotte" - - - - - Grieg
"Pastorale" - - - - Scarlotti
"Ballade" - - - - - Chopin
"Etude en Forme de Waltz" -
Saint Saens
"Rush Hour in Hongkong" - -
Chasins
"Dancing Doll" - - Poldini
"Czardas" - - - MacDowell
"Walzer" - - - Dohnanyi
"Concerto" - - Saint Saens

The fact that Miss Johnson, although a junior, has achieved the rank of post-graduate in piano, not only demonstrates her natural musical ability but also clearly shows the high quality of our Music Department.

The next recital, according to Miss Hale, will be given on May 6, when Miss Anita Allen of Knoxville will appear as a graduate in recital.

Maryville Wrestlers Show Up Well In National Meet

National Amateur Wrestling Meet Held in Richmond, Va. Walt Headrick Gets Second Place Medal.

On Monday, April 8, Billy Crawford and Walter Headrick started up to Richmond, Virginia to represent Maryville in the first national amateur wrestling championship tournament, to be held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of that week. They returned last Tuesday morning,—Headrick with a medal and Billy with a bandaged head.

Headrick's first match was with Clayton, a burly Richmond Y. M. C. A. man, who outweighed him by nine pounds and was 4 inches taller than Walt ever expects to be. By exceptional ability and seemingly superhuman strength, Headrick, always the aggressor, threw his man in 8 minutes and 16 seconds. This qualified him for the finals which put him up against a skilled man who had wrestled with the V. P. I. wrestling team for three years. Headrick put up a hard fight but the champion's skill and experience told and Walt had to be content with the second place in the 175 pound group.

There were sixteen men in Billy Crawford's group, the 145 pound class. Billy's first opponent was Iamele, a veteran from the New York Athletic Club. He was good but Billy was better and got time advantage on him. After seeing Billy wrestle, Harris, of Washington and Lee, forfeited, allowing Maryville to compete in the semi-finals. Here Crawford was pitted against the champion, Williams, from the Richmond Y. M. C. A. After a desperate struggle in which two extra 3 minute periods were necessary, Williams obtained 30 seconds time advantage. Near the beginning of the bout, Williams got a headlock on Crawford which Billy had to get out of, so he pulled, and hence, the bandaged ear. Crawford was given a very short rest and then had to wrestle again to determine whether he would be second or third. He put up a hard fight but having put all his strength into his former match, he was finally forced to take third.

It is too bad that Farmer Watkins could not go because Billy feels almost sure he could have won another medal for Maryville. It is an honor to the college that two of our men should go up to Richmond and take second and third places in a wrestling tournament held for all amateur wrestlers in the United States and Canada.

Girls' Glee Club Concert Next Monday. Satisfaction Assured

At last! the Girls' Glee Club, that we've been hearing so much about is to appear for the first time in four years. Not the same girls of course, for these nineteen maidens are of very tender years, and all, of course pulchritudinous. One peek at the dainty organdie costumes assures us that they will present a most charming picture. Nor is the appeal to the eye only but also to the ear and perchance to the hearts of a few cavaliers in the audience.

Members of the club have been chosen with utmost care and attention to the balance of parts and voices. For the past few months they have been hard at work both separately and collectively preparing the program to be given on Monday night, April 29. Miss Henry directs the club.

Of special appeal to the moonshiners is a group of love songs, oopy in the extreme, so much so in fact that the widows in the club can scarce restrain their tears during the execution of these numbers. For those who have no ulterior motive in attending the concert, there are other features of special interest, one a very interesting and characteristic group of negro spirituals. Sanctus from St. Cecilia's Mass is a most inspiring and powerful number. Novelties, too! But, all the secrets can't be told; there are surprises galore.

Now where is all this galaxy of music and charm to be found? Three guesses! Right the first time! Voorhees Chapel. (anyone can tell you where it is). The time,—April 29, 8:00 o'clock. The price,—35 cents, luxury tax, 35 cents, total 70 cents. Get the time, the place and the girls and they will do the best.

WIND WRACKS RUIN

April 22—"The thunder flashed, the lightning crashed" and the wind blew last night in a thunder storm both brief and vicious. A large cedar tree next to the power house succumbed before the onslaught. This morning campus flunkies were busy removing the remains.

M.E.Welbon,'28, Playing Lead In Broadway Play

Rapid Rise to Stardom Reads Like Fiction.

Success comes in many phases of life. One of our friends who was well known on College Hill, and who graduated with the class of '28, and who is now climbing toward fame is Mary Elinor Welbon. Her renown is coming through her achievements in dramatics. Mary Elinor is now playing the leading part in a play on Broadway, New York.

Her dramatic abilities have been trained and developed in our own Expression Department, and she is proving herself well fitted for her new position. She first went to try out for the maid's part. The manager informed her that the woman who was carrying the leading lady's part had just resigned. Mary Elinor began on Monday and played that leading part Thursday night on Broadway.

The director was well enough pleased with her performance to say: "I thought at first that you were an amateur, but I see you are not. You have been well trained." This is not a small compliment for one who has only been out of college for a few months and is playing in such a role with that short notice for creating it.

Mary Elinor says it seems a little strange to continue rehearsals eight hours a day after her experiences here. She felt somewhat lost when alone to realize that she must prepare her own make-up and get herself in readiness.

Those here who are in the same position Mary Elinor was last year can see the broad gap between being made-up under the competent direction of our own instructors and hav-

Dr. Duncan, Oldest Living M. C. Alumnus

Has Received Four Degrees From Alma Mater.

On June 15, 1871, Calvin Alexander Duncan, a young man twenty years of age, graduated from Maryville College with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He had enrolled as a student among the renowned thirteen young men who had gathered with Professor Lamar, upon the reopening of Maryville College after the Civil War. From 1866 to 1871 Mr. Duncan was one of the most faithful and diligent of the students enrolled in the institution.

Dr. Duncan is at once the oldest living graduate of the college, for he became an alumnus in 1871, fifty-seven years ago, and the oldest director, for he was appointed as a director in 1872, fifty-six years ago.

In 1871 the Directors of Maryville bestowed upon Dr. Duncan the degree of Bachelor of Arts; in 1875 the degree of Master of Arts; and in 1893 the degree of Doctor of Divinity. In 1928 the Directors, in view of his extra-ordinary services in the Church, and in recognition of his ability and his enthusiastic, unselfish, and unswerving loyalty to his alma mater, by unanimous vote conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Dr. Duncan has just recently been ill and has not yet recovered. The latest report Dr. Wilson has had, however, shows that his condition has improved some.

Recently the College received a visit from another alumnus of great interest. Dr. Painter, who, though not a graduate, is probably the oldest living student. Dr. Painter, who is ninety years of age, was at Maryville when the Civil War broke out. He left the College and served in the Union army. He is now an honorably retired minister. He was in Maryville visiting his nephew, Mr. E. H. Painter.

Kitchen Force Kept Busy Filling Students

Quantity Food Production Is A Twelve Hour Job For Five Regulars.

ECONOMY IS WATCHWORD

Strange Fact: More Eggs Used For Scrambling Than for Boiling.

(by Mabel Dickerson)

"The only pigs I feed are those in there", John said, pointing to Pearson's dining hall; this in answer to the question if he fed the pigs. It is an interesting thing to learn the way our food is prepared and to get acquainted with these people "behind the front", who produce our food on such a large scale.

It is not a simple matter to serve five hundred people three meals a day. Any member of the cooking force will vouch for the fact that it is not a case of Miss Coulter's waving a magic wand and the food appearing. Instead of that, it is a case of five people working twelve hours a day, from 5:30 in the morning till 5:30 at night,—and this aside from all of the student help. These five people do not spend their time just sitting around either; just think of the hours they spend peeling potatoes, standing over the hot stove and making meat balls!

Their work is so hard that when interviewed at lunch time they said they were too tired to talk. The three women were sitting around a little table in the kitchen, eating a not very appetizing-looking meal and were talking in low tones. When accosted, they were very pleasant in giving the desired information, but were not particularly voluble. They said that if some one would ask them when they were rested they would make a speech—so that's a job for some enterprising person—and it will be well worth his time.

Lily Rorex, who had difficulty in spelling her own name, has served the school for twenty years, and likes the work fine. Alice Carr, another old-timer has worked here off and on since 1909. Bertha Bogle, a fairly new recruit, since she has been here only two years, was asked how she liked the work. Her answer came in rather discouraging tones: "Fairly well"—with emphasis on the "fairly".

Besides these three women, the cooking force consists of two men: John Garner and John Henry. John Garner is the one usually referred to as "John" who presides over the egg skillet every morning. He volunteered the information that he is thirty-nine years of age, and that he "likes the work fine". His work is probably the most varied of all for he does everything from killing the chickens to baking cookies. Yet no matter how busy he is, he always has time for a pleasant smile and a wise crack. John Henry agrees with John Garner that he has to work some where and this is as good as any other place. John has worked for the college five years and John Henry two years.

Almost everyone has been in the kitchen at some time or other, so it is hardly necessary to describe it in full. Since the fire two years ago there have been only a few changes —the kitchen has been slightly enlarged, new counters built, and a concrete floor put in. There are very few labor-saving devices; one of these is the bread-slicer which many have learned to their sorrow has a very sharp edge. The most recent piece of equipment is a meat cutter which even cuts through bone. It is so recent in fact that it is not certain whether it is paid for yet.

This kitchen is an important place. From its counter the food comes in heaping dishes to the tables. Provisions are bought and served in enormous quantities. For one breakfast alone 1160 biscuits are baked. Now that the egg season has arrived 45 dozen eggs are necesary if boiled and 60 dozen if scrambled. Maybe everyone didn't realize that more eggs were used when scrambled than when boiled. The reason for this is that Miss Coulter has a kind heart and feels sorry for the late little piggy who comes in after the early little piggies have already heaped their plates. Everything else is purchased in relatively large amounts, the meat for instance,—

Law Makers Attack Bumming

New York, N. Y. (By New Student Service). Some joker in the New Hampshire Legislature has proposed a license fee for hitch-hikers amounting to $5.50 per person. According to newspaper reports, another measure was also proposed that would require them to display two headlights and a tail light when traveling at night.

No cause for laughter is contained in the pending Pennsylvania bill, however. It follows the example of New Jersey in forbidding this most pleasant and diverting form of travel.

"When it becomes a crime," complains THE DICKINSONIAN, student newspaper of Dickinson College, "for a clean cut, intelligent, honest college boy to ask a passing motorist for the means to get to his home and parents during a brief vacation period, then it is time to question the discretion of legislative bodies."

—o—

It is too bad that the collegian's most economical form of transportation is beginning to draw down prohibitory measures on its head. We do not believe it is necessary to question the discretion of legislators, however, To us it seems that the college man's bumming business has been ruined by unfair competition. There are more hitch-hikers on the roads now that have never attended college than there are those who attend. As long as the practice was engaged in by college men alone, autoists were willing to cooperate. Most motorists are now unwilling to stop for anyone for fear of foul play.

Lip Reading Class

Last year a lip reading class was started at the University of Nebraska for students who were hard of hearing or totally deaf. The course has proved so popular that students with perfect hearing have enrolled for the course.

Favorite Magazines of Students

Michigan students made an investigation as to type of magazines read by students. It revealed that the Saturday Evening Post is most popular, while Collier's and Liberty are also widely read. Life and Judge are read universally.

Things might be worse, you know. On the campus of the University of Detroit co-eds are forbidden to speak to men students.

"When I was your age I thought nothing of a ten-mile walk."

"Well, I don't think much of it either."

1st Negative: I ask you, honorable opponent, do you believe in clubs for women?

1st Affirmative: Yes, if kindness fails.

We often get up in the morning feeling like an altitude record and go to bed at night feeling like engine trouble.

He also remarked that the big idea in marrying was to marry someone better than yourself. As one of our bright boys remarked, wouldn't that be rather hard on the other person?

In the old days they didn't "make" whoopee; they "raised" it. And they didn't call it whoopee.

One Co-ed: Do you often think of Gerald these days?

Another: Every time I yawn.

Mother: Roger, you've been a naughty boy. Go to the vibrator and give yourself a good shaking.

A little boy was attending his first grand opera. The dramatic soprano and the motions of the orchestra conductor held his attention.

"Papa, what's that man shaking his stick at her for?" the child asked.

"Sh-h! He's not shaking his stick at her." Then said the boy, still unconvinced, "What's she hollering for?"

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

This intercollegiate forensic program ends for Maryville in a flight of oratory.

—:—

Oratory has not depreciated in quality in modern times. The public has just become more educated.

—:—

It is likely that the Patrick Henryes of early history were no more eloquent than some of our present orators. It is the receptive spirit of the audience that has changed.

—:—

By this we do not mean that the audience appreciates oratory less, but that the audience is more capable of discerning what is not oratory.

—:—

An interesting light was injected into the contest through the unplanned oratorical debate on the subject of capital punishment.

—:—

There is more fun in trying to guess whom the judges will choose than there is in trying to choose a winner.

—:—

One of the greatest features of this oratorical contest was the banquet afterwards.

—:—

This is where the losers filled themselves with contentment, and the winners digested their pleasures.

—:—

At any rate, we can now hope Carson-Newman and Chattanooga win in the state contest.

—:—

While we are speaking of oratory, we might include the Bates prize contest if there were enough in it.

—:—

The participants in it could divide that forty-five dollars equally among them and be well paid.

—:—

In figuring up the percentage won and lost in debates of the season just ending we find the varsity team of men and women won an average of 50%.

—:—

The freshman team won 50%.

—:—

The average for all teams was 50%.

That is batting .500.

—:—

The Pi Kappa Delta officials fear something is wrong if a team wins over 60% or under 40%.

—:—

The prospects for Maryville next year look good. Only one member, Miss Sharpe, is lost through graduation.

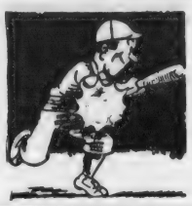
Conquering the Cascades



SNOW falls every month in the year where the Great Northern crosses the Cascades. Steep, tortuous grades increase the difficulty of the railroading problem. Nature has stubbornly resisted man's effort to conquer the range.

In January, 1929, the new Cascade tunnel was opened. Man, with electricity as an ally, had conquered the Cascades.

The eight-mile bore was driven in three years—a record impossible without electric power. And electrification has been extended to the entire 75-mile route through the mountains.

The conquests of electricity on the land and on the sea, in the air, and underground, are making practicable the impossibilities of yesterday. As our vision encompasses wider horizons, electricity appears as a vital contribution to future industrial progress and human welfare

Collegiate hockey has grown to great proportions. From its birthplace in the icy North, it has spread through the East, encompassed a goodly part of the northern Middle West in its grasp, and has invaded even into the far reaches of Southern California. And considering the amount of ice necessary for indoor arenas, untold sacrifices have been made that hockey might have its way.

The predominance of the East on the mythical outfit will likely cause great suffering among a portion of the puck-hungry populace and necessitate—among fans—the dusting off of a few of the more fervent adjectives saved for times of great trial. But the East is there and there it stays. For hockey is in much the same straits that collegiate football was found ere it cast off its swaddling cloth and capered West. In the early days of gridiron one might seek through the role of the first All-American teams of Walter Camp and find no single Western name. And so with hockey. Some fine hockey is cast athwart the frozen waters in the West and other spots, fast skaters there are, and superb handlers of the stick, but for all around team play and the best type of collegiate hockey the East has had its say and will for several years to come.—(College Humor Service).

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Basketball 1929-30

"Slim" Waddell, that elongated center, who ran wild in the last game of the season, and whose playing throughout the season made him the choice of coaches for the all-Smoky Mountain team, has been chosen to head Maryville's cage hopes of next year.

This choice is a good one, and puts in an important position a good all-round man. Slim's quiet, earnest ability has given him the admiration of the whole school, and we are all back of him in the coming year of oak floor work.

Tennis Hogs

It seems to be a little hard for those who have always had their own private tennis courts at home to realize that there are others who would like to share with them the courts we have here. Of course, that is part of the socializing process one must pass through in college. Some, however, have gotten well toward the end of their college course without having learned that there is etiquette in tennis as well as in other things. It is never too late to avoid further breach of a code that says "thou shalt not be a hog."

It might be fitting to use the generally accepted rules in the matter, namely that when two or more players are waiting their turn, those occupying the court do not play more than one set after the arrival of the others, unless it be a match play. In this case the courts are usually reserved by those putting on the tournament and a special time schedule is followed.

If only singles are in progress and two players accept the courts, it is courteous for the last two to offer to play doubles with the two surrendering the courts, but this is not compulsory.

The rules of tennis follow the golden rule, so it requires only a moment's thought to realize how sensible they are. It also takes a couple of hours waiting for some "court hog" to tire out to realize how necessary they are. Let's keep out of that last named class; it's for people who don't know any better.

Golf Devotees Play Over College Links

Maryville College has succumbed to the links game. While she has held out longer than most schools, Maryville has finally instituted a golf course in connection with her other activities. Even though the links consist of the football field and a patch of weeds back of Thaw Hall, one can play nine holes of golf by traversing the same course often enough.

The record for the nine holes is 33. This mark was set last year by Harry Miller, and equalled last week by his brother Harold.

The enjoyment of the "mammoth marbles" is not limited to those college rookies who are looking forward to a life of salesmanship, and who realize a good golf game will sell bonds to many a business man, but even such distinguished club wielders as Dr. Stevenson and Dr. Gillingham find pleasure in going over this two-hole course.

While golf seems to lack the spirit and punch of the football game, the fast increasing number of devotees of the game prove it's almost universal appeal. Those on the Hill who find it interesting in the long afternoons are Harold Miller, Dan Wilson, Frank Baker, Jimmie Cox, Barnard, Fishback, King, Gillingham, Rusk, Peirce, and others.

A golf match has been arranged with Knoxville High, to be played at Whittle Springs, and will give the boys here a chance to see what they can do.

A STUDENT EDITOR TELLS THE WORLD

Haverford, Pa. (By New Student Service) "You can't print that. Seeing that article in a student paper the public will take it as the official opinion of the college and we can't allow that." This is the argument that keeps many college papers from printing much of anything besides colorless lecture notices and club activities. Such reasoning has also brought the axe down on the head of more than one offending editor.

For this reason the bold-face statement printed in large type above the editorial column of the HAVERFORD NEWS is worthy of notice:

"Editorials in the NEWS do not necessarily represent the opinion of a majority of the undergraduates, faculty or alumni. They are designed instead to arouse intelligent discussion of such Haverford problems as the NEWS believes merit the consideration of those interested in the College. Constructive communications concerning Haverford problems or the conduct of this newspaper, whether favoring or opposing the stand taken by this paper, are welcomed by the editor and will be published on this page."

Dean says the young man's most difficult problem is choosing the right girl to marry. Which proves that he has funny ideas as to who does the choosing.

Gabbard, Parks, Blazer, All Take Turns on Mound For Maryville. Teffeteller, Rookie Back stop Knocks Homer in First Game. Hitting Plentiful in Highland Ranks, But Visitors Fail To Connect.

TEAM AWAY THIS WEEK ON TOUR OF E. TENNESSEE

Last Thursday and Friday Maryville emerged victorious in a pair of ball games with L. M. U. by scores of 7 to 4 and 9 to 1. L.M.U. placed a good team on the diamond but was no match for the speedy Highlanders.

Gabbard pitched the first game for Maryville. He was a little erratic in the first of the game and errors by the infield were costly, but after the fourth inning he was invincible. Maryville broke into the scoring column in the first. With two away Davis was hit, stole second and third and scored on Bird's nice single. L. M. U. bunched hits for two runs in the second and added two more in the fourth. Maryville knotted the count in the fifth and scored two more in the seventh. In the eighth Teffeteller hit one into deep center for a homer. This one had Cheney Tie written all over it.

Park started the second game for Maryville. He pitched a nice game and, with the exception of the second when the visitors scored their lone tally, was never in trouble. Banks gave the fans a thrill as he heeled off for the home team with a homer through left field. With this start the Scots hit freely throughout the game and ran up a nice score. Blazer hurled the last three innings and held L.M.U. hitless during his stay on the mound. "Red" Wooten, substituting for Blazer at second, contributed a nice double down the third base line which accounted for two runs.

Expression Graduate Recital

The second graduate expression recital of the season was held Monday night. In spite of the heavy rain a large crowd gathered in the chapel. The graduate pupils were Mary White, senior, Roberta Hickman, junior, and Evelyn Sherrard, senior.

"Jeanne d' Arc' by MacKaye, was presented by Mary White. In this dramatic selection, some incidents of Jeanne's private life, her call to service, and her vision are revealed. Mary presented a vivid picture, not only of Jeanne, but also of the other people of the little French village.

"A Wedding Day" by Kirkpatrick, was read by Roberta Hickman. This reading was the first humorous one to be read in a recital. Roberta kept the audience laughing heartily by her portrayal of Bob's anguish over his lost collar button; the worrisome back steps, the assurance of the "level headed" Ted, and the discovery that her fiance, like other men, had his faults.

Evelyn Sherrard presented in an effective manner acts I and III of "The King's Henchman" by Millay. Edgar, Etholwold, and Ailfrida were well portrayed. One felt keenly the suffering of Etholwold, liked King Edgar for his unselfishness, and resented the mercenary, vain creature that Ailfrida proved herself to be.

The selections were very well done. Although some of the characters must have been difficult to portray, the speakers represented all with apparent ease. The popularity of the graduates was evidenced by the many baskets of iris, larkspur, tulips and roses that graced the platform.

THE NATIONAL CONFEDERATION OF CANADIAN STUDENTS

New York, N. Y. (By New Student Service). In December, 1926 the National Confederation of Canadian University Students was formed one year after a similar organization appeared in the United States. Judging from the official report that has just been published, the organization already has to its credit some important accomplishments. It has organized several national debate tours, perfected a "clearing house" for the assembling of information on student problems and promoted student travel abroad. In addition it has formed an Exchange System whereby Canadian students may without extra expense, spend one year of study in a university in another part of Canada, and it has promoted a co-operative book-purchasing scheme which is said to effect a saving of ten thousand annually to Canadian students.

A vanished bit of protective coloration is the girlish blush.

The third floor is picking up bad habits from the fourth. The crash of flying bottles is music—to some.

Night Before Last

Thetas and Alpha-Sigs had a most enjoyable time in the basement of the chapel. We were entertained with readings, novelty music numbers of all kinds, a chalk talk and a tap dance. Refreshments were served by waiters and waitresses in Japanese costume. Yes, indeed, we are sorry that only one joint meeting a semester is permitted.

A large crowd of Athenians and Bainonians enjoyed the joint-meeting Saturday night. After some orchestral numbers, the invocation was given by Walter Courtenay. Mary Elizabeth Deaderick charmed the audience with her vocal selections. Hayden Laster gave a very amusing and realistic reading. Jane Duke and Lois Cupler presented an effective musical dialogue. The play, "The Eligible Mr. Bangs", was a hilarious success with Jeanette Moore, Paul Edris, Peggy Bird and Leland Gilmore as members of the cast. The treasure hunt for the kitchen door was rather prolonged, but this only served to whet appetites for the delicious contents which it finally yielded.

Theta Epsilon

Some of Theta's most outstanding talent will appear on this program. We will be favored with several piano selections presented by Miss Elsie Slater. Another treat will be a reading in the form of a one-act play by Miss Doris Niles. There will also be some ukelele music. No one can afford to miss this pleasant entertainment. Show your colors, Thetas!

Bainonian

"To be or not to be: that is the question."

"Something's rotten in the state of Denmark."

"For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love."

Now that spring is here and a maiden's fancy turns to poetry, and other things, it is quite fitting that Bainonians have decided to spend an evening with Shakespeare.

ing the responsibility for one's self in a play on Broadway.

Mary Elinor was very dramatic in performances here during her college career. She will be remembered for the parts she played in "So This Is London", which took the silver Theta Alpha Phi cup last year; her part in "Alice Sit by the Fire"; again in "The Rivals", the Theta Alpha Phi play for last year; or in "Icebound", last year's senior play. She was president of the Theta Alphi Phi Fraternity last year.

After she left Maryville she attended an acting school in New York for a while.

MORE PRAISE FOR OUR VESPER CHOIR'S WORK

Hotel Farragut,
Knoxville, Tennessee,
April 11, 1929.

President of Maryville College,
Maryville, Tennessee.

Dear Sir:

It was my privilege yesterday while passing through Knoxville to attend the Concert given by The Federated Music Club of Tennessee, and in doing so I had the privilege of hearing a choir from Maryville College. So deeply impressed was I with the music of this organization that I wish to express the joy I had in listening to these young people who gave such an uplifting demonstration of what Church music should be; the dignity of their service and beauty of their singing made a deep impression upon me, and although unacquainted with Maryville College I wish now to know more.

Am leaving for Europe but wish you to know that although a stranger I am taking with me the memory of the lovely music given by these young musicians of your school.

Very truly,
Mrs. E. F. Sheffield.

Address:
San Carlos Hotel,
Pensacola, Florida.

BEYOND THE HORIZON

Beyond the Horizon! That was a play indeed! There was a sigh of relief when the curtain fell on the last scene. Without a doubt, this is the most dramatic play that has been seen in the chapel this year.

Yes, the play was tragic. We would like to have had the characters live happily ever afterwards. Yet, if they had, we would have said that the play was unreal. So we tried to content ourselves with comments on the skill of the various actors. Perhaps the most fitting thing we can say is that they so lived their parts that we could hardly believe that tomorrow, and for some days to come we would see these actors in everyday life, here and there on the campus. Enough said, though we would like to take each one of the personae dramatis and discuss what pleased us most about that particular character.

The play, with its tragic culmination, made us realize more fully that for many people life it not as rosy as it sometimes seems to be. Without doubt, Theta Alphi Phi scored an outstanding success in the presentation of this year's senior benefit play.—L. A. Voorhees.

Campus Mapping a Regular Class Job For Hill Surveyors

Serious (?) Settling Found In Height Determination of Science Hall.

WORK OFTEN PRACTICAL

Practice Furnished Students by Mountains and Cemeteries.

Members of Professor Knapp's surveying class are sometimes misunderstood. Recently two young gentlemen from this class were making use of a transit when a group of grammar school children gathered before them clamoring to have their picture taken. Transits aren't made for photographic work, so the kids had to leave disappointed. Even college freshmen have been deceived by some of the surveyor's equipment. At least one freshman girl has taken the surveyor's striped poles to be transplanted barber poles.

There are four of these surveying poles which are placed in the corners of a proposed lot which would include part of Science Hall, a corner of Thaw and most of the football field. The surveyors must make their measurements in a straight line and when this straight line runs through a building the complications are increased.

Two campus surveyors were recently comparing the heights of buildings around the campus. On checking up their figures they were surprised to find that Science Hall had settled more than a foot since previous measurements. Professor Knapp was not particularly alarmed by this bit of information. He said he wouldn't believe it even if the president of the Student Council did say it was a fact. His comment on such an error was: "In making the circuit of levels for the establishment of grade elevations, the work should check out with no greater error than .01 foot in three miles."

This year there are no girls in the surveying class but in previous years, the girls have surveyed a great deal of the campus. One girl surveyed the present senior court behind Pearsons. The only thing wrong with it, according to Prof. Knapp, is its proximity to that large pile of uneaten hash and potato peelings from which eminate, "the most villainous odors that ever offended human nostrils."

Every foot of the college grounds has been surveyed, even beyond the House in the Woods. All of the buildings have been measured and the second-story window sills in Science Hall have been calculated to be 1094 feet above sea level. The height of Look Rock and several other mountains has been determined by various members of the class.

The surveyors don't do all these things entirely without purpose. Last year Dean Barnes, who had forgotten where his back-yard should end, was greatly aided by the students. Dr. Knapp encourages the students to accept any surveying job that anyone in town willing to take the risk, may offer. In previous years even cemeteries have been surveyed. The cemetery near Friendsville has been thoroughly marked out, and Nickle Point has been surveyed once or twice.

"Daddy" Knapp has a suggestion for the Pearson's walk problem. He suggests that his class survey the territory and erect an embankment on both sides, then when it rained a picturesque Venetian boatman would ferry people to and from the dining hall in a beautiful gondola. By charging a nickle for the round trip, Dr. Knapp thinks that some ambitious collegian would be able to pay his way through college.

COLLEGE MAID SHOP BEHIND WITH ORDERS

The college maid shop needs more college maids, for larger orders for work are being sent in than can be filled. The shop stays behind with its orders by about two thousand garments. Parson's College in Fairfield, Iowa, has been helping with the extra work, and next week word will be sent to Berea to ask for more help. The average daily shipment is worth a hundred dollars, but the sum could be much larger if all the orders were filled.

NEW MANAGERIAL STAFF CHOSEN LAST SATURDAY

April 27—The joint student council-faculty committee for the selection of the business manager met this afternoon and chose the business manager and his assistants for next year. Bruce Hunter is business manager. His assistants are: Dudleigh Wilkin, Harold Burton, and Kemp Davis.

Moonshining Made Lawful at Vespers

Record Crowd Attends After Announcement of Late Social Advance.

April 28—Tonight moonshining was allowed at Vespers for the first time since Vesper services have been conducted at Maryville. Thirty-five couples took advantage of the new liberty and many non-'shiners came especially to witness the innovation.

Here is evidence of progress! For many years there has been talk of moonshining privileges at Vesper, and now the time has arrived when this much-longed-for privilege will be permitted. But, as usual, there are conditions attached which Miss Molly stated in her talk to the girls last week.

First, there must be no talking or writing of notes during the service. Recently at a program in the chapel, there was undue confusion and inattention on this account. Second, the young men must leave the dormitories promptly after walking home with the girls.

If these two conditions are not met, moonshining privileges on Monday afternoons will be prohibited, which, of course, would be a calamity to all concerned. So it is up to us to show our gratitude by putting on our best behavior from now until the end of school.

SENIORS MAKE MOST OF LAST OPEN PARTY

April 25—The one-and-only open senior party of the semester took place tonight on the second floor of Thaw Hall. It was a big night,—one that many seniors, as well as some underclassmen, have been looking forward to for some time. A large and practically full moon arose while the party was in progress and made the return trip from Thaw Hall a real work of moonshining art. After all, the best moonshining can be done only with the aid of a large, indulgent, and never complaining moon. 'S only natural.

One minor attraction of the evening was an interesting program introducing considerable lower class talent to be found on a senior party program. Pianos, saws, and harps (one of each) furnished the musical part of the program.

Of course the biggest attractions of the evening were not found on the program. Moonshiners were thick throughout the entire second floor hall; the Y. W. reading room was full of master workmen at this business which is merely a pastime for some.

MADISONVILLE CONCERT IS FINAL TRIP CONCERT

April 26—Tonight the Maryville Glee Singers presented a concert at Madisonville. This was the last away-from-home concert of the year. The high school auditorium was completely filled when the curtain rose at 7:30.

Several new songs were used in this concert which will be used in the concert here on the Hill on May 16. Cotton even went so far as to play a new xylorimba number. "Nola" was sadly missed.

Mrs. Worley accompanied the accompanist, Ruth Chenoweth, as chaperone. This was her first trip this year, but by no means her first Glee Club trip. She has gone on several club trips in past years.

University of Colorado

Co-eds in one of the sorority houses of the University of Colorado had to flee for safety in nearly zero weather recently, with nothing on but their pajamas, when fire broke out in the building. It was reported that the fire department received a large number of applicants for membership since the fire.

Hear Ye!

¶All loyal subjects of Maryville are summoned to appear in the College Woods on May 1st, 1929, to witness the coronation of the Queen of the May and the festivities connected therewith.

(by Mabel Dickerson)

The Royal Proclamation has been issued. Let all who dare, ignore it, for their punishment will be sure and painful. They, unfortunate ones, will miss seeing the Queen and her attendants; nor will they experience seeing flowers and earth sprites come to life and tell the authentic story of "The Awakening of Spring"; nor will they witness the principal event of any May Day, the crowning of the Queen and the traditional Maypole dance.

In the royal procession will be the Queen, Lois Miles, and the King, George Taylor. Queen Lois has chosen as attendants the following: maid-of-honor, Mary Louise Rodgers; flower girl, Mildred Mackie; trainbearer, Neil Proffitt. The class representatives and their "accessories" are: junior, Mary Ella Sullivan and Ed Sprouse; sophomore, Virginia Osborne and John Ben Pectol; freshman, Virginia Crider and Cooley Combs. Surely no one would miss this opportunity of seeing the gentlemen-in-waiting attired in spats and white gloves!

Queen Lois has the leading part in the play, "The Awakening of Spring" by Mary S. Edgar. Many other girls, dressed in the gay costumes which were designed by Alice Pratt, will represent vari-colored flowers and wood sprites. Marian Huddleston, an "adopted" college girl, will have an important role. The expression department is well represented.

Mrs. Queener has arranged some interesting dance numbers,— the most important of which is the Maypole dance. Jane Duke will present a solo dance. There are numerous other features which will come as pleasant surprises.

All of these plans for May Day have formulated in the mind of the general chairman, Virginia Sting. It has taken an enormous amount of work and patience and tact on her part. A large share of the May Day success will be due to Virginia's untiring efforts.

Nature has provided an excellent ampitheater for the event. The hillside affords sufficient sitting room for the students and any townspeople who care to come. All are cordially invited. If it should rain,—which of course it won't!—the program will be given in the gym.

Do not forget to bring money for refreshments. Sandwiches, cake, ice cream, pop, peanuts, candy,—anything that could be desired will be provided by the Y.W.C.A. It's all yours, for the buying. This will not only satisfy your appetite, but will also help to swell the funds of the Y. W. C. A. So don't forget your pocketbooks!

Annual Y. W. Banquet This Friday Night

Big Event of The Year; Every Girl Invited to Attend.

The Y. W. C. A. will hold its annual banquet Friday night, May 3 at 5:30 in the Y. W. C. A. reading room. This event is eagerly anticipated because of the interesting program, fellowship, and general good time that is always present at Y. W.'s get-togethers—to say nothing of the food—a real banquet in that respect.

The program will consist of talks on the Blue Ridge Conference at Blue Ridge, N. C., toasts, songs and other means of entertainment. Fancher Smartt, the retiring president, and Louise Carson, the president for next year, will give talks on the accomplishments of the past year, and the plans for the new. Miss Green will be toastmistress. Toasts will be given to the following Y. W. advisors who will respond with a toast: Miss Mollie Caldwell, Mrs. Stephenson, Miss Green, Miss Clemmie Henry, Mrs. Sam Franklin, Miss Helen Gamble, and Mrs. Minton. Two of the three girls who were delegates to the Blue Ridge Convention last year will tell their impressions of the conference. These speakers wil be chosen from Marion Johnson, Elizabeth King, and Virginia Sting. Songs will also be featured. Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz will have charge of the menu so no one need be skeptical as to what the result of this part of the banquet will be. Tickets are 35c and can be purchased at the 'Y' store.

All the girls of the college are invited to attend this worthwhile meeting and it is asured that many benefits will thus be derived both intellectually and socially.

New Editor-in-Chief Elected This Week

Next Year's Staff Will Select One of Own Number For Principal Position.

The new editor-in-chief of the Highand Echo will be elected early this week by the members of the Echo staff for next year. The editor will be chosen from among the four staff editors who are: Forrest Robertson, Jesse Peirce, Edith Nash and Samuel Kidder. Each member of the new staff will have a vote in this election, the relative value of the vote being determined by the member's position on the staff.

This will be the second election of editor to be made by staff members alone. This form of election is embodied in the regulations adopted last year. Before the present editor's time, elections were made by the student body as a whole. There was considerable dissatisfaction with the system, leading to the formation and adoption of the present regulations.

The last issue of the year will be put out by the new staff and new editor-in-chief. This custom is an old one and is one really useful in that it wakes up the incoming editor to the fact that he has a job ahead. The incoming editor for next year should be better prepared for his job than has been the case in previous years. The candidates have at least had warning and considerable experience throughout the past year.

There will be only twenty-nine issues of the Echo this year. One was dropped from the usual number of thirty on account of the week of school lost due to the influenza epidemic.

Girls' Glee Club In Concert Tonight

"There'll be music in the air" tonight, in the chapel, for the Girls' Glee Club will give its "premiere" performance. A large audience is anticipated at this novel entertainment, it being the first of its kind ever held at Maryville.

A most worthwhile program has been planned consisting of love songs, negro spirituals, operatic selections, and several novelties. The costumes will add to the attractiveness of the program as will the numerous stage decorations.

Since this concert is for the benefit of the Y.W.C.A. in the carrying out of its various plans, it is hoped that the chapel will be crowded. Tickets are 35c and can be secured at the "Y" stores or at the Book Room.

Don't forget to come. Bring your roommate, or as the case may be, somebody else's roommate and listen in on some real music!

OVERLY ELECTED NEW GLEE CLUB PRESIDENT

April 29—This morning after their regular rehearsal the Glee Singers elected Bob Overly as president of the club for next year. Bob is one of the most capable men in the club so it is believed he will cause big things to happen in the season 1929-'30.

Students Stirring Up Several Revolutions

Students Have a Hot Time In Countries Under Rule of Despots.

Students are the bane of despotic governments. More than one revolution has received its initial impulse from them. During the month of March students must have given sleepless nights to at least two dictators.

In Spain a student strike against the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera spread rapidly from Madrid to the provincial universities, as a protest against the severe punitive measures visited upon the five hundred cadets of the Artillery School at Segovia who took part in the recent revolutionary uprising. At least ten students were killed in street fighting and twelve hundred jailed.

From Venezuela come persistent rumors of unrest, just as persistently denied by President Juan Vincente Gomez. It was not, however, denied that the two hundred students who have been building roads for the Government in the interior of the country as a consequence of their unsuccessful attempts to overthrow the Dictator a year ago, have been sent to an island prison in the Bay of Puerto Cabello. It is reported that they were fomenting uprisings in the tropical labor camps and had to be put in isolation as the dreaded anniversary of their revolt approached.—The New Student.

M. C. WELL REPRESENTED ON ASHEVILLE FACULTY

If there are any students who would like to take summer school work, they will find worthy representatives from Maryville on the faculty at the Asheville Summer School held at the Asheville Normal, Asheville, North Carolina. One of the well known professors on this Hill will be there, Dr. George B. Hussey. Dr. Hussey will teach French in the Summer School. Dr. Hussey has studied and taught in a number of colleges and universities in modern languages, and has written "Latin Homonyms". He has also been a contributor to philological journals.

Another representative of Maryville will be Miss Carolyn Nelson who graduated here in the Class of '21, and has since been doing graduate work at the University of Nebraska, and teaching in Utah and New Mexico. She will teach Science this summer.

Miss Ruth Ackerman who graduated in '24 will be in charge of the Domestic Science. Since her graduation Miss Ackerman has studied in the Philadelphia School for Christian Workers, receiving B. R. E. degree, and has taught in high school in New York. She is now teacher of Domestic Science at the Asheville Normal.

A number of the students here now will remember Nelle Johnson of the Class of '27. She is now Secretary to the dean at the Normal.

The summer school session will be open from June 22 to July 23.

MAY QUEEN ON FRONT PAGE, NEWS-SENTINEL

April 27—The Knoxville News-Sentinel came out today with a large size picture of Lois Miles, our May Queen, on the first page. It is a double column picture that shows the May Queen in a very characteristic and beautiful pose. We are pleased with the honor shown our representative, and yet it is no less an honor to the News-Sentinel.

As is noted in the News-Sentinel Miss Miles is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Miles of Vonore, Tennessee. She is a senior in college and was selected last year as one of the most beautiful girls in the college.

Is the Point System Worth-while? Council Starts Investigation

Supposed to Prevent Placing of Too Much Work on Individuals.

HONORS DISTRIBUTED

60 Percent of Colleges Using System Report Favorably.

(By Sarah Moore)

These days there is a great deal of talk of a point system for Maryville College. "What is a point system? How does it work? Is one needed on our campus?" are only a few of the questions that are being asked on the Hill. Two committees are at present at work on the question of a point system for Maryville. The findings of these committees are interesting.

A faculty committee was appointed last spring to report on the need and administration of the point system in other colleges. This committee made inquiries of thirty colleges on the subject. A committee of the Student Council was asked to do some investigation of the situation on the Hill and to make reports. This student committee is now at work collecting data.

Before considering the findings of these committees, it might be well to find out the aims of a point system. With what one does a point system concern itself, and what does it endeavor to do? A point system is a plan seeking to regulate student extra-curricular interests in order that extra-curricular positions be distributed evenly among the student body, and that any one student may be limited in extra-curricular activities.

Both committees agree that the situation regarding extra-curricular work on the Hill needs attention. A few students, whether because of outstanding ability, popularity, or "push", are overloaded with extra-curricular work which they themselves are the first to declare could be easily and profitably distributed among a much larger number. How then to go about the distribution and regulation? The point system would seem to be the answer.

As generally used the point system allows so many points for each student activity—a greater number for major activities, such as athletics, glee club, and dramatics, and varying numbers of points for minor activities. The system usually sets a maximum number of points beyond which any student is forbidden to go. Work done in earning one's way through college is not counted. It might be well to add that in a point system there is no relation of one's scholarship to the number of outside activities allowed. Whether one makes A's or C's, one cannot go beyond a certain number of points.

Of the thirty colleges questioned by the committee, sixty per cent reported favorably concerning such a system and forty per cent were not interested, reported it as a failure, or were definitely hostile. Those colleges that were enthusiastic concerning the point systems in operation at their respective institutions were: Bates, Maine; Howard College, Agnes Scott, and Tusculum. The point systems in use ranged from the very simplest to an intricate system of points.

Three systems of administration were reported: first, faculty, administration, second, student administration, and third, a joint administration of the two elements.

This question is one well worth studying, since the regulation of student activities is a vital question on every campus. If the point system will settle this question satisfactorally, well and good; if it can not succeed, one must look farther for the settlement. Both committees are much interested in the problem and wish an expression from the students as to their opinions on the subject. On the Student Council Committee are Arta Watkins, Harold Holman, and Max Hurst.

Will such a system aid the student body as a whole, or will it relieve only a few students of too great a burden of responsibility which lies with them to accept or reject? Will it introduce too great a

Keeping Up With The World

One fault of college life here at Maryville and at many other colleges and universities is that life is almost entirely taken up on the campus by what we term "college activities." The big world outside is allowed to proceed with its business without much show of interest on our part. Too many of us are content to let all our interests become bounded by the immediate campus or city limits.

After all, Maryville College is a very small part of a large and complex world. In the "preparation for life" we are supposed to be undergoing at Maryville, we should not forget that life is now proceeding on a large scale just outside the peaceful confines of our campus. Greater history is in the making than ever before; scientific discoveries are being made that change our entire outlook on our scientific heritage from the past; social problems are clamoring for study and solution as never before. It is the collegian who does not commence to look beyond the campus until commencement day who gives the colleges a bad name.

One of the most successful methods of graphically drawing student attention to world affairs is the CURRENT EVENTS WORLD MAP being used at present in different forms by a score of universities.

This is a map of the world, ranging in size from 4x6 feet to 6x8 feet, emphasizing capital cities and post-war boundary lines. The map is carefully and attractively framed and hung in an advantageous place on the campus.

A number of methods of calling attention to world news on this map have been used. Colored pins may be stuck into the map, indicating the places of world interest as found in the daily news. Cords may run from these pins to short telegraphic dispatches concerning the event on a bulletin board to the side. The map may be mounted on a tin-covered plaque, which is charged with electric current, and small electric light bulbs may be stuck into the map at the desired places, calling attention to news articles on the bulletin board.

A student, showing particular keenness on current affairs, is usually selected by some group or organization to be responsible for attending to the map daily. If this student can easily obtain the latest telegraphic reports from the daily newspaper every evening, he can most effectively keep the map up to date.

Where such a map has been used, great interest among the students is reported, and departments of History, Economics, Political Science, and Geography find it helpful in developing interest in their courses.

Our Campus Trees

There are forty different varieties of trees on the Maryville campus. This many have been counted and samples taken for a herbarium which Miss Green has collected in her department. This number does not include varieties off of the campus [illegible] college woods have not been examined.

This is a large number of varieties of wood to be found on so small an area as our campus. It seems to us that students and visitors to the college would like to be informed of the fact in some way. Not everyone could walk about the campus and identify all these trees, but there are some here who can.

Why shouldn't there be a collection made of woods and leaves from these trees to be placed in the college museum? Surely our museum should indicate the natural resources of the college itself as well as the various foreign trappings sent us by our representatives in foreign fields.

Such a collection would be a valuable and interesting addition to the museum and should prove to be a worthwhile project for a botany class or any group of interested individuals.

Incidentally

——We will miss the melodious bellowings of the calliope that has several times invaded the sacred precincts of our Hill. The "big show" that it advertised has passed along for another year. Many fellows visited the so-called carnival, but few were foolish enough to lose money on it.

——The Student Council will probably have a party of some sort before school is out. Discussion has been long and discouraging. An open party except on Monday afternoon has been ruled out. A closed party off the Hill has received similar treatment.

——To hear the girl glee singers talk, one would think the principal feature of their program will be those beautiful organdie dresses.

——Well, clothes can hide a multitude of faults.

——Dr. Hunter will deliver the commencement address at Martha Washington College.

——Early departures from Carnegie have already begun.

——Why does the campus always get the prettiest just before commencement time? It's all right, of course, but it's hard on the seniors.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Where will debaters be useful when their college career is over?

—:—

No matter how well one may be trained, or how enthusiastic in his preparation, he is a failure if he cannot find his niche to fill.

—:—

Right off we think of the Senate as a place where they are taken care of.

—:—

You would have to be a debater if you stayed around Thomas Heflin.

—:—

The colleges should have more praise from the Senate than they get because that is where the senators learn to hold out as long as they do in debate.

—:—

We know of one Senator who got the floor and, after speaking for fourteen hours, threatened to read the dictionary through if the House did not concede his point.

—:—

I think the law he wanted passed is still on the books.

—:—

But the Senate can take care of only two debaters from each state, and sometimes that is rather a handful.

Well, there is the House of Representatives which will accommodate a few more.

—:—

This is a good place for that blustery type, because so many of the members are usually outside somewhere and they can hear the speeches better.

—:—

Then there are the state legislatures which might well be composed of freshmen debaters.

—:—

There are just about enough places for county solicitors to use up the red-headed ones.

—:—

There are other good positions for debaters and those that can't do anything else at all can marry.

—:—

Even some of the women have a good chance here.

—:—

I mean they have an even chance —when two women meet.

—:—

One draw-back to the married debater is that your wife is the Honorable Judge and Worthy Opponent.

—:—

My advice to men in this position is to choose a colleague that will work, and then give the laborer a chance.

L. M. U. Takes Count From Track Team

Maryville Romped Away With Meet Last Week 72 to 35. Relay Not Needed.

The editor of this page wishes to apologize to the readers for the omission of an account of the track meet with L. M. U. last Saturday. There was a misunderstanding among the staff as to who was to cover it, and it was not discovered that it had not been written up until too late for insertion in Monday's paper.

After the first few events in the meet Maryville was not in danger of losing, although the visitors took a good many points in the jumping events. They missed Dickinson in the running events. He was along, and did some good work in the field, but a pulled muscle kept him off the track.

Maryville got going in the first race, taking the hundred, two-twenty, and four-forty as they came. In the half mile, "Judge" Carper stepped out in the lead and held it all the way round. Williamson ran a steady two-mile to place ahead of his rival, who nevertheless gave George a close race.

In the field events, Millsaps took the honors, throwing the javelin 151 feet to take the prime position.

Crawford, of course, won the hurdles.

There was no need for the relay, and the score ended 76 to 35.

COACH THROWER'S BOYS SNOW CHATTANOOGA UNDER 82-35 SCORE

April 27—The track team of Maryville College today journeyed to the Lookout City where they decisively defeated the University of Chattanooga, 82-35. Coach Bob Thrower's proteges easily swept most of the different events before them, their only weakness being in the shot put, pole vault, and high and broad jumps. Three veterans, Williams, Holman, and Crawford each carried away two first places; and some nice marks were hung up in the 220, 440, half, mile, and two mile. Following are the individual events:

100 Yard Dash—1st. Williams (M) 10.2; 2nd. Abshear (M).
Shot Put—1st. Kopeha, (C) 39' 5"; 2nd. Griffin (C).
Pole Vault—1st. Bolen (C) 10' 6"; 2nd. Davis (M).
220 Yard Dash—1st. Williams (M) 23.0; 2nd. Taggart (M).
440 Yard Dash—1st. Holman (M) 49.8; 2nd. Taggart (M).
Discus Throw—1st. Headrick (M) 104' 7".; 2nd. Carper (M).
Javelin Throw—1st. Millsaps (M), 153' 7½"; 2nd. Tucker (C).
Half Mile—1st. Holman (M), 2:1.8; 2nd. Gentry (C)
Mile—1st. Peterson (M) 4:26.6; 2nd. Maxwell (C).
Two Mile—1st. Williamson (M) 9:36.8; 2nd. Maxwell (C).
Broad Jump—1st. Chadden (C) 19' 7½"; 2nd. Vincent (M).
High Jump—1st. Lotspuch (C) 5'7"; 2nd. Vincent-Headrick (tied)
Low Hurdles—1st. Crawford (M) 27:6; 2nd. Vincent (C).
High Hurdles—1st. Crawford (M) 17:0; 2nd. Vincent (C).
Relay—Maryville.
Score 82-35.

Highlanders Drop Two On Trip To E. Tenn.

Split Bills With Emory and Henry, Losing 5-4, Winning 15-6; Teachers Lose One 14-10, Win One 6-5.

The Highlander baseball aggregation divided honors with their opponents on the trip east last week, winning the second of the pair with Emory and Henry and the first of the two Teachers' contests.

Gabbard pitched the opener, but was two sheets to the wind and not feeling up to par, dropping the game 5-4. Everybody hit one except Gabbard and Teffeteller, and Wooten's stick connected twice. Maryville had 5 errors and these mistakes cost them the game.

In the second game, Parkes kept the Emory and Henry batters biting, and Maryville got together on the ash handle, gathering twelve hits. Blazer had three hits, two of them 2 baggers. Davis and Banks got one 3 bagger. "Tillie" wasn't hitting with the rest this time. Flannery pitched for the home team.

The initial go-round with the Teachers, found Earl Blazer on the mound, and his cronies hitting hard to support him. Smith got three hits, one of them good for the second sack, while Bird, Banks, Blazer, Teffeteller and Davis pulled down two hits apiece. Davis got a three base hit. Banks circled the bags when his hit over second rolled through the center fielder.

Maryville won 14-10.

The second game with East Tennessee State Teachers' College was closer, smooth baseball characterizing the play. Gabbard was in the box again, and displaying good stuff. Delaney got a homer, and Isbell and Acuff, Teachers, each got a circuit drive. The last clout spelled disaster for the Highlanders. In the last of the ninth, with two men on, Acuff hit a homer. The three runs brought the score from 5-3 to 5-6, favor of the Teachers.

The Tennessee Volunteers come over here Tuesday at 3:15 to play the Highlanders on their own diamond. This game promises to be one of the most thrilling of the season. Gabbard will probably hurl the sphere for the home boys. We need everybody out there to make this game another victory.

Interest Centered On Class Baseball

Juniors and Sophs Play in Finals Today. Waddell and Stiddim Pitch.

Last week the annual chase for the interclass baseball crown of Maryville College got under way. In the preliminaries the sophomores defeated the seniors while the juniors trimmed the freshmen.

The sophomore-senior game was one of the best interclass games ever played at Maryville. The sophomores finally emerged on the long end of a 1 to 0 count. Both teams played almost errorless ball, and from the scarcity of hits on both sides it would seem that Coach Honaker has overlooked two good prospects for his hurling staff. The batteries were, sophomores: Stiddim, Storey; seniors: Courtenay, Morton.

In the second game the juniors took the measure of the freshmen 9 to 4. The game was rather slow, both teams hitting freely. The freshmen broke into the scoring column first, getting one in the second and adding another in the third. The juniors knotted the count in their half of the third and from then on had matters their own way. Costly errors by the freshmen accounted for several junior runs. The batteries were, juniors: Waddell, Morrison; freshmen: Vincent, Overly.

The finals will be played at three fifteen this afternoon. The probable starting lineups are:

Juniors	Sophomores
Biggs, r.f.	Storey, c.
Anderson, 2b	Stiddim, p.
Cherry, 1b	Peters, 1b
MacMillan, s.s.	Goddard, 2b
Taggart, c.f.	Osborne, 3b
Osborne, l.f.	Logan, s.s.
Simpson, 3b	Jarvis, l.f.
Morrison, c.	Whitehead, c.f.
Waddell, p.	Defendeffer, r. f.

Unable To Train Swimming Team Now

Pool To Be Open Rest of Year, And Water Carnival Promised Later by Swimming Instructor.

Maryville's prospects for a swimming team this year are 'nil'. Coach Coughlin says that it requires about six months to train a team, and since the pool has been closed so much, it is too late to attempt to whip a team into shape in order to compete with other colleges. But moonshiners, shift the sighs, because, in spite of that, things are going along swimmingly! The boys play tag, dive for objects, and do fancy diving, and sometime soon they will have an interclass meet. Jack promises that, if possible, arrangements will be made for a sort of carnival night demonstrating Red Cross work and different types of strokes, kicks and dives.

The bit of doggerel—"Mother may I go out to Swim"—is no good any more because the girls actually swim—at least they made a noble effort. Many beginners are making rapid progress, advanced swimmers practice Red Cross Life Saving methods, and many of the girls are working off fifty points towards a letter by doing the following things:

1. Swimming length of pool (breast stroke)
2. Swimming two lengths of pool (side stroke)
3. Swimming two lengths of pool (crawl free style)
4. Treading water (3 minutes)
5. Floating width of pool (on back)
6. Plain dives
7. Surface diving (bringing up 2 pound object)
8. Back diving
9. Jack knife dive.

Theta Epsilon-Bainonian

The girls' societies do not meet together this Saturday, but they do exchange programs. That is, Thetas will present a program for Bainonians and Bainonians will present a program for Thetas. Both meetings should be unusually interesting because the members of each society to appear on the programs will take especial pains to do their best before the other society.

The Ministerial Association met in the Athenian Hall on April 24, William Peacock led the devotional service, and Lindley Cook and Reno Smith played a saxophone and trombone duet.

A very interesting lecture on art was given by Miss Smith. There were several pictures used as illustrations.

GIRLS' ATHLETICS

Probably everyone has heard the groans of distress uttered by various athletic-looking girls during the past two weeks. They have been seen hobbling around as though each step were mortal agony. The reason?—those girls have been practicing track.

Track practice started two weeks ago and ended last Friday. From the plumpest roly-polies to the lankiest long-legged girls in the group they one and all demonstrated their several abilities in the high jump, the broad jump, shot put, baseball throw and basketball throw. Finals were played off Friday. Quite a few girls made the height of three feet eight inches in the high jump. Almost all the girls succeeded in jumping the required length in the broad jump. The shot put was not so easy. It's easy enough to talk about "putting" a shot but it's not half so easy to "put" it yourself. Baseball throwing revealed the fact that several of our girls can send the ball flying a pretty distance if they wish. Only one girl managed to throw the required distance in the basketball throw. That was an event which seemed beyond nearly all of the girls.

Swimming tests on Monday will end athletics for girls this year. Many aquatic-natured ladies will try their skill. Then, with swimming over, several aspirants for letters will wipe their perspiring brows and settle down to work for a month.

April's Best Articles

Several times previously we have printed the list of the ten best magazine articles in full, just as found on the bulletin board in the library. This was done in the hope that some students might be led to read these articles who might otherwise not have noticed the list in the library.

This week we print the article names, authors, and names of the magazines in which they are found. Descriptive paragraphs concerning each article may be found in the library.

Jupiter Pluvius Makes Faire May Queen and Retinue Seek Shelter

Faerie Folk Busy Selves in Finding and Amusing Earth Mortal.

DANCES WELL PRESENTED

Costumes and Flowers Excite Admiration of All Spectators

(By Edith Nash)
(with apologies to Spencer)

"Then came faire May, the fayrest mayde on ground—decked all with dainties of her season's pryde" —but she was preceded by old King Pluvius, who rained supreme for at least twenty hours before giving Apollo his rightful place in the heavens! Nevertheless, Pluvius had made the day "more fowle than dismall" and the coronation of Maryville's Faerie Queene had to be held in the alumni gymnasium, which was charmingly decorated for the occasion and indeed "was a goodly heape for to behold, and spake the praises of the workman's witt."

To witness this great event at Maryville College "great troupes of people traveiled thitherward—of each degree and place". For to see a Mayden Queene in royal robes and gorgeous array is not a common sight.

Near the rich throne, behind which hung a cloth of state decked with delightful flowers, slumbered three small earth sprites, covered in their winter cloaks of brown. However, gentle Zephyr (Nellie Caldwell) felt that she should drive Morpheus away and arouse the drowsy sprites to greet the Queene of May. Zephyr's task was no small one, but she gently smote the saucy little creatures, who cast away their garments of brown and danced—being arrayed in new green and feeling "full of vain follies and new fanglenesse"!

Hardly had they finished their dance when, behold, came the "fayrest of the Faire" with her gentle Knight and noble crew of Lords and Ladies. "So forth she comes—to dim the brightness of her glorious throne—so proud she shined in her princely state." The Queene was richly clothed in a "greene gowne full faire" and carried in her arms flowers and green vine leaves most rare. As soon as the Faire Queene reached her throne, Sir George carefully placed the crown "and she was wonderous faire, as any living wight."

Behold! Woody Nymphes, Butterfly, Rivulet, Jolly Robin, and Blue Sky came in hasty joy to pay homage to their Queene. Here flocked also other Woody Nymphes to offer their adoration in "delightful musick" and dance. To a joyous lay, danced "a faire Diana (Jane Duke) in fresh sommer's day."

Great woe and sorrow did fall upon the gracious Queene when she heard of the little earth mortal who knew nothing of Spring. Up rose the gentle lady from her place, and looked about for a messenger to bring her the unfortunate mortal, Jolly Robin and others went to seek the child. All returned with "bitter byting words" and strange tydings of the world in which the child dwelt. At last jolly Robin did the solemn silence brake, proclaiming the glad tidings that Dawn (Mildred Taylor) could drive away all Wrotchednesse and Melancholy.

LIBRARY AND OFFICE TO HAVE ECHO VOLUMES

As soon as the school year has been completed and all the copies of the Highland Echo this year have been issued the complete set will be bound for preservation and future reference. Two sets will be bound in cloth bindings—one for the library and one for the office. Heretofore copies of the Highland Echo have been preserved but they have never been bound up in one volume. Next year it will be as easy to look up the reference to any campus event in the Highland Echo as it is to call for any book at the library and look up references. Miss Jones in commenting on this says: "It will be very nice to have the Highland Echo bound in one such convenient style."

Jury Decides Hunter Is Rightful Officer

Secretary Position No Longer A Source of Dispute in Law Club.

The Law Club Court of Equity met Friday night and proceeded to straighten the tangle which the Law Club and Bruce Hunter, Secretary and Treasurer, have found themselves in since the beginning of the second semester. Although it was not required, judge Robertson granted a trial by jury. This jury was composed of interested men, and it decided after a short deliberation that the Law Club had erred in recognizing a vacancy in the office of Secretary and Treasurer, and that Mr. Hunter still should hold the office.

The trouble arose when Mr. Hunter, who had been elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Law Club for the year, went home at the end of the first semester for several days. Some of the members who were very well acquainted with Mr. Hunter explained to the club that he had gone home to stay which would create a vacancy in the office, and Joe Sharp was elected to the position. A few days after this election Mr. Hunter came back and registered for the second semester with excuses for his absences. He filed suit against the Law Club and now after three months has regained his position.

The question was who was Secretary and Treasurer of the Law Club. Mr. Hunter employed two able men of the bar, Travis Hitt and William R. Graham, to put his case through, and J. Stuart James was designated to defend the Club. Postponements have been granted to both sides until now.

The prosecution introduced Ellis Simpson as the first witness who had gone home at the same time that Mr. Hunter did and a part of the way with him. The second witness was Attorney Hitt who turned witness. Mr. Hitt admitted on cross examination that Mr. Hunter took his trunk to the station and it stayed there while he was away.

The only witness for the defense was James Tweed, vice president of the Law Club.

Immediately after the decision of the jury was rendered, Attorney James for the defense made a motion for a new trial. Judge Robertson allowed him one week to prepare a brief showing why a new trial should be granted.

After the trial was over the Train For Tremont Leaves Wednesday Morning Carrying Gay Moonshiners And Hikers On Last Hike of Year

The big event of the second semester, the Spring mountain hike, will take place day after tomorrow. On Wednesday morning about 300 students will climb on board the special train which will bear them to Tremont, way up in the heart of the Smokies. The train will leave the Southern Station at 7:00 a. m. Wednesday. The train leaves the Southern Railroad at Sunshine and makes the rest of the trip, which is by far the most interesting part, on the Little River Railroad. The trip from Maryville is about forty miles long.

The last miles from Sunshine to Tremont are for the most part uphill and full of curves. It is possible at some parts of the road to see the engine in front pulling and the engine or engines behind pushing. Logging engines have to be used to assist in overcoming the very steep grades encountered on the way to the moonshiners' paradise. For those who have never seen such an engine this will be a novel experience. They do not look like the ordinary type of engine, or sound like it. To prove that the route is truly circuitous, suffice it to say that it is necessary to put flat cars between the coaches to keep the ends of the coaches from damaging each other when rounding the sharp curves.

No, Gertrude, they don't get cut on the curves.

This railroad's regular customer is logs; moonshiners are a distinct novelty.

Miss Maryville Tells Sarah the Truth About These College Mountain Hikes

(By Sarah Moore)

A national crisis had arisen. The fate of Maryville College hung in the balance. "There has", stated Editor Jack in conclusion, "been a great deal of malicious propaganda on this campus. I rely on you to stop it. The students want the facts, and you must get them. I want you to find out the truth about the college mountain hikes."

Armed with this important commission, I set forth on my quest. Of course, I knew the person who knew the truth about the mountain hikes, but securing the information was quite another matter. However, I determined to interview Miss Maryville.

She breezed into Pearsons' parlor. I stated my errand. A worried frown crossed her face. "But," she whispered fearfully, "could the students endure the truth about the mountain hikes?"

I pointed out that they had endured Tennessee weather, moonshining, and frequent exams, and would probably bear up under this added burden.

This reassured her, so she settled herself to the business of the hour.

"Of course, you understand that I must tell the truth about mountain hikes from my own point of view."

"Certainly."

"Well, I suppose I'd better begin at the beginning."

"Certainly."

"Well, of course, the beginning is dates. I hate to say that, because the boys will know how important they are to a mountain hike. But it's so. For instance, in my own case, months before I pick out the boy I want to ask me for a date. I'm awfully nice to him and, well, you know—."

"Certainly."

"Well, he thinks it's his own idea when he asks me for the date. That takes quite a lot of art—getting him to think it's his own idea. It hasn't worked so well this year for me. I haven't a date yet, and I'm growing rather scared. You know, one simply must have a date to the mountain hike!"

"Must one?"

"Oh, you haven't a date either. Well, we'll hope for the best. By the way, I hope the boys don't read your article. I know they'll just despise me. But you wanted the truth.

"What methods do I use to get a date? Well, sometimes I feel my way about and tell him what wonderful angel food cake I make. If that fails, I switch to devil's-food cake. That usually gets a date. You know, you can buy excellent devil's food cake down town. If that doesn't work, I start on the mountains. I really do like them—so sort of picturesque, you know. That probably lands a date."

"Now, what do you do when you get there?"

"Oh, I haven't told you about my hiking costume, yet. It's really very effective. I just hate mannish things, you know, so mine is very frivolous. A baby-blue color, you know, to match my eyes. And I wear high heels—they're so fetching, don't you think?

"What do we do when we arrive in the mountains? We choose the line of march, you might say. It's the easiest way, because usually my date says that he can't make me walk too far, because of my high heels, see?"

I saw.

"It's really very nice hiking—even though burrs catch on your silk stockings, and the sun just bakes your nose, and your hair gets all stringey, and it's too hot or too cold. And most probably it rains. Somehow I can never look my prettiest when the rain pours down my neck, makes my shoes soggy, and washes off all my make-up. But it's really awfully nice. Nature is just grand, don't you think? The date I had on the fall mountain hike thinks it's just wonderful the way I appreciate Nature. He told me so. But he hasn't asked me for a date this time. I really can't understand it.

"That's about all, I think. Mountains are really wonderful things. My memory book is just filled with souvenirs of them. I think they're wonderful institutions of Maryville. Get the students back to Nature, and all that. Well, good-bye. If you find a man who really appreciates Nature, tell him about me, will you?"

NEXT ECHO COMES OUT ON TWENTIETH OF MAY

The next issue of the Highland Echo will be printed on the 20th of May. This will be the last issue to be produced by the present staff. The last issue of the year will probably appear on Monday of commencement week and will be entirely in the hands of the new editor and staff.

There is little difference between the present Echo staff and that of next year. Nearly all those who are now members will be on the staff next year, if they return. They will be merely advanced in position. The present editor and at least one of his staff editors will not be troubled by the Echo next year, however. A sort of senior privilege, you might say.

Banquetting Season Already Under Way

Junior-Senior Banquet 27th of May, Whittle Springs Knoxville.

This is the season of the school-year when we should be pretty well fed up at Maryville because of the various banquets that are held. A number of clubs and organizations have banquets as the culmination of their social program.

The first of these in importance and interest, perhaps, is the junior-senior banquet which will be held this year at the Whittle Springs Hotel at Knoxville on the night of the 27th. Preparation is being made for this by the junior class and the seniors are waiting in anticipation.

The Pi Kappa Delta Fraternity is planning for its annual banquet at an early date. The time and place has not been definitely announced yet.

The Theta Alpha Phi Dramatic Fraternity is making plans for the night of May 17. The election of officers will be held May 14 and the grand finale the 18th.

The Glee Club will hold its annual banquet May 18 in a room of the Home Economics Department in Science Hall.

The Girls' Glee Club banquet will be on the night of May 13 in Science Hall. Preparation is being made to have butler service from the men's Home Economics class.

Tuesday night, May 6, the Maryville-U.T. Fellowship banquet will be held in the basement of the First M. E. Church. Maryville furnishes the eats here and U. T. furnishes the program of entertainment.

The preachers of the Ministerial Association, being hungrier than the rest, have already had their banquet in Science Hall.

The girls of the Y. W. C. A. too, had their blow-out last Friday night. It was arranged in Thaw Hall and from the reports we get it was a very unique and interesting affair.

The Student Council will probably have some party or banquet or social of some kind but it has not yet been announced what kind or when it will be. With these and all the State and other club parties there is going to be plenty of entertainment before the close of school.

Singers' Final Concert On Thursday, May 16

Unusual Effects Obtained by Use of Novel Sort of Apparatus.

PRECISION THE KEY-NOTE

Program Promises an Unending Succession of Surprises From First Till Last.

The masterpiece of a successful concert season will be presented by the Maryville Glee Singers on May 16. Preparations for this final concert are being made such as have never been made for a glee club concert before. The Glee Singers of 1928-'29 are surely preparing to make their final home appearance one long to be remembered by the Maryville audience.

Of course the fundamental feature of any glee club concert is music; the better the music, the better the concert. The club this year is well versed in this fundamental virtue and has been working faithfully on the perfection of songs that will appeal for the sheer beauty of harmony and melody.

To musical perfection may be added attractive presentation if a really beautiful performance is desired. The Singers will present their concert on a fully curtained stage with various lighting effects. Careful attention will be given to every detail of the stage setting.

"Precision" will be the watchword in this concert. Entrances and exits are receiving special attention, electricity being called in to aid in its attainment. The club and piano will work absolutely as a unit, thanks again to our master-slave, electricity.

"Morning", and "The Old Road" are two of the club songs that will appeal to all lovers of good music. "This is She" is another club song of a different type. This song describes in a comical, detailed, and intimate way the charms of the fair lady. In the same group with this song a musical version of the "Howie-Howie" will be presented. This isn't so bad, either. Another high-spot in the program will be a beautiful explanation of the "sweet mystery of life" by the club and quartet.

The Dixie Vagabond quartet will have several groups on the program; Matthews will entertain with some brand-new chalk talk features; Courtenay will give his really remarkable impersonation of Harry Lauder; Cotton will hammer a few new ones on the xylorimba. A few song parodies will be sqeezed in somewhere. This isn't all, but it's enough to let you know you'll miss something if you fail to come.

Novelties will be numerous, and everyone is assured that there will not be a dull or empty moment from the concert's beginning to its close.

——When showing the folks around the campus don't fail to point out to them the college barn over behind the Gillingham courts. This is one of the rare sights on the Hill,—luckily.

——We always expect to see improvements when we return in September. If there isn't a new barn, we at least hope the wind will have finished tearing down the old one.

Two Recitals In Piano; One Tonight, One Next Monday. Allen and Smartt will appear in post-graduate recital.

May 6—Tonight Miss Anita Allen, of Knoxville, a graduate in piano, will give the third recital of the series given by our music department.

The program promises to be very interesting. Miss Allen will open with a Chopin Polonaise, and will include among her numbers the Brahms Rhapsody in G minor, The Trout, by Schubert-Heller, Waltz Lente, by the modern French composer, Debussey and numbers by Scarlatti, Grieg and Liszt. Miss Allen will also close with the Concerto in G minor by Mendelssohn.

An invitation is extended to the students.

One week later, following Miss Allen's recital, Miss Fancher Smartt

After hearing a rehearsal and listening to the amusing modern group which includes the Little White Donkey by Ebert and In an Irish Jawnting Car, we felt we had a real treat to look forward to in Fancher's program, but it was not until we listened to the magnificent MacDowell Concerto that we realized the power of her technic and interpretation.

We regret that this will be the last of the recitals offered by the music department, although we still have a delightful program to look forward to on the first of June, when the Saturday night Commencement program will be given by the department.

PEIRCE IS EDITOR OF ECHO FOR NEXT YEAR

May 1—Members of the new Highland Echo staff met today at twelve-forty and elected Jesse Peirce to serve as editor-in-chief for next year. Balloting was done according to the Echo provisions, the staff editors having five votes, junior associates, three votes, and sophomore cubs, one vote. Forrest Robertson was the other nominee for the position.

Jesse has been sports' editor during the almost-past year. He has served faithfully in this position and has cooperated with the editor in giving more space to athletic news than has ever previously been done. Experience gained during his term as athletic editor combined with newspaper work he intends to do this summer should enable him to put out a paper worthy of the school.

1700 INVITATIONS TO BE SENT BY SENIORS

Within the next few days invitations to attend the commencement exercises of Maryville College will be flying out into all parts of the United States. According to Robert Dance, chairman of the senior committee on invitation cards, sixteen hundred seventy-eight cards have been bought. These are of two styles. One is of blue leather and the other is of cardboard. The initial cost of these cards amounted to $413.97.

The cost of mailing these cards will increase the amount to approximately $500.00. This amount is being spent by the members of the senior class on inviting their personal friends to the exercises.

Annuals Out Thursday For Students Unhampered By Unpaid-For Pictures

The 1929 Chilhowean, eagerly awaited by all students but especially by the seniors, will make its appearance on Friday of this week. Only those who have paid all the dues required by the clubs and organizations to which they belong and whose pictures are in the annual will be allowed to pay the final two dollars and carry away the book. This precaution is necessary in order to insure the full payment for every picture in the annual. If you owe any dues in any organization pay now and be ready to join in the rush on the Chilhowean business manager on Friday.

We have been expecting an unusually good year book because of the very capable staff which has produced it. Each of us will be able to satisfy his curiosity about some of the surprises which have been promised and perhaps about some personal matters. For instance: What have they said about each senior? Have they told the truth? What is the feature section like? Wonder what I look like in that literary society picture? Of course I sneezed just as the camera clicked. Well, there'll be some other funny ones too, I guess. Et cetera ad infinitum.

Of the five hundred annuals ordered only a few have not been engaged. It is still possible to get one by paying the full cost of the book, but it is expected that it will be necessary to get more than the five hundred to supply the demand completely.

A Job For Jesse

Jesse Peirce is it for next year. He has been on the staff long enough to know that this Echo job is no small matter. He has been kept busy getting out his share of the paper this year, but from now on he will really have something to do. We wish him a happy and restful summer in preparation for next year's Echo.

Theoretically, the editor-in-chief should not need to concern himself with trivialities such as proof-reading, head-line writing, make-up work, etc. His job should be that of the busy executive who sits back, reads the newspapers, talks over school affairs with his staff editors, and dictates in a general way to those under him any matters he wants done. In this way he would have time and energy to observe student affairs, read up on questions troubling the rank and file, and produce editorials fairly running over with wisdom.

Practically, the editor has found that the "trivialities" mentioned above have been the things occupying most of his time. Although plans made last summer called for certain staff members to take charge of these various details, it was soon found that nothing was quite so satisfactory, to the editor, at least, as to do most of these jobs himself.

Probably one of the biggest faults is that there has been a lack of proper organization. The staff as now composed is a great improvement over staffs of previous years. Yet, its possibilities have only begun to be realized. We leave the problem to Jesse to so arrange and distribute duties among staff members as to gain the greatest efficiency.

One outstanding deficiency in the curriculum, as the editor sees it, is the lack of any course in journalism. Staff members may be asked to read books on the subject, but this is not enough to assure their bringing in finished news articles. To gain proficiency in news writing requires training: practice and criticism. A one-hour course for the staff alone would pay big dividends for the Echo. Each issue could be criticised by class members, article for article. Improvement would certainly result. If such a class were formed it would probably be found that there would be many others who would want admission. The Y. W. reading room was filled at the journalistic group meeting in the last Life Work Conference by students interested in newspaper work.

Bumming Not Over

Since making a few pessimistic remarks about the future of hitch-hiking in the Echo for April 22, the editor has heard considerable discussion about the matter. A few seem to have been alarmed by the legislative action cited in that issue; they have begun to wonder how they will get home if the business fails before commencement. A letter recently received from an authority on the subject may possibly help to set these minds at ease.

Bill Swaim, now a student in Western Theological Seminary at Pittsburg, was a Maryvillian year before last and the year before that. Incidentally, he was the editor's room-mate in the Fall of 1925. Bill was an ardent exponent of the bumming business. He held the record for number of miles covered. After reading the editorial mentioned above, he immediately sat down to write the editor his opinions on the matter.

He objects to the assertion that motorists will not give a "collegiate knight" a ride any more. He cites several instances of recent tours in record time and closes with the assertion that he believes bumming is better than ever before.

Bill should be an authority on the subject if experience can make him one. We hope he is right, for this certainly is an easy and economical method of travel.

Spring Fever

Why are so many students here at Maryville so unambitious whenever a competition is concerned? Even when there is a monetary reward for the winner as in the case of the Bates Oratorical Contest it is not possible to get enough students to compete. Usually the more capable ones are those most prone to sit back and let the others do the work. Is it modesty or laziness that causes this phenomenon? Or could it be Spring fever?

Dr. Hunter thinks it possible that Spring fever may have something to do with the operation of the Bates contest at least. At any rate, he is advocating that the contest be held much earlier in the year. He believes that more students will work in December than in March or April. Sounds reasonable, at least.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

One of the great advantages growing out of debate is the banquet.

—:—

The one this year promises to be unusually interesting and distinctive.

—:—

Of course those who get to make the one minute speeches suffer until they are over.

—:—

The others do too, for that matter, but from a different reason.

—:—

"When I rose to speak everyone smiled," but after "fifteen minutes a day" they all stopped eating and begged me to go on.

—:—

Since debaters are public speakers about the most suitable thing to have at their banquet is toast.

—:—

They even have a master of toast.

—:—

When I was a freshman I went to debaters' banquet. Someone was making a toast to the freshman. He forgot his speech and made a harangue.

—:—

These banquets always remind me of the ancient festivals given by the orators who invited in their friends and served only peacock tongues at their banquets.

Then there was always a fool to create amusement for the guests. Of course we can't have anything like that now.

—:—

Here we usually have a theatre party with a light dinner afterwards. I suppose the comedy in the movies takes the place of the ancient fool.

But debaters are not the only ones who enjoy banquets.

—:—

The corrilary of this is that just to be a debater does not mean that one always enjoys a banquet—though it is a good sign.

—:—

I know one debater who likes to argue so well that he won't eat anything that agrees with him.

—:—

The girls must have had a quiet time at their Y. W. C. A. banquet. They had it in the reading room.

—:—

The basement is chosen usually for the Maryville-U. T. fellowship banquet—the basement of the church.

—:—

But the debaters would naturally have the most logical place for a banquet—the bakery.

—:—

In this way we get hot service.

MONROE'S CONFECTIONERY

ELECTRICITY—
the modern prospector

A STOUT heart; a burro laden with pick, shovel, and the bare necessities of life; and the prospector was ready for the gold rush—Sutter's Mill, the Pike's Peak country, Cripple Creek, Klondyke. A scattered trail of half-worked claims marked his sacrifices.

To-day mining is a business, with electricity replacing wasteful brawn in mine and mill.

The deep mine, with electric lights, hoists, and locomotives; the surface mine with huge electric shovels scooping up tons of ore in a single bite; the concentrating mill with its batteries of electrically driven machines; the steel mill with its constant electric heat—here are but a few of electricity's contributions to the mineral industries.

So in every industry, electricity increases production and cuts costs. It is the modern prospector, leading the way into wider fields and tapping undeveloped resources—that we may enjoy a finer civilization and a richer, fuller life.

You will find this monogram on powerful motors that drive heavy mining machinery and on tiny motors that drive sewing machines. Both in industry and in the home it is the mark of an organization that is dedicated to electrical progress.

Highlanders Sweep Smoky Mountain Conference Track Meet With 79 Points

Track Men Pile Up 79 Points To Win

Every Maryville Entry Scores; Take First in All Running Events, Shattering Records.

With every man on the team scoring, Coach Thrower's well balanced aggregation swept through the Smoky Mountain Conference Track and Field meet to an overwhelming victory. Maryville not only scored more than twice as many points as her nearest competitor, but she scored more points than all the opposition combined.

In a number of ways this meet was unusual. In the first place the finals were run at 7:30 o'clock in the evening over an illuminated track. This was a new experience for our boys, but did not seem to affect their performance. A number of conference records were broken. Maryville men placed first in every one of the running events. Last but not least, every Maryville man placed in the trials, and scored in the finals.

In the high hurdles Billy Crawford lowered his own record of 16 9-10 seconds by 6-10 of a second. Taggart took two seconds off the track record in the 440, while Peterson took three off the record in the mile run. Hayes Williams, in addition to setting a new mark in the 220 yard dash, was high scorer with 11 1-4 ponts. He was followed closely by Vincent who collected ten. Davis, our pole vault ace, went up and over for a first place in that event. Good work, Ken.

The following is a list of the events and those placing in each:

Pole Vault—1st. Davis (M); 2nd. Bolen and Littlejohn, (E.-H.) tied. Height, ten feet.

120 Yard High Hurdles—1st. Crawford (M); 2nd. Vincent (M); 3rd. Reynolds (E.-H.). Time 16 2-10 seconds.

Shot Put—1st. Woodman, (K.); 2nd. Carper (M.); 3rd. Diggs (E.-H.) Distance, 40 feet 6 inches.

Mile Run—1st. Peterson (M); 2nd. Martin (Tus.); 3rd. Hillman (E.-H.). Time 4 mn. 52 sec.

100 Yard Dash—1st. Williams (M.); 2nd. Abshear (M.); 3rd. McCouhle, (Milli.); Time 10 sec.

Javelin—1st. Ashworth (E.H.); 2nd. Milsaps (M); 3rd. Redmon, (Tus.) Distance 155 feet 10 1-2 inches.

440 Yard Dash—1st. Taggart (M.); 2nd. Miles, (E.-H.); 3rd. Holman (M). Time 53 4-10 seconds.

Broad Jump—1st. Simms (E.-H.); 2nd. Francis (E.-H.); 3rd. Vincent (M.); Distance 20 ft. 7 in.

220 Yard Low Hurdles—1st. Vincent (M); 2nd. Crawford (M.); 3rd. Reynolds (E.-H.) and Tweed (Tus.) tied. Time 26 1-10 sec.

Discus—1st. Woodman, (K.); 2nd. Headrick (M.); 3rd. Gregg (Tus.) Distance 116 feet.

880 Yard Run—1st. Carper (M.); 2nd. Denton (E.-H.); 3rd. Holman (M.) Time 2 min. 12 4-10 sec.

High Jump—1st. Peery (E.-H.); 2nd. Vincent and Headrick, tied; Height 5 feet, 7 inches.

220 Yard Dash—1st. Williams (M.); 2nd. Taggart, (M.); 3rd. Littlejohn (E.-H.). Time 21 7-10 sec.

Two Mile Run—1st. Williamson (M.); 2nd. Denton (E.-H.); 3rd. Barr (M.); Time 11 min. 21 sec.

Relay—1st. Maryville; 2nd. Emory and Henry; 3rd. Tusculum; 1. Williams, 2. Abshear, 3. Crawford, 4. Taggart. Time, 3 min. 46 1-2 sec.

Totals—Maryville 79; Emory and Henry 38 1-2; King 10 1-2; Tusculum 6; Milligan 1.

'NOOGA BEATS M. C. ON CLAY COURTS HERE

April 30—The Chattanooga tennis team defeated Maryville on the home courts today by a score of 4 to 2. Maryville broke even in the doubles, but lost three of the four singles matches.

Maryville's men played an excellent game, but the visitors were just a little better. For Maryville King and Coulter played the best tennis, while Brooks and Lotspiech were outstanding for Chattanooga.

The scores were as follows:

Doubles—King, Coulter, Lind, Manson, 6-1, 7-5, Maryville; Brooks, Lotspiech, Prince, Pope, 6-4, 6-3, Chattanooga.

Singles—Brooks, Prince, 7-5, 6-2, Chattanooga; Crawford, Lind, 6-4, 6-3, Chattanooga; Lotspiech, Pope, 6-2, 6-3, Chattanooga; King, Manson, 6-2, 6-3, Maryville.

SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE BEGINS

May 6—This morning manager-elect Crow was busily engaged in giving out football suits to candidates for spring training. About twenty-five men reported for the first practice, which due to the weather, was held indoors. This is the first time Maryville has gone in for this extra preparation, and we are anxious to find out the results.

INCIDENTALLY

——It really would be a shame if everyone to whom these seniors are sending invitations should decide to come to the commencement exercises. The old Hill would be overflowing if they did.

——According to the order of rainy May Days in the past, next year's should be fair.

——Film sales in town are going to take a big jump before Wednesday. Mountain hikes always consume a lot of photographic film. Most of the pictures made are of the record type, that is, plain snaps made without thought of artistic balance or excellence, made for the sole purpose of remembering the event. Very little effort on the photographer's part will produce a record picture that is also an artistic effort.

Home Nine Grabs Pair From Teachers

Win First Game 7-0; Second Contest a Merry-go-Round For Highlanders 11-2.

May 3—Maryville College took a one-sided game from the Teachers' College today by a 7-0 shut out. Gabbard, for the Highlanders, pitched air-tight ball, allowing but two hits and walking only one man. McCall, who relieved Treadway in the box for the Pedagogues, was very effective, striking out six men, but his mates were wobbly, five errors being charged against them.

Acuff for the visitors slammed out a three bagger in the first frame, but died on third when Thompson went out on a ground ball to short stop. All the locals' hits were singles, with Davis and Bird turning in a total of five. Dyer provided a little sparkle to an otherwise dull afternoon by completing a double play unassisted.

The Highlanders looked one hundred percent better than they did last Tuesday against the Vols—the infield in particular functioning brilliantly.

May 4—The Highlanders today made a clean sweep of the two-game series with the Teachers on the home diamond by a score of 11-2. Thompson, on the mound for the Johnson City lads, was never effective, being touched for no less than fifteen blows. Park, the diminutive Maryville southpaw, pitched easy ball, yielding but four hits.

In the two games played here, the Maryville baseballers accumulated 22 hits for a total of 18 runs, while the Teachers were accounting for 6 hits and 2 runs. The point is, that the Teachers can consider it a good stroke of business to have taken one of the two games played up at Johnson City the other week.

April 30—In their first clash with the 1929 edition University of Tennessee baseball team, the Highlanders met defeat 5-1 on the local diamond.

The Volunteers, reinforced by Bridge's excellent hurling, and aided by numerous Maryville "boners", pushed across most of their runs in the dying phases of the game. "Jack" Gabbard, for the locals, did some pretty pitching; most of the five hits garnered off his delivery being "scratch" affairs.

The game, which lasted almost two and three quarter hours, was one of the slowest ever witnessed on this diamond, and to further set the stage for the "dark and bloody" murder, a drizzling rain fell during almost the entire encounter.

"A cane is ordinarily not worn with a business suit."—Miss Meiselwitz, in Boys' Home Ec. Class.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Dame Rumor has it that our old friend John Stone has been warming the bench for the past few weeks, due to a sprained ankle.

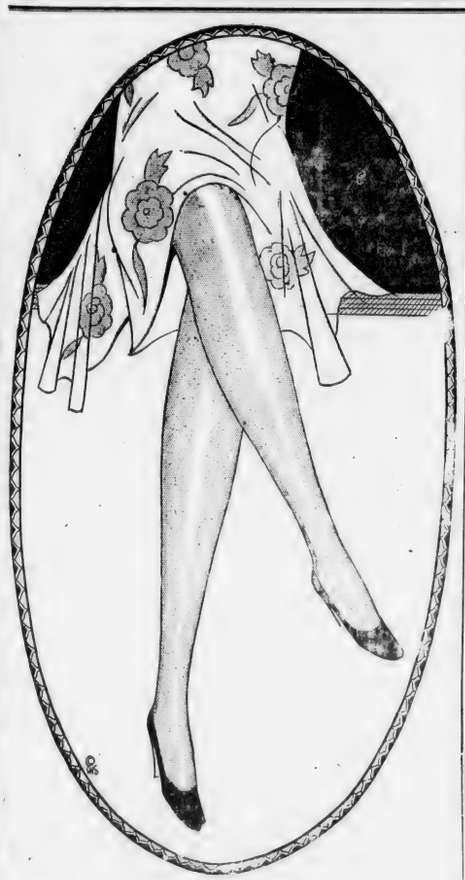
Somebody claimed that "Stein" wasn't smacking the old apple, and was therefore relegated to the dugout, but we feel sure that he will be up in the limelight again before the season has progressed very far.

We are glad to see that the tennis team is using some of its appropriation to give us tennis matches. The tennis team gets as much as the track team, so we crave action.

Now is the time for all good athletes to come to the aid of their Alma Mater, and figure out a way to get back next year to help the teams.

We notice that "Red" Grange, noted football hero, advises Temple University football candidates to lay off professional football. He ought to know. Perhaps C. C. Pyle didn't soothe "Red's" bruises with a sufficiently heavy poultice of greenbacks.

After chasing the chalky pills through the underbrush on the college links, the golf team should have little trouble finding the ball when they meet Knoxville High School this week.



Merle Delaney says Smitty gets some pretty good breaks for a freshman. He got the only hit of the game against U. T.

That's the reason we didn't put the box score of the Tennessee game in this week. We knew how it would look to strangers.

Well, I guess I might as well quit until the boys get busy and make something happen.

——The Girls' Glee Club made a creditable showing in the chapel last Monday night. There was almost not enough of it, though.

——Fuses are in the habit of having numerous blow-outs in Carnegie lately.

Thence fiercely ran the green cupids to summon Sweete Dawn, who harkened and willingly came promising to never return without the child (Marion Huddleston).

Soon she returned bearing the ill favored mortal child who did not know or love Spring. In this gorgeous faerie world however, the little earth brat recognized and loved Spring, shown by the homage she paid the Queene. For her the goodly Queene did command mainy "daintie damsells" to flutter, float and skip around the renowned May-pole.

are not sure just when is the proper time for sending out these invitations. A number of questions have been asked about this. In view of this fact the writer has sought this information from Miss Meiselwitz who has been instructing the young men of her home economics class along these lines. She says they should be sent out about a month before the time of graduation. This gives plenty of time for the consideration of the matter and for necessary arrangements to be made.

PRE-MEDCAL CLUB

May 2—Following the regular biweekly meeting of the Pre-medical Club tonight the members were entertained by a splendid program of music by Messrs. Partee and French and a lecture by "Doc" Morrison on Animal Surgery.

Theta Epsilon

Some of our members who live off the Hill will display their talent for Theta Epsilon Saturday night. The town girls will present a group of modern songs. This feature is sure to be enjoyed by all. An equally attractive number will be given by Misses Marjorie Nelson, Lois Lovette and Lois Crotwell as a ukelele trio. Let's go!

SENIORS IN CHARGE OF SUNDAY NIGHT SERVICE

May 5—Instead of the regular Sunday night Vesper service the seniors had charge and presented the entire program. It was an interesting program.

The seniors marched down the centre aisle to the front in their robes and filled the front rows. Those having parts on the program sat on the platform.

Florian Hopkins, president of the senior class, read the scripture lesson and Edward DeHaven followed this with prayer. Special music was given by three girls, Mary Chris Benn, Mary Elizabeth Woodard, and Fronie French. Then three talks were made as if they were parts of one whole. The first was made by John H. Wienand, Jr., the second was made by H. Ingram Fell, and the third which was not a talk but a story applicable to the subject, was read by Walter R. Courtenay. A quartet composed of four men of the class, Norman Vaughn, Ralph Lawson, David Marston, and Harold Holman, sang.

After the singing of a hymn the seniors marched out, leaving the audience to dismiss itself. The latter part of the marching out was done rather hurriedly.

——A Nickel Point bus got loose last Thusday night and ran across the Court Street side walk just below the campus and knocked over a pole and nearly went down the bank. Nobody hurt,—no glass broken.

Annual Inscriptions Big Current Problem

Coming of 1929 Chilhowean is Cause of Considerable Discussion.

SCOTCH IDEA A REALITY

Feature Section Indicative of Considerable Thought.

(by Sarah Moore)

The only ray of sunshine that penetrates the students' gloomy existence just before examination time is the advent of the annuals. What a heaven-sent blessing they are. Here is a new topic of conversation. "Now, I think that—". "Oh, how do you get that way? I say that —". "What a terrible publication to thrust upon us!" "That's the most original annual I've seen in years." And so on.

Then comes the thrilling pursuit of signatures. Of course, one must have one's best girl's signature, and the good wishes of the class president, one's cronies, and one's dearest enemies. In this connection there is great cause for distress among the signers. Will "best o' luck, signed, So-and-So" be enough, or should one write a whole paragraph of blarney—for it is inconceivable that one's real wishes be expressed since our annual is an open book for everyone—or should one quote a few lines of poetry or perhaps say "good-bye" in English, German, Latin, French, Spanish, or American? It is all very puzzling.

We are quite sure the first annual was begun by a group of students who firmly believed that their photographs resembled the countenances of Paris or Helen of Troy, and in consequence, that such admirable likenesses should be preserved for future generations. They little reckoned of what misery lay in store for future generations of Those Who Do Not Look Well in Photographs.

Annuals have a salutary effect in that one sees oneself as others see him. Here is not the straight nose, commanding eyes, and erect pose of what one had thought oneself to be, but—oh, well, what's the use? One can never be the same after gazing searchingly at one's picture in the annual.

We must give credit to Frank Baker and Jesse Peirce and their staffs for a most interesting annual. They have carried throughout the book the idea of the "Scotties". The blue and silver back is decorative and unusual.

Charles Felknor is the Chilhowean's artist this year, and an excellent one he is. From the title-pages of the various sections to that last ticklish one on "Humor" he shows himself a master of his pen.

The Chilhowean this year is dedicated to one worthy of upholding Scotch traditions—Mrs. Minton. Her students will testify to her sparkling wit and her sympathy and understanding of her students. She is an able and interesting teacher as well as a firm friend, and the students join in this public recognition of her services.

PI KAPPA DELTA MEETS AND ELECTS OFFICERS

May 16—The Tennessee Alpha Chapter of the Pi Kappa Delta Fraternity met Wednesday afternoon and initiated three new members into the organization. These new members are Mary Fitzgerald in the Order of Oratory with the Degree of Proficiency; Vera Coy with Fraternity standing in the Order of Debate; and William R. Graham in the Order of Debate with the Degree of Proficiency. Miss Fitzgerald is a senior and Miss Coy and Mr. Graham are sophomores.

The new officers for next year, who had been elected at a special meeting, were sworn into office by the President, Florian Hopkins.

The officers for next year will be Forrest I. Robertson, president; Robert W. Jones, vice president; and Mildred Crawford, secretary and treasurer.

The annual Pi Kappa Delta banquet will be held Thursday night, May 23. The members will first go to the Palace Theatre and then to Walkers for the banquet. This is an annual get-together of the debaters of which there are no worthy opponents.

PIANO RECITALS

May 17—This afternoon the students of piano under Miss Batt appeared in recital. This was the third piano recital since the preceding issue of the Echo. On the 6th of May, Miss Anita Allen appeared in graduate recital. One week later, Miss Fancher Smartt presented a post-graduate recital. A large audience was present at each of these last two recitals.

Students of piano under Miss Adkins will appear in recital this coming Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Miss Hale is arranging a very artistic program of music for the 1st of June. This will be one of the high-spots in the pre-commencement attractions.

Three Banquets Held During the Past Week

Toasters and Toastees Kept Busy by Bustling Banquets.

Girls' Glee Club

May 13—Tonight at five-thirty, the Girls' Glee Club banquet was held in Science Hall. Needless to say, all of the girls enjoyed the evening, for Miss Molly allowed them to invite their "boy-friends."

Miss Elvera Meiselwitz kept the dinner lively with her jokes and witty introductions of the speakers. Mary Chris Benn and Fronie French made interesting talks on behalf of the Girls' Glee Club. Jack Cotton, president of the Men's Glee Club, responded with a toast to Women that put everyone in a good humor for the rest of the evening. The cleverest address at the banquet was given by Miss Frances Henry; it was composed entirely of titles of familiar songs.

One outstanding feature of the banquet was the wonderful service displayed by some of the men from the Home Economics Department. Surely no butler ever kept a straighter face than Stanley McCool, William Elzey, or Walter Courtenay.

Theta Alpha Phi

May 18—Another successful year has ended for the Theta Alpha Phi Dramatic Fraternity. Friday night the annual banquet was held at the home of Mrs. Nita Eckles West, head of Expression Department. It was a lovely affair. Several of the last year's members came back for the occasion including Emily Minton, Alice Gillingham, Nelle Watkins, and Dorothy McCulloch. Also Mr. Parham from the University of Tennessee was a guest of the local chapter.

Robert Anderson acted as toastmaster. Toasts were made by Chilton Bowles, Sarah Moore, John Wienand, Jesse Peirce, and Frank Baker.

Only one new member was taken into Theta Alpha Phi this spring term. That was Hayden Laster, an Expression student whose dramatic ability is well known on College Hill.

The following officers have been elected to pilot Theta Alpha Phi next year: Frank Baker, president; Jesse Peirce, secretary; and Forrest I. Robertson, treasurer. These men will have much to do with dramatics on the Hill.

Glee Singers

May 19—Tonight the Glee Singers' annual banquet was held in the Home Ec room on the third floor of Science Hall. Over forty people enjoyed an excellent dinner and program in the rather cramped quarters available for club banquets.

Professor Rodgers was toastmaster. Toasts were made by the outgoing and incoming officers of the club. The program included a reading, whistling duets and instrumental music.

Even rain failed to dampen the spirits of the occasion.

Writers' Workshop

At its last meeting the Writers' Workshop elected twelve new members. We are expecting great things from them for they are all students of exceptional ability. The new members are: Rosalie Batt, Kemp Davis, Ed Sprouse, Hessie Keeton, Ed Osborne, Jane Morrow, Bob Jones, Esther Howe, Sam Kidder, Mabel Dickerson, Leland Gilmore, and Bess Mitchell.

Hayden Writes of the Joys of the Librarian

Methods Vary in Calling For Books; Not All Are Practical.

RULES A NECESSARY EVIL

Evolutionary Classification is Suggested for Library Moonshiners.

(By J. Hayden Laster)

The joys of a library assistant are many and varied. Becoming acquainted with thirty-five thousand volumes of books, about seventy-five periodicals and the decimal system of filing is fun compared to inspiring eight hundred students to believe that "only asses bray—humans talk."

The librarian is a target for more questions than those pertaining to books. "What time is it please?" "May I 'borrow' some ink?" "Have you seen so and so?" are common every day questions which are fortunately easy to answer.

Very few people call for books by author, title and number (as supposed to do). But those who fail to do this duty are very kind to describe the book and tell where it is likely to be hiding. "The book I want," says a girl, "is a big fat one, and if I could see on the inside of it I could tell whether or not it is the correct one". Another girl said that the book she wanted was a "big red one", where upon she was informed there were several hundred books present of that color, to which she assuringly replied, that this book was one that a friend of hers took out two weeks ago.

It is interesting to note the mannerisms and characteristics of the devotees. Some, invariably sit at the same table and at the same place at that table though they may have a choice of over two hundred seats. Some walk quietly and whisper their wants. Others walk and talk loudly. Most people who use the library are kind and cheerful. Some of late seem afflicted with Spring fever and of course should take some medicine or exercise. If the particular book or article is out that is called for, some will sigh, some will frown and say—others will smile. Many students say "listen" just before letting their wants be known. Often times the mind of some evidently fails to function properly when at the desk and the book is called a "Thingamaydooger", "What do I want?" or "you know what I want."

The assistant librarian (as some will be interested to learn) is merely a student, and must prepare his lessons and meet classes as other students do. While he is not on duty he does not feel compelled to work helping those who are on duty, for there is scarcely any studying ever done while on the job.

The assistant does not make the rules of the library! He must obey them just the same as other students—not only obey them but also apply them. And there is more joy(?) centered around the word apply than there is in all the other work combined. For, undoubtedly moonshining is the "fondest thing some folks is of." One of the most interesting things about this luxury, or necessity as the case may be, of moonshining, is that it may be classed under three heads or stages:

1. Googoo eye stage
2. Poetry stage
3. Moonlight and roses stage.

If we were not in the State of Tennessee it might be suggested that moonshining is evolutionary in its nature as may be noticed in the classification. It is very difficult to tell just which stage is hardest to deal with or most amusing from the standpoint of a close observer. I mean a librarian. It is also very

Approaching Exams Arouse Questioning

A Defective System, Perhaps, But The Best Known, So Far.

"MIDNIGHT OIL" WASTED

Old Principle Applies Here: The Cheater Never Wins.

(by Mabel Dickerson)

Almost any time on the campus, you may hear someone saying, "Oh, how I dread examinations!" "Yes," his companion says, "I only wish that I were a senior, so I wouldn't have to go through the ordeal!"

It is an ordeal—but then we'll all be seniors some day. Meanwhile, since exams are so certainly approaching closer all of the time, we might as well bear it like Spartans, and view the benefits of examinations with an optimistic eye.

Many eminent educationalists are facing the problem of examinations and wondering whether they are really worthwhile, and if they are useful, how the present faults may be corrected. Here are some of the arguments pro and con.

The main fault found in examinations is that the preparation for them consists merely of crowding the memory with disconnected facts instead of allowing the student's mind to reason a thing through. This is an error which must be referred to the individual teacher and student. Of course, if the teacher requires of the student a mere knowledge of memorized, disconnected facts, that's all that the students will get. However, if the exam is truly comprehensive the student can utilize a large amount of reasoning power both in preparation for and execution of the examination. Undoubtedly, it is a different but worthwhile thing to get an understanding of the whole scope of any subject—and this is accomplished by a systematic reviewing—not cramming—for an examination.

Another weakness found by anti-examinationists is that the review which is done for an examination has no lasting effect—that it is for one occasion only, and when the ordeal is over, all of the information gleaned from review leaves the student's mind immediately. It is easier to forget than to remember—many of us have discovered this to our sorrow. There are some things however, which we almost wish we could forget, but which remain with us all through life. One of these things is a bungling answer that we made on a test. "Various aspects of problems considered in the white heat of attention will remain fairly clear in the mind for a long time." That is the opinion of Mr. E. P. Kimball, a member of the Department of Economics and Sociology at Smith College.

Thus we see that the first two objections to examinations are concerned with cramming, and the ease of forgetting information gained by such useless cramming. The next problem has to do with dishonesty. All of the teachers are disturbed with the quantity of cheating which takes place. There are some people who will cheat their way through life, and examinations are no greater evidence of this fact than any other type of preparation of lessons. As usual, the teacher will have to separate the gold from the dross and make out the grades accordingly. This shouldn't be hard if the instructor has a fairly good knowledge of the capabilities of the students—this knowledge being derived from their daily recitations.

We should not, however, be too occupied with how the teacher is benefitted by examinations, for who is the one who should derive the

FRED HOPE PLEDGES

Most of the money subscribed to the Fred Hope drive has been turned in. Out of $1,344.70 subscribed, the office has received $1,137.70, leaving only $207. yet to come in. This would sound quite encouraging a month or two ago, but the fact that this amount is still owed by 151 students here in school only a few weeks before commencement indicates that a large number of students are not very particular about paying their pledges when promised. Most of these subscriptions amount to only a dollar each. Miss Jones desires to send the balance of the money to Africa within a few days. If your subscription is still unpaid, hurry around and pay up.

Gillingham President of Philadelphia School

Loss Here After Long Period as Student and Teacher Keenly Felt.

Dr. C. H. Gillingham has been elected president of the Philadelphia School for Christian Workers, and will take up his duties with that institution in June, soon after commencement at Maryville College. Dr. Gillingham has been connected with Maryville as a student and teacher for more than a quarter of a century.

The school of which Dr. Gillingham will be the head is under the control of the Presbyterian and Reformed churches. Prior to this it has been a college for girls, but is to be made co-educational at the beginning of the next session. The school has a large endowment fund, and a program for expansion has been planned.

Dr. Gillingham and family will reside in Glenside, a suburb of Philadelphia.

Dr. Gillingham graduated from Maryville College in the class of 1905. For several years he has been head of the Department of Bible, and has also served as registrar and chairman of the classification committee.

Dr. Gillingham has always taken a deep interest in Maryville affairs, he is liked and respected by all the students, and his departure will be a distinct loss to the College. We are sure that it is all Maryville's heart-felt desire that he be even more successful in his new position than he has been in Maryville.

GLEE SINGERS' CONCERT RECEIVES MUCH PRAISE

May 16—There may have been complaints about the fifty cent admission to the concert tonight, but not by anyone who was present. The general opinion is that this was the best program in the chapel this year and the best club concert ever presented.

Novelties were abundant and the smaller details of the performance were carefully worked out. Except for a few hitches in the last group the program was presented with unusual smoothness. Entrances and exits were very rapid and looked well. "Chilly's" solo, "The Rosary", Courtenay's scotch songs, the club's "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life", and Cotton's and Buchanan's xylorimbasaw numbers were all good.

The club did excellent work, singing thirteen songs including encores. The fact that they were aided in some way by an electric light was known generally, but few knew just how it was worked.

Lighting effects with a good looking stage setting did much to add effectiveness to the music.

About Twenty-Five Moonshiners Fall With Bridge on Hike

Several Injured, Many Wet By Plunge into River from Swinging Bridge.

HIKERS GO ON TO TREMONT

Staff Member "Right on Deck" At Time of Accident.

(by Edith Nash)
(Wednesday, May 8)

"Into each life some pain must fall", but who expected the bridge to fall? (I'm sure I didn't—I was on it). Yes, before discussing the details of the Spring Mountain hike—we must talk about the accident, which will make this hike one of the most memorable in mountain hike history. This is what happened—given as authentically as possible: While waiting for the extra flat cars to be attached to the train, energetic Maryville lads and lassies strolled leisurely around the station. About twenty of the more adventurous had advanced to and even on the swinging bridge which spans Little River. While the couples were tranquilly gazing into the rushing waters below and perhaps meditating upon the dryness and brightness of the day and other matters,—there was heard suddenly a scraping sound,— — then before anyone realized what had happened we were "breaking the ice" on Little River and drinking the water like camels at an oasis. Several of the old inhabitants report that the water line went down three feet and that it continued to decrease until Red Courtenay emptied his boots into the stream. Other interesting reports have been scattered, especially concerning the manner in which the unfortunates emerged from the swift torrent. Some reported that Carl Storey went back for his camera. The first time he dived to get it, he brought out a compact and three hairpins, the second time, a speckled trout which was disturbed by the noise, and finally, he came up with a ukelele.

However, several were injured rather seriously and all were frightened and chilled because of the shock and coldness of the water. Byron King is still suffering with a broken ankle and other injuries; Anne Rob Smart broke her right arm and received several cuts and bruises. Several others were bruised and cut but not very seriously. All those who were wet, were taken to the hotel where dry clothes were given them. Not only those who were victims of the accident but the whole party appreciate the kindness and generosity shown the students by the Townsend people.

After everyone had gotten into dry clothes and those who were hurt were sent back to the college, the hikers returned to the train to go on to Tremont. What a buzz of conversation in the train! Everybody talking at once about the accident and explaining just how it happened— what everyone should have done—and some even lamenting the fact that they had not precipitated in the event. Some asked

LASTER WINS BATES PRIZE

May 15—The Bates Oratorical Contest was held last night in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium at Thaw Hall. Only a small crowd attended but the affair was interesting to the lovers of oratory and to the friends of the participants. Hayden Laster won first place, and will be awarded the prize of forty-five dollars in gold at the end of school. His subject was, "Not by Bread Alone". The oration showed a careful development of the subject in characteristic Laster style.

There were three speakers in the contest. The other two were Hubert Welsh and William Barnard Mr. Welsh spoke on the "Smoky Mountain National Park." The subject of Mr. Barnard's oration was "Citizenship Between Elections."

Although the contest was open this year to men of the junior and senior classes all three of the speakers were juniors. Next year the contest will be for girls.

The judges were Professor Queener, Dr. McMurray, Dr. Knapp, and Dr. Rogers. Dr. Hunter who has had charge of the arrangements for the contest acted as chairman.

A Last Appeal

It is a fact that many things which cause bad impressions are done without thought and could be easily avoided. Such a thing is the conduct in the dining room before the actual eating begins. At least once before, there has been an appeal in the Echo for students to act more reasonably and conduct themselves more as men and women when coming into the dining room. It is almost always necessary for the bell to be rung three or four times before the racket is lessened enough for Carl to call on the person to return thanks. This in itself is enough to cause considerable surprise to visitors. The fact that there is still an undercurrent of conversation during the returning of thanks and apparently a very definite time limit set by certain gentlemen in the hall who begin pulling out their chairs before the one praying is through may be interpreted as anything from rank discourtesy to irreverence. This situation seems to have grown worse rather than better.

If those responsible cannot be appealed to by allusions to the fact that their conduct is unworthy of students in a Christian college perhaps they will reform for the remaining few weeks in respect for the parents and friends of various students who will be present before and during commencement week. Possibly these visitors would excuse the student body on the ground of their "thoughtless youth", but why be thoughtless?

—O—

Farewell!

And now, after almost nine months spent in keeping thy pages filled with copy of a more or less useful or entertaining nature, we leave thee, O Highland Echo. To another we entrust the responsibility of feeding thy gaping maw with words, words, and still more words. We have gone over thy pages repeatedly each week before entrusting thee to the critical student populace. Where mistakes have made thy import doubtful, ours has been as great a sorrow as thine. We would have given thee a better quality of material, but we have done our best.

Thy new master is an honest and upright gentleman. He will feed thee on material which will give thee a greater reputation as the next year proceeds. Perhaps he will give thy pages more decorative illustrations than we have done. Thou hast grown in size under our care, but thy quality (forgive us!) has much still to be desired.

Live on, O Echo; grow in grace, strength, and wisdom. Give allegiance to thy new master! Never forget thy purpose,—to echo each bit of student action or opinion that the ever present faculty advisor will allow to be Echoed. Increase thy reputation, we say, and extend thy influence. Follow us, who must leave thee with a tear (not entirely of sorrow), wheresoever we may roam in the coming year.

Again, my friend, We say farewell. Good luck!

The Editor.

—O—

Honaker: (at Spring [illegible]) What experience have you had?

Frosh: Well, last summer I was hit by two autos and a truck.

Buy all your Music from Clark and Jones, Knoxville.

HIGHLAND FLINGS—

Senior: (earnestly) You must conquer yourself. I conquered myself when I was your age.

Frosh: Well, you see, I'm a harder man to lick than you are.

Pedestrians should be seen and not hurt.

"Algie, will that pie be long?"
"No, Ed, it'll be round in a minute."

Collective nouns: Fly-paper and vacuum cleaners.

The unkindest cut of all: "My dear, your picture in the annual is terrible, but it looks like you."

News Item: (from Scotland) The Edinborough football game was delayed an hour while the players searched for the penny they tossed up at the beginning of the game.

Old Salt: Yes. ma'am, that's a man-o'-war.

Lady: How interesting. What is that little boat out in front?

Old Salt: That's just a tug.

Lady: To be sure. Tug-o-war. I've heard of them.

INCIDENTALLY

——It would be a help if we could keep the bulletin board in Carnegie full of notices. It was empty the other day, and lots of freshmen had nothing to do between breakfast and chapel.

——Next to the last chapter in the senior's college career is Exodus. Then comes Revelations.

——There ought to be a rule against these seminary students coming down here this far before commencement. Why rub in the fact that their school is out?

——Teachers are trying various means of circumventing the seniors' exemption from exams. These various extra tests that are thrown in for their benefit ought not to be allowed. Absolutely!

SENIORS MUST TAKE EXAMS NEXT YEAR

Three years ought to be sufficient warning. The cause came more than three years ago. Five or six years ago a newly fledged alumnus of athletic propensities wrote Coach Honaker that he was working out in the University of —— gymnasium daily and that he "weighed 168 pounds striped". He said the state university but Coach thought perhaps it might be the state penetentiary. That is just one straw on the load which led the Faculty to decree that beginning with the Class of 1930 there should be an English test given to all aspirants for graduation at the beginning of their fourth year in college.

Accordingly the test will be given next September, soon after registration to all members of the senior class. The test will deal only with matters of English composition; there will be no question regarding literature. There will be sections on spelling, pronunciation, grammar, syntax, word choice, punctuation, and business letter writing.

The necessary preparation for the test can be made by the use of such texts as Uhler's A Review of English Grammar, Smart's English Review Grammar, Wooley and Scott, A College Handbook of Composition. These boks are now in use in the freshman English courses and can doubtless be purchased from freshmen at the end of the year.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

The halls resound again with oratory these last few weeks.

—:—

Those speaking in the Bates contest Tuesday night had a right to be afraid of each other.

—:—

Laster is going to be a rather expensive preacher from all indications.

—:—

He got about four dollars a minute for his oratorical sermon.

—:—

And that was not a charge, but a free-will offering.

—:—

Barnard sounded like an anti-Smith Senator in the recent political campaign.

—:—

For the benefit of the freshmen one might take time right here to explain that the speeches for the French oratorical contest in the Athenian Literary Society are delivered in English.

—:—

Mr. French didn't make that one of the requirements but it has always been the custom.

—:—

Before school is out we will have a chance to hear some real oratory—the seniors will give their history some morning in chapel.

—:—

So many different things happen about the end of school that one must think twice before speaking for fear he will make a speech appropriate on the wrong thing.

—:—

The Maryville representatives to the convention this year used different colored cards when they changed sides in debate, in an effort to speak on the right side of the question.

—:—

There seems to be some hope among the newly elected officers of Pi Kappa Delta for next year. Forrest I. Robertson, who was elected president, announced that the motto for next year would be, "Win every debate."

—:—

With the party and banquet this week the debating season will be ended for this year.

—:—

Special arrangements will be made for plates that will fit the debater's record. For this record we have taken statistics from the dietician.

—:—

Some of the dining-room records show special distinction.

Sophomores will be given major and minor cards this week. They should see that these cards are filled out, signed by the head of the department in which they wish to major, and returned to the office as soon as possible. If the cards are not handed in before the close of school, juniors will be delayed in getting registered in the fall.

TRAINING FOR BUSINESS
The management of the Knoxville Business College has always endeavored to inspire the pupils of this school to attain the highest ideals.
When a gentleman called at the office the other day for someone to fill a vacancy, he said, "I want a young man for this position who within the next five or eight years will be able to manage one of our branch offices." The Knoxville Business College is training young men and young women for this kind of leadership. When a pupil graduates from this School, he [illegible] him the three hundred Business Colleges in the United States and Canada, who are members of the National Association of Accredited Commercial Schools, to aid him to secure and to hold a good position anywhere in the nation.

NEW SHORTSTOP IS NOT AFRAID OF HOODOO 13

"Flash" McCall, that all-round athlete from the Honaker ranks, is playing some lively ball with the Laurel Baby Cardinals in the Cotton States League this year, and bids fair to be one of its outstanding players.

Ernest J. Lanigan, sports writer, makes the following comment on "Shorty" under the caption "New Shortstop Is Not Afraid of Hoodoo 13".

"Earl McCall, new Laurel shortstop, has no fear of that alleged hoodoo No. 13. Why should he? He was born on June 13, played his first game of professional baseball on June 13, and while at Maryville College in Tennessee won 13 letters.

"Earl feels that this is going to be his year. Last year wasn't. He was sick, had a low batting average and when he did hit the ball on the nose someone staggered into it and robbed Mac of a base knock.

"Bob Poisall, sports editor of the Danville Commercial News and official scorer of the Danville club, keeps every day a record of the base hits a player loses through wonderful catches or stops on the part of the foe. He checked up on this date at the end of last season and found that McCall had been the victim of stirring fielding stunts twice as often as any other player in the Joe Schultz outfit.

"McCall is in good health this year, having undergone one major and two minor operations last winter.

"Earl is willing to bet he will hit over .300 this season. He had a .324 batting average when he played with Topeka in the fall of 1927."

We are mighty glad to see Maryville products making good in the big league game, and Earl deserves the break.

——The season for auction sales is ready to commence. Seniors are preparing to offer their miscellaneous articles accumulated during the last four years to those who may be able to use them next year,—and are able to buy them now.

Highlanders Wield Wicked Ask to Win Over L. M. U. 9-4; 13-3

Jack Gabbard Connects For a Circuit Tour; Park Gets 3 Hits That Count.

LAST SERIES TUES.-WED.

May 17—The Maryville College baseball team returned from L. M. U., where they took both ends of a two-game series 9-4 and 13-3.

Jack Gabbard pitched the opener yesterday, and although touched for 13 hits, was effective enough to strike out 10 men. Jack surprised the folks when he stepped up to the plate in the fifth inning and slammed out a home run. It was one of the longest drives ever seen in the L. M. U. park. The ball came to rest in a wheat field and ten minutes later it was found and thrown back to the infield. "Tillie" Bird paced the distance off this morning and found it to be no less than 345 feet.

In today's game Park and Blazer did the whirling and held the L. M. U. boys to 5 hits, while their mates were pounding H. Harding for 15 hits and 13 runs. Besides pitching a dandy game, Park climaxed his performance by getting 3 hits and scoring as many runs.

To use Coach Honaker's words: "My, what hittin' pitchers we have!"

The Highlanders will close their season Tuesday and Wednesday against Emory and Henry.

Maryville-Cumberland Game

May 13—The Maryville College nine defeated Cumberland University here today by a 5-1 score in the first game of a two game series. Jack Gabbard, the Highlander mound ace, had the game well in control, allowing but one hit and striking out an even dozen men. The game looked like a no-hit, no-run affair for Jack until the eighth inning, when Adams, chunky Cumberland left-fielder, stepped up and smacked the apple for three bases. He scored on a wide pitch, that got away from Teffeteller's mitt. Only one other Lawyer reached the initial sack, and he was stranded on second when his mates failed to hit. Maryville collected nine hits, and, aided by four Cumberland errors, scored five runs.

May 14—The Highlanders defeated Cumberland 5-1 today to make a clean sweep of the two-game series. The score was the same as that of the game yesterday; five and one seem to be unlucky numbers for the Lawyers.

Cumberland found "Lefty" Park's southpaw slants for seven hits, but were unable to bunch them. Marsh for Cumberland pitched nice ball, allowing but four hits. His mates booted the ball around, however, at critical times, being guilty of three misplays, and the Scotties pushed over enough runs to salt the game away.

Baird, peppy Cumberland catcher, who was injured yesterday, pluckily tried to stay with them today but finally was forced to retire in favor of Thaxton.

Pentathlon Trophy Goes To "Judge" Carper

Crawford Loses by Half Point In Thrilling Track Classic. Carper Finishes Strong in Shot and Half Mile.

May 11—The annual Pentathlon was held here today under ideal weather conditions. This event, inaugurated in 1924, shows up the best all-round track men. The events scheduled are: 100 yard dash, two hundred twenty yard low hurdles, high jump, shot put and half mile. This year the winner is Morris Carper; "Judge" is a football letter man, as well as a track luminary.

The highlight of the competition came in the last event, the half mile, when Peterson tried in vain to overtake Carper. Carper crossed the tape a few strides in the lead.

The scoring went as follows:

High Jump—Headrick, first; Billie Crawford, Leon Brown, second; Carper, fourth; Peterson, fifth.

Hundred Yard Dash—Billie Crawford, first; Peterson, second; Carper, third; Headrick, fourth; Brown, fifth.

Shot Put—Carper, first; Headrick, second, Peterson, third; Crawford, fourth; Brown, fifth.

Hurdles—Billie Crawford, first; Carper, second; Peterson, third; Headrick, fourth; Brown, fifth.

Half Mile—Carper, first; Peterson, second; Crawford, third; Headrick, fourth; Brown, fifth.

Carpter won with 11 points; Crawford gathered 11½, low score winning the event.

SECOND INSTALMENT OF CIRCUS TONIGHT

The short notice upon which the Michigan gym team came to Maryville necessitated a division in the annual event known as "the circus".

The second instalment of the Y. M. C. A. Circus will be presented by local talent and will take place in the gym tonight.

The program will consist of work on the parallel bars, tumbling, demonstrations on the horse, etc. Each of the four literary societies will put on a stunt in an effort to capture the Y.M.C.A. cup.

The management feels that an apology is due the college for the split in the circus. In the future every effort will be made to have the Y Circus as one big event.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Now that the 28th issue of the Echo is out the "Old Timer" will bid his readers and those who should read this but don't, an apologetic adieu. No, unkind reader, he's not dead, but will bob up again under an assumed name. And now soaks, (pronounced folks) if you have gotten half as much fun out of this column as I have, call around at Mr. Proffitt's office some morning and ask for a refund on your subscription. If you get it, send for the undertaker—there's been a death.

——Bill Swaim was a campus visitor the other day. He is the authority on bumming recently referred to in an editorial.

Juniors Nose Out Sophomores For Interclass Honors

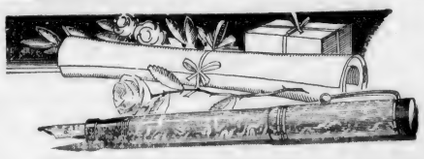
Scoring 24-21 Shows How Second Year Men Pushed Upper Classmen. Frosh and Seniors ot Far Behind.

Much interest and enthusiasm has been displayed this year in intermural sports. The Y.M.C.A. offered a cup to the class scoring the most points in all the inter-class competioins' points to be awarded using the quality credit system. First place counted 9 points, second 6, third 3, and fourth 1.

A plucky, determined, fighting junior team emerged victorious. But it was not easy. The juniors themselves are the first to admit that it was hard. The competition was in basketball, baseball, swimming, and track and was bitterly contested all the way.

The final figures show that the juniors took first place in basketball, second in track and baseball and third in swimming for a total of 24 points. They were closely followed by the sophomores, who collected 21 points.

Among the highlights was the basketball game between the freshmen and juniors. The juniors won 16 to 15. The baseball game between the seniors and sophomores was one of the best ever played at Maryville. The sophomores won 1 to 0. In the baseball finals the juniors had a bad first inning and the sophomores won 5 to 3. In the track meet the freshmen upset the dope and the upperclassmen ate freshmen dust to the tune of 44 to 39.



Tennis was not included this year because there was not time enough to play it off and yet have time to order the cup before school closes.

It is time for the senior athletes to look around for a job with a sporting goods house or as a bond salesman.

Then of course there are those who will amount to something. Especially if they are taking coaching like Doc McCulloch.

——Wilbur Franklin left our campus Friday after a few days in our midst. He heard the Glee Singers' concert and complimented it highly.

Annual Inscriptions Big Current Problem

The feature section is always one of the main points of interest of each annual. This year's section is no exception. Nelle Caldwell as the roguish lassie is as usual her charming self. And as for the faculty comics—well, even the faculty must admit that those pages are very good.

This year's annual will join the ranks of those volumes of years previous that mark the progress of Maryville College. It is an artistic and interesting volume—one which will be shown with pride in the years to come.

Hayden Writes of The Joys of The Librarian

difficult to convince (some) that social privileges are not permitted in the library—others would labor the point that social intercourse is not necessarily moonshining. An assistant of course should not argue, even tho reflection be cast upon his own moonshine instinct relative to his ability to judge the genuiness of a moonshine case. Therefore he must think up something cute to say or perhaps call Shakespeare to the rescue—"Oh what's in a name? A rose by any other word would be just as sweet." Moonshining in the library is not a game between authorities and students. It just isn't supposed to be done! The man at the desk is not jealous, biased or prejudiced nor is he any 'prouder' of the rules than anyone else. The rules are for the promotion of quietness—not to provoke any couple bent on proving that love makes people do wonderful and strange things.—After all, moonshining in the library is like studying in chapel, it not only shows a poor use of time but also shows that a poor use has been made of previous time.

It is believed by the writer that the moral may be found in the following story. Pat, (not our chapel janitor) was being carried through town astride a fence rail by some men who hoped to humiliate him. After about a dozen blocks Pat made his first comment. "Gentlemen," said he, "If it were not for the glory of this I'd as soon walk."

Approaching Exams Arouse Questioning

benefits of education—the instructor or the instructed? Examinations are worthwhile to the student in one of two ways, with regard to the results of their efforts, whether favorable or unfavorable.

The person who makes a very poor grade is awakened from his self-satisfied slumber and acquainted with the fact that he's not so bright, after all. This information tends toward making good resolutions, and it is better to have made them and broken them, than never to have made them at all. It is better still to make them and keep them.

The person who has really done his best derives great satisfaction from the realization of his power to grasp and set forth principles, and gains an insight into particular situations which he would not have learned had he not been forced to review the entire material.

Let us then be up and doing—roll up our sleeves and get ready to put our whole selves into the examinations and leave school with that satisfaction that our heads are not as empty as they were when we came to college.

About Twenty-five Moonshiners Fall With Bridge on Hike

"Pud" if she were on the bridge at the time. She replied: "No, but as soon as Suitcase and I saw what was happening, we ran toward the bridge as fast as possible, but got there too late to get on." The young ladies who took the early morning plunge were subjects of much interest and curiosity. Frequent exclamations of this sort were heard: "My, what in the world is the matter with you? Oh yes, I always thought your hair was curly." "Yes, it was— but the shock straightened it out."

Or someone would remark: "I think a blue wool dress makes a charming costume for mountain hiking."

"Thanks—I would too—if I were about two sizes larger than I am."

The Highlanders arrived at Tremont about eleven o'clock and the various groups separated not to meet again until four o'clock in the afternoon. Even though there was a slight rain during the day, everyone enjoyed the grandeur of the mountains, adorned in their new Spring greens. Tremont is right in the Smokies and is one of the most beautiful spots in East Tennessee.

Four o'clock found everyone, tired but gay, ready to return. The trip home was somewhat quieter than the morning one—perhaps due to the exhaustion of the subject of the bridge! The train stopped long enough at Townsend for the girls to exchange their borrowed clothes for their own. It was about six-thirty when we reached the Hill. Everyone—and a few more vividly than others—will remember this mountain hike for the following reasons: Mountain water is extremely cold at nine o'clock in the morning when one is suddenly thrown into it; it is not wise to play on swinging bridges in large numbers; the hospitality of the Townsend people cannot be surpassed; and Tremont is one of the most beautiful places in the Smokies.

Upon entering college every Freshman has for his or her goal a life of success. You too had such a goal! It was an influencing factor during the first month but other interests engaged your attention and forced the goal in oblivion. One of the first steps on which tension was released was that of study. It was there that a definite working goal linked with "bulldog" perserverence was needed and it is yet needed if you are to achieve success. However, college life has other purposes than that of receiving a diploma. It has for its chief aim the making of men and women who develop into leaders of initiaitve and intelligent followers. The student age is the age in which habits are formed that determine the man and woman of tomorrow. It should then be the desire of every student to form worthy habits of honesty, thrift, friendship, style and neatness. With these points in mind

Juniors Seniors Go On Voyage To Whittle Springs

Pirate Scheme Carried Out Even to Report in Ship's Log, Printed Below.

(Recorded in the ship's log on May 27, 1929)

The Crew of '30 entertained the Crew of '29 with a Pirate's banquet at Whittle Springs Saloon which is approximately 8 miles out of Knoxville Bay. All hands were ordered to be on poop deck at six bells sharp and ready for sailing to Whittle's. So all good sailors were then in spotless attire prepared to launch out on eight shining tugs. The wind was just right for sailing, so when the jib-boons plunged under the rising swell and shook themseves free, the ships rolled and groaned as if they were relieved in their freedom from anchorage. The sailors began to sing up on the fo' c's le and in the last dim rays of the sun we left land far astern.

Sailing was fair until the ships were leaving Knoxville Bay. Then one of the leading vessels stopped suddenly in front of the others. It was thought at first that the crew had mutined because of slow sailing but it was discovered that the ship's engine was burning. The crew was immediately transferred safely to the other ships. Another one of the vessels hit the martingale under the [illegible] of a strange ship. It looked as there would be a bloody battle —but a compromise was reached and the vessels sailed safely into the harbor at Whittle's.

"Draw in the top sails! Shut home the jibs— — all Sailors on deck again at eleven bells", shouted the captains.

The sailors trooped merrily ashore to the Whittle Saloon for the Great Pirate feast, leaving none on the ships except an occasional cabin boy perched on the top of the gangway.

Eight bells sounded. Ten hilarious Crews of '29 and '30 were in the dining hall of the great saloon, amid balloons of purple, silver, red and green. Everywhere were treasure chests, stacks of gold coin, and heavy chains. That typical old shell back sailor, Captain Gillingham, was Master of Ceremonies. The Captain is unlike any other human, a law unto himself, with few wants except to make the Crews happy, which he succeeded most gracously in doing. And what food and service! The Crews of Maryville assert that it cannot be surpassed in any port. During the latter part of the feast, the Crews were entertained by the following program:

At eleven bells, obedient to the Captain's orders, the crews returned to the ships, all hilariously laughing and talking. The Maryville fleets let go the hooks and waved a fond good-bye to Whittle's Saloon. There was a brisk breeze blowing over the Bay and hardly a cloud overhead. To the eastward moved the ships and came again to anchorage in Maryville harbor at twelve bells.

ALUMNI ARRIVE FROM WEST IN LARGE BUS

June 3—Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Wade Morton, and a party from the west coast arrived on the Hill this morning in a large bus, in which they had negotiated the distance of 2,800 miles in about four days, travelling almost constantly.

Dr. Morton is to give the Alumni Banquet address.

SENIORS TO ENACT FAMED DISRAELI TUES.

Annual Play To Have Cast of 20 Players. Many Experienced Actors Will Appear. Courtenay is "Disraeli".

The last production of the year will be presented Tuesday night, June 4th, in Voorhes Chapel.

"Disraeli", the Senior class play, promises to be the best contribution of this year. Many of the artists will perform the last time for their Alma Mater.

"Disraeli" is not an historical play, but only an attempt to show a picture of the days—not so very long ago—in which Disraeli lived, and some of the racial, social, and poitical prejudices he fought against and conquered.

Dr. Wilson Returns From Trip To St. Paul

May 31—Dr. Wilson returned to the Hill today from St. Paul, Minnesota, where he has been for several days attending the annual meeting of the Genral Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Wilson left Maryville the seventeenth of this month. This was a few days earlier than the time set for the Assembly meeting, but since he is a member of the General Council, he had to leave early to attend a meeting of that body.

Dr. Wilson, in addition to his position as president of Maryville College, holds a prominent position in the administration of the Presbyterian Church. He has taken an active part in church work for a number of years, and is known and repected throughout the entire nation.

NU GAMMA LEADERS

Nu Gamma is all set to be a big success next year. New ideas and definite plans were discussed at the Nu Gamma Leaders' meeting Thursday afternoon. Carol Cushman, leader of the leaders, has selected the following girls:

Marion Johnson, Lois Cupler, Helen Crowder, Mildred McKenzie, Katherine Hodges, Isabelle Cannon, Margaret Haynie, Frances Mingea, Georga Burk, Virginia Crider, Jane Duke, Mary Ella Sullivan, Christine Foster, Esther Horton, Wilhelmina Gruchy, Frances Crabill, Lucy Ann Voorhees, Louise Avery.

This squad of leaders is going to welcome the Freshman girls in such a way that they will wish to be Frosh forever.

The daisy chain was a lot of work, but it was worth the trouble.

Rev. Ralph Lloyd Will Deliver Address At 110th Commencement

Alumni From All Over Country Expected to Attend Exercises in Voorhees Chapel From Sunday On. Programs of Entire Week Interesting.

June 2—Dr. Wilson, in the annual baccalaureate address this morning, paid tribute to Maryville's frontiersmen, the "Foreign Legion" of those in service. The service was impressive and beautiful, the daisy chains and the other floral decorations adding to the colorful display of capes seen in the faculty procession.

Only once more will this same procession file into Voorhees Chapel, and that will be Thursday morning at ten o'clock, when the degrees will be conferred and diplomas awarded. On this occasion, the Reverend Ralph Waldo Lloyd, Presbyterian pastor of Pittsburg, Pa., will- give the commencement address.

Reverend Lolyd will be remembered by students, alumni and town friends as the author of the phrase "you are the kind of a person who would do that kind of a thing", so effective in the February Meetings which he conducted in 1928. He is expected to arrive in time for the Alumni Banquet Wednesday night.

The Commencement exercises promise to be the kind that we cannot afford to miss, and a large attendance is expected.

Let us as students remember that friends visiting us should be given consideration in the matter of seats. They are our guests and we can do no less.

MARYVILLE'S RABBI

FRESHMAN DEBATERS HOLD BANQUET

The freshman debaters were rewarded for their efforts of the year by a banquet given Tuesday night, May 21 at Reagan's Bakery and a theater party following. The freshman girls had charge of the program and table decorations which were all in keeping with the occasion. Attractive place cards with appropriate comments marked each place at the table.

Impromptu speeches were given by the chaperones, Prof. and Mrs. Verton Queener regarding their opinions of the freshman debate question: "Resolved, That the entrance of woman into the wage earning field is not for the best interest of the home" Paul Edris gave a toast to Coach Queener, thanking Mr. Queener for the help he had given the freshman debaters in going through their first year of college debating. Homer McCann gave a toast to the freshman girls to which Kathryn Hodges responded with a toast to the freshman boys. The last number on the program was a reading entitled "Betty at the Baseball Game" given by Nellie Aills.

Although there was a most noticeable lack of music at the theatre, the picture was greatly enjoyed. Perhaps the novelty of being out at night lent a particular attraction to the girls. At any rate, the evening was voted a most successful and entertaining one and was really worth the many hours spent on debating.

The visitors on the Hill are invited to visit the museum in the library —they'll find it interesting.

Frank Baker Chosen '30 Class President

Other Officers Elected For Seniors of Next Year. Sweaters Will Be Black With Orange and Garnet Emblem.

A meeting of the Junior class was called on May 21 for the purpose of electing officers for next year. Frank Baker was elected president. Frank has always been a faithful worker for the Class of '30, and has proved himself very capable of the high position wheih he will hold in the class next year. Other class officers elected were vice president, Edith Nash; secretary, Earl Blazer; treasurr, Ralph Cherry; editor, Helen Plant; and athletic director, Ellis Simpson.

In connection with the office of the treasurer, there has been a new rule made to the effect that no junior will be a bona fide senior next year unless his junior dues are paid as well as his senior class dues. Plans are being made to have an office for the treasurer of the senior class so that this matter of collecting class dues may be simplified.

"TILLIE" SIGNS UP— GENE HESITATES

Harold "Tillie" Bird, Highlander's star shortfield man, who leaves his Ama Mlater via the diploma route this year, has been signed up for professional baseball by Manager Shrepner of the Knoxville Smokies. Tillie played with the Smokies on Saturday, and looked mighty good.

Dame Rumor had it that Gene Gabbard, ace tosser for his collegiate companions of the diamond, had put his name on the dotted line, but investigation found that he is still holding out.

More power to them; we hope they hit class "A" leagues soon.

BARN FINALLY FALLS

June 2—The college barn, which has been an eyesore to the college, will probably be replaced by a more modern and we hope a more substantial edifice. Today the roof caved in and two men working in the barn narrowly escaped injury. One of the men was pinned between two of the animals, but was gotten out safely.

SENIORS CLASS ROLL AS OFFICE SEES IT

Education Leads in Majors, With English Second. Ancient Languages Have Few Faithful Friends. Nineteen States Represented by Graduates.

During these last days of school the many organizations on the Hill have been giving the Seniors opportunities to make their final appearances and show the rest of us the stuff of which they are made. In the Literary Societies, the "Y's" and in Chapel, we have learned just what the last four years has meant to those who are now about to leave us forever. Having heard and seen so much of the illustrious class of '29, which every one assures us is excellent not only in quality (which may be said of every Senior class) but in quantity since it is the largest yet to graduate, a few questions arise: "From whence does it come? Who are its members, and what is it doing?" It is in answer to such questions as these, as well as for the general enlightenment of the student body, that we publish the following facts about our Seniors:

The Class of '29 is composed of 103 members. In spite of the fact that its President, Mr. Hopkins, said in his chapel speech that "We know not whence we cometh, nor whither we goeth", the Registrar's office has it in black and white that 19 states and Canada furnish the dignified ones. Of the states, Tennessee supplies the greater number (51); North Carolina comes next with 8; Ohio has 7 and Kentucky 6. Further representation is as follows: Georgia 5; Florida 5; Pennsylvania 4; Illinois 2; California, Colorado, Connecticutt, District of Columbia, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, South Carolina, Texas, Wisconsin and Canada each furnish one.

As judged by the major and minor subjects chosen, this intelligent body seems to have manifested an interest in almost everything in the curriculum. Surely this is ample proof that as a whole, if not individually, the Class of '29 will be well rounded. The favorite subject seems to be Psychology since 29 chose it as a major subject, and 39 as minor. This promises a large group of teachers for the Youth of America. English is next highest since 15 chose it as a major, and 18 as minor. It is interesting to note that no one is majoring in Latin, and only one student of the class is minoring in it. Only 2 majored, and 4 minored in Greek. Evidently our Seniors

Eighty Seniors Enjoy Caldwell Hospitality

A merry group of about seventy-five Seniors enjoyed a gala time this evening, at the home of Nellie Caldwell. Upon their arrival, after they had imbibed refreshing draughts of punch, they were set to work hunting peanuts. The boys were told to be dogs, and the girls, cats. When a dog or a cat discovered a peanut, he or she had to' yelp or yowl until the head-dog, or head-cat arrived to claim the peanut. Judging from reports, there was a regular cat-and-dog-time of it for a short space.

Each member of the class then composed a description of some one Senior, five years hence. The descriptions were not labelled but were so obvious that the names of the characters were easily guessed. It was surprising how often Betty Jane and Red were chosen for descriptions.

Another part of the program consisted of well-known songs, interestingly, if not tunefully rendered by various amateur quartets.

The evening ended—er, edibly. That is, there were eatables supplied which were welcomed by many a hungry Senior. Several couples enenjoyed being alone at this time, especially Sally and Bill, who, according to one Senior, "liked the porch swing so much I didn't get a chance to try it". On the way home bus number two was unable to climb the hills and had to be pushed by bus number three. Some of us are inclined to think that that bus was too heavily loaded with Seniors who had eaten more ice cream than was good for them. But then, we weren't there.

Chemistry Dept. Presents Exhibit

Professor Howell to Show Some Novelties in Chemical World As Part of Commencement Week Program.

Those people who have visited the Chemistry lecture room in Science Hall lately have probably had their curiosity somewhat aroused by several interesting posters which adorn the walls. Soon posters with a certain "chemical aspect" will be seen in various places over the campus. These are advertisng the Chemistry Open House which is to be held on June 4th in the different rooms of Science Hall. The different chemistry classes, including the Freshman classes, are planning to put on interesting as well as edifying experiments in order to give the public some idea of the value of Chemistry.

It is an old custom for the Home Economic Department to have an exhibit yearly, but this is the first time that the Chemistry Department has ever attempted anything of this kind.

We feel sure that with the hard work of Professor Howell, and that of the Committee under the able leadership of Viola Petitt, and the help of the different classes, that our exhibit will be a great success. Don't forget the date, and come see the interesting things which the Science Department has to show you.

"Home Ec" Waitress Views Alumni Banquet

(By Jeannette Moore)

Banquets are fun, aren't they? When you wear your best party frock and go with your best fellow, and there's soft candle-light to enhance the loveliness of your eyes? And the food is perfect, and you can eat it with the least effort—because it is set right under your chin?

But—did you ever think who plans those lovely soft lights? And who prepares that perfect food—and how the service just "happens to be" perfect and noiseless. Well, let me tell you that.

Every detail of the banquet must be planned at least a week ahead of the date on which it is to be. And Miss Meiselwitz is a wizard at that. Every detail, and they are many—exactly what the menu is, the exact market list, where the spoons and forks are coming from, how many waitresses will be needed, and who they are, who is to prepare the meat, who the potatoes, who is to butter the rolls, and who is to serve the ice-cream. And at least a thousand and more details.—And after all that, the club committee on place cards will not arrive until about five minutes from time to start.

Let me show you what a job the Alumni Banquet is for the Home Ec. department.

300 plates have been ordered. The whole of the library in Thaw Hall will be used—one end screened off for a kitchen. Instead of the long banquet tables we have planned to have separate tables. All light on the affair will be candle-light—and 20 huge candelabra have been especially made to Miss Meiselwitz's order. The color scheme is orange and garnet—food, decorations and all. Now as to how much of everything it takes—I must ask that you use your imagination, and read this list.

300 nut cups to be filled and menus prepared
300 glases of water and cups of coffee
300 of everything else.
35 waitresses
10 butlers—15 in the kitchen force.

And now, if it doesn't stretch your imagination too far, try to imagine cooking this much food—

60 dozen rolls
15 pounds butter
60 pounds meat
42 cans beets
12 pints cream
6 pounds coffee
2 gallons mayonnaise
12 pounds marshmallows
20 loaves bread
12 pounds walnuts

You'll admit that is hard work?

Thirty Issues per School Year by the Student Body of Maryville College. Subscription Rates, $1.25 per annum

Entered at the Post Office, Maryville, Tenn., as Second Class Matter, Nov. 11, 1915

Monday, June 3, 1929

AIMS

There is no doubt about it, a new staff has taken over the task of putting the news before the student body. And for once in history the staff is formed entirely of experienced newsmen. Therefore the student body has a right to expect a good newspaper next year. If they do not get it, the fault is as much the other students' as the staff's. Just as the showing of a football team is dependent on the spirit of the student body, our success depends on it.

When the editorial staff met last week and planned the work for next year, there was a spirit of cooperation and willingness to work that was heartening to the editor. We wish to make no rash statements in regard to the changes or policies of the paper next year, but we have set up certain goals toward which we will strive. Our aim is:

To put out a paper that students would subscribe to even though it were not compulsory,

To see that every subscriber, whether on the Hill or in town, gets a copy of the Echo every week,

To run an open forum, where student opinion, in its most constructive form, may react to situations on the Hill, and where alumni may feel free to pass on to us such things as they think will be valuable,

To run more and better cuts, especially of current news interest (negotiations are already being made with the News-Sentinel to cast them), and thereby give the students the benefit of some of the advertising income,

To get all the news and print the most important.

You say it is a pretentious program? We admit it, but are none the less dedicated to it. We are as desireous of putting out a good paper as you are of getting one, and we bend to our task with the realization that there will be many disappointments, promising nothing but an honest effort.

A SUGGESTION

In looking over the front page news, we notice that Ralph Lloyd is going to give the commencement address this year, and we reminisce to find him as the man who so won our admiration and esteem as the leader of our 1928 February Meetings. It is safe to say that no man who has been before the student body for such a short time inspired more confidence than did "Rabbi" Lloyd.

It has also come to our notice that Dr. Gillingham is leaving at the end of this year to accept the position of president of a school in Philadelphia, leaving a vacancy in the ranks of our faculty. Now it is not the intenion of the students to presume that the Direcors of the College should give sudent opinion too much weight, but we are sure they are not impervious to suggestion. There has been a marked sentiment among the students as well as faculty members that Ralph Lloyd could fill admirably the position left vacant by Dr. Gillingham.

Mr. Lloyd is a graduate of the class of '15, and understands Maryville as few others do. We have felt all along that we should like to know him better, and it would mean much to us to have him on the faculty. It may be a vain hope, but it is not impossible.

NEWS COMMENT

It is all right to have good friends in the Junior and Senior classes, especially if they have enough "drag" to rate you an invitation to the banquet. But think of the Juniors and Seniors! What a shame there is such a dearth of entertainment material.

Perhaps the boy who blew a hole in Carnegie roof doesn't know that Uncle Sam has a mansion prepared for him at Atlanta in case he is caught.

All of which reminds us that some of us would be clamoring for mansions in the sky if the culprit had decided on the basement instead of the roof.

Dean Barnes can be depended on to start the day out right for us by reading the notices in his charming, if hesitatitng, manner.

Taggart says this treasurer's job reminds him of the old adage: "many are called on, but few cough up."

After a strenuous week's religious work among the mountaineers, the High Trailers, or Pi Upsilons as they prefer to be called, held a feed in town this past week. None reportd converts.

PI KAPPA DELTA BANQUET

May 24—The program is not over for debaters at Maryville until after the Pi Kappa Delta banquet. This was held last night at Walker's.

The members first went to the theatre. This night, after having debated the jury system all season, there was a chance to see the workings of the jury in a trial portrayed on the screen.

At Walker's some thoughts of reminiscence was evidenced in the toasts. Betty Jane Sharpe acted as toastmistress. Toats were made by Florian Hopkins, the retiring president; Robert W. Jones, the incoming vice president; Margaret Mevis; and Professor Queener, debate coach.

Chemistry Club

The Chemistry Club held its last meeting for this semester on May 21st. A special feature of the evening's program was a reading by Roberta Hickman.

The officers for the coming year were elected. These are:

President - - Thomas Whitehead
Vice President - - Louise Carson
Recording Secretary - - - Yervant Topalian
Program Secretary - Stanley McCool
Treasurer - - - Howard Hull
Editor - - - Alice Renegar

We are looking forward to some interesting programs next year. You'll hear of us again then.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Every debate season at Maryville so far has ended.

—:—

A vacation from school-work is more than beneficial. It is desirable.

—:—

An orator should select his subject early enough to consider it during the vacation.

—:—

A debater gets new ideas during the vacation and brings his style up to date.

—:—

With a special session of congress now in progress, and a demand for a special session of the Tennessee legislature, we begin to wonder if Professor Queener will call a special session of the debaters.

—:—

It seems that the congressmen would get weary and do something.

—:—

A good query for debate would be resolved: That college debaters should be granted authority to work out a congress relief plan to allow the members a vacation.

Without due consideration I would say that the debenture plan of exporting each one of them to some island would be a solution.

—:—

The friendliest meeting of rivals is for two debaters to meet during their vacation.

—:—

The vacation proposition is the business man's permanent question for debate.

—:—

Five of our varsity debaters from the men's team and five from the women's team are planning to come back next year.

—:—

We are wishing for each a pleasant vacation.

—:—

Finitum est.

Foot Ball Prospects Rosy for Next Fall

Highlanders Face Unusually Hard Schedule With Vandy and Kentucky As Headliners.

Now that the last melodious strains of the umpire's flute-like voice have melted into the dim remoteness of the outfield, Maryville College can look forward to the King of College Sports—football. It is true that three months of vacation intervene between the end of baseball season and the beginning of the gridiron sport, but it is entirely appropriate at this time that we look ahead and speculate a little.

A complete schedule cannot be published at present, but it is pretty well-known that the line-up of games for next fall contains some tough propositions. The Highlanders will be a determined band when they make a bid for glory against the Vanderbilt Commodores at Nashville. Then the Wildcats of Kentucky are still nursing a sore neck as a result of too much familiarity with that famous vise-like Scot grip which throttled them into a 6-6 tie in 1927. Whether or not the Tennessee Vols will be played is not yet certain. The game with the Stormy Petrels of Oglethorpe was an interesting affair down at Atlanta last fall—and we certainly hope to see them on the schedule again.

The scoreboard was displaying a tremendous 6 for Maryville and an equally tremendous 0 for Oglethorpe up until the last three or four minutes of play, when Cy Bell, the Petrel flash, tucked a punt under his arm and did some powerful running for a touchdown, tying the score 6-6, as the try-for-point was missed.

In addition to these outstanding lights there will be the usual games with our Smoky Mountain Conference rivals, all tooth and nail, for blood, or what have you.

Prospects of another good team are being cherished. The line suffers by graduation the loss of only two men—Headrick, guard, and Taylor, end. In the backfield, the work of J. D. Davis, Bird, Crawford and Hayes Williams will be missed. All the rest of the fellows have indicated their present intention of returning next fall, which should make the coaching staff feel pretty cheerful.

Spring practice was a successful innovation in that it gave a number of new fellows a chance to get a casual acquaintance with the game, and also in that it uncovered an outstanding prospect in the person of one Julius Caesar.

Honaker Completes Eighth Year as Athletic Mentor Here

Has Produced Good Teams In All Sports Every Year.

Back in 1921, Lombe Scott Honaker took up the coaching duties at Maryville College. For a period of eight years he has been turning out athletic teams that have made the name of the Highlanders feared and respected.

It is entirely appropriate that we pause a moment now, at the end of the school year, to pay tribute to "Coach". And we know of no better way in which to pay our tribute to him than by reciting the deeds and accomplishments of his teams. The general student body is ignorant of these things that have made for the glory of their Alma Mater, and a knowledge of them should make each student prouder than ever of Maryville.

A recital of cold figures will not mean much to the average person, because figures don't always tell the story.

"Coach" started off his career on the Hill by producing state collegiate championship teams in football and baseball.

In the 1922-23 season, conference championships were won in football and basketball. In that season, the football team lost four games, more than it has lost any year since. Defeats were at the hands of U. T., Mercer, St. Xavier, and King. King's Tornado was a powerful machine that year, scoring over 300 points.

1923-24 was a gala season. Tennessee was tied in football 14-14. Then the conference championship was annexed in basketball and to cap it all, the baseball team took 3 game series from the University of Kentucky.

Football and basketball were both highly successful in 1924-25, but baseball claimed the spot-light by virtue of a victory over Ohio State University and the winning of two games of a three-game series from Tennessee.

Another state collegiate football championship was won in 1925-26, and the baseball team again defeatedU. T. two games in a three game series.

In 1926-27, the football team retained the state collegiate title, and the baseball team turned in 16 victories in 19 starts to take over the State championship.

The high spot of the 1927-28 grid season was a 6-6 tie with the University of Kentucky. The baseball team was undefeated, retaining the state championship, and listed among its victims the Knoxville Smokies, 6-4.

Last season the football team won 6, lost 2, and tied 1. Basketball championship was lost by one point to Emory and Henry in the tuornament up at Kingsport. The baseball team suffered only three losses to collegiate opponents—namely State Teachers, Emory and Henry, and Tennessee.

Totalling up games lost, won and tied, we have the following figures over the period of eight years:

Football—won 50, lost 19, and tied 5.

Basketball—won 86, lost 45.

Baseball—won 88, lost 42 and tied 4.

Such remarkable figures as these show that Maryville has always produced consistently good teams, and a large percentage of the credit goes to Coach Honaker.

HEAD COACH

Golfers End First Attempt at Sport

Hope Is Expressed That Golf Course May Be Established Here on The Hill.

The wielders of the woods and irons made somewhat of an attempt to form a golf team, under the influence of a Sotch atmosphere. Their attempt was not so successful, owing to the abrupt end of practice. The grass of the campus covers the five balls once owned by Miller and his cohorts.

With the lack of practice well explained, Capt. Miller is able to maintain an alibi. Knoxville High furnished the opposition and captured the victories.

The first macth was a tie 6-6

The second match was a 12-0 defeat

The third match was a 12-6 defeat

In spite of the hundred, and near hundred scores, some good golf was turned in. Miller turned in low scores each time for Maryville, closely followed by Baker and Barnard. A five hundred and thirty-one yard hole was shot in a birdie 4, along with numerous par holes. The best shooting was a 94 for 18 holes and a 41 for nine holes. Due to the lack of practice many shots went wild; thus the ditches and traps absorbed what would be good scores. Along with Miller played Baker, Barnard, West, Crawford, Peirce, Wilson and White.

There are mental images in the minds of fcaulty members and students of a campus golf course to be promoted next year. With this a real golf team can be expected. To those who are interestd in golf and not so much so in the exercise and enjoyment derived by waiting turns to play tennis, a good substitute can be boosted. Let's all boost a campus golf course.

GIRLS GET AWARDS

Girls' Athletics, under the supervision of Mrs. Verton Queener have come to a successful close and many of the girls who started out at the first of the year have earned the coveted awards.

Among the various athletics which were offered this year were: soccer, baskeball, aerial dart, volley ball, baseball, track, tennis, and swimming. For participation in these activities a specified number of points was given. Points were also given for hiking, health rules, scholarship, and captain and managership.

The following girls made 500 points or above and thus earned the highest award: the letter M and a sweater:

Louise Wright, Mildred Lowery, Frances Crabill, Olive Clopton (second year).

The second highest award, a small letter M given to girls who made 400 points or above was received by the following:

Dorothy Cable, Mary Gamble, Iva Babcock, Ruby Ott, Julia Terry, Dorothy Bassel, Christine Foster, Margaret Haynie, Hazel Littlejohn, Betty Rodgers.

The following girls received a monogram MC for making 300 points or above:

Anna Louise Beechboard, Vida Heidle, Edith Burns, Vera Boyd, Helen Crowder, Carol Cushman, Lois Lovette, Ruth Laughead, Georga Burk.

Faculty Defeats Seniors In Annual Baseball Game

Profs. Come From Behind In Last Inning To Take 12-10 Victory.

May 28—The annual Senior-Faculty wrangle was staged this afternoon. Faculty nosing out the worldly wise 12-10, by virtue of a last spasm rally. The pedagogues went into the seventh and last stanza at the end of a 10-8 count, but nothing daunted, proceeded to hammer out enough scores to win the ball game—thereby proving that their superiority is not necessarily confined to matters academic.

To the Faculty second sacker goes the crown of olives. With the score knotted at 10-all, two out, one man on base, and storm-clouds looking mighty unsafe, this trusty gentleman pulled the Frank Merriwell act. Mr. Robert Caperus Thrower proved that his heart trouble had in no wise affected his batting eye, and proceeded to clout one of "Red" Courtenay's smoke-balls for a round-trip ticket—four bases, and anything else that you have.

Hitting honors were almost even, Faculty getting eight safeties while the Seniors were getting seven.

Professor Honaker, who tossed 'em over for the gray-beards, looked like a second 'flamin' mammy, with his very red——ah— suit yourself. Master "Red" Courtenay showed exquisitely delicate taste in his selection of hose—a delightful sea green shade which blended beautifully with his fiery curls. However, he did a very good job of pitching, despite that.

Professor Walker presided over left-field for his faculty-mates. He exhibited a great deal of curiosity regarding the high flies that were frequently assailing his sector, but after having caught them threw them down again, apparently disappointed in the results of his catches.

For the Seniors, Hayes Williams starred at the bat, getting three out of his team's seven hits—one of which was good for the circuit.

Line-up:

WHO WILL BE QUEEN OF THE COURTS?

Who says that Maryville does no have girl athletes? The girls tennis tournament proved that Maryville has at least 36 young women who claim to be tennis players anyway. The spring tournament as been a big success anhd very much interest has been shown. Every match played was long and hard fought. The highest score we have had was one set ending at 14-16.

Of the 36 girls entering the tournament, eight made the team—having been successful in at least four rounds of the playing. Those who accomplished this were, Isabel Cannon, Evelyn Sherard, Mary Gamble, Olive Clopton, Helen Crower, Imogene Crowley, Rosalie Batt, and Maragaret Haynie.

Of these Cannon, Haynie, Sherard, Crowley and Crowder remain. Haynie and Crowley are to play and the winner of that match plays Cannon.

Crowder and Sherard meet and the winer of that match plays the final game.

The playing this year has been very much improved and Maryville should not be ashamed of her Lassies who are aspiring to be crowned Queen of the Courts. Everyone of them plays a steady and fast game and it is uncertain who the winner will be.

The students of the Floating University are having unique experiences. Arriving at Bankok, Siam, they were received and entertained by King Roma VII. HIGHLANDERS END SEASON WITH DOUBLE WIN OVER EMORY-HENRY

May 21—The Emory and Henry baseball nine opened a two-day stay here by losing to the Scotties 9-4.

Hitting honors were evenly divided, each team getting eight safeties, but the Virginian's five errors at critical times proved their downfall. Parks climaxed an excellent pitching performance by driving out a three base hit in the fourth inning, scoring Wooten.

Maryville pulled a sure enough double play at lightning speed to start off the game in the first inning. DeLaney, Blazer and Davis figured in the double killing.

The day was not particularly ideal for a ball game, as a chilly wind swept over the field all during the fracas.

Second Encounter

May 22—The Highlanders closed a successful baseball season today, setting the Emory and Henryites down 5-1.

Jack Gabbard took the box for the last time for his Alma Mater and ended a highly glorious college diamond career with a two hit, one run effort. Emory hit in the last inning, when a double and a single netted their sole score.

Maryville found the offerings of Mackey, Emory and Henry's star athlete, much to their liking and pounded him for nine hits and five runs. Mackey's south-paw slants looked plenty good until the fourth inning, when two free passes and three hits were good for four tallies.

President Teffeteller added a little holiday zest to the picnic by stabbing the apple for three bases, scoring Wooten. Had the doughty catcher's r.p.m. rating been a little higher there is no doubt but that he would have run his season home run total to two.

Scotties Complete Baseball Schedule

Only Three Games Lost In College Competition.

A review of the 1929 baseball season reveals the fact that the Highlanders played 18 games, of which 5 were lost. Two of these defeats were at the hands of the Knoxville Smokies, while Tennessee, Emory and Henry, and State Teachers were responsible for the other three set-backs. The latter two defeats were each by one run margins, whereas it is a noteworthy fact that all of Maryville's victories were by decisive scores.

Excellent pitching contributed largely to the team's success. Gabbard pitched 92 innings and yielded 60 hits, an average of .652 hits per inning. Park hurled 55 innings and gave 41 hits , for an average of .745 hits per inning. Blazer was needed at second base, and as a result did not pitch very much. He pitched 15 innings and was touched for 15 hits. Gabbard turned in two hit games against State Teachers and Emory and Henry, and a one hit game against the strong Cumberland University outfit.

The team's batting average, discounting those players who were at bat fewer than eight times, was .265. Six men batted above or immediately below the .300 mark. Of the newcomers, Smith and "Red" Wooten were outstanding, both of them turning in fine batting averages and nice fielding performance.

But three men will be lost to next year's team by graduation, and so another good season may be looked forward to.

Following is a record of the 1929 season:

HITT TO PILATE LAWYERS 1929-'30

May 25—The Law Club met in the Athenian Hall last night for the last regular meeting this year. The meeting was for the election of officers for next year and the following men were elected: President, Travis Hitt; vice president, Sam Hatcher; secretary and treasurer, William R. Graham; program secretary, Homer McCann; editor, Forrest I. Robertson; Sergeant-at-Arms, E. W. Luckhart.

Mr. Hitt, to whom the club will look for leadership next year will be a junior. He has been a debater during his stay in college so far, and has been an earnest worker in the Law Club. He is a man who will work to make the Law Club active on the Hill.

After the election, Forrest I. Robertson, the retiring president, urged the club members to work with the new administration and give full support to whatever was for the best of the club.

The new officers were then sworn in and the business was turned over to them. The new president expressed his appreciation and adjourned the meeting.

FROSH ELECT

May 28—The freshman class met today and elected the following officers to lead the sophomore class next year:

President - - - lea calloway
Vice President - - julia terry
Secretary - - kathryn hodges
Treasurer - - - - robert west
Editor - - - homer mccann
Athletic Director - - clifford overly

The freshmen have been unusually active this year, and lest they forget they are not out of the blissful stage, we have taken the above means to permanently impress them with the fact that thy were once in that classification. After next year they will never admit it.

We have set aside a few capital letters for use with sophomore names next year.

Lost:—Tuesday afternoon at the Faculty-Senior game, a pair of shell-rimmed glasses and a Conklin fountain pen. Finder may receive a reward for returning the articles to the Registrar's Office.

"HOME EC" WAITRESS VIEWS ALUMNI BANQUET

Then face a few more facts. For all the banquets served during the year the director, cooks and waitresses receive not one cent remuneration. The equipment is very inadequate. We must borrow silverware from dining-hall, the practice house and wherever else it is possible. We must cook large quantities of food on small stoves and in small vessels. We must move tables and chairs from wherever we can find them. And we must spend hours overtime—and not on overtime pay, either.

The Junior Class, for the Junior-Senior banquet this year, paid $1.50 per plate at Whittle Springs for exactly what we serve at 75c. per plate. Why? Because they are paying for service of course. (Ed. note—And the Juniors and Seniors got what they paid for.)

So, from my point of view—and that of others on the kitchen force, banquets aren't all they're cracked up to be. However, there is one ray of sunshine. The Business Men's Club tipped the waitresses once—and when they split with the kitchen force each person got forty-five cents.

GLEE SINGERS RE-ORGANIZE FOR YEAR

Edwin Buchanan Chosen President to Succeed Bob Overly. McCool Is Manager.

On Thursday afternoon, September 12, the first call for Glee Club members was issued. About forty-five men responded, and as the result of the preliminary try-outs, twenty-three were selected. These men will remain in the club for two or three weeks, or until the final elimination is made, when the Club will be cut down to sixteen men, making four to sing each part. Judges for the try-outs were Miss Hale, Miss Henry, and Dr. McMurray. Miss Adkins acted as accompanist.

The prospects are good, in spite of the fact that almost half of last year's men have graduated. Those left are: Buchanan, French, Blair, Shelley, McCool, Carter, and Alexander. Fortunately, however, the newcomers have promising voices.

Last Saturday morning the election of officers was held. Those chosen were: Ed. Buchanan, President; Stanley McCool, Business Manager; Newell Carter, Libarian and Secretary. As yet, no director has been appointed but the club is under the leadership of Buchanan, while Miss Frances Henry is acting as Temporary Critic.

Plans for a bigger and better club are now being formulated. Not only is the Fall Concert already in view but plans are being laid for the one to be given in the Spring. There are even whispers that the Fall Concert will take the form of an operetta similar to the one given two years ago. New ideas, an abundance of pep, more skill, and excellent productions are the stars to which the Glee Club has hitched its wagon.

A definite schedule for the mid-winter concert tour has not been decided upon but is still under discussion.

The Club fully appreciates the hearty co-operation given it by the Music Department. All in all, indications point to a highly successful year for the Men's Glee Club of Maryville College.

Herdman Back After Year in Gay Paris

Claims American Girls Have Edge on Parisians in Styles. Plans to Return.

Allan Herdman is back on the Hill this year. Almost all of the old students will remember Allan, but for the benefit of the freshmen, here's the dope. He is the fortunate young man, who, at the end of his sophomore year at Maryville, got a chance to go abroad and study French. He took a summer course at the University of Nancy which gave him the fundamentals of the French language. Following these few months of preparation he entered the University of Paris, and after 9 months study there, secured his diploma. Like other students, Mr. Herdman learned a lot of things that were not in the text book, and in an interview, he talked quite freely of the outside activities in which he participated. And we who may never go abroad will appreciate first hand knowledge of a country about which we have heard so much.

Another source of education was found by Mr. Herdman in travel since he made two extensive trips. The first one was made around November 1928 to eastern France and throughout Switzerland. He visited several famous lakes, among them Lake Annecy and Lake Geneva; made a stop at Chamarix from whence he climbed Mont Blanc, traversing the famous Mer de Glace. At Easter time he made the second trip which took him into southern France, Spain and Italy. Among some of the important places visited were Nice, Marsielle, Auignon, Barcelona and Monte Carlo. At Barcelona he saw the exposition grounds on which

POSITIONS OPEN ON "ECHO" STAFF

Three Sophomores and One Upper Classman To Be Chosen This Week. Vacancies Caused by Failure of Students to Return This Year.

The failure of several students to return to the campus this year leaves vacancies on the Highland Echo Staff which must be filled immediately. The positions open are three Sophomore cubs and one Staff Editor or Junior Associate. For the first named position men and women of the sophomore class are eligible, while for the other post, juniors and seniors may apply.

In accordance with the recently adopted amendment to the constitution, notice is hereby given that those aforementioned positions are open. At a meeting of the joint committee of selection, it was decided that the editor will make assignments to those wishing to try for these positions, and selection will be made by the committee on the basis of the work turned in.

Those who wish to enter the competition will please see the editor or some member of the committee before Thursday of this week. No one will be considered who does not make known his intention of competing by that day. Anyone wishing further information as to the duties and rewards of these places may obtain it from the Highland Echo Committee which is composed of Dr. Hunter, Dr. Hussey, and Professor Davis, of the faculty; Louise Carson and Frank Baker, of the Student Council; and Forrest Robertson, Edith Nash, and Jesse Peirce, of the Echo.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

The girls glee club has elected as its officers for this year: Jeanette Moore, President; Eleanor Kuhlman, Vice-president and Publicity Manager; Mary Elizabeth Deaderick, Business Manager; Ann Smartt, Librarian. Miss Frances Henry will again direct the club. Last year was the first time the club has been organized for several years. The girls had a very successful season, their excellent programs having attracted splendid audiences. The club has already made plans for a variety of unique and choice programs. Tryouts for new voices will soon be held—so be on the alert for announcements of the time in chapel. It is to be hoped that a large number of girls will try out and help make the club a great success.

Jean McMurray is coaching at Milligan College this year.

"Y" FALL RETREAT HELD AT SUNSHINE

Student Christian Associations Are Inspired by Speakers. Program Outlined.

About thirty members of the Y. W. and Y. M. Cabinets and some fifteen Nu Gamma leaders attended the Retreat at Sunshine September 7-9.

We arrived at five o'clock and used the time before supper to get settled. After supper we returned to the long veranda for the opening session of the Conference. The address was delivered by Dr. Giffin, President of Knoxville College.

A sunrise meeting on a nearby mountain top had been planned for Sunday morning but old Sol was contrary and we were forced to hold our service in the Sunparlor (without the sun). Dr. Stevenson spoke interestingly and informally at this time.

At nine that morning the Nu Gamma leaders met with Miss Henry, while the Y.W. officers met for individual discussions with the corresponding Y. M. officers.

From ten to twelve the two cabinets met separately to talk over matters of business. Twelve to twelve-thirty was left for the special committee chairmen to hold sessions of their workers.

After dinner the Y. M. and Y. W. Cabinets met jointly to discuss various problems.

The last session of the Conference was begun at seven o'clock with an enjoyable sing on the steps, led by Porter French.

It was indeed fitting that Dr. Wilson should deliver the closing address of the Confernce. Those of us who had the privilege of listening to him were fillled with a new spirit for the work of the coming year. And so ended the Fall Retreat of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. of Maryville College.

Mildred Crawford Made Editor of Chilhowean

Staff Ready to Start Work on Yearbook—Kemp Davis Is at The Manager's Post.

When school opened this Fall the junior class found itself minus an editor-in-chief for the 1930 year book. The position naturally fell to Mildred Crawford who was chosen associate editor last year. However, the class could not have selected a more capable and efficient editor, for "Billie" is known on the Hill as being a faithful worker, full of pep, and ready to tackle and master any situation. Mildred appointed the following to serve on her staff: Charles Felknor, art editor; Dorothy Keller, associate editor; Mabel Dickerson, literary editor; Edgar Buchanan, photographic editor; and Cora Houke, typist.

With Mildred Crawford serving as editor and Kemp Davis as business manager, together with a staff of such uusual talent and initiative the 1930 Chilhowean promises to be one of the best books ever issued by a junior class of Maryville.

Mrs. Mary Benedict Dies

The many friends of Mrs. Mary Benedict were sorry to learn of her death last Tuesday morning. She was known and loved as the "Y.W. Grandmother", and her life on the Hill was an inspiration to all.

HIGHLANDER ELEVEN MEETS TENNESSEE WESLEYAN ON ILLUMINATED FIELD FRIDAY NIGHT, 7:30

Field is Equipped With Most Complete Lighting System in The South; Spectators Expected to Fill New Stands To Capacity.

Next Friday night, one of the biggest events in the history of athletics at Maryville will take place. Our Maryville College football team will play the Tennessee Wesleyan eleven on an illuminated field.

After careful study and investigation Maryville College presents to you football under the projectors which are used to light the greatest stadiums in the world. Mr. Cahill, the inventor of these great projectors, came to Maryville in person, and here laid out the illumination which you will behold. Where the greatest and wealthiest colleges of the country practice under but twelve Cahill Duplex Projectors, Maryville College has installed twenty of them burning 40,000 watts of current and mounted on fifty-foot poles to give spectators and opponents alike, one of the most perfect football illuminations of the world. It is one of the first lighted fields in Tennessee.

It so happens that this year is the golden anniversary of electric lights. Exactly fifty years ago Thomas A. Edison first invented a light operated by electricity, which soon proved to be far more efficient than the old system of burning kerosene or gas. Electric lights quickly developed, but until recently all outdoor games were necessarily ended at sundown.

Mr. Cahill, of New York, has been working for the last five years on a projector which would illuminate a baseball diamond or a football field sufficiently to play after dark. He tried all the largest projectors then known, but they proved to be unsatisfactory, since they produced little light and a blinding glare.

After spending thousands of dollars of his own money, he finally perfected a reflector fitted out with

BAINONIAN-THETA STAGING RUSH WEEK

Theta's Program Has Been Completed, But Bainonian Starts Hers Today.

Bainonian and Theta girls have been quite busy planning the events for their rush weeks for the new girls. Last week was Theta Week. The new girls were entertained by a Theta trip around the world, a Japanese tea, a track meet, and the opening program, "Toyland", the main feature of which was a play "The Cross-Stitch Heart". The Theta program secretaries Elizabeth Caldwell and Mary Ella Sullivan devoted much time, originality, and strenuous labor to make these events as successful and enjoyable as they were.

The Bainonians have planned a Southern Tea, a witch's jamboree in the College Woods, an old fashioned party, and "Traveling On", a musical comedy, for the opening night, Saturday, September 27. Marion Johnson and Mabel Dickerson are the program secretaries. As everyone knows, anything Mabel and Marion plan is sure to be full of pep and fun. So, new girls, the Literary Societies are doing everything they can to make these first days at Maryville pleasant for you. They want you to join the society of your choice and enter into their work. The societies need you, your ideas, and your support.

Bring along ten cents for a foot ball program Friday night. You'll want one for a souvenir of the game.

Some New Faces Seen At Faculty Reception

Miss DeHaven, Miss Gruchy, Dr. Gillingham, Miss Hansen, Mrs. Cartwright, Missing From Faculty List This Year.

On returning to College Hill for another year of work, we look in vain for faces that we knew well last year and find new ones in their place. In addition to the many changes in the student body, there are several changes in the faculty.

Miss McReynolds succeeds Miss DeHaven in the English department, and Mr. Smith succeeds Miss Gruchy in the Spanish. Four of the new faculty members are graduates from Maryville. They are: Mrs. Morton in the expression department; Miss Hudson in the biology department; Miss Weller in the physical education department; and Professor Souder who succeeds Professor Barnes as dean.

Dr. Gillingham, who has for years ben registrar at Maryville, is now in Philadelphia. Miss Anna Jones is registrar and Miss Ruth Weiss, assistant registrar. Mrs. Franklin and Mrs. Graham are succeeded as matrons in Baldwin Hall by Miss McCorkle and Miss McIver, both from Banner Elk College, North Carolina.

Y. M. C. A. Holds "Pow-Wow" in Woods

"Y" Makes Opening Days More Pleasant for New Men on Hill.

Saturday, Sept. 14—At about 7:30 this evening a motley crowd of college students, dressed in all the old clothes available, assembled on the Y. M. C. A. porch and steps. A few songs were sung while the mob slowly migrated toward the college woods. Soon a warm fire was blazing and everyone was gathered around it.

Jesse James arose and delivered a very fine speech welcoming the nw students to Maryville on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. The next speaker was Morgan Biggs, the president of Alpha Sigma, who delivered a friendly talk concerning the fellowship to be had in either society, and the hearty welcome Alpha Sigma would extend to any who wished to join its ranks.

The Alpha Sigma stunt was next on the program. Mrs. Morton, formerly Nellie Caldwell and the sweetheart of (Alpha) Sigma Chi, gave a very interesting reading. The only trouble was that it was entirely too short. Then Yervant Topalian sang a special dance number of his native land. He sang the first two verses, but said he had forgotten the third verse. He should have sung the first one over again and nobody would know the difference. It was very pretty even if we didn't understand quite all of it. The next thing on their program was a little skit (not a skid) by Porter French and Partee. They got some nice close harmony and Partee's buzz, or whatever you call it, came in to make a very good effect. For a grand climax to their series of acts, they had an Alpha Sigma Beauties Revue. The outcome was a tie between the four contestants.

Hayden Laster, the president of Athenian next gave an address which had a strong appeal and which was interestingly intermingled with bits of wit and humor. The Athenian act was a very solemn and impressive wedding ceremony. Edgar Shepherd, with part of his face black, slowly and dramatically played the wedding march on his violin. Then the bride entered accopanied by her bridesmaid and the best man who also acted as her guardian. Lou Blair was the lucky groom and Forrest Robertson performed the ceremony. We will recommend Leech to any one wishing an efficient nigger bride who can cook, sew, and do all the other housework. Bill Peacock acting as the bridesmaid performed very well and caused many laughs.

Then came the eats. A mad scramble and a wild mob of ravenous college boys surged forward toward the watermelon. A generous slice was given each person and second pieces were to be had for the asking. After the feast, Jesse Peirce led the group in a few yells and the pow-wow was ended with one verse of the Alma Mater. Everyone went back to their rooms full, happy and entertained, and only wished that they could have more meetings like that.

Cupid Claims Many Victims In Summer

Wedding Bells Intone Blessings On Several Products of Maryville "Moonshine".

"And great was the fall thereof."

During the past summer the wedding bells have been ringing merrily for some of our former students. Some come, perhaps, as surprises, and others have been in the engaged state for so long that the ring must needs be remodeled. Which will be the most successful marriages, only the future will tell. At any rate as one Maryville student aptly remarked, "If they weren't well acquainted before they were married, there's plenty of time ahead in which to get the "low-down" on each other."

But to relieve your mind of its suspense, the writer will endeavor to portray these marriages in the most effective manner.

First on the list comes the marriage of Addie Pearl Hendrix, better known as "Pepper" to Kenneth Davis, who was a track man last year. They were both sophomores and were secretly married last May. However, the secret was kept successfully until after the close of school. Just because this marriage occurred before the end of the semester, and was kept from the cars of the faculty, freshmen are not advised to try anything so drastic until they have had at least one year's experience in moonshining.

For those who are nature lovers, the marriage of Marjorie Fry to Sam Hembree would be very appealing. It took place in the College Woods last May. But they were former students and did not have to be so secretive. If you would like to know anything more about it, just ask Mabel Hembree for she was in the wedding party and will

Frosh Present Painful Problem to Poor Photographers

"Hey! How did you get ahead of me, up there!"

"Come on, now; cut out the pushing!"

"Don't let that guy get in ahead of us!"

"Say, this row goes in next."

And so far, far into the morning.

Inside the little room where the photographs of the freshman are being taken, a much more pleasant scene presents itself. The patient cooly sits down in the chair pointed out to him by the photographer and tries to look serious and dignified as becomes a man of such a high degree of intelligence as a college freshman. His look soon changes to astonishment and perplexity as he tries to figure out why the photographer doesn't like his pose.

Then at a hint from the cameraman, he goes to the other extreme. Now he is a happy, smiling collegian. Then bursts forth the remark, "Say, you won't be able to take any more pictures after you take mine", and the photographer, who knows very well what the answer will be, wearily questions, "Why?" The budding intelligensus, proud of his originality replies, "Because the camera will be broken when you get through taking my picture; ha, ha, ha!" The photographer joins in the merriment, not in anticipation of the broken camera but because one more freshman is dumb enough to make the same wise crack and the average is now raised to 227 out of every 251. The 24 who didn't mention either cracking or breaking the camera, probably never saw a camera before and didn't know whether their picture would come out as an oil painting or just in water colors.

Then the mind of the freshman is brought back again to the serious business of looking nice when photographed. He straightens his tie, combs his hair, and gazes steadfastly at a nail in the wall which the photographer uses to replace the well known "little birdie."

Click, and its all over, but the freshman remains stead, still gazing at the nail. "Come on; it's all over," brings him from his reverie and he innocently asks. "Oh, did you take it?"

Welcome

Throughout the first edition of the Echo will be found expressions of welcome from the merchants and business establishments of this city. They are sincere in their greetings, for Maryville College means a living to many of them who depend largely on college patronage. However much these people want our trade, they are personally interested in everything we do here, and support every program to the fullest extent.

Their feelings are well expressed by the president of one of the banks, which handles students' accounts purely as a matter of convenience. He says "Maryville College means more to the town of Maryville than the Aluminum Company does, because the College is turning out something infinitely more worthwhile."

The Highland Echo wishes to join in the welcoming chorus, and although we cannot go to the rapturous heights reached by our college pastor in praise of the pulchritudinous virtues of the newly arrived Maryvillians, we do want to greet old and new students as readers of and contributors to the college paper.

We hope you will feel that the paper is yours and that you have some responsibility in making it.

Next week we plan to start an open forum and invite all who will to contribute letters on subjects of current interest. Discussion of campus, national, or international problems are cordially welcome.

—O—

Culture?

Maryville is not snobbish. We do not pretend to place primary emphasis on insouciance by any matter of means. It is possible that we do not give it enough of a place on our program here at Maryville. At any rate we can do our best to fit ourselves to take the place in life that college men and women should.

It seems as if some of those who recently joined our ranks have been allowed to make a breach of etiquette which warrants our calling their attention to.

Several fellows attended the faculty reception in rather unconventional attire. Quite a few are not aware that Sunday dinner is a bit more formal than the class room. This fault is not peculiar to the class of thirty-three—every freshman class has had a share in these mistakes, and has been thus reminded.

We make this suggestion not because it is the open season for advice to freshman, but in the hope that we may start a little thought on the subject.

Perhaps after all we can go to college and still be gentlemen.

—O—

Beat Tennessee Wesleyan Friday!

NEWS COMMENT

According to reports, four freshmen forgot to bring pencils along to the Intelligence Test. But that doesn't necessarily mean anything—they borrowed pencils. They really should have been admitted without the test!

The seniors may pluck up courage. Herbert Hoover flunked his comprehensive English exam, and still became president.

Of course we wouldn't threaten our fellow students with anything like that, but we merely point to this as an indication of how much Mr. Hoover must have learned after college.

Coach Honaker made a speech at the Pow-Wow the other night, and when he finished he was not horsed, but cowed; not "boo-ed", but 'moo-ed."

You couldn't expect the cow to know it wasn't her mate.

The senior class turned down a chance for open party this month. No doubt the seniors wish to look over the new talent more carefully.

As a matter of fact, some of our more transient moonshiners have been looking them over at close quarters.

TWO POSITIONS OPEN ON ECHO MANAGER STAFF

Notice is hereby given that two positions on the managerial staff of the Highland Echo are now open, and applications are being received.

Those wishing to apply will see Tom Whitehead, who is chairman of the committee on selection, and turn in a list of qualifications for the job. If possible, submit reference from former employer giving business ability.

The assistant business managers are given first consideration in choosing the manager for next year's paper.

Pre-Med Club Elects Officers

Sept. 20, 19299—At a special meeting of the Pre-Medical Club held today the following officers were elected:

President, Alton D. Partee
Vice President, Robert A. West
Secretary-Treasurer, F. Alwin McCann
Program Secretary-Editor, Lucy Lee Silcox.

Regular meetings will be held on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. Dr. Olin, who is very much interested in the club, will speak at the September 25th meeting. All students interested in the medical profession are invited.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

Margie Auld— Isn't Professor Hussey old to have such young children?

Hilda Farnham—He married a young wife, and the children take after their mother.

Freshman—What's all this Systematic Discord that I hear everybody talking so much about?

FAMOUS FAIRY TALES

"Now Mrs. McMurray", said Mr. Proffitt, "I promise you faithfully that the College Maid Shop will be moved tomorrow."

"The Drug store is a very appropriate place to meet your friends," says Miss Caldwell.

Grandpa Ross says that he's quit roosting in the belfry.

FRESHMEN TO BE GIVEN COURSE IN NEWSPAPER WORK

Realizing that the ordinary freshman in college has very little idea of what journalism calls for, the Echo is sponsoring a short course in the fundamentals of newspaper work. This is not a course for those who understand this kind of work, but is for those who think they would like to learn about it before they are assigned this sort of work in their English classes in a few weeks.

We have made arrangements with Mr. George Crothers of the Knoxville News-Sentinel to give us his experiences as cub reporter, and other interesting and instructive material will be presented. This is not a regularly scheduled class, and will meet only as often as the group wishes.

Announcement of the first meeting will be made in chapel this week.

HERDMAN BACK AFTER YEAR IN GAY PARIS

the World's Fair is being held. In Spain he saw a bull fight. He seemed impressed with Monte Carlo and declares it to be all that the motion pictures, newspapers and popular magazines would have us believe.

Mr. Herdman met many celebrities while in Paris. At a reception (to which an invitation was tendered to 25 or 30 American students) given at Luxemburg Palace, he met Doumergue, the President of France. At the American University Club he met Herrick, the late United States Ambasador to France. He heard an address given by General Joffre who was the commander of the French troops during the first part of the World War. He also saw the Big Four tennis players, Bartro, Cochet, Brugnon and La Coste. He met La Coste in a doctor's office where the two were waiting for medical attention.

When asked if the French women were as beautiful as they are reputed to be, Mr. Herdman said: "The Frenchwomen do not usually have much attraction for the American boys. Despite our ideas of their elegance in dress, the average Frenchman dresses more poorly than does the average American." He seemed to think very highly of the French hospitality. He stayed in a private home, and says that whereas the American must modify his ideas to a certain extent, it is not difficult for him to live in a French household.

"Do you like France?" I asked him.

"I like it very much, so much that I'm going back there soon," he replied.

HIGHLAND FLINGS

One Streetcleaner to Another: "No, I don't have to work here; I'm merely collecting some material for a modern novel."

Earl Storey: You say you are working ten hours a day? Why I wouldn't think of such a thing!
Corky Crawford: I didn't. The boss thought of it.

French Guide: What do you think of that immense tower over there?
Allen Herdman: Quite an Eiffel.

Frosh: My father is in the lumber business in a small way.
Soph: And what does he do?
Frosh: He makes toothpicks.

College students may have an awful line, but it takes the YO-YO for a snappy comeback.

She: Do you know anything about universal joints?
He: You wouldn't care to go to them, the university students hang out there.

Biggs: How did you sleep last night?
Biggs: Reclining.

King: Say what's the idea of wearing my slicker?
Schleman: Well, I didn't want to get your new suit all wet.

A dead Scotchman is a capital example of rigid economy.

Bystander: What's the idea of picking on a fellow smaller than yourself?
Urchin: Aw, be yer age. I'd be a darn fool to pick on somebody bigger than m'self.

Don't grumble if your tasks are small,
And your rewards are few.
Remember that the mighty oak
Grew from a nut like you.

NOTICE

To the Editor of the Highland Echo,
College Station,
Maryville, Tenn.
Dear Sir:

Will you kindly inform Maryville College students that such announcements of college activities as may appropriately be made through the church bulletin will be accepted and printed, provided they are in the hands of the church secretary, Miss Winifred L. Painter, at the manse, phone 340 or at her residence, Phone 839, by Friday. Notices for oral announcement will not be accepted.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. Crothers.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

"Orange-Garnet, float forever,
Ensign of our Hill,
Hail to thee, our Alma Mater,
Hail to Maryville."

—:—

September is a month when there is considerable movement—migration of young folks—all over the United States. Young, energetic people are traveling in all directions and gathering at the various and numerous institutions of learning. If you remember Dr. Johnson's famous definition of a "net" in his English Dictionary, "Off to College" is it dramatized.

—:—

Students meet from all parts of the United States. Maryville has practically every state represented and also several foreign countries. All these students have different ideas and they check them in with their baggage. As they unpeck a debate is set in progress.

—:—

With a three month's vacation some of the aspiring orators are back all-wound-up and eager to go. One felow tells me he has his subject, his outline completed, and his contents absorbed.

—:—

That is the make-up of an orator alright.

—:—

Some of the younger generation want to know if they can use just any subject they may choose for a college oration. My advise to them is, you can use anything you want to only you can't orate . on just anything.

—:—

The Tennessee Alph Chapter of Pi Kappa Delta has already sent in its choice of propositions for debate this year. The first choice is: Resolved, That the United States should Advocate a World-wide Policy of demobilization of all armed forces except such as are needed for police purposes.

—:—

If that quesiton is accepted and proved we will soon be having private policemen.

—:—

A want add appearing in The Charlotte Observer: Wanted: A good backer. 70% single man preferred. Must be good.

—:—

Nothing but a razor-edged man could meet those requirements.

Stewart Rohre was on the campus the other day. He is at Union Seminary in Richmond.

Jimmie Holland is living in Maryville and teaching history at the University of Tennessee.

"Libeth" Murphy has entered the business world there, but, from her training in the Writer's Workshop, we are expecting the "Great American Novel" from her soon.

SENIOROLOGY

We, the Seniors of 1930 have now passed our imposed English exam and have made our official debut on Maryville College campus. We hope that the dignity of our presence is sufficiently apparent forever to distinguish us from the common herd of "freshies", sophs, and juniors. In case our dignity fails, the "special privileges", which we shall soon enjoy will certainly set us apart. Grand preparations are being made for such especially honored people as the members of the Senior Class; don't fret, puppies—you'll be big dogs some day. Just remember to pay the required respect to your superiors.

In case some under-classmen have special designs upon the officers of the Class, information along that line might be helpful:

President - - Frank Baker
Vice President - Edith Nash
Secretary - - - Earl Blazer
Treasurer - - Ralph Cherry
Athletic Manager - John Taggart
Editor - - - Helen Plant

"Red" Courtenay, "Ing" Fell, and "Abey" Tull are entering Princeton Seminary, and "Ed" Driscoll is at Union in New York City.

Dr. Wilson Spends Month Touring Yellowstone Park

All old Maryvillians know how fond Dr. Wilson is of camping. How many new students would have guessed that? Yes, Doctor says he enjoys camping as much now as he did in his childhood. As you know, it has been his custom for many summers to spend a few weeks this way. This last summer he choose Hadley Webb as a companion and Yellowstone National Park as a destination. Dr. Wilson and Hadley were accompanied as far as Winona Lake by Mrs. Wilson, where she preferred to remain instead of "roughin' it" further west.

Dr. Wilson and Hadley followed the Northern Yellowstone Trail, camping out wherever night caught them. However, our President deemed it wise to take a cottage while in the Park, fearing to encroach on the rights of the famous Yellowstone bears and other wild animals which are not as socialable and tame as post cards picture them.

After visiting the Yellowstone Park the campers followed the beautiful Shoshone river. Dr. Wilson thinks that the scenery along this river can hardly be surpassed in loveliness. The magnificent new State Cauitol of Lincoln, Nebraska, also impressed Dr. Wilson very favorably. He states that it is an edifice of unusually beautiful architecture and that it would be well worth while to make the trip just to see this structure.

The frequent meeting of old Maryville students made the journey very enjoyable for Dr. Wilson. He received an unusually pleasant surprise one night at a tourist's camp where a man, after looking at the Tennessee tag, asked Dr. Wilson in what Tennessee town he lived. On hearing Maryville the stranger exclaimed, "Then you must be Dr. Wilson." The man proved to be Ralph Laughead who was a student here more than thirty years ago.

Alas, an important item was almost omitted. The journey was made in a Ford. The Ford carried Doctor and Hadley five thousand miles, across fifteen states, and back home again after a stay of three weeks and six days.

BACK AT WORK AFTER TRIP WEST

JUNIORS ELECT NEW PRESIDENT

Sept. 20—The junior class met Saturday and elected new officers for the positions left vacant by the failure of those elected last June to return to Maryville.

Among those missing was Travis Hitt, the president. Edwin Shelly was elected to take his place and to pilot the juniors this year.

Mildred Crawford was selected as the new editor in chief for the Chilhowean. The juniors could not give up the idea of having a co-ed for this position even if the one selected last spring, the first in history, did go abroad on the sea of martimony during the summer.

Elbert Lippard was elected as athletic director for junior interclass contests.

THETA EPSILON

Theta Epsilon Literary Society has just completed a successful week in which the new girls were entertained as guests of the society.

The week opened Monday with the annual "Trip-Around the World", the rainy weather only serving to make the tours from one country to another more realistic.

Wednesday a Japanese Tea was given in Theta Hall, Thursday was the Theta track meet out by the football field.

Saturday night marked the opening of the year for Theta when the "opening program" was presented in the gym. The guests were given a glimpse into "Toyland" and dolls of all sorts much to the amazement of all, came to life and provided entertainment at the stroke of midnight.

Theta is expecting to have a very successful year although they have been handicapped by the illness of their president, Helen Crowder. She has nevertheless been the guiding hand behind of Theta althuogh she hasn't been able to be with the girls herself.

BAINONIAN

Maryville College,
Bainonian Hall,
September 19, 1929

Dear New Girls:

Aren't you glad that you're here? Still I wonder if those first few days weren't hard? Were they? But didn't the Bainonian posters make you feel a little more as if you belonged, that some body cared? How about the one that told you just how much Bainonian wanted and needed you? I'm sure at times you've felt that you needed her, too, haven't you? And if you asked she responded gladly to your appeal. As an old Bainonian, and in behalf of the entire society, I'm extending to you, again, a hearty welcome. We're really sincere when we say that we are for you. Just try us and see. But not only am I extending the 'glad hand', as it were, but I'm going to give you some inside information concerning what the Society is planning for you.

Soon each of you will get a note from some mysterious source telling you that you are some one's peanut, and that the author of the said note is your shell. Watch for these notes; they come in threes, and arrive in the most unexpected ways. On Monday, you'll be invited to a reception. It isn't just an ordinary reception, but is to be conducted in old fashioned southern style. I've been hearing whispers about negro mammies, powdered hair, and stately minuets, and therefore I predict that the Colonial atmosphere will be supplied. Later in the week, about Wednesday, comes a witches' jamboree. It will be held in the College Woods. Come imbibe Witches' brew, and have your fortunes told by one who's versed in the black art. Friday, on Baldwin lawn, we'll have a peanut party. It's a very informal type of kid party. There you and ou're shell will be united, and "a good time will be had by all."

But, dear ones, in the words of Al Jolson, "You Ain't heard nothing yet." Remember the clever poster over by the post office that informs you that Bainonian means "Traveler"? You don't want to forget that because we'll have a lot of daventures. Naturally, we have a goal, and it's forward and upward. And on Saturday night, Bainonian Yacht makes her maiden voyage. Both old and new girls be ready to embark by 7 o'clock. We sail from Thaw port for parts unknown.

I'll be seeing you, soon,
Sincerely,
A Bainonian.

ALPHA SIGMA

The opening meeting of the year augured well for an extraordinarily successful season. The Hall, looking most impressive in its brand new garments, was filled to the brim with enthusiastic newcomers. The program could be unexcelled for sheer entertainment value. It was as choice as could be made, and was properly appreciated for vociferous applauses greeted each number.

The society bids a cordial welcome to the freshmen, feeling as it does that it offers a unique means for developing one of the aspects of a well-rounded character. The graduate who has not availed himself of the beneficial influences of one of the Literary Societies on the Hill has lost something vital in his make-up.

ATHENIAN

Athenian Literary Society opened the year with a program of the usual Athenian standard and one which the old and new fellows enjoyed.

The Society only regrets that it was unable to provide seats for all those present.

The program consisted of the following numbers:

Music—Buchanan anl Shepherd
"Seven Cardinal Virtues of College"—Hayden Laster
Reading—Forest Robertson
Fun—Jesse Peirce

After the meeting, the fellows went to the woods where their appetites were apeased with apple pie and ice cream.

The fellowship around the camp fire impressed all with the worthwhileness of the literary societies.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Something that is worth paying for and yet is free, is the privilege of sitting behind a fair or unfair coed and listening to her irrevelant remarks.

Night football will have one advantage—we won't have to wait for the referee to ask somebody to change the slant of his auto windshield.

And then, too, in the long-drawn out affairs will not betome obscured before the last fifteen minutes of play.

That man Malerich must have been sent from heaven—we certainly needed him.

Ministerial Association

After the Pep Meeting Wednesday night the Ministerial Association met for the first time this year. The Melody Men sang. Many new men brought much pep and a profitable year is anticipated.

COEDS PROMISED ACTIVE SEASON

Grace Weller To Direct Girls' Athletics; Required Gym Work Will Be Made Interesting To All.

The point system will again predominate in girls' athletics this year, with awards given at the end of the year for the various degrees of proficiency. However, before stating the qualifications, let it be said that these athletics are not encouraged for the mere earning of a letter or monogram, but for the physical betterment of the girl herself. Naturally, the awards serve as incentives for competition in athletics but girls' athletics at Maryville are established for a higher purpose or, rather, purposes.

One of the most important of these purposes is to help the girl physically. The two gymnastic periods each week are scarcely adequate to keep a girl in her best physical condition, so it has been deemed wise to extend the athletic possibilities to interclass competition in various sports. Futhermore, a spirit of comradeship is aroused between the girl and her teammates. This loyalty is further advanced through the interclass competition in the different games practiced every week.

There are three awards given for proficiency in athletics: a Maryville Monogram "MC" is awarded to a girl earning between three and four hundred points; a Maryville letter, "M" to a girl earning between four and five hundred points; and the highest award, a letter and a sweater, to a girl earning five hundred points or over.

Among the various team sports that are offered are: soccer, basketball, volley ball, aerial dart, baseball, and tennis. A girl who makes a class team in any of the above sports receives fifty points, and a sub, twenty points. Fifteen points are given to the manager of any team sport and the captain earns ten. For perfect attendance at all practices and games a girl receives ten points.

Individual points are awarded for track and field events, swimming, and also numerous stunts, such as: tumbling, head stands, novelty walks.

A girl may earn fifty points for hiking providing she takes six seven-mile hikes each semester. The famous "Loop" was well-worn to rock bottom at the end of the semester, but it is hoped that the

HONAKER CONFIDENT MEN WILL SHOW UP WELL

Here is a list of our present squad. How do you like them? McDonald, Watkins, Storey, Hope, Overly, Cherry, Bonds, Calloway, Taggart, Teffeteller, Bowman, Ferguson, Byerly, Smith, Tolliver, Reed, Richardson, West, H. Gillespie, Woodard, White, Dinsmore, Peacock, Johnson, Foreman, Blair, Malrich, Wilson, Cash, Biggs, Cudney, Brown, M. Gillespie, Meyers, Dobbie, Roddy, Klemmer, Bradshaw, Hitch, Morrison, Wood, Atkins, G. Benn, D. Benn, Watt, Carper, Carr, Abshear, Owen, Cooper.

Nearly all of our old men deserve honorable mention. We can also see several stars shining through from the ranks of the new men. Bowman proves to possess very good qualities as a full back. He has a pretty good punt and passes easily. Bonds has been away for a year, but certainly all who were here in the Fall of 1927 remember that whirling, fighting, little blonde who broke holes in the opposing team's line running for 15 or 20 yard gains and who hit "Pinky" Walden so hard that it put him out for a long spell. Bob Byerly shows fine material for an end and, although this is his first year out for football, looks like a man who can hit hard when he wants to and snag in all the stray passes that might happen to be flying around. Cash looks like a good man for guard and he looks big enough to break a hole in the line wide enough for two or three backs to go through. Wilson shows plenty of quick footwork and has a drive that should carry the ball over those last few feet every time. Malerich displays some quick thinking and drive in his position as quarterback while Woodard looks plenty good enough to help him out on some of those hard plays.

With all those out for backfield positions, it looks like Tennessee Wesleyan will have a mighty hard time keeping a straight line. Now let's all stay right behind our team next Friday night at 7:30. Let's all give our favorite; that old chant; Everybody up, now, come on!

Maryville, Maryville,
You don't know Marville,
You can't beat Maryville,
MARYVILLE!

FIRST PEP MEETING STIRS STUDENT BODY

Band Being Organized For Big Pep Meeting on Thursday Night. Thrill of Night Game Will Swell Noise and Enthusiasm.

September 18—The first pep meeting of the year, characterized by a capacity crowd, was held in Voorhees Chapel tonight. The object was to stir the student body to a consciencness that Maryville has a real football team at work on the field, and that some real support is expected from the spectators.

The four literary societies presented stunts which went over big. According to all reports, from the girls' version of the night football game there should be no objection to the games on the field.

The freshmen were made a bit more familiar with the yells, and the chapel reverberated with the old Pep Song, the Howee-Howee and the Alma Mater.

There will be another pep meeting on Thursday night of this week. At this one we hope to have Coach Honaker speak to us on the fundamentals of football, giving us such dope as, changes in rules, position of players, scoring, and so on. We think we know all about such simple things, but a few minutes under coach, and we will be willing to admit that the rules committee has made quite a change in the ancient game of "rugby".

Throw the books in the corner, caution to the winds, and a wow of a pep meeting in the chapel Thursday night!

NIGHT FOOTBALL

two lights which would throw more than twice as much light as before and yet a person could look directly at the light for several minutes without feeling any strain.

Reports have been coming in from all over the world concerning the success of these lights. Here is a quotation from a paper describing a soccer game in New England. "The soccer game tonight was played under the most unfavorable conditions possible. A fog settled down on the field, so heavy that it would have been impossible to follow the plays in the day time. But the Cahill Duplex Projectors surpassed every one's expectations and were able to penetrate the fog. Both players and spectators were thus enabled to follow the ball at all times."

A large crowd is expected to come from all over the state to witness our first game this year. Moonshiners, don't count too much on these night football games though, because the bleachers will be well lighted by the reflectors on the other side of the field.

Cheer Leads Will Be Chosen Next Week

Large Entry List Expected To Make Candidates Work For Positions.

As the opening football game approaches, the problem of directing our enthusiasm looms on the horizon. It is customary to have a pep committee, chosen by the faculty committee on student activities from the senior, junior and sophomore classes, which works with the cheerleaders in planning for the games.

The pep committee will be organized in the next few days, and definite action will be taken in regard to choosing cheerleaders for the coming year. It is customary to wait until after the first game to select the yell masters, and it is supposed the same rule will hold this year.

Peirce is the only man from last year's group to report for duty, and he has been trying to get things going for the first game. There are some real chances to earn a letter in this branch of athletics this year. The aspirants must be willing to work, though, since it is rumored that more will be required of the cheerleaders than has formerly been the case.

Those who are interested in entering the tryouts for cheerleader will please hand their names to Jesse Peirce or drop them in the Echo box before noon on September 28. None will be considered after that time.

Maryville's outlook for a bright season is even better than usual. Even Bob Thrower remarked how well prospects look.

The lighting is so expensive it has been suggested that the fellows warm up by moonlight. But, no, fellows, Miss Molly saw through that one right away. Try again!

gladly impart any information.

Perhaps, the biggest surprise of all was the marriage of Frances Cortner to Mr. Russell Finney, a member of the editorial staff of one of the West Palm Beach newspapers. We were mighty sorry to lose Frances for she was the editor of the 1930 Chilhowean. Evidently, she wanted someone else to edict to her. If you ask Mary about the wedding, she will say that it was a quiet, home wedding, that is, quiet until she played the wedding march.

Now, the marriage of Nellie Caldwell to "Beany" Morton was a very different wedding than the aforementioned ones. Nellie and "Beany" had known each other and had been engaged while in college. Nellie evidently wanted to get her B. A. degree before her M. A. degree. She is back with us on the "Hill" and you may often hear her expressing herself in no uncertain tones.

One of our most faithful moon-shining couples last year was Jane Sherill and Norman Vaughn. They were married this summer during the latter part of July, and are expecting to make their home in Chattanooga. In the meantime Jane is at Everett High and we will probably see her now and then. But we will miss Jane and her overalls on the mountain hikes this year.

Kathleen Hunnicutt and Maynard Dunn, former graduates, are also among those who were married this summer. Christine can tell you more about them. However, I do know that they are living in Johnson City.

Evelyn Butman, a Maryville girl, and a freshman last year decided that she could do more good in taking care of Mr. Lequire than in coming to Maryville for her sophomore year. I saw her riding up Court Street the other day and she was all smiles, so I suppose they are "happy, though married."

Another of our graduates of 1929, Earl Wilkinson, married a former Maryville student, Zeena McCurry. If you're hiking around the "Loop", just stop in and see them sometime.

Mildred Lowry, one of the famous twins has done a rather singular act and married Tom Thurman. They are living in Sparta, Tenn.

Thus they come, they see and conquor or are conquored. But what we are wondering is, will:

Maryville + Marryville = Merryville?

road has been re-conditioned for the many hikes which will be taken this year.

Health, of course, enters into athletics, and a set of health rules is given to each girl trying for an award. Among these rules are: sleping, bathing, care of teeth, exercise, and eating. For observing these health rules perfectly, twenty-five points are awarded each semester.

In order that althetics may not be overbalanced, points are given for attaining a certain average in scholarship. For an "A" average in academic work during any semester, 20% of points won in that semester will be given in addition. Similarly for a "B" average, 10% of points won that semester will be given.

It has been decided this year in order to encourage harder work for the awards that a class must have as many subs as there are members on the regular team for that particular sport. This will tend to make competition a little stronger and arouse a greater class spirit.

So, come out girls! Fight for your class! Miss Grace Weller will have charge of girls' athletics and she is expecting to see the Alumni Gym crowded when she issues the call during the first week of October.

Show your loyalty and comradeship by a ready response!

SNEED OPENS GRID SEASON AT ROGERSVILLE

W. D. Sneed, former Maryville College football luminary is coaching at Lauderdale County High School at Rogersville this year.

A local paper gives the following account of Sneed's activities:

"The school and team is very enthusiastic over the new mentor, Mr. Sneed, who has taken hold of athletics in the east Lauderdale community in such a way as to restore confidence and to establish a morale that should lead the team to victory, it is reported.

Coach Sneed comes to Lauderdale after four years of prep training, three years of college experience. He played in college with Kenneth Howard, now coaching at Anniston, and with Coach McLane, now at Howard. Coach Sneed expects to introduce the Zuppke method of football, as this is the first time the mentor from Illinois has had his methods tried out in prep schools in North Alabama.

It is Mr. Sneed's ambition to put out a clean, hard-fighting machine, one here morality and physical culture will be stressed more than winning games.

Bob Jones says he's taking a correspondence course in French this year.

Mary Chris Benn is playing librarian in Miami, Florida.

Welcomes You to Maryville

Welcome back Students: The old town is not the same without you. If it were possible for us to shake the hands of every one of you, we would say "we've missed you and are glad that you are back. When you are down town drop in and say "Hello." To the first year students we want to know you, and if we can help you in any way come in and tell us. You will find this a friendly place where you will be made to feel at home and more than that you will find Proffitt's the best place to trade.

To be lovely use the preparations of

Elizabeth Arden

THE loveliest women of London, Paris and New York use these four Preparations. They were created by Elizabeth Arden as a part of the famous Skin Treatments given in her Salons. Miss Arden recommends them for daily use at home according to her scientific method.

Venetian Cleansing Cream. Melts into the pores, removes all impurities, softens and soothes the skin.

Venetian Ardena Skin Tonic. Tones, firms and whitens the skin, keeps it clear and fine.

Venetian Velva Cream. Nourishes without fattening, keeps the skin smooth and velvety.

Venetian Special Astringent. Braces relaxed muscles, firms the contours.

Ask at the toilet goods counter for a copy of Elizabeth Arden's book, "THE QUEST OF THE BEAUTIFUL." It gives instructions for the use of all the Arden Venetian Toilet Preparations in the correct home care of the skin.

Elizabeth Arden Toilet preparations are sold exclusively in our Toilet Goods Department, Main Floor

INTELLIGENCE OF FROSH IS QUESTIONABLE

Test Shows Up Rare Minds; Also Limited Knowledge of English Vocabulary.

GRADES NOT OUT

Probably No Better and No Worse Than Previous Subjects of Test.

Yes, history repeats itself. On Saturday morning, September 21st., another freshman class assembled in the chapel to have its gray matter measured. As always, the variety of facial expressions was a curious and amusing spectacle—a sight well worth watching. Expressions of disgust, expectancy, hope—nonchalant expressions, and some exhibiting excruciating pain! The countenance of Percy H—, who was validictorian of his class at Blankville High School, seemed to shout: "I know not what method of testing will be used; however, it must be broad in scope to give me a fair showing, for I have a vast amount of knowledge stored in this old bean of mine." Just behind sosphiscated Percy sat poor little Ima Newgirl, twisting her handkerchief, chewing her pencil, and wishing she were back in Hot Knob washing the breakfast dishes. Some seemed to be thinking, "Well, I'm already doomed, but the sooner it's over, the better." Others were wondering if the grades would be sent home.

Anyway the test was given by Maryville's psychology experts. The results? As usual some acquitted themselves nobly while others displayed a great amount of—no, not feeble mindedness!—carelessness and thoughtlessness. Many of the answers are almost too ludicrous to repeat. Yet, one may glean much valuable (?) information from a

FELLOWS HIKE IN FAMED CHILHOWEES

"Y" Sponsors Week-end Visit To Mountains.

At 3:00 o'clock on Saturday afternoon about thirty-five fellows assembled at the YMCA prepared for the hike over to Gold Creek Falls in the heart of the Chilhowees. Having sent the food ahead a part of the distance, the hikers departed promptly at 3:30 for their destination some eleven miles away, and with the leaders setting a good stiff pace, the first eight miles were stepped off in something less than two hours from the time of departure. Then the real fight began. With the supplies to carry and three more of the miles still stretching away up the steeply inclined mountain side, it required some real strength and stick-to-it-iveness on the part of everyone, but particularly the amateurs, to enable them to reach the vicinity of the falls in another hour and a half, most of the distance being made after dark. Camp was made and supper cooked—then, with the falls below and two or three ukeleles acting as lullabys most of the hikers soon were enjoying their well-earned reward of sleep, some in the shadows of the trees and some hugging the camp fires to suppliment their blankets.

Breakfast was eaten at an early hour and everyone went down to the falls to investigate the report that it was really the "Gold" Creek Falls. Eventually some of them decided to take a swim in the icy-cokiness of the pool below the falls, but the greater number preferred to look on and laugh as Professor Queener and Lieut. Smith gingerly stuck their big toes in the water before taking a plunge.

After assembling and holding prayer service on the rocks above

Light's Golden Jubilee Celebrated at First Game

As a part of the celebration of Light's Golden Jubilee, being sponsored in Maryville by the Tennessee Power and Light Co., the fotball players of Tennessee Wesleyan and Maryville were presented with bronze medalions at the game last Friday night.

Dr. Wilson called attention to the fact that Maryville opened her fortieth football season under incandescent lighting, made possible by Thomas Edison's invention fifty years ago.

College Band Has Good Year Ahead With 10 New Men

Miss Butcher Conducting Group Of Twenty Musicians; Appreciated By All.

With Miss Butcher as director of the band, it becomes a synonomous term with Pep. It furnishes the music for all the local football and basketball games. Each year it's getting bigger and better.

This year there are already sixteen members and several more prospots. The final number will probably be twenty. With a twenty piece band they ought to make music and plenty of it. Of the sixteen already selected only six are "old" men but the new ones are old in xperience, if not in age.

When we've yelled ourselves hoarse and we're unable to make any vocal noises—there's the band to assist us. When we're discouraged—ditto. It's always right there to help us—pep us and pull us through. It must help Coach Honaker's lectures along too, in putting some of that ol' Maryville fight into the team.

It surely helps out the pep meetings immensely as has already been proved by the last two and it's certainly an essential factor to our games.

The band is composed of the following men (the stars indicating former members):

Miss Mildred Butcher, director; *Howard Schleman, clarinet; *Lawrence Somers, clarinet; *Lynn Rankin, clarinet; *Coile Quinn, clarinet; Allen B. Campbell, cornet; Kenneth L. Huff, cornet; Hadley Webb, cornet; Andrew E. Newcomer, trumpet; *Reno Smith, trumpet; Welsay Felknor, trumpet; Elton E. Oakley, saxaphone; Lowell E. Vinsant, saxaphone; Harold Myers, saxaphone; Von Vinsant, trombone; K. Martin, drums; *Fred Cromer, drums.

College Maid Moves

Mrs. McMurray Still Helping Girls to Earn Way.

Girls, do you need pin-money? What about those class dues that must be paid soon? And don't you have a yearning for those adorable shoes that you saw in the shop window? Or maybe the situation is graver, probably the board bill is due and you see no way out. What college girl (or boy either) isn't confronted with the problem of making ends meet? But did you know that at least 275 girls of Maryville College solve such problems by earning from 50c to $3.50 per day by working in the College Maid Shop? They do. And should you find this statement hard to believe just "come and see". We're in our new quarters in the basement of Thaw Hall. "What is this College Maid Shop, any how?" I hear some one say.

Nine years ago some girls told their Home Economics teacher, Mrs. McMurray that they could not be back the next year because of financial difficulties, but she assured them that she would find work for

Some Advice to Moonshiners On Things They Know Most About

Years of Experience Prove Worth of These Valuable Suggestions To Old and New Students.

The moonshines bright on our dear old college hill,
'Tis noon-time; the couples are gay.
The young man basks in his sweetheart's smiling glance
Till Miss Mollie drives him far away.

Now that classes have fallen into their ruts, and we have had time to look about us at our fellow-sufferers, we notice a great upheaval in the old order of moonshiners. Old couples are rearranged; new couples have come into the ranks, taking the places of old ones who have gone forever. Moonshiners this year have the appearance of shuffled cards, with new faces turned up and old faces in unexpected places.

You know that in Maryville College the prevailing opinion is that if we can get only a little of a thing, we will appreciate what we get. For this reason, rules have been set up to prevent happy moonshiners from becoming sated with too much happiness. as with too many green apples or too much strawberry jam. This solicitous care has never been appreciated, however; and in order to still the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, we who have had more experience will give to the new moonshiners a few of the many devices for hooking an extra ten minutes.

One very simple method is that of engaging the matron in conversation when the bell rings. Of caurse, she can't be so impolite as to tell the young man to shut up and get out, when he is talking to her; and with practice he can occasionally get in a word to his beloved. This plan has never been popular, but you might try it—once.

Several couples have come to grief from pausing for a little chat in front of the post-office, and have concluded that it is a much safer policy to go inside to sharpen pencils. This plan is nice for the moonshiners; but oh, how hard on pencils! Besides, the P. O. has an exasperating habit of being closed just when you need it most.

On rainy days your excuse is furnished, provided you know how to use it. When the bell rings, take off your slicker, throw it in a corner, and explain to the inquisitive that you forgot to bring an umbrella. Don't try this too often—someone might wonder how you got to Science or Thaw without any protection from rain.

These suggestions are sure to bring to mind others as practical; but just a word of warning: Don't try any plan too often. Even freshmen will learn a thing if they do it often enough (for instance, Snap), and our authorities have watched moonshiners "from sunrise to sunset, from sunset 'til dawn" for lo, these many years.

Good luck to you, moonshiners new and old—you're going to need a lot of it!

MRS. WEST ALREADY PLANS MID-WINTERS

Department Adds New Courses And Expands Wardrobe To Meet Needs.

Maryville College is justly proud of its Expression Department, which is one of the best in any college of the South. Under the talented direction of Mrs. West, it has grown better each year. This year it has added two new classes, one in the Philosophy of Expression and one in Pageantry. The class in Pageantry is designed to meet a need in the field of Religious Education, and it is expected that a number of students will take advantage of the opportunity offered by this new class.

The department has also acquired a wardrobe during the past year. So far no other college has attempted to collect a wardrobe of its own, so Maryville is unique in this respect. Each year the department has spent several hundred dollars for the rental of costumes. Last year Mrs. West conceived the idea of collecting a wardrobe which should belong to the departmnet. Friends of the college were asked for contributions and they responded generously. The department now has hundreds of beautiful costumes and accessories, and is equipped to stage even the most elaborate play. Some of the costumes have already made their appearance in the Theta and Bainonina opening programs. Others will make their debut in the Mid-winters.

Alpha Sigma will open the season with the first Midwinter which will be given December 9. The other Midwinter committees are busy selecting their plays and choosing their caste of characters. The teachers in the department are enthusiastic about the work for the year, especially the prgoram of Midwinters.

The old students who attended the faculty rteception, and shook hands with a certain Mrs. Morton, recognized the talented heroine of "Little Old New York". She is still Nellie to most of us even though she has

FAMOUS STARS HERE ON LYCEUM NUMBERS

First Number, October 16, Is Scene From "The King's Henchmen", Noted Opera.

One hears so much about the advantages a college student has over one whose education ends with high school. It's a commonly accepted fact that, in addition to academic training, every good college should afford culture advantages and afford cultural advantages and not lacking in these requisites. For instance, take the Lyceum numbers that the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. sponsor every year. All the old students will remember the five excellent programs that were rendered last year; and both old and new ones may anticipate excellent numbers this year because the bookings certainly look promising.

For this year there are five numbers scheduled. On October 16, in Voorhees Chapel, two famous artists Oro Hyder, Soprano, and Therry Giorgi, tenor, will give "The Faust Scene" from "The King's Henchman." The "King's Henchman' by Deems Taylor, Editor of "Musical American", is the only American Opera ever wholly accepted and presented by the Metropolitan Opera Company. The second number will be rendered on November 8th by the Heidelberg Student Chorus. They will give selections from "The Student Prince", "Countess Maritza", "My Maryland", "The Three Musketeers" and other popular light operas. Selections from grand opera and oratorio gems are also magnificently sung. This is a chorus of men, and practically every member of the company is a soloist. Each of the young men is an entertainer as well as a singer, and much good humor and original comedy are interpolated throughout the program. But not only music lovers are to have their demands supplied for the last number before Christmas, coming December 6th is a lecture number. Dr. Tehyrisich of China will lecture on some phase of the

MARYVILLE SMOTHERS WESLEYAN UNDER BARRAGE; BLUE AND GOLD NO MATCH FOR HONAKER'S BOYS

Spectators Easily Follow "Ghost Ball" on Illuminated Field. New Stands Seat Capacity Crowd As Night Game Opens Season.

NO. NINE

Over three thousand people gathered under the flood-lights to see the Maryville Highlanders smash their way to a decisive victory over the Tennessee Wesleyan football team. It was the largest crowd in the history of the college, and marked the opening of the night games with success.

Maryville was threatened but once. The rest of the game was merely to see which of the backfields would be most effective. Coach Honaker tried them all. The steady gaining of Calloway, the driving plunges of Bonds, the headwork of Smith and Malerich, and the line smashes of Gillespie were all outstanding features. And our line proved its worth. Watkins was in every play. Captain MacDonald and Overly upset all opposition. Each member of the team was in there fighitng for revenge. Tennessee Wesleyan, although presenting a good team, was unable to cope with the Highlanders in any department of the game.

First Quarter

Wesleyan kicked off to the Maryville forty yard line. Our boys began a steady drive which was halted short of touchdown by a fumble. The Athens team attempted several off tackle plays, but was forced to punt. Runs by Calloway and Bonds put the ball in position for Gillespie to take it over for the first score. We kicked for the extra point. An exchange of punts saw the end of the quarter.

Soon after the start of the second quarter, Gillespie, always a steady gainer, intercepted a forward pass and gave Maryville possession of the ball on the fifty yard line. After a long gain by Calloway, Wesleyan was unable to prevent the scoring of the second touchdown. Gillespie again carried it over. The kick went wide.

Honaker began sending in all the subs. By the middle of the second quarter the entire second team was in. But the Scrubs showed just as much fight as the regulars, and accounted for themselves by scoring

Student Council to Organize This Week Plan Mountain Hike

Classes Will Be Called Upon to Elect Soon.

Within the next two weeks the Student Council for this year will be organized. Representatives from the sophomore, junior and senior classes, which, according to the rule book, are to be chosen two weeks after the opening of the school year, will be elected the beginning of the week. The freshman representatives will be chosen about two weeks later when the freshmen elect their officers.

The Council is made up of four freshmen, four sophomores, six juniors, and eight seniors. Half of these representatives are girls and half are boys. The officers are the regular four: president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. The president, who is usually a senior, is not included in the number of representatives from his class, making a total of twenty-three on the Council.

Each of the class representatives speaks for his class and the Council speaks for the entire student body. It presents our wishes to the faculty, and it plans many of our activities.

Since the Council is not formally organized yet, little can be said about its plans. However, according to Ed Sprouse, president pro tem., plans for at least one thing are already underway, and we may look forward to a mountain hike in about one month.

BAINONIANS SAIL

Opening Program Thrills Girls, Old and New.

On Saturday nite, Sept. 28th, the good ship "Bainonian" set sail from "Swimming Pool" port on her first voyage of the season. On board were new girls, Thetas and Bainonians, and some other distinguished guests, among them the matrons of the respective dormitories, and visiting alumni. Promptly at 7:30 every one bade good-bye to her friends and relatives who had gathered 'round to see her off, the gang plank was raised and "Bainonian" steamed out. Each voyager wone a white sailor cap in keeping with the festive occasion. The jolly sea captain, Isabel Cannon, and her merry crew were attired in sailor costumes, and had they possessed the weather beaten countenances that we usually associate with typical seamen, they would have been regular old salts. The Bainonian Orchestra was also dressed in sailor suits and it beguiled the time for those coming aboard while the crew was obeying the rapid fire commands of their efficient captain.

MISS BEWLEY NAMES 'ANDREW JOHNSON'

Marville Graduate Renames "Tennessee Terrace"

The freshman who enters Maryville is told by sympathetic upperclassmen that the college has many famous graduates. Just who these celebrities are, though, is left rather vague. So when, recently, a news article appeared in the Knoxville Sentinel concerning one of these aforementioned grads we felt that the freshmen really ought to know about it.

For some time the Sentinel has been conducting a contest to see which of its readers could suggest the best name for Knoxville's newest hotel. At last the award has been given Miss Irene Bewley for her suggestion. Now, instead of the Tennessee Terrace the hotel will be known as The Hotel Andrew Johnson.

Irene Bewley was one of the first graduates of the Expression Department. After her graduation here, she studied at Powers. The following years she returned to the school to assist in Expression. Since then she has journeyed all over the world. She has read before Soldiers and Generals, Kings and Queens, Lords and Ladies. Doesn't that sound like a fairy-tale?

At present she is reading a play which she has written. So far it has been very favorably received. Miss Bewley's specialty seems to be the Mountain Story. We knew that she has talent in this direction because she was invited to return to Cloumbia (where she had read some of her Mountain tales) at double the price she asks.

Maryvillians, doesn't it thrill you to know that she is said now to be the leading woman reader in the United States.

College Loyalty

The men who so far forgot the principles of gentlemanly conduct as to interrupt the Coach at Pep Meeting the other night, invited the wrath of the vast majority of students, who believe that Maryville is offering them advantages that they cannot get elsewhere.

At the outset, let us say that we are not taking a humorous pass at the freshmen when we condemn the attitude of these men. Such conduct would not be overlooked in an upperclassman, if we can conceive of an old student making such remarks.

The disrespectful attitude of the erstwhile high school students incited the indignation of the football men, and only desire to conform to the college rules deterred the athletes from ejecting the offenders bodily from the chapel.

——o——

Our Modesty

Every year some branch of activity at the college suffers from lack of competition. As the various activities are getting under way, we wonder whether it would be amiss to ask students to stop a moment and consider this problem.

We realize that some students have lots of things to occupy their time, and that to add another activity to the list seems impossible. Yet there are others whose tasks are not so arduous that they might not with impunity enter some of the many fields of competition open to them. And still, these people hesitate to try out for teams, literary work, and so on, allowing less talented students to win the places.

Is it because the modesty in us has overshadowed our spirit to win, to accomplish something? Let us realize that college is a place where we may enter into good-natured rivalry and receive the experience that will mean the difference between success and failure in our work later in life, as well as fill our college days with thrills we never dreamed of.

Let us resolve not to hand out so many free prizes and places this year, but make those who win them work to win. It will add infinitely to our college spirit.

NEWS COMMENT

It must be announced that no reporters have been dismissed in spite of some errors in the first issue of the paper. Even after reading the letter in the open forum, we are determined to put out at least one more issue.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

A new stimulus has come to the Maryville students for upholding intercollegiate contests and in exhibiting the "college spirit". This is through the installation of the system of having our football games played at night. The few who fail to attend these games are going to lose more than they will gain by staying away and studying. A college education is not all in the grades we get while we are in the classroom. (It is lucky for some of us that this is true). The extra college activities are worth their minutes in gold if you can afford to enjoy them. We will back our teams for every advantage in any contest.

We are persuaded that dates for football games will be the rush this season. There is no use to have all those lights if we are not going to use them.

—:—

Dr. Wilson says for us to take all our coats, slickers, etc. to the game for there will be no sunshine there. This is just another way of saying there will be more "moon shine" at night.

—:—

Maryville is the first college in the State to have football games at night. The other institutions of learning in this part are still in the dark ages.

—:—

We will yell loud enough to keep the University at Knoxville awake this season though.

Ministerial Association

The Ministerial Association met in Athenian Hall on Wednesday night. The devotions were lead by William Mayer. The Ministerial Melody Men sang. The Constitution was read and the old members renewed their pledge. Many new members signed the pledges and were accepted into the association.

The resignation of the vice president, Roy Rusk, was accepted with regrets. Tom Dixon was elected as the new vice president. The chairman of each committee gave a report and outlined the work of the semester.

PRE-MED CLUB

September 24—The Pre-Med. Club held their first formal meeting in the Chemistry lecture room in Science Hall at 6:30.

Dr. Olin delivered a very interesting address on "The Preparation for the Study of Medicine". After the meeting there was an informal discussion of problems confronting the Pre-med student in regard to the requirements of various medical colleges.

J. Hayden Laster, an interesting character in Pi Kappa Delta and a noted man on the Hill, read that famous "Debate between the Body and the Soul." Then he began debating with himself whether he was carrying his body around or whether it was carrying him. Being a reasonable man I suggested that he try it out fifty-fifty. He carried his body over to the fountain and sat it down. Soon another body joined him. The outcome (finally) was that he had to carry the other body to Pearson's and his own back to Carnegie.

THE OPEN FORUM

THE "FROSH PAINFUL PROBLEM"

Editor The Highland Echo:

Those who picked up The Highland Echo of September 23 read, at the bottom of the front page, a contribution which was a good representation of the usual forced humor of upperclassmen. The manner in which this contribution got into The Echo's columns is to be questioned, as the article is far from sounding true to the tone of the Maryville spirit.

I wish to criticize this article along three lines:

(1) The writer was no doubt absolutely ignorant of the particulars of the photographic operation, as the only four upperclassmen on the the job were busy, there being no loafers present. Hence, his assumptuous article is the product of one not sufficiently equipped to write it.

(2) The article itself manifests gray hairs and whiskers, as it were, conveying the impression that it was originally from the pen of a high school sophomore.

(3) The article is full of anachronious and historical errors—therefore is untrustworthy to say the least. In the first place, the writer represents the freshmen as doing all the talking. The freshmen, however, still remember that those doing all the talking were the photographer, his assistant, and the professor who stood at the entrance door. Secondly, he states that "the patient coolly sits down in the chair pointed out to him by the photographer"——ignoring the fact that the photographer did no pointing whatsoever, but that the freshmen were observant enough to know what chair to take without being told. Further, all remarks as to "breaking the camera" were made outside the photographer's office amongst the freshmen themselves, and not inside to the photographer. Thirdly, the writer's ratio of 227 out of 251 is faulty, for it does not work out evenly to the total of 300 freshmen. At any rate, I verily believe that he must have been one of the ignorant 24 several years ago, or he wouldn't have known what was in their minds this year. Fourthly, the photographer had no nail in the wall for the freshmen to stare at. Lastly, when the camera clicked, he always said, "Got cha", instead of the "Come on; it's all over" attributed to him by the writer held in question.

I would suggest that The Echo reporters be more accurate in their narratives and more original in their humor. As to "the budding intelligenusu"— a flower is most beautiful when in the bud; the seed pod, which appears when it is all over, and which looks at the bud with a gray-haired superiority attitude, is generally plucked from the stem and thrown into the ground or into the waste.

Thanking The Echo for the opportunity of presenting this answer to the charges in your earlier issue, I am

Very freshmanly yours,
Frank R. Neff, Jr.

HIGHLANDERS INVADE LEXINGTON NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT TO CLASH WITH KENTUCKY-STATE ELEVEN

Tie of 6-6 Two Years Ago Impetus to Marville Attack on Kentucky Wildcats Saturday Night.

Saturday night, Maryville will meet one of her hardest opponents when she plays University of Kentucky at Lexington. The Highlanders will start with about the same line-up as in the Tennessee Wesleyan game, but a squad of twenty-five men is making the trip.

Coach Honaker is not too optimistic about the score, but he promises that Maryville will give the Wildcats a good fight. Although this will be the opening game for Kentucky, she is known to have an unusually good team this year. With Pete Drury and Covington, all-southern men last year, assisted by a team of 190-200 pound huskies, Kentucky is sure to give any team a hard tussle.

The Highlanders have not played University of Kentucky for two years, but since the last Maryville-Kentucky clash ended 6-6, much interest will be shown in the outcome of this year's game.

Many of the fellows, remembering the hotly contested fracas of two years ago, will feel the urge to be in Lexington when the inflated oval tkes the air.

No predictions are being made, except that if the boys have gotten as much experience in the game last Friday as it appears they did, Kentucky would do well to get some hard workouts the first part of this week.

We are indebted to the News-Sentinel for the use of the cut on this page.

Maryville Wins From Tennessee Wesleyan

the third touchdown. Woodard, playing his first game, made both the touchdown and the extra point. Smith fooled Wesleyan by calling for a line rush instead of a kick. The half ended with Maryville on the long end of a 20-0 score.

Second Half

A brand new Maryville team marched out to meet Wesleyan. After the kick-off, the Scotties' steady attack at Wesleyan's center and flanks time after time worked the ball down close to the goal posts, only to have the tiring Wesleyan linemen stiffen and hold for downs. Frequent fumbles marred the play and proved costly to both teams, as was the case in the first half.

The Highlanders' fourth score came when a Wesleyan kick was blocked in front of the goal-posts and Cash pounced on the leather for a touchdown. Woodard plunged over for the extra point.

Following an exchange of punts, Woodard crashed through several times for substantial gains. With Carper and Cash making wagon-roads in the Wesleyan line, Woodard's slashes put Maryville in position to score again, when another fumble halted their advance.

In the last quarter, Woodard hauled in a delirious Wesleyan pass and ran to Wesleyan's 30-yard line. Honaker put his regular linemen back in again and it looked like the Orange and Garnet would again score. On an off tackle smash, Woodard ploughed through for 12 yards before he was stopped. Then the Wesleyan forward wall braced and again obtained the pigskin on downs.

After trying a single end run which Bob Byerly messed up in a most discouraging manner, Wesleyan essayed a belated aerial attack. Two long passes in quick succession brought the ball deep into Maryville territory for the first time. Here they were stopped cold and the Highlanders again took matters in hand.

Senior Party On

Miss Emma Grace Howard Is Hostess Tonight.

Tonight the Class of '30 will make its debut in the social life of the Hill this year by havng its first party. The members of the class will enjoy the hospitality of Miss Emma Grace Howard, whose large home in the suburbs of Maryville will be the scene of festivities.

This is not to be an ordinary frolic by any means, for the seniors are to be 'kids" again, and it has been decreed that all shall come in juvenile attire. From suggestions that have been heard, no doubt the entire student body will be called upon to furnish costumes.

Thus will the seniors put away their dignity (if indeed they had any after that English exam!) for one night, and romp and play like other children.

Somers represent the men—Carol Cushman and Helen Plant represent the girls. Professors Queener and Smith represent the faculty.

Besides Edris and Young, Partee, White and Gilmore will be considered for positions as cheerleaders. Leland Gilmore is one of last year's leaders and has just returned to the Hill after an operation. He will probably be able to enter tryouts this week.

Fellows Hike in Famed Chilhowees

the creek, the party divided into two groups, one making the trip back to Maryville by way of Look Rock and Montvale Springs and the other coming back by the original trail. All were on the campus and accounted for by five o'clock and with the exception of a few blistered-feet unfortunates, everyone was enthusiastic about the hike and its attendant good times.

THE COLLEGE MAID SHOP

them. She thought and thought, and as a result, the following fall the College Maid Shop was opened with 10 girls, 12 machines and a few bolts of percale. The College Maid Shop is the only thing of its kind in the United States. Other colleges make things, but they sell them on a philanthropic basis, and not wholesale as does the shop which has now taken on the proportions of a factory. The college is not responsible for the shop. It pays its own expenses. Many factories have difficulty selling their products, but the College Maid Shop has more orders than it can fill despite the fact that it has no salesman on the road. The girls of the College Maid Shop made uniforms for mill workers and also make pajamas, and aprons. So many orders have come in from all over the United States that the M. C. girls can not supply them, and the Shop sends work to Parsons College in Fairfield, Iowa, Berea College, Berea, Ky., and College of the Ozarks in Arkansas. Uniforms for industrial workers have brought about a great revolution in some of the largest factories of the country. In the few years that have passed since the shop was established, such stores as Bullocks, Los Angeles; The Emporium, San Francisco; Marshall Fields, Chicago; Lord and Taylor, New York and a score of others keep College Maid garments in stock.

Any Maryville College girl may work in the College Maid Shop at any time, as much or little as she pleases, so long as she remembers that her purpose in Maryville is to study—her embroidery work, sewings, etc., being only a means to an end. The girls are paid in cash at the end of each month. Many girls who come to the College Maid Shop have no experience whatever in sewing, but Mrs. Robert McKelvey teaches and supervises so that they 'earn as they learn'. Aside from regular sewing, girls may sew on buttons, embroider pajamas and iron the finished garments. Every garment carries this label:

"When you buy 'College Maid' (copyright) you are helping some girl work her way through College. "Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee."

It seems fitting that tribute should be paid to Mrs. McMurray who has made all this possible. One college professor said to her:

"Mrs. McMurray, if we had some one who had done for our labor situation what you have done for the situation at Maryville, we would erect a statue to her."

How has she accomplished what she has? Her own formula is: "I say a little prayer and go ahead."

conditions in China. He is reputed to be very witty, and is called the "Teddy Roosevelt of China."

Two other numbers are scheduled after the holidays, but the correspondent does not know the exact dates of appearance. Both are music numbers.

The booking ends with a novelty musical number, "The Royal Holland Bell Ringers", which will have an especial appeal for all.

The Lyceum correspondent seems very enthusiastic over the engagements that have been secured. This is a two thousand dollar program, th students paying $1400 of the cost. Especial credit must be given to the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. who helped make this possible. Each year the two organizations get the profit made from tickets sold to townspeople, and from the sale of reserved seats. Last year they relinquished their profit in order to secure a "bigger and better" series of Lyceum numbers for this year.

The Russian Trio Lyceum number has been changed to the Musical Art Quartet. The trio is not coming to the United States this year. The personal of the Musical Art Quartette consists of solo musicians, at least two of, whom Sascha Jacobsen and Marie Roemaet Rosanoff have achieved international fame. Their two confieres, Paul Bernard and Louis Kaufman, have had wide experience in solo and ensemble playing. They are exclusive Columbia Record Artists.

From the looks of things, we'll have a bigger and better band.

Bainonians Sail

After the picture was taken a musical comedy "Traveling On", written by Marion Johnson, one of Bainonian's versatile program secretaries, was rendered. A chorus of girls whose chief attributes weré lovliness, grace and ability to sing, dance and swim, did costume dances, between acts. After the last act of the play (which by the way was very wlel done, ask about the famous twins)—the chorus "dived into Bainonian". Nelle Watkins, a former president read "Where There's a Will, There's a Way" in the spirited Watkins' styles. Olive Clopton rowed Helen Plant out, in her sturdy canoe, to the middle of the pool and there Helen gave the welcome.

While refreshments were being served, fancy diving was done by Jane Duke, Lois Cupler, Ruth Buchanan and Olive Clopton. Olive looked a veritable ancient mariner when she went forth to fish. From all reports every one enjoyed the voyages and no one was sea sick.

ADDITIONAL BOOKS AND EQUIPMENT FOR LIBRARY

In the near future approximately three hundred dollars worth of new equipment and facilities will be added to the college library. Steel cases will be set all along the front of the part which incloses the Museum. In these new cases will be kept, for the most part rare books, old books of interest. There are a number of books in the library that are worth a great deal because of their rarety and because of the time they were printed and the authors who wrote them. These will be placed in the new steel cases to be installed.

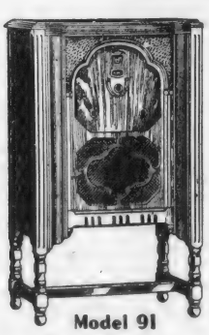
New window shades have already been put up in the museum department. These add much attractiveness to that department of Thaw Hall.

Also a new stock room is being remodeled in the back of the library. Professor Ellis, the librarian, says about twenty thousand additional volumes will be placed in here. The room is looking fine now, and the books will be an appreciable addition to our library.

"Next", Professor Ellis says, "will be a glass floor above the books in the stackroom that is now used and a second tier placed above them."

This is only one feature in the continuous growth of Maryville. Other improvements are being made this year. Each addition gives new strength to the institution.

We can expect somebody to tell us that the intelligence test results are incorrect.



Yes, times are dangerous nowadays. Even our football players must be on the defensive.

Y.W.C.A. PLANS TO ERECT $5,000 STONE BUILDING

Alumni and Friends Asked To Contribute Sums From $1.00 Up.

$1,000 ALREADY IN

Plans Call For Auditorium, Club Room, Kitchen, Office Space.

Every student of Maryville College realizes the important part that the Y. M. and Y. W. organizations play in all student activities. He always thinks of one organization in connection with the other, and the question of which is the better organization never arises because—well, there are no grounds for such a question. But for many years, the Y. M. has had a distinct advantage over the Y. W. C. A. in that Y. M. has its quarters in Bartlett which is much more commodious, attractive and conveniently located than the Y. W.'s cramped quarters in Thaw Hall. For a long time suggestions and plans have been made for the erection of a Y. W. C. A. building that would serve as a true center for the social, religious and (to a certain extent) mental life of the Maryville women. Not until recently have these dreams begun to materialize, but now some tentative plans have been made which are as follows:

A one story stone building is to be erected between Baldwin Hall and the Hospital, facing Dodge Avenue. It will consist of three rooms and an office. The auditorium, which is 24 feet by 50 feet with a 12 foot stage, will be used for programs, meetings and other similar activities. The social room 17½ feet by 30 feet will supply a long felt need as a place for informal gatherings, parties, club meetings and, possibly, moonshining. It will contain the Y.W. library. At one end of the room will be a huge fire place 9 feet by 9 feet, and adjoining the room is the kitchen (13 feet by 15 feet) which will be convenient when one wants to 'fling a party' or prepare refreshments for club meetings and teas. The architects are Barber and McMurray, of Knoxville, and their blue prints of the proposed building have aroused much enthusiam.

The hall can be built at the cost of $5000. The organization has about $1000 now. Much discussion has been under way concerning the raising of the needed funds. When Bartlett was being built the alumni were asked to buy brick, and Y. W. has been following a similar plan. Letters have been written to several of the alumni requesting them to buy stone at $1.00 per stone, and some have responded with don-

MARYVILLE CALLED 'LIGHT ON BUSHEL'

Carolina Editor Pays Tribute To Alma Mater.

During the summer a twelve inch editorial on Maryville College appeared in the "Columbia Record" of Columbia, South Carolina. This institution was called by the writer "A light on a bushel." "It cannot be hidden," he said.

The Editor, Fitz Hugh McMaster, was himself a student at Maryville at one time, and he has never ceased to sing her praises. With direct and wonderful simplicity he pays glowing tribute to Dr. Anderson who founded the little "Log College". He traces the development of the institution to its present status. He tells of the great work of our own President Wilson. "Thousands of young men around the world, including those who have written their names high on the scroll of honor in many vocations, owe their success largely to the practical administration of President Wilson," he says.

And McMaster himself is helping to carry on this work.

LIBRARY RECEIVES J. B. S. ALEXANDER GIFT OF 43 BOOKS

Three Sets Include Works of Isben, Hauptmann; More To Be Added Soon.

There has been installed recently in the library, three sets of books over which is a bronze tablet with the inscription, "The Jane Bancroft Smith Alexander Collection, by her students 1904-1929."

This collection was given by a large number of students who attended her classes sometime during the twenty-five years from 1904 to 1929. A token of the high esteem in which the students hold Mrs. Alexander, this collection is one of the finest in the library. It contains forty-two volumes in all. Twenty-three volumes is a Dictionary of National Biography published by the Oxford University Press. Another group, of nine volumes, contains the Dramatic Works of Gerhart Hauptmann. The Plays of Henrik Ibsen form the last set of the collection, and are contained in ten volumes. The choice of books is a very good one, and will be especially appreciated to those taking advanced English.

Approximately $100 of the gift to the library remains, and will be spent for additions to this collection.

ART DEPARTMENT ADDS NEW COURSE

Pottery Painting Attracts Art Enthusiasts.

New students, did you know that Maryville College has a most excellent art department? That Miss Bird, the head of it, has studied modernistic painting in New York? All these facts are true, and they are for you to take advantage of. You can have instruction in painting, free-hand drawing, and work with water colors.

The requirements for graduation in art are: a course in the history of art, and the painting of at least four original pictures, a portrait, and a masterpiece. To these features we now have added painting of pottery and chinaware. Can't you just see all the pretty things you can make for your room and for gifts? Hand-painted china need no longer sound foreign to us when we have it right in our own art deparment. Knowing that a word to the wise is dangerous, we nevertheless venture to advise that you investigate our art department, and see whether you can't find there just what you have been looking for.

An urgent request has been made by all the boys, that a piano be installed in Carnegie. At last, then, those ambitious ones who rise at 5:30 in the morning, intent upon waking everyone else with their melodious voices, may have a place to practice.

FOOTBALL PROGRAMS

The football programs which were being sold at the game the other week and which will be sold at all the games this year, are being published by the Athletic Association and the proceeds from their sale goes to help pay for the football equipment.

The programs contain pictures of the letter men from last year, the coaches, and the squad, as well as line-ups of the two teams, with the numbers of the players.

If you want a souvenir of the games for your memory book this is as economical a way to get one as we know of, and you'll be helping the school.

FALL FESTIVAL OF MUSIC WILL OPEN SEASON BENEFITS

Miss Hale Promises Treat To Music Lovers In Near Future.

The much looked-for event of the year, the Fall Festival of Music, is just now the topic of interest on the Hill and we are happily anticipating the rare treat which always attends the giving of this delightful concert.

For the benefit of those not familiar with the history of the Fall Festival, we wish to say that this is a musical program arranged each year by Miss Hale, head of our Music Department, for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A.

Assisting in the program are the most advanced and talented students of music and also assisting artists from out of town.

We do not know, at this time, just who is to appear on the program, but from what we have heard we have reason to believe the concert will eclipse all previous affairs and feel that we can safely depend upon Miss Hale to give us something delightful and interesting.

The date of the program has not

MRS. MARY C. THAW, COLLEGE BENEFACTOR DIES DURING SUMMER

Just as new classes are continually graduating from the college, old friends of the college are passing on. During the summer one of the most benevolent supporters of Maryville, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, died. Mrs. Thaw and her husband have given more than a quarter of a million dollars to the college, and for many years showed great personal interest in its success.

At one time it was urged that the name of the college be changed from Maryville College to Thaw College but this was not allowed by Mr. and Mrs. Thaw. Later, one building was designated as Thaw Hall, which is today one of our noblest buildings:

In the death of Mrs. Thaw Maryville lost a generous friend and the world a benevolent benefactor.

SENIOR ENGLISH EXAM SHOWS GOOD RESULTS OF STUDY

Hubert Welsh Makes 196 Out Of Possible 204. Dr. Hunter Well Pleased.

At last quiet is beginning to settle in the senior class after the storm of that English examination required for graduation.

The class of 1930, imbued with the idea of a bigger and better class than ever, has set the precedent of conforming to certain standards in English before being crowned with a diploma.

All during the week seniors have been darting about with an anxious look on their faces, consciously avoiding every office assistant who looks as if she had a notification slip in her hand. But in reality it is not so bad as that. Dr. Hunter, head of the English department, is very well pleased with the outcome. He said in an interview: "The papers were better than we had expected."

Hubert Welsh carries off the high honors in this test, scoring 196 points out of a possible 204. (Incidentally, the writer remembers here that Hubert scored the highst mark in the intelligence test given in his freshman year).

Another interesting fact which Dr. Hunter explained is that those who did not make a satisfactory showing in this test are not thereby debarred from all senior privileges. "It does not mean," he said, "that they cannot attend senior parties; it does not mean hat they cannot wear senior sweaters; it simply means that they must take a similar test the second semester before they will be awarded degrees."

SOPHS ELECT EDITOR AND BUSINESS MANAGER OF 1931 CHILHOWEAN

The Sophomore class met about a week ago to choose the editor and business manager of the 1931 Chilhowean. The reason for their being elected so early in the year is that thy may be able to work with the present staff, and have ample opportunity to pick a competent staff.

The editor they chose has already proved his ability on the Y. M. C. A. publication. He is Homer McCann.

Elton Luckhart was given the job of working out the financial problem, and as business manager, he will be kept busy next year.

The Chilhowean is one of the biggest undertakings of the year, and we hope for great things in the year book for next year.

At a class meeting held Friday morning, Oct. 4, the following Student Council members were elected: Georga Burk, Ann Emartt, Fred Gabbard, and Bob Wallace.

With the organization of the class completed, the sophs are working for an eventful year.

Watch them do big things this year!

KENTUCKY WILDCATS PLAY HAVOC WITH HIGHLANDER ELEVEN

End Runs Fatal To Invaders of Kentucky State. "Shipwreck" Kelley Broken Field Marvel, But Unable to Penetrate Maryville Line.

Lexington, Ky. (Special to Highland Echo)—Maryville fought a losing battle here this evening against the Kentucky Wildcats. 8,000 people saw "Shipwreck" Kelly, and Captain Covington skirt the flanks at will, while the Highlanders were unable to make any substantial gains.

Maryville seemed weak on the ends, but the center of the line did not give the opponents any chance to gain. MacDonald played a real game, holding up the Kentucky backs time and again in their tries through the line. Watkins and Story also showed up well, but the weight advantage of the foes was too much. In the backfield, Calloway and Woodard looked good for Maryville. Morrison worked in regulation style the short time he was in. The visiting team, however, showed that there was much work needed to iron the wrinkles out in the backfield and produce a smooth-working grid machine.

The 1929 edition of Kentucky State football team is both heavy and fast, hitting a pace here today that points to a more than successful season.

First Quarter

Maryville kicks off. Byerly is hurt on first play. Reed substitutes. Maryville holds for downs, with ball on 5 yard line, and kicks out. Maryville penalized 15 yards. Ball now on Maryville's 35-yard line. Kelly covers distance to goal, Covington kicks extra point. Score now 7–0, Kentucky leading.

Kentucky kicks off, ball carried to 30-yard line. Maryville penalized on first play 15 yards and kicks out. On next play Maryville gets another penalty—off sides. Kentucky goes around end for a touchdown, and Covington kicks goal. Opponents are working havoc with Highlanders, using peculiar deceptive shift, and sweeping wide around the ends. Morrison goes in for Gillespie.

A couple of plays, and Kelly is loose again, reversing the field eight times before he lays the pigskin down beyond the white stripe. The stadium is wild with excitement—it was a pretty run. Point is made; score 21-0. Benn is in for Reed.

Second Quarter

Maryville returns punt to 25 yard line and kicks out. Kentucky begins steady march down the field, their off tackle plays and end runs gaining steadily for them. Hope is put in for Overly. Urbaniak, Kentucky reserve, ran the ball over for the fourth touchdown. Dropkick for point failed, leaving score 27-0.

FROSH INITIATED IN ART OF ELECTION

Nominating Committee At Work; Election To Be Held Tuesday.

Tuesday morning, the freshmen were initiated into the mysteries of a model (?) class meeting under the leadership of Ed Sprouse, president pro tem of the Student Council.

The following thirty students were placed on the nominating committee for class officers:

Harvey Lowry	Mary Metcalfe
Harry Wood	Ruby Conrad
Bill Hannah	Margaret Melody
George Howell	Jean Campbell
Paul Young	Helen Thompson
John Hendry	Lura Nash
Alexander Duff	Alma Hatmaker
Homer Ellis	Marjorie Jones
Willard Cudney	Helen Vail
Gordon Benn	Hattie Claiborne
Ralph Owen	Norma Spilatore
Aubrey Bradshaw	Leona Marsh
John Kinsey	Marian McMurray
Graves Moses	Virginia Burch
David Malerich	Ruth Eshelman

At a meeting to be held this evening, nominations will be made for the various class officers:

In the meantime Gordon Benn has been named temporary athletic manager for the freshman class.

DR. LAVENDER INSPECTS COLLEGE WORK FOR SYNOD

"Now, Margaret, I want you and Mary to be quiet in chapel this morning because we have an inspector here." So saith Miss Hudson on Friday morning. The strange part of it is that Margaret and Mary didn't talk at all during chapel.

The cause of this unusual order Friday is the visit of the Rev. Mr. Lavendar of the Southern Presbyterian Church of Knoxville. Students began to think remorsefully of that history lesson that had not been read and of those "math" problems that had not been worked. May we not imagine that our teacehrs suffered from secret misgivings lest the bright and shining stars in their classes had grown a little rusty? Perhaps (to employ an expression dear to one of our professors), we had better adopt the boy scout maxim and be prepared.

Now there isn't any fight over who will have to wash the dishes. It is who will get to wash the dishes. The kitchen is supplied with nice new metal basins that are so shiny that you can even see your face well enough to powder your nose.

'HOME EC' STUDENTS REORGANIZE CLUB

Membership Open To Old Girls Now; Frosh Later.

The Home Economics Club held its first meeting for this year, last Friday in its club room in Science Hall. Plans for our work this year were discussed. It is now our aim to turn the next few meetings into good old-fashioned "sewing bees", to make furnishings for our new dining room in Science. Then we hear rumors of candy pulls, "scientifically cooked" suppers in the woods, and many other pleasant as well as helpful events. Besides this, every month the Home Ec. Club furnishes refreshments at the meeting of the Business Women's Club of Maryville.

Right now, we are needing new members to help make this year a success. All upper classmen who are taking advanced Home Economics courses, and freshmen who at the end of their first semester have made an average of C in their Home Ec. work, are eligible.

All girls who have these requirments, and who wish to join the

They say that one may know a woman by the cigarettes she chooses; a man, by the way he parts his hair; and a collegian by his ford.

A ford is an essential part of any college or university. Every year we have at least one memorable wreck with worn out tires and not much of anything besides a motor. Last year Jesse Peirce rolled in with his Rolls Royce, the "Hardly Able". That Christmas it made a long trip up to Pennsylvania carrying about half a dozen boys. They claim that they are now able to repair a Ford tire faster than any other six amateurs in the country. By the time they had gone about fifty miles and had had five punctures; they each learned their job thoroughly.

Having no brakes, they all had to heave out a large wooden anchor when they wanted to stop or slow down. Well anyway, the thing didn't use much gasoline. Usually one cup of water would last them for about ten miles. On especially cold mornings though, one of the boys would have to get up and talk into the gas tank for about ten minutes before Lizzie would even think of starting.

Don't lose all hope, ford owners! Last year Harold Baer bought what he could of Reno Smith's flivver and took it to Cincinnati with him about Christmas time. He came back in a roomy Buick touring car after an even trade. We don't know yet whether or not he junked the ford and the kind-hearted junk-man presented him with a little Christmas gift of the Buick.

This year, we have several survivors of 1910. Sam Hatcher brought home the chassis of one relic. His favorite occupation on his trip to Maryville was pushing his Cadillac up the hills and coasting down. He used it as a kiddie-car on the level roads.

Hannah and Wood early caught the college spirit and came down in a beautiful ford touring car. According to some of the signs on the outside its nomenclature is "Run-tin-tin", and they desire to sell it "Cheep-cheep, $——".

By the way, we must not forget an old-timer at the college. Prof. Walker's ford is a jack of all trades. It delivers milk in the early morning; brings Professor Walker to school; does most of the farm delivering in the afternoon, and only has to run nine miles to a garage for a night's rest.

Any enterprising and good-looking young man who wishes to pass a very enjoyable afternoon, here is your chance. Willamara Minton drives the family ford (a new one) around during the afternoon—A hint to the wise is sufficient.

This is off the subject but it does seem queer that we haven't seen "Brownie" driving his car around very much since his wife learned to drive.

Help Wanted

As we become a little more accustomed to the problems confronting us in our endeavor to put out a real student publication, we find that we are even more dependent on other students than we had counted on. We are not sorry that this is so, because if anything expects to portray student life and student thought, it must touch a large number of students.

There are some students on the Hill who are interested in litrature and literary things. They would like to have some means of seeing what others can write, and perhaps find out what they can do in the way of writing. This need has long been felt, and since we have an organization of embryo authors, we should have little trouble in working up sufficient interest to warrant our devoting some little space to it. Beginning next week, we shall run a column for the publication of short stories, poems, essays, humorous sketches, and so forth. Anyone is eligible to contribute, but we withhold the right to edit all material.

Again we would like to ask the cooperation of the student body. Those who turn in notices of club meetings and programs would do us a real favor if they would include in their notices only announcements of things that are going to take place, with the exception of election of officers, and thus help us in our aim, namely: to put out a news paper, and not an historical account. Typing notices for the paper would greatly increase the accuracy of them.

If there is something else you would like to see in the Echo, let us know about it.

The Maryville Spirit

Those who heard the few words of explanation offered by one of the boys who thoughtlessly interrupted Coach last week, were very much impressed by the sincerity of the remarks, and we are certain that the fellows' attitude toward the whole thing is one to be admired.

The burst of applause that followed the explanation, shows that the Old Maryville Spirit that we hear so much about, is still making itself felt on College Hill. A man may make a mistake here, but when he admits it, and means to do his best, we'll meet him more than half way. We are glad the fellows resented any reflection we may have cast on their college loyalty—there is a spirit there that we like, fellows, and the more of it we have the better off we'll be.

Miss Kellar: Mr. McDonald, can you tell me the location of the smooth muscles?

McDonald: Why-'er-in the lining of the wallet.

Sumpter Logan (in English Lit. class): Mrs. Alexander, one of these pilgrims on the way to Conterbury must have been a cannibal.

Mrs. Alexander: Do you think so? Read me a selection from Canterbury Tales proving your point.

Logan: "Full many a fate partrich hadde he in his super." Now doesn't that mean that he ate many a fat patriarch for his supper?

Teacher: What's a cannibal?
Small Boy: I dunno!
Teacher: If you ate your father and mother what would you be?
Small Boy: An orphan.

"Is the money that I got from that Scotchman all right?"
"Sure, it's aged in the wad."

"I didn't mind when my roommate stole my girl, I laughed and wished him well. The day he cheated and I was called up for it, I chortled. I smiled when he spilled ink on my best suit. When he lost my umbrella I grinned. I shouted with glee and said: "Go to it old boy", when he dulled my last razor blade. It amused me when he dropped my fountain pen and the point stuck in the floor—but then he twisted, my tube of tooth paste—yes, I got life sentence; I'm number 6549".

FAMOUS PEOPLE

Lucinda Joints—The classic dancer.

THE OPEN FORUM

To The Editor of The Highland Echo,
Dear Sir:

It is time for the new to supplant the old. Too long have the upper classmen ruled the college. Their ideas have become musty and moth-eaten. They have allowed themselves to follow the backward trails and to shun the progress of the world. But now is the time for great things to happen. The freshman class this year contains some real, fighting men with red blood in their veins. We have among us now several men who are pioneers, men who will emerge as leaders on College Hill. Through this, the Highland Echo, I wish to explain to you, old students, and to you, faculty members, just why we must leave the principles of our forefathers and take up the new, enterprising ideas of Those Who Know.

Those Who Know compose a selected body of high-school men who have been invited to sojourn with us here on the Hill. Our feelings would have been hurt had they declined to come. We are glad to have them here and we will do anything in our power to make them happy. I wish to present three ways in which Those Who Know are decidedly superior to the upper classmen.

First, the high-school graduate has more wisdom and experience than any living creature. He has perhaps played a little football for the glory of dear old Hicks Corners. His name may have already been written down as a great contributor to American literature through his efforts on a great high school publication. He may have defied his teacher, and successfully, I may add, to the extent of throwing two erasers the same day. Thus we see that Those Who Know are prepared to make Maryville a new and better college.

Second, the high-school graduate is fully equipped with astounding ideas. He fears nothing, but goes steadfastly forth to Improve Conditions. Conditions, he says, are Not What They Should Be.

And the Highland Echo should be remodled by Those Who Know. A wonderful start was made last week in the Open Forum. Certainly any paper that says freshmen are truly fresh when freshmen are not fresh should be checked up. So the Echo should feel proud to have a leader of Those Who Know look into matters and point out the Road to Truth. We worship thee, Veracity.

Lastly, the high-school graduate is prepared to run anything and everything. He has a grammar school background, a small town spirit, and the Will to Do. Certainly these things can not be overlooked. And these are the reasons why, erring upperclassmen, that ye should mend thy ways and hark to the pearls of wisdom that drop from the lips of babes and sucklings. List ye to Those Who Know, and if ye like not their precepts hide thyself and mourn deeply.

A formerly misguided upperclassman,

Brenton Stearns.

Autumn of '79

WHILE Yale and Princeton were battling to a tie at Hoboken, New Jersey, a small group of scientists, directed by Thomas A. Edison, was busy at Menlo Park, only a few miles away. On October 21, their work resulted in the first practical incandescent lamp.

Few realized what fifty years would mean to both electric lighting and football. The handful who watched Yale and Princeton then has grown to tens of thousands to-day. And the lamp that glowed for forty hours in Edison's little laboratory made possible to-day's billions of candle power of electric light. In honor of the pioneer achievement, and of lighting progress, the nation this year observes Light's Golden Jubilee.

Much of this progress in lighting has been the achievement of college-trained men employed by General Electric.

Swimming Meet Held Next Saturday Night

Aquatic Honors Await Inter-Class Competitors.

An entirely new schedule has been adopted for the management of the pool this year. So far, it appears to be very satisfactory.

The girls at last have gotten the hour that they have been requesting for the last few years: from 3:30 to 4:30 in the afternoon. At this time both the advanced girls and beginners are admitted.

The boys, also, are given plenty of time to practice for the team. This year, something which has never been done before, is being started. Regular classes for those wishing to pass Red Cross or Y. M. C. A. Life Saving tests have been introduced.

Next Saturday night after Literary Society meetings, there will be an interclass swimming meet. This meet is usually closely contested and is expected to be good this year. The events as they now stand are:

25, 50, and 100 yard free style.
25 yard back stroke.
50 yard breast stroke.
Plunge.
100 yard relay.
Dives.

The three required dives are: front dive, or swan, back dive, and the front jack-knife. Besides these, there are three optional dives.

All men interested in winning a few honors for their class, see the captains of the following teams:

Freshmen—Martin
Sophomores—Edris
Juniors—Buchanan.
Senior—Sprouse

The object of this swimming match is to choose representatives for the swimming team, so if you can swim at all, try it Saturday night and see if you can't win that one extra point to make your class the champions. All fellows interested are requested to meet at the pool Tuesday at 4 p. m.

Cheer up. The water may not be so cold. At least the Dean of Men offers his promise that a new heating system is near at hand. The pool is looking clean and welcoming now, with water in it that doesn't freeze-over during the winter, a flashy team is in sight.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

There were some twenty-five water boys, news reporters, assistant coachs and soforth at Lexington last week-end.

If the boys who started for Kentucky and couldn't get a ride had used a sail and the wind they generated talking about going, thye'd have had little trouble getting there.

60 Girls Answer Miss Weller's Call

Soccer Is First Sport On Coed Schedule.

Sixty apsiring co-eds responded to the call of Miss Grace Weller for the purpose of becoming acquainted with girls' athletics at Maryville. The meeting was held Tuesday afternoon in the Alumni Gymnasium where pamphlets giving explicit instructions as to the athletic requirements were distributed, and health cards were gven to those who desired to keep training.

Soccer is the first team sport of the season, and will be practiced for about eight weeks. During this time, the various class teams will be selected and will compete with one another for the class championship.

Following Soccer there will be various other team sports which will be explained in their particular season.

A temporary practicing schedule has been made for the two days of the week when the girls are permitted to use the gym after three o'clock. On Wdnesday from four to five the sophomores, juniors, and seniors practice, while on Friday from four to five the freshmen will show their abilities. As soon as the playing becomes more "intelligent", each class will have its own time and place to practice.

It might be well to stress the swimming advantages that are available to every girl on the Hill. Beginning, advanced, and Life-Saving classes are open to those who are interested. Schedules have been posted in the dormitories, designating the time the classes meet.

Girls, come out for athletics, terra firma, aquatic, or otherwise; it's not too late. And if you are not athletically inclined—root for your class team!

CHEERLEADERS

The election of cheerleaders for '29 and '30 will take place in chapel on Wednesday morning. The election, in charge of the Pep Committee, will be by secret ballot.

The candidates for cheerleader are Paul Edris, Preacher Young, Leland Gilmore, and Jesse Peirce.

A head cheer-leader, two assistants, and an alternate will be chosen, hence all are assured of a place, the election being for the purpose of determining positions.

Miss Helen Winters who displayed her calves at the Loraine County Fair walked off with two first prizes among a field of exhibitors. She claims that most of the credit for calves carrying off the honors is due to the boys who hleped her in developing them, and getting them in shape for exhibition purposes.

KING, CONFIDENT FROM WIN OVER CONCORD, WILL SEEK TO AVENGE FORMER DEFEATS

Maryville Eleven Must Function Smoothly To Take Third Game of Season. Sting of Kentucky Defeat Will Supply Added Punch To Backfield.

While the boys are preparing for the Kentucky Wildcats some of the far-sighted students are looking forward to the next home game with much interest. And well might they do this as King College, our next opponent (Oct. 11), has always had and always will have a strong football team because up at King they have the "ole football spirit." Some of us can remember as far back as 1900 when only ninety-seven students were enrolled in the institution. That year King beat some of the strongest teams in the section, including Maryville who lost to them, to the tune of 32 to 0. Since then Maryville teams have had to put every ounce of effort into the struggle against King.

In 1926 Maryville won a victory by the score of 42 to 0. In 1927 Maryville was barely able to eke out an 18 to 0 victory, but last year Maryville went up to King and won by the score of 28 to 0. This year, King invades our territory next Friday night to avenge some of her past defeats and regain some of her lost prestige in the intercollegiate warfare.

King is supposed to have a good team this year, but in her first game she was upset by the score of 13 to 6. Guilford College in North Carolina administered the defeat. They will be fighting all the harder to register a victory over Maryville.

Don't forget this: Maryville will also be fighting to keep her goal line uncrossed for the fourth time in as many years, so let's have a big crowd out to see the next home game.

KENTUCKY STATE GAME

tage. Kentucky kicks to Maryville; Woodard gets off a 30 yard pass to Benn, putting ball on 40 yard line, but before they can put play across again, whistle ends half.

Between halves Kentucky's ninety piece band is providing some inspiring music.

Third Quarter

Kentucky kicks off. Bond, Tolliver, Taggart, Benn, Teffeteller are substituting in the line-up, and with this new strength things may go better.

Kentucky tries a pass which Cherry snatches from the air and after a few plays Maryville is foreed to punt out. Calloway is getting off some longer kicks now.

Kelly takes to the end again for a pretty gain of 25 yards, and then his teammate scampers around for a touchdown. Score now 33-0.

Kentucky kicked off, and Kelly snags a pass that Maryville tries to work, and he runs a long distance for another tally. Point is made and score is 40-0.

Fourth Quarter

Maryville substitutes Wilson and Woodard, and comes through for the third first down of the game. Smith goes in for Benn at quarter back, and White for Watkins.

Maryville is now holding Kentucky. Kelly is unale to gain. Line looking good and charging fast. Carper is out—Cash comes in to take his place.

Significent is the fact that Kentucky cannot find the goal, in spite of the fact that Ford, Kentucky half, ran 30 yards for a touchdown, but was called back for foul. The game is over, and final score 40-0.

School Teacher: John, you are not doing anything. The Devil always finds something for idle hands to do. Come up here and I will give you something to do.

MISS HALE RECEIVED DEGREE LAST JUNE

At the commencement exercises of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music last June Miss Laura Hale, head of the Music Department at Maryville, was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Pedogogy. While Miss Hale has been at Maryville the Music Department has been maintained at a high stnadard and the enjoyment on the Hill has been greatly augmented through the musical concerts which she has arranged. We are waiting in anticipation this year for the opening of her musical programs.

Under the able leadership of our president, Jeanette Moore, we want to do big things this yar! Come on, new girls! All out for Home Economics!

BAINONIAN

Saturday night, 81 new girls signified their intentions of sailing with Bainonian on all her voyages. All old Bainonians gathered in their Hall to welcome the newcomers. Every one watched apprehensively as some new girl came to the desk and wrote the name of her chosen society, and the favored society would welcome her with merry shouts, hearty hand clasps and warm embraces. Bainonian Hall was soon crowded with happy voyagers. Some excellent punch was served, and the orchestra was at its best, and all told, it seemed one of the most successful welcoming nights that Bainonian has had. When the last ballot was cast, our President made a short welcome address, and every one left for snap.

"New Bainonians, we are glad you're going to travel with us. Let's make our voyages the most pleasant ever!"

By Logic B. Reasons

There is a strange fascination in wanting to be what you are not (which may not be so strange after all in some instances). Children always like to imitate older people and play as if they were older people. And now the seniors in college come along with a "kid party" for their first senior party. We are not persuaded that this action was taken as a compliment to the "kids" for their flattery in imitating adults, but rather that it was only a fulfilling of our own desire o be a "kid" again (for a while at least.)

—:—

Whether it was due to their dramatic ability or to fond memcries, the portrayal of childhood behavior was very real for the most part.

—:—

Of course some of them only had to act natural and dress more or less different.

—:—

At our first night football game one well known student on the Hill approached the entrance gate without his ticket. The gate-keeper extraordinary demanded a show of it. Although it was well known to both that this student had paid his "Activity Fee", the student explained that he did not have his receipt. Carrying out the rule with Pharisaic regidity, to the letter rather than the principle, the gate-keeper informed the student that he would have to go after a receipt. "Thank you," replied the young man as he slipped a bill of careless denomination into the agent's hand, and walked leisurely in.

—:—

A pious freshman at the game: "I don't like all this cheering. It seems too much like gloating over your own victory."

—:—

The principle of that statement is a theory for football yet in the future, when the opposing teams will try to persuade each other to carry the ball over their own goal line.

—:—

Dr. Rogers to Theism class: "Take a look at yourself sometime in either a concave or a convex mirror and you will see how you really look."

—:—

I tried it with both and now I am wondering which one is how I really look.

—:—

I see no connection with the subject of Idealism in either one.

A BOOK REVIEW

THE WAVE

By Evelyn Scott 625 pp. New York Jonathan Cape & Harrison Smith $2.50

To those who do not know Evelyn Scott's earlier books (and they are in the majority, for Mrs. Scott is too fine a writer ever to become 'popular') "The Wave", selected by the Literary Guild as their July offering, will be considered in the light of its advertisement as 'A Civil War Novel', something of a surprise, for this book is unlike any Civil War novel and, for that matter, any 'historical' novel ever written before. It is a final justification of the 'historical' novel, an utter proof that the 'historical' novel need be neither dull, didactic, nor sentimental.

Coming to technicalities, it may be noted that the book has no 'plot', no central character.' It consists of ninety episodes (counted by the enterprising reviewer of Time) almost every one treating of an entirely different character or set of characters, unrelated except insofar as each is related to the war itself, or in such aspects of the war as affect them. Thus we have in the first episode Dickie Ross, who heard from a boat in Charleston harbor the first shot fired upon Fort Sumter; later we have a meeting of a Ladies' Aid Society, and the effect upon the women of the news of the death of the son of one of their number; we watch little Mary Murdoch gazing at the Confederate soldiers over her back fence; we witness the death of Smith, an unknown soldier; we sense the jealous hatred of Rosie, a prostitute, for the war, which she does not 'understand', because it can arouse in the breast of a man named Dandy an enthusiam that she is able neither to share, nor with her heavy and too-ripe charms, to dissipate; in the last episode we have Mrs. Deering and her niece Mildred watching a parade of triumph in Washington. This is certainly the most realistic descrption of a parade (its delay in starting, the wild excitement of the crowd, its passing, the exhausted emotions of the people scattering to their homes) ever written. Henry Clay, Grant, Lee, Lincoln, and John Wilkes Booth figure in the book, but not too prominently; and the treatment of each is unique. Of especial interest is the sane and impersonal analysis of Booth, the unhappy and frustrated actor who shot Lincoln. To quote briefly: "If sincerity is not genius, what is genius, he thought. To realize that talent was a trick, that talent was specious, that talent considered the spectator always, played on him for an effect—that was not bearable. That made reward itself worthless, and for the shrewd, not the great. So fame was parcelled out. He knew it at last. He had been a fool. He who rejects apprenticeship to claptrap is a fool. Suffering has no sanctification . . . Unless I despise the world utterly, I am unworthy of myself. . . . What has got into a man when obscurity becomes humiliation? . . . It was a poor thing to die for, he felt, that failure be not insulted. As time goes on, we propitiate. We take a little more, and a little more, from our first perfect aspiration. . . ."

erhaps Mrs. Scott's method (not her matter) may be compared not too inaptly with that of Virginia Wolf. The 'stream of consciousness' mechanism so effectively employed by the latter is an important feature in the work of the former. The style of Mrs. Scott has, however, distinguishing marks of its own. It is, if less subtle than that of the Englishwoman, more direct, more masculine, and possessed of a certain austerity (a strictly aesthetic austerity, it goes without saying), that is absent from Mrs. Woolf's books. And the power of the author of "The Wave" to describe events from the different points of view of all the people of whom she writes is nothing short of astounding.

As was mentioned above, it is doubtful if Evelyn Scott will ever, despite the renowned patronage of the Literary Guild, become 'popular'. This is, of course, in consideration of the attributes of 'popularity' in America today, to her credit.

Maryville Granted Charter for National Honorary Athletic Fraternity

SIGMA DELTA PSI NOW AVAILABLE TO ALL-AROUND MEN

Fraternity Is Third National Honorary To Be Installed Here.

TRY OUTS HELD SOON

Dr. McMurray Sponsoring Work On Tests; All Urged To Enter Trials.

The College Faculty has in its possession, a charter for a national honorary athletic fraternity, and an opportunity will be given in the near future for students to qualify. Membership in Sigma Delta Psi, which is the name of this organization, is open to all students in the United States who pass the test given below.

Here is a chance for every all-round athlete to prove his worth in a variety of sports. A man does not have to be exceptionally good in any one event, but must be able to surpass the average in several.

Dr. McMurray is eager to see the fraternity get started here, and will be glad to give any information that may be desired. Announcements will be made later concerning time and conditions of try-outs.

Rquirements for full membership:

Substitution

A candidate who has won the varsity letter in any sport may substitute this letter for any requirement except swimming. A substitution may be made but once for one sport. The substitution of varsity letters is limited to three official sports.

LAW CLUB HOLDS INITIAL MEETING

President Louds Profession; Robertson Clashes With Foes.

October 10—The first open program for the Law Club of Maryville College for this year was held Wednesday evening in Alpha Sigma Hall.

Sam Hatcher, president of the club, brought home the idea that lawyers should be worthy of their great profession in a masterful address.

Brief fellowship speeches and notes of welcome were delivered by Forrest I. Robertson, J. Stuart James, Homer McCann, and E. W. Luckhart. Roy Taylor, a newcomer read for the club.

Six names were presented for membership by E. W. Luckhart, chairman of the Membership Committee.

Forrest I. Robertson introduced a motion to amend the contitution so that the regular meeting night be held on Wednesday night instead of on Thursday night. Strong opposition was registered against it and there was a terrific matching of parliamentary wits for awhile, but it was successfully guided through by its progenitor with the able support of his colleagues.

After the meeting the new men enthusiastically expressed their satisfaction with the club.

'ECHO' STAFF GETS NEW MEMBERS FROM RECENT TRY-OUTS

Miss Keaton Promoted; Graham Fills Vacancy. Three Sophs On.

October 10—The Highland Echo Joint Committee on selection met today and strengthened the Highland Echo staff by electing members to fill the vacant positions for Staff Editor, Junior Associate Editor, and Sophomore Cubs. Hessie Keeton, a sophomore cub last year and junior associate editor so far this year was rewarded for her capable service by being promoted to the position of Staff Editor.

This left one of the positions of Junior Associate Editor vacant and William R. Graham was selected for the place. Mr. Graham has proved himself an energetic worker and will be a valuable addition to the staff.

Three Sophomore Cubs were chosen. These were Elizabeth Wilbur, Robert West and, Lloyd McCulloch. There were already three girls on the Cub list.

The staff is now made up of six boys and six girls. It is not necessary to have equal numbers of boys and girls but it gives a good working staff for finding out all the news. There are ten freshmen yet to be chosen. This will take place soon.

VARSITY DEBATERS TO ARGUE ARMIES

Frosh To Be Chosen By New System This Year.

The question for varsity debates has been decided, but not definitely worded by the National Committee of Pi Kappa Delta. It is on this principle. Resolved: That the United States should advocate a policy of world wide demobilization of all armed forces except such as are necessary for police purposes.

The prospects for the varsity teams seem to be fair this year and an interesting schedule is being arranged for debates next Spring, including a trip to the Pi Kappa Delta Convention at Wichita, Kansas. The schedule will be announced when it is completed.

Beginning this year a little different system for selecting those from the freshman class who shall compose the freshmen debate classes has been used. A large number have been sent up from the English classes for try-outs. Professor Queener has given them a new weeding out by having them all speak before him. This has required

Y. W. C. A. PROMISES TREAT FOR MUSIC LOVERS ON NOV. 4

Garnet Manges Among Artists Who Will Delight Audience

Enthusiasm is running high as the Fall Festival approaches. The date has now been definitely set for Monday night, November 4.

We have heard some of the rehearsals and feel that Miss Hale has a great treat in store for all music lovers. One number to be played by Miss Garnet Manges, post graduate in piano, is alone worth the price of admission. It is a modern French number called "The Cat and the Mouse" and is so truly representative that the audience will get a real laugh. Some of the low notes so perfectly imitate the growl of a cat that we wondered if we were not being deceived and looked cautiously around to see if the real animal had not strayed in, emitting these ominous growls and meows from some corner of the chapel. No one can afford to miss the opportunity of hearing Miss Manges.

When we later listened to Marion Johnson play a beautiful number by Saint-Saens, we marveled at the ranges of an art that could transport one so quickly from the ridiculous to the divine.

In assembling the program Miss Hale is evidently trying to reach the tastes of all. Y. W. C. A. feels very fortunate in being able to have Miss Hale in charge of the

SEAT CHANGED AFTER 20 YEARS OCCUPANCY

Perhaps many of you have noticed that Mrs. Alexander usually stops at a certain seat (in B section, Row E, 3) every morning in chapel. Then after thinking a moment, if she hasn't already taken the seat, she moves on to the seat in front. Mrs. Alexander attributes her peculiar conduct to the fact that she has occupied the same chapel seat approximately twenty years until it was changed this year. Naturally it is quite difficult for her to overcome the habit of taking her accustomed chapel seat.

WALK TO PEARSON'S TO BE RECONSTRUCTED

Last year Pearson's walk was the ubject of many suggested campus improvements. For instance, Dr. Knapp suggested building up the sides of the walk a little and then hiring one of the college boys to operate a beautiful gondola between the post office and the dining hall to carry the boys to and from meals. In that way, one more boy would be enabled to work his way through college, and the boys would have the gaiety of picturesque Venice to put them in a good humor for the repast.

It is evident that something is being done to the walk now but it remains to be seen which one of our last year's suggestions are being carried out. At least, the cement in the middle doesn't hold water any more.

ANNUAL CELEBRITIES DECIDED AT CHAPEL BY STUDENT VOTE

College To Be Represented By Well Selected Group; Choice Unknown.

Wednesday, Oct. 10—An election, sponsored by the Chillhowean staff, was held in chapel this morning in order to obtain statistics for the feature section of the 1930 year book. The nominees were selected by a committee chosen by the staff for that purpose. The committee was composed of the following: Louise Carson, Edwin Osborne, Edwin Shelley, Helen Plant, Carol Cushman, Carl Storey, Georgia Burke, Julia Terry, Lee Calloway, Margaret Moore, Al Duff, and Roy Dollenmayer.

The following people were selected to be voted upon for the honors, as follows: Most bautiful girl, Louise Carson, Margaret Haynie, and Virginia Crider; Most popular girl, Carol Cushman, Edith Nash, and Jane Duke; Best all around sport, Olive Clopton, Jeanette Moore, and Christine Foster; Most handsome man, Louie Reed, Phil Vogle, and Jimmie Hoyt; Most popular, Hayden Laster, Brute Crow, and Carl Storey; Best athlete, Lee Calloway, Farmer Watkins, and Ralph Cherry; Most popular couple, Marion John-

PSYCHOLOGY GROUP ORGANIZES CLUB

Charter Members Zealous In Planning Events.

One of the most recent organizations on the Hill is the Psychology Club which has for its purpose: 1. to stimulate an interest in psychology. 2. to get together a group of thinking students, 3. to make practical applications of psychology. On October 4, this nineteen charter members, and three faculty sponsors met to discuss membership qualifications, rules and time of meeting, and a committee is now at work on the constitution.

Although just recently organized, the club is a result of much discussion and planning on the part of a small number of the group. Last year some of the students started an informal discussion group which met once a week, and which had for its first subject "Personality". They then conceived the idea of an organization that would take in more students, and that could carry out a definite program. During the son and John Taggart, Willie Nell Harold and Hayden Laster, and

Chemical Reactions Seen at Alumni 'Test Tube' Saturday by Newcomer

As the writer stood supporting himself and a post in the Alumni Gymnasium last Saturday, the thought struck him—(Surprisingly, since he is a freshman!) that the game called "Snap" has many similiarities to a chemical reaction. He shall give you his "observations" of this "chemical reaction."

First, it was noticed there were two elements present. Each had its own peculiarities. The "atoms" of one element, although fundamentally the same, appeared to the normal eye to be vastly different in size and color. The other element, however, had "atoms", that were fundamentally the same and by virtue of being more consistent and stable, appeared to the normal eye to have the same characteristics throughout.

Second, it was noticed that both these elements were drawn through the opening of a large test tube (known to humans as the Alumni Gym) in order to see if these elements had any mutual attraction. At the first observation it was found that all the "atoms" of one element remained in one part and all the "atoms" of the other remained in another part of this "test tube". It might be wise to mention at this time that a few of the "weaker atoms" of each element found it impossible to remain inactive and formed a colored "precipitate" near the bottom of the test tube (in the vicinity of the piano).

It was not long after this observation that the "atoms" of many sizes and colors were observed to have an attraction for the more consistent and stable "atoms". The result was obvious. The combining of any two "atoms" caused a "rapid reaction" in which the molecules commenced "bumping" each other with great rapidity or flying from one side to the opposite side with incredible swiftness. Such rapid action caused the "test tube"

15-6 VICTORY IN SECOND HOME GAME SHOWS STRONG LINE

Calloway Pounds Line For Two Tallies; "Mac" Gets Safety.

FUMBLES PROVE COSTLY

King's Passing Combination Is Troublesome to Local Lads.

Maryville gridders romped over the King College eleven Friday night to the merry tune of 15-6. The Tornado from Bristol threatened all during the battle, but was unable to stem the tide of Maryville's steady attack. Honaker's crew captured the laurels by virtue of a brace of touchdowns and a safety against a lone touchdown by King. Both teams played loosely at times, fumbles and penalties costing many a strip of yardage.

The Highlanders displayed a superior line and driving attack which eventually smothered King's chances for victory. Time after time Storey broke through and nailed an enemy ball carrier before he ever caught sight of the line of scrimmage.

Capt. McDonald as usual demonstrated that attacks directed against him don't pay such big dividends. Calloway ripped and tore his way through many times for substantial gains, both of the Orange and Garnet's touchdowns being credited to him. The visitors' aerial attack showed up better than that of the local boys.

Game by quarers:

First Quarter

Maryville won the toss and elected to receive the kick-off. It was run back to the 25 yard stripe. After an exchange of punts in which King gained considerably, it was King's ball on their 35 yard line. Storey crashed through and stopped a runner for a 5 yard loss. King booted the leather again and Maryville opened up a driving attack at the line, with Calloway and Bonds carrying the ball. The Highlanders kicked on last down. On the next play Storey repeated his little stunt, spilling the King half before he reached the scrimmage line. Another play failed and King attempted to punt. This time Carper got through, blocked the kick, and pounced on the oval on King's 18 yard line. Calloway pounded the line for 12 yards, Gillespie added three more, and Calloway went over for the first score. Bonds made the kick. Score: Mary-

120 EMBRYO FROSH REPORTERS GATHER

Crothers Addresses Group On Journalistic Work.

The call for freshmen interested in journalism resulted in an enthusiastic crowd of one hundred and twenty gathered in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium last Thursday night. Jesse Peirce explained that the try-outs for freshman apprentices on the Echo staff would be conducted through the English classes. One of the assigned themes in freshman English will serve as the candidate's official try-out. From this competition ten students will be selected as freshman apprentices.

George Crothers, son of Maryville's Presbyterian minister, delivered a short but spicy talk on his experiences as a reporter on the Knoxville News-Sentinel. He has found that a successful reporter must possess a good share of "crust", suavity, a friendly personality, and the ability to get what's wanted when it's wanted. Incidentally, one should know how to "soft-soap", for it comes in handy oftimes! A good reporter must have a real "nose" for news if he ever expects his work to occupy space in a newspaper column;—"If what you write will make a woman say 'for heaven's sake!'—that is news."

Nicknames Pervading Hill Have Devious Origins—Physical Appearance Leads

(By Edith Nash)

Almost every one has a nickname. Some of the old students who have taken English 18 know that the word nickname comes from the old English, an eke-name, meaning "another" name. It is also interesting to note that these names are usually derived from some definite source.

A few of the reasons for nicknames are, that physical characteristics may give rise to them, circumstances or events may coin a name, and puns on names. Some of Maryville's nicknames have very unique origins and possibly you can work out these for yourself.

Very few people on the campus know that Robert Watkins and Farmer Watkins are the same man. Robert is known as "Farmer", although he hails from Winston-Salem. The writer would rather let you make your own conclusions as to how and why Robert acquired such an appellation.

"Missionary Bill" and "Hope of Maryville" (with apologies to Brown of Harvard) are popular names for Bill Hope. These names are not hard to account for—that is, in origin! "Nickel Bill", denoting value, has been applied rather recently.

Our stalwart athlete, Carper, received the title "Judge" not because of any show of unusual ability to decide on the merits of football plays—but because he sat on the bench so much during his first year here!

"Suitcase" or "Satchel" Waddell attributes the cause of his nickname to his feet, their resemblance to those of Suitcase Simpson, of cartoon fame.

The girls know Hilda Farnham as "Happy" because of her ever cheerful disposition. Mildred Crawford acquired the name "Billie" because she looked so much like a boy when she was even smaller than she is now. Julia Terry's other name, "Irish", needs no explanation; Julia's hair, disposition, and ready wit are evidences enough. Eloise Garrett is known as "Miami", which also, is self-explanatory. Frances Mingea was awarded her name, "Frenchie" last year because many associated her general appearance and name as being very much like those of a French girl.

Perhaps some of you know John Taggart as "Ossifagus". John's peculiar pronunciation of Aesophogus in a freshman Biology class brought this colorful name into existance. "Brute" Crow! That name certainly has stuck! If you know Edward, as you probably do, you won't have to stretch your imagination far to account for his designation.

No, the writer does not believe that "Preacher" Young is a Ministerial student. However, his father is a minister, and possibly that is the raeson for his nickname.

"Jesse" James' name is probably due to the association between J. Stuart James and history's famous gunman.

Someone has whispered about that Mr. Griffith's nickname is a clipped form of Hieroglyphics. Possibly he can explain in detail what the name means and how it came about. Anyway, it sounds and looks interesting doesn't it?

Clifford Overly seems to be unusually susceptible to other names. He is known by a number, some of which are "Big Tub", "Pee Wee", "Big Train" and "Mountaineer". One look at Clifford will assure you that the above category is not wholly without cause.

Of course there are nicknames here which are numerous and common. Most of these names are either clipped forms, as "Lib", "Dot" and "Ed" or owe their origin to physical characteristics, such as "Red", "Shorty" and "Fatty".

Other nicknames which are known on the Hill are "Hoof" Reed, "Chic" West, "J. D." Davis, "Jiggs" Coughlin, and "Sunshine" Bussey.

World Problems

College is a busy place. So busy, in fact that we lose contact with the outside world. Even though we are confined to our daily routine of study, meals, classes, and "moonshining", it would surely be no crime to become acquainted with the things going on around us.

The average student on the Hill would be in a quandary if he should be asked the purpose of Ramsay MacDonald's visit to the United States, or to discuss the proposed tariff bills. This is characteristic of student life, but we doubt that it is a desirable one.

We, college students, are supposed to be the country's leaders tomorrow. How well-equipped will we be, if we do not know something about it's recent history?

Politics is something we connect with the Tea-Pot Dome scandal and other atrocities enacted in the name of "government", and so we shun the issues of the day with a gesture of despair. We would scarcely do this if we were well informed.

Every day evnts of national and international importance are reported in the newspapers, and a few minutes of our spare time would be well spent if we would read some of the many newspapeprs in the library or elsewhere.

—o—

TO WHOM DOES FOOTBALL BELONG?

One of the chief topics of interest to football players, coaches, and devotees, is the question of player control, or whether the game shall be played without interference by the coach.

There is a tendency to give the game back to the boys, and many northern and eastern schools have adopted this method of play with striking success.

In the player controlled game, the coach is not on the sidelines, but in the stand or at least apart from his men. After the start of the game he has no control over the men, except to remove men who are physically unable to continue. He is also allowed to attend injured men on the the field and between halves. However, he does not instruct them during the entire game. This leaves the direction of the game in the hands of the quarterback or the captain. This system, inaugurated by Tad Jones, is championed by many reputable football authorities, and is certainly in accord with the spirit of the modern college.

Any discussion of this question naturally depends on whether the ultimate aim of football is, as most schools contend, to develop men. If the end is to develop winning teams regardless of men, then the present method would seem to be most effective.

Modern football has become merely a battle of wits in which one mind, directing the action of eleven men, pits iiself agatnst another, and the result is proof that one or the other is the greater strategist. The players are merely puppets that move on a string and are manipulated from the sideline in such a manner as to bring about victory for the school.

In this respect, of course, Maryville is better off than most schools, but may it not be still more beneficial to the men to have complete player control?

All eyes will soon be turned on this question, and we would appreciate any comment or discussions through the medium of the Open Forum.

We favor player control because it gives back to the fellows the game the coaches have taken away, and tends to produce more self-reliant men. We are reminded of a cartoon in a current college magazine, which showed a coach talking to the team. "Fellows," he said, "there is nothing like football to develop leadership, initiative, and self-reliance; now get in there and do as I tell you."

What do you think about it?

HIGHLAND FLINGS

Ed Sprouse: I can tell you the score of the game before it starts.
Mary Ella: What is it?
Ed: Nothing to nothing—before it starts.

Posegate: What kind of leather makes the best shoes?
Gatepost: I don't know; but banana peels make the best slippers.

Lorenzo: I thought you said this bird could sing?
Levin: My mistake; it's only a humming bird.

Taggart: I couldn't sleep a bit last night.
Somers: Why not?
Taggart: I dreamed I was pitching pennies and I tossed all the time.

Mrs. Proffitt: Oh, Fred, the baby has swallowed the matches,—what shall I do?
Prof. Proffitt: Here, use my cigarette lighter.

Anderson: Do you know how they take the census in Scotland?
Button: No, how?
Scottie: They roll a penny down the street.

He (at the dance): These new shoes are killing my feet.
She: They're killing mine, too.

PEARSON'S SPECIAL

"Phew!"
"Oh-h-h-h!"

Such were the sounds emanating from nearly everyone in the dining hall at dinner last Thursday. Those that didn't make any noise probably thought it, for the cause was sufficient.

The reason for the commotion and the near breakdown of the student body during grace was genuine German sauerkraut. This delicious tasting and sweet smelling form of nutrition has caused the downfall of more people than Helen of Troy or Cleopatra could possibly have done. In fact, it nearly caused an unprecedented thing: dissatisfied whisperings on the part of the student body. They plan to strike for bigger and better smelling food. Do you blame them?

A LETTER FROM A COLLEGE BOY TO HIS GIRL FRIEND

Maryville College,
Maryville, Tenn.

Dere Annabelle,

I aint much at writing as you will soon find out. I'm here and I tought I wood rite and let you know what they done to me since I got here. This is Maryville and it remains you of a big and wonderful hotel, oney it reminds you of the army cause they got plenty of rules here Annabelle.

The first day I kame they took me to my room and then charged me five dollars for carring my bags one of the rules I guess. I am sorry I didn't kiss you good buy Annabelle cause it may be a long time before I get home.

What do you think Annabelle the girls can't take care of themselves so they have Nurses for them. Yes these Nurses chase us boys when we even look at a girl. Now Annabelle don't get jellus cause I rite to you about the Nurses cause they aint so young.

Also there is lots of beautiful grounds and scenery here but I am tired of seeing it Annabelle cause they never change it.

There are lots of Pretty girls here two and they dress up so pretty for the boys but t'aint no use Annabelle cause it is against the rules. Some people don't know what rules mean Annabelle.

I don't talk to the girls Annabelle, No sir that's me all over cuase I still think I love you and then I don't want to brake the rules.

They got a Maid shop here Annabelle and it must be pretty old cause they got lots of old Maids here Annabelle.

Well good buy Annabelle til next time when I will tell you more about the place and the rules. I must obay one now—Lights Out. That's Me all over ain't it Annebelle—Obedient. Rite soon and let me know if you still like me Annabelle.

Til the kows kom home
yore obedient servant
J. F. Lorenzo.

THE OPEN FORUM

"A little boy bought him a big bass drum—
Bum—Bum—Bum!
"Who knows," said he, "when the war it will come?"
Bum—Bum—Bum!
I want to be ready to play in the my land.
I ant to be ready to play in the band,
And that's why I bought me a big bass drum—
Bum! Bum! ! Bum! ! !"

As we listened to the musical efforts produced by the band Wednesday night, we wondered if the members had been moved by the same little boy's desire "to play in the band"? If so, the desire was the most commendable feature for the rsults of that practice were decidedly "Bum!"

For one solid hour each band member practiced a different piece on a different key. No, gentle reader, not singly nor in pairs, but all at once. Talk about cat concerts, that was one—but the cats were toms.

An ear for music cocked out our window, caught strange and fantastic combinations. Occassjonally a few bars of our favorite chapel march could be distinguished from the general mass of—er—well—we hesitate, but we guss it will have to be called harmony—but for the most part, we could recognize nothing familiar in the burst of sound that greeted us as a new piece was tried.

Ah! a sax takes the lead and plays five consecutive measures correctly—to meet his Waterloo in the sixth and end weakly on G flat. The drum booms reassuringly to fill up the gaps and cover all discords left and made by the other instruments. The trap clatters along, keeping time with the drum—occassionally. Once in a great while some one DOES hit the tune and keep it, but ye gods! what is one instrument out of a dozen?

"Do, re, me—We've got the rep, rep, rep of ——". Silence. Then—"Do, re, me,—We've got the rep—— ——". (We'll say you have, brother, but such a one as you do have).

"Do re-me-
Weve got the rep, rep, rep of old Mary-e-ville,
We've got the rep, rep, rep of old Col-lege Hill,
We've got the strength to knock 'em stiff (If volume and wind counts—you have!)
And never know the diff
For we're from Maryville, Tennessee!"

Silence—welcomed with a weary sigh. Then the opening bars of the Alma Mater greet us. It sounds good. No discords, no off keys. Patriotically we rise to our feet—and silence descends upon us once more, just as Chilhowee's mountains are piercing the southern blue—

Well—such is life. All we want to know is—who played the grand finale on a trombone half an hour after the rest had decided that we'd suffered enough? "I believe, I am sure, I am convinced" that that man ought to be completely annihilated.

Now, don't get us wrong. We have a good band. At least the fellows who play are good. We're proud of them. We know they have to practice, but when we had ten pages of French to translate, eight of Spanish, acres of American Lit., Systematic Discourse, and a Psychology test from Miss Gamble to prepare for—well—we just ask you —How'd YOU have felt?

MARYVILLE-KING GAME

ville 7; King 0.

Malerich ran the kick off to his 43 yard line. Maryville kicked to King's 20 yard line, Storey dumping the safety man in his tracks. Two King line plays failed as the quarter ended.

Second Quarter

King punted to their 48 yard line. Woodard went in for Gillespie. Bonds made a first down, then Maryville lost the ball on downs on King's 31 yard line. Storey and MacDonald killed two line drives. Smith went in at quarter in Malerich's place. After several exchanges of kicks, King lost seven yards on an end run that Overly messed up. A King passer was tackled before he could find a receiver as the half ended. During this quarter the Maryville forward wall was outrushing the opposing line, but fumbles marred the work of the backs.

Third Quarter

Honaker injected Hope, Teffetteller, White, Reed, and Owens into the line-up to open the half. Woodard ran the kick-off to his 29 yard line. Following an exchange of punts, several plays were stopped and Maryville lost the ball on downs, a long pass by Woodard on fourth down eluding the outstretched arms of Reed by inches. A King pass that was good for 15 yards and a Maryville penalty brought the ball to Maryville's 15 yard line, where two more plays gave King a touchdown. Kick for point failed. Score Maryville 7; King 6.

After the kick-off, King was outplaying Maryville until Cherry pounced on a fumble on the visitor's 40 yard line. The Orange and Garnet seemed to have its fighting ire aroused from then on. Calloway smashed through for seven yards, and Morrison made it a first down. Calloway tore off 18 yards through the hole made by Storey and Carper, and followed with another for 12 yards through the same place for a touchdown. Point failed. Score 13 to 6. The quarter ended.

Fourth Quarter

Storey again tackled a King back for a 5 yard loss. They exchanged several punts. Taggart went in for Woodard. The Maryville forwards blocked a kick behind King's goal, and MacDonald captured the ball for a safety. Score 15 to 6.

King began a desperate passing attack which brought them to Maryville's 35 yard line as the whistle blew. Final score: Maryville 15; King 6.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Between the halves it looked like they were holding try-outs for Maryville's Volunteer Fire Department, didn't you think so?

Guess that's wrong, though, for it was announced as a stunt!

The King gridders were foxy enough to know that the white ball would be hard to see snuggled against white jerseys instead of their bright red ones.

Coach Honaker knew it too, and so exercised his privilege of requesting the use of the brown ball.

The idea of flipping a coin to decide the winner of the diving contest instead of dividing the points is unique.

Why didn't they flip coins instead of diving at all?

This fellow Martin can SWIM, f you ask us.

Frosh Take First in Swimming Meet Sat.

Martin Wins Speed Swim in Championship Time.

The class of 1933 has already started making a name for itself by taking the first interclass meet, the swimming meet.

The freshmen won from their nearest competitors, the sophs, by a mere margin of one point; the final score stood: Freshmen 24, Sophomores 23, Juniors 16, and Seniors 9.

The meet, one of the best ever held here, saw one of the Freshmen, "Psi" Martin freshman captain, set the best mark ever made here in the 50 yard Dash. This was the most interesting event in the dashes, although the relay was better than any held heretofore.

The most interesting event was the diving contest. Five entries showed that they were the class of the school. They were Watkins, Crothers, Edris, Martin and Underwood. This was a heated contest, final results giving Watkins, first; Crothers, second; Edris, third. This was not determined at first though when Watkins and Crothers tied for first place and Edris and Martin were tied for third.

The meet was for the purpose of selecting a college swimming team, and although there was no individual high scoring, some of the boys such as, Calloway, Martin, Edris, Crothers, Watkins, Shields, Cudney and Young give promise of giving Maryville a first-rate swimming team.

The events and winners follow:

25 Yard Dash—Time 13 4-5 seconds. First, Calloway; second, Sprouse; third, Underwood.

Backstroke—First, Young; second, Edris; third, Underwood.

Breaststroke 50 Yard—Time 32 2-3 seconds. First, Cudney; second, Graham; third, Butten.

100 Yard Dash—Time 1.17. First, Edris; second, French; third, Bowman.

50 Yard Dash—Time 22 seconds. First, Martin; second, Calloway; third, Lippard.

Plunge for Distance—First, Shields; second, French; third, Lippard.

Diving—First, Watkins; second, Crothers; third, Edris.

Class Relay, 100 Yards—52 2-5 seconds. First, Freshman; second, Juniors; third, Sophomores.

Middle Tenn. Teachers Play Here Fri. Night

Highlanders Expect Mild Foe, Compared With Vandy.

The fourth game of the football season for Maryville will take place on the Highlander's illuminated field at 7:30 p. m. Friday, October 18th. The game will be played against the Teachers' College of Middle Tennessee, and although the teachers have as yet not shown a very aggressive life, it is expected that a close game will be witnessed.

The Highlanders, after having their confidence renewed, due to their victory over King College, are in the pink of condition, with the exception of Byerly who suffered an injured ankle in the Kentucky game.

The Middle Tennessee machine has not been functioning as strongly as has some of Maryville's opponents—but they have, no doubt, gained a lot of experience and will face the Maryville gridders with a determination to win. Although there can be heard occasionally a few pessimistic utterances predicting a very close game—still Ole Man Dope puts out an estimate of 12-0 with the odds on the Orange and Garnet aggregation.

CHEERLEADERS CHOSEN

October 11—The student body elected as cheerleaders for the 1929-30 season, Leland Gilmore, Paul Edris, and Jesse Peirce. Peirce is head cheerleader, assisted by Edris and Gilmore. Young is alternate, and will work with the others. The election took place in chapel this morning, when the candidates were identified and given a chance to "do their stuff."

The vote was close, and as Sommers, acting chairman of the Pep Committee, told us in chapel, it is too bad we could not elect all to the positions, but only three were open.

Home Coming Nov. 1

Alumni who are planning to come to the East Tennessee Teachers Institute at Knoxville at the end of this month, will be glad to know that the second annual Home Coming Game will be held on Friday night, November 1, and all those attending the institute will have an opportunity to see their Alma Mater in a night football game.

The lights make the field as bright as day, yet do not blind either players or spectators.

Plan to make a big night of it on November 1, at the college football field!

THE CITY

Slow Autumn rain at twilight
Like a veil enwraps the city
And its buildings stand
Like shadow turrets
There against the sky;
Grey silhouettes—
With mystery that broods
And a strange peace:
The city has a soul
A weary sensitive soul
That wears the garment of the rain
And broods,—alone.

DEATH AND AURORA

Death and Aurora walked across the world,
Most men saw death,—
But seers saw Aurora,
And marveled that their fellows saw but death.

Death and Aurora gathered roses fair,
To weave the glorious garments of the dawn,
And most men mourned the roses, but a few,
Were wiser, and went singing on before.

Death and Aurora painted all the sky,
And flung the arch of roses far on High,
And most men sadly watched a sunset fade,
But those who lead the van saw too the dawn.

THE PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

summer their interest did not flag and at the beginning of the year, they put the proposition before Dr. Wilson and the Psychology teachers. Having gained their approval, Dean Barnes, Miss Gamble and Miss Kellar were chosen as Senior Advisory Committee,, and the first task of the committee was to select the charter members of the club. This selection was made on the basis of the student's native ability, and his having done good work in the psychology department. All new members will be chosen in the same way, the one qualification being that they have had or are taking some course in psychology.

In view of carrying out the last named part of the three-fold purpose of the club, some practical projects are already before the group. One is to make out a questionnaire, the exact nature of which is to be revealed later. Others are to make a study of teacher qualification charts; keep up with the newest psychology, and to attempt to form a psychological definition of personality.

The following is a list of the charter members recommended by the faculty advisors:

Tom Whitehead, Edith Woolsey, Jane Morrow, Edgar Shepherd, Kemp Davis, Stanley McCool, Hessie Keeton, Rosalee Batt, Eleanor Kuhlman, Cyril Brown, Louise Carson, Paul Dickinson, Hilda Farnham, Helen Gleason, Elsie James, Robert Jones, Ira Morrison, Mary Elizabeth Dederick and Viola Petit.

Next week more publicity will be given to the Fall Festival. The tickets are already on sale and can be had from the Book Store, the Y. M. and Y. W. stores and any Y. W. cabinet member. Look for the notices on the bulletins in the dormitories.

CHEMICAL REACTIONS

soon to be filled with an "efflorescent substance". (Easily recognized by the observer as dust). This reaction also had another peculiar characteristic. It "generated" much heat and the atmosphere soon became uncomfortable to the observer. This heat, however, soon caused an "electric spark" to "flicker" through the "test tube" acting upon the contents in a most astonishing manner. The reaction slowed up noticeably and the "compound" began to pour from the opening in the tube in a steady stream. After being on the outside for a period of ten or fifteen minutes the compound was observed to have broken into its separate elements, but not without leaving some "traces" of both on each.

The observer noticed that there were "calalytic agents" present to govern the "intensity" of the "reactions". Still the observer firmly believes that the results of the "reactions" were so strong that it would be disastrous to repeat it within a period of four to six weeks.

A Newcomer.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

We predict that the new system of rules for absences from class is going to be a success. It throws more responsibility on the individual student as it should be wherever it is practical. It also eliminates the bother of trying to get written excuess. It was a nuisance under the old system to have to beg for excuses when one was in a hurry. The writer has made as many as five attempts to obtain a written excuse before being successful. Under the present system that is all unncessary. It may work hardship in some instances where illness takes up the "cuts" allowed but that is the exception.

—:—

In fact I am persuaded that there will be much less sickness under the present system. The college was almost forced to this measure for the health of the students.

—:—

We have back in our midst one who has been absent for a year but he was a noted member of Pi Kappa Delta while he was here before. Wright Frost is his name and he is not as cold as you would at first think. When he gets warmed up a little on the platform he just melts those cold hearts.

Allan Herdman is anoher one of our members who has had a leave of absence to France for a year. He has had an oppportunity to visit the world's model Senate in Paris.

Allan has practically mastered the French language, but it's easy. I believe it was an English wit that said: "Even the children speak French over there."

—:—

Dick Strain, who has been away a year also, hails from the region where they grow champions, such as Helen Wills, for instance.

—:—

Professor Queener advises that he doesn't want any debater to make a speech that sounds like his neck-tie.

—:—

Successful debating requires constant drilling.

—:—

Our president says practice before a mirror and at least you will have a sympathetic audience.

—:—

Or practice before empty chairs. If you can sway them you must be an awful blow.

ANNUAL CELEBRITIES

Mary Ella Sullivan and Ed Sprouse; Most attractive couple, Conchita Bertran and Earl Blazer, Linton Coulter and Isabel Cannon, and Shorty Shaw and Lois Crotwell.

For each honor one of the three nominees was elected. The staff does not wish to publish the statistics or the theme of the annual.

The staff has begun work in earnest. The year's work started off in a unique manner by a trip to Knoxville on Monday, October 7th, to visit Capper Engraving Company. The purpose of the trip was to acquaint each member of the staff with the complicated process of publishing a college annual, and thereby to help in making the Chilhowean this year the best in the history of the college.

The first field of inspection was the Capper Engraving Company. Although the contract for this year's annual had already been given to the Capitol Engraving Co., of Nashville, still the visit was profitable for two reasons: first, because the processes in the two companies are identical; and second, because the work for next year's annual will be done at the Capper Engraving Company.

It is impossible to measure in words the benefit derived by the Staff from their expedition. It will not only be a help but also an inspiration in the work confronting them. Maryville students realize that the staff is working hard to produce a good year book and will be expecting a Chilhowean of unusual originality and quality.

FRIENDSVILLE CLUB

Students from Friendsville met Thursday and formed the Friendsville Club, electing the following officers:

VOL. 15 | MARYVILLE, TENN., MON., OCTOBER 21, 1929 | NUMBER FIVE

FIRST LYCEUM IS 'KING'S HENCHMAN' 'MANON,' TUESDAY

Scenes From Prominent Operas Rendered by Famous Artists.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED

Redpath Bureau Presents First Of a Series Here This Season.

"The King's Henchman" and "Manon", the first lyceum program of the year, will be presented on Tuesday evening, October 22. Miss Ora Hyde has the soprano role and Mr. Arthur Johnson the tenor.

"The King's Henchman" is a story that has its setting among the royalties of the early Britons. The king was too preoccupied with business matters and political necessities to attend to his love affairs in person, and, of course, had to use some other means. The progress of the story reveals the working out of the system he used.

"Manon" is the story of the love of a girl for a cavalier and of her conflicting love of luxury. When she refused to marry the cavalier because of his poverty, he, in despair, entered a monastery. But love proved stronger than both pride and the church.

Of Miss Hyde the New York Herald-Tribune says, "Miss Ora Hyde not only reveals a fresh warm voice, but her interpretation is moving and convincing." The press notice of the Ora Hyde Opera Ensemble describes her as a "charming up-to-the-second American girl, with a gay infectious note in her superbly placed and exquisitely poised voice. "The Greensboro Daily Record says, "In the scene in the forest Mr. Johnson and Miss Hyde rise to the sheer glory of operatic attainment."

Lyceums at Maryville are sponsored by Y. M. C. A. and therefore cost the student nothing outside his student activities' fee. The programs, four this year, are furnished by the Redpath Bureau.

Reserved seat tickets for this number will be issued to students Tuesday afternoon in the Theism classroom. It is necessary to bring your general admission ticket in order to get a reserved seat. Tickets are on sale in town for the many townspeople who will attend.

TRIANGLERS ENTERTAIN

Novel Program- First of Number That Will be Given.

Fifty members of the Triangle Club enjoyed a very interesting program Monday evening, October 14, at 6:30 p.m. in Bainonian Hall. The following program was presented:

A Scotch Ballad - George Thompson
Chello Solo - - Margaret Melody
Reading - - - Jesse Peirce
Triangle Club Quartet - McCool, Wood, Hannah, Cudney
Reading - - - Lois Lefever

A short business meeting followed the program.

Ohio Club Organized

Last Wednesday, thirty-one students from the State of Ohio met to organize the Ohio Club. The following officers were elected: President, E. Phillip Vogel, Cincinnati; Vice President, Julia Frances Terry, Dayton; Secretary-Treasurer, Ruth Ellen Behelman, Dayton; Editor, Ray J. Dollenmayer, Cincinnati. Various items of business were transacted and the program for the year outlined before the meeting stood adjourned.

Red-Heads Organize

The red-heads recently organized a club with the following officers: President, J. Stuart James; Vice President, Julia Terry; Secretary and Treasurer, Allen Foreman; Editor, Elton Luckhart. Under the name of the Knights and Ladies of the Flaming Crown the red-heads promise to be one of the hottest organizations on College Hill.

A section of the College Maid Shop where thousands of dollars worth of work is turned out every month. Over two hundred girls find profitable work here during the year. The shop has been moved recently to the commodious quarters in Thaw basement.

College Maid Shop Builds Wide Reputation Under Mrs. McMurray

Work Now Being Extended to Include Four Other Schools. College Proud To Own One of Town's Leading Industries.

The College Maid Shop is in new quarters because of an increase in production, amount of sales, and in the number of workers. This factory which solves the college girl's financial problem is now located in the basement of Thaw Hall. Six days in the week from 8:00-5:00 o'clock the girls are kept busy filling orders that come in from mills and stores throughout the country. The College Maid Shop is the only thing of its kind. It is not a philantrophic institution, but is a reputable manufacturing concern that buys its material directly from such wholesale houses as Amory and Braun, New York, and finds market for its products in such stores as Marshall Fields, Chicago, and Joseph Horn, Pittsburgh.

The factory was opened in 1920 with 10 girls, 12 machines, and a few bolts of percale. It came as a result of some college girls' appeals to Mrs. McMurray for help in earning expenses. Progress has been rapid. At least 250 girls earn something, and many girls depend entirely on their earnings.

Last yar the Shop made an average of $3000 per month, but business is increasing. In the month of August, the amount of sales exceeded $6000. The pay roll to the girls will exceed over $1000 per month. Crepe pajamas once constituted the bulk of sales, they being retailed at $2.98 per pair in one store in each large city. Among the stores who have sold them are Loveman, Joseph and Loeb, Birmingham, Ala.; Marshall Fields, Chicago; Emporium, San Francisco. Percale aprons are also in demand, the J. F. Hudson Co. of Detroit retailing them at $1.25 each. Both pajamas and aprons are still sold, but the specialty is the uniform for the mill girl. The idea of uniforming the mill employees was Mrs. McMurray's own. Hoover aprons, smocks and Princess dresses are made in attractive colors and sold to the various mills of the country at $22.20 per dozen. Among the mills that send regular orders for uniforms are: Apex Hosiery Mill, Philadelphia; Arrow Head Hosiery Mill, Richmond; Dixie Mercerizing Co., Chattanooga, and the Real Silk Hosiery Mill, Indianapolis.

A unique feature of the Shop is its novel way of advertising. There is no salesman on the road. All the advertising has been done through the mail by means of cleverly designed blotters and personal letters.

Nevitts, one of the largest laundries in Minneapolis, Minn. has recently been uniformed by the College Maid Shop. Nevitts are to be hosts at the National Laundryman's Convention which is to be held in Minneapolis. They have written Mrs. McMurray, director of the College Maid Shop, for advertising matter. The Shop plans to send two huge banners, made of cloth of gold, bearing these statements:

"All of our young women are dressed in cloth of gold. These color fast uniforms are made by the College Maid Shop, Maryville, Tennessee."

Not only the Maryville College girl and the mill girl derive the benefits from the College Maid Shop, but girls at Berea College, Ky.; College of the Ozarks, Frhansos, and Parsons College, Iowa, are making cut garments sent to them from the shop. Southern College, Lakeland, Florida, and Laurance University, Appleton, Wisconsin, have also applied for work. The mill girls keep the College Maids in College, and the College Maids keep the mill girls in clothes."

SENIOR OPEN PARTY

Many Underclassmen Fortunate Enough to Get Bids.

Oct. 21—The Class of '30 will hold its first open party tonight from 7:30 to 11:00 o'clock in Thaw Hall. The plan of the party is that of a night club. The guests will be entertained first at the Highland Theatre (Y. W. auditorium) and journey from there to the Highland Night Club (hallway of Thaw). After the one-act play at the Theatre, break and non-break proms will constitute the main feature of the Night Club program, until refreshments are served.

Between proms the Highland Chorus, consisting of Jane Duke, Lois Cupler, Mabel Frost, Elizabeth Cannon, Joyace Weaver, and Murl Underwood, and the Highland Songsters, Phil Vogel, Lallie Miller, and Chilly Bowles, will furnish ample entertainment.

The hall will be decorated in orange and black, the class colors. One feature of the decorations is a huge orange crysanthemum, out of which will step—a surprise! And, in all, a general characteristic Highland Night Club atmosphere. Then,

COLLEGE PLAYERS TO HELP LIBRARY

Comedy "Family Upstairs" To Be Played In Town and On The Hill.

The College Players, a group of Expression students have already startel work on their first play. It is to be produced once in town toward the end of this month, and later on the Hill. The proceeds from the Hill production will go for the benefit of the Library.

From all we can learn, the play this year promises to be delightful, indeed. Everybody enjoys a good laugh and "The Family Upstairs" contains many. The plot has to do with the affairs of two lovers and their respective families. Besides Louise and Charles there are Willie, Louse's seventeen-year-old brother and Annabelle her baby sister. Charles has one brother who is a typical boy. Of course there is a neighbor, what play of family life could get along without a neighbor?

In the cast there are several members of the group who took active parts in more than one production last year. Leland Gilmore and Hazel

STUDENT COUNCIL'S FIRST SESSION GETS NEW PLANS STARTED

To Decide on Mountain Hike at Next Meeting; Want Publicity.

SUMMARY

1. Election of officers—Sprouse, President.
2. Discussion of social privilege one night a week for seniors.
3. Resolution passed to ask eradication of poison-ivy from Hill.
4. Discussion of "Snap."
5. Resolution to publish proceedings in Highland Echo.

Oct. 15—The Student Council of Maryville College met tonight having as its main purpose organization. Edward Sprouse was elected president by acclamation. Carol Cushman was elected vice president, and W. T. Whitman, secretary and treasurer. The council discussed a date for the fall mountain hike, and the president agreed to ascertain what date Dr. Wilson had open for it. Mention of some sentiment for allowing seniors one date a week was made, but this was tabled. At Carol Cushman's suggestion, a motion was made to eradicate the poison-ivy evil here, and it was agreed to carry the resolution to "Brownie".

The council did not forget our well known source of recreation, "Snap", and decided that more efficient publicity must be given them. Frank Baker moved that more publicity be given the Council, in that the secretary transmit for the Highland Echo a synopsis of the proceedings of each meeting. The following is a list of the Student Council members:

Seniors—Isabel Cannon, Louise Carson, Frances Crabil, Mary Elizabeth Deadrick, Allan Herdman, Ed Sprouse, Arthur Shaw and Frank Baker.

Juniors—Carol Cushman, Mildred Crawford, Dorothy Kellar, Edgar Shepard, Lynn Rankin and Dick Strain.

Sophomores—Ann Smart, Georga Burk, Bob Wallace and Fred Gabbard.

Freshmen—Dorothy Cruze, Ruth Eshleman, Arthur Dinsmore, Aubrey Bradshaw.

HERE NOVEMBER 4TH

MISS LUCY HORTON WILL APPEAR AT ANNUAL FESTIVAL

Wins Chicago School of Music Honors; To Play Many Favorites.

Word has just been received that Miss Lucy Horton, of Cleveland, Tennessee, has consented to assist in the Fall Festival of Music program. This will be good news to friends of Miss Horton, for she is a post graduate of the music department here and is remembered as a great musical favorite.

It will interest her friends to know that last spring Miss Horton, by her talent and high artistry, won a scholarship given by a great musician, who grants two scholarships to each state presenting outstanding music students. This scholarship to the Chicago Musical College was awarded to Miss Horton only after the most careful discrimination. She will represent Tennessee at this institution.

The winning of this honor was indeed a credit to Miss Horton and also to Miss Hale, for it shows the excellent standard of our Music Department. Miss Horton studied in Chicago all last summer and will give us an opportunity of hearing some of the numbers she mastered while there under the direction of great artists.

Miss Fancher Smartt will also assist in the program. Fancher never fails to get a genuine response from her audience. We are happy to know that she is willing

Mountain Hike Offers Wonderful Possibilities to Study Nature

Students Urged to Avail Themselves of Chance to Spend Day In Great Smoky Mountains. Warnings Based On Experience.

All aboard for the Fall Mountain Hike! ! ! All aboard! ! It's coming, Freshmen, don't miss it! The chance of the year to moonshine; the chance of the season to collect biological specimens; the chance of the year for—well almost anything.

Perhaps during your high school days you went on "school" picnics. Well, Maryville's Mountain Hikes are the same thing, only different and better. Every Fall and Spring the student body goes on a Mountain Hike. The general vicinity is decided by the students who vote on one of two places selected by the Student Council. A Special Train is chartered which carries us to the foot of the mountains, and then the fun begins. Starting out in various groups, mixed and otherwise, but in all cases properly chaperoned, we climb and climb and climb. And after that we climb and climb and climb. Finally, after grasping wildly at sticks, stones and tree trunks we arrive at the top. It's a thrilling experience to be able to look down into the depth from which we have come. We have a feeling that we have really accomplished something definite. And then how hungry we are! ! One really has to climb a mountain to find out how hungry he can get. Scrambled eggs and bacon with the accompanying "fixin's" taste like food for the gods!

When at last we are satisfied, we rest awhile and then, moonshiners, then is your time. Watch for it, wait for it, don't fail to use it wisely! ! Compared with the ascent, the descent is child's play, but we are all glad when we arrive at the station and see our train waiting for us. One by one the different groups straggle in till finally the last chaperone and the last couple come sauntering in. We're all tired but oh so happy as the train starts for home.

Back once more on the campus we wend our way to Pearson's Hall for our hash and applesauce while the blissful memory of scrambled eggs and bacon still lingers in our minds.

Just a few warnings to you who are inexperienced: 1. Cross swinging bridges with fear and trembling—you never can tell what they're going to do; 2. Eat plenty of bacon and eggs—you may not taste them again until Easter; 3. Collect as many paramecium and spirogyra as you can—you can use your spare time deciding which is which. Follow these precautions and you'll have a gay and never-to-be-forgotten-time on the Fall Mountain Hike.

Anyway, Dr. Steveeson says most of us have a running start when we are born poor.

VANDY GAME TO BE PUT ON DIRECT WIRE TO COLLEGE CHAPEL

Highland Echo Sponsoring Plan To Get Game Play by Play Here.

TOWN PEOPLE INVITED

Charge of Ten Cents Will Be Made to Cover Cost of Through Wire.

Students who are unable to go to Vandy-Maryville fray this Saturday in Nashville will be given an opportunity to hear the game reported from the stadium play by play in Voorhees Chapel. A chart showing exact position of the ball throughout the game will be erected in the chapel, and a loud speaker will describe the details as the game is staged.

The Highlander grid machine goes to Nashville this Saturday to meet an overwhelming Vandy aggregation, and faces the stiffest competition of the season.

The proteges of Coach Honaker will do well to hold Vandy to a close score, since the early season results show Vandy to be a big favorite in the scoring. In the first three games, the Nashville team won over Ouchita 19-7, lost to Minnesota 19-7, and won over Ole Miss 20-0. In the game Saturday Maryville will be giving everything available to stem the tide of the Vandy attack. A large number of Highlander enthusiasts will be on sidelines and in the stands when the whistle blows at two o'clock. Alumni and former students from many miles will see their Alma Mater perform on the striped field, and the cheers of the minority will be heard echoing and re-echoing across the Vandy stadium.

Realizing that there will be perhaps five or six hundred students who will be forced to remain on the Hill while the Orange and Garnet grapples with the Blue and Gold, the Highland Echo made arrangements to have a phone installed in the press box at the Stadium in Nashville, and a loud speaker installed in the chapel, in order that all the students might hear a play by play account of the biggest contest of the season.

The straight wire through from Nashville will cost something, and in order to defray expenses a charge of ten cents will be made. Town friends are invited to listen in with us and help make our "home Vandy Game" a real success.

DR. WILSON RETURNS

With Dr. Orr Has Been To Synodical Meeting.

Oct. 19—Dr. Wilson and Dr. Orr have just returned from a U. S. A. Presbyterian Synodical meeting at Nashville. They went to Nashville Tuesday where the meeting was opened Tuesday night at Hillsboro Presbyterian Church. About two hundred delegates were in attendance. In an interview, Dr. Orr said it was a very successful meeting.

One change of importance in which Dr. Wilson was instrumental, being chairman of the committee that proposed it, was in having the Synod recognized as an incorporation. This will be asked from the legislature.

Middle Tennessee Club

The Middle Tennessee Club met Thursday, October 10, for the purpose of electing officers and reorganizing for the coming year. The following officers were elected:

Carl Storey, President; Clara Dalton, Vice President, "Brute" Crow, Secretary and Treasurer; Sara Thomas, Editor.

THREE "I" CLUB ACTS

The Three "I" Club met last week and elected officers for the year. They are:

Edward Raney - - President
Dorothy Kellar - - Secy.-Treas.
Zelma Alexander - - - Editor

Watch for anouncements of a party in the near future.

Tennis Tactics

Some students seem to think that when they go on the one tennis court that is in playing condition, there is some relation between that spot and the claims that the miners staked out in California in '49.

Tennis, along with some other games, is decidedly a gentleman's game, and there are certain rules of etiquette which apply. Among them is the principle of extending the courtesy of the court to any who may be waiting, after a set has been played. This applies to all except official match plays, which should not be interrupted.

Courtesy in this sport need not interfere with the spirit of winning, and the common rules of sportsmanship will usually fit in very well. A word to those who do not know should be enough. Those who do not heed should have their attention called to it more forcefully.

—O—

The Band

Much agitation on the part of the members of the band concerning the possibility of a trip to "Vandy" leads us to take a little time and space to make known the facts of the case.

The band at Maryville gets no remuneration for its services. It is due to the altruism of those who consider a band an essential feature of a college, that we have music at our athletic contests. Most of us take this for granted, just as we take the bleachers, the field, and the assistant managers. We feel, however, that the band deserves the support of the school just as far as we are able to give it, and the band's request to be sent to Nashville brings the question squarely before us. In the first place, a trip to Nashville would cost more than we could afford. In the second place, our band would appear in an unfavorable light compared with the fifty-piece organization sponsored by the Nashville university. Thus we dispose of the proposition of going to "Vandy".

The Vandy game is not our most important game this year, although it will probably be the hardest. On November twenty-third we go to Emory and Henry, probably to play for the championship of the Smoky Mountain Conference.

We want to suggest that the students and friends of the college make every effort to send the band to that game. It will take all the pep we have to put the Highlanders on top in that struggle, and the band can do a lot toward it.

To the band we want to suggest a lot of hard work in getting everybody who plays an instrument out to practices, pep meetings, and games. If we have a band worth sending, we will do all we can to see that it goes with the team on the twenty-third of November.

—O—

Mr. McCurry: Why do you have those nine buckets of water.

"Doc" Morrison: I'm fixing to drown a cat.

From what we've heard the red heads almost had a civil war the other night deciding about a name for their organization. After a very heated discussion the "Knights and Ladies of the Flaming Crown" was selected.

Some maintain that it shall not be so—How about calling it the College Station Fire Department?

HIGHLAND FLINGS

Prof. Knapp in Physics class: About what is the weight of the moon?

Ben Peetol: About four quarters.

Allan Herdman: Hello! I'm awfully glad to see you.

Allan Foreman: I guess there must be some mistake. i don't owe you anything, and I'm not in a condition to place you in a position to owe me anything.

Jack Levine: Professor, here is that quarter I borrowed from you last month.

Prof. Griffitts: I don't know whether it's worth while for me to change my opinion of you for a quarter or not.

"Chic" West: I received a compliment on my dancing the other night.

Another: Yeah?

"Chic": Yes, someone said that they were certainly glad that I was not born a centipede.

"Farmer" Watkins: I want something with lots of iron in it.

Drug Clerk: Have you tried the chain stores?

Hazel Bowers: Oh, say! did you see that Russian Count in the movies last evening?

Obie Wilson: Well, is that an accomplishment for a grown man?

Byron King: So you think you are a tennis player do you? I could beat you left handed.

Bill Bernard: Sorry, ole man, but I don't play left handed.

Nick White: Your father looks very distinguished with his gray hair.

Ed Sprouse: Yes, he has me to thank for that.

Frosh: How much did you pay for that tie?

Soph: Guess!

Frosh: Two bits.

Soph: No, you missed it a quarter.

Paul Edris: Do you make life size photographs here?

Photographer: Yes sir.

Edris: Fine, I have a picture of the Grand Canyon I want to get enlarged.

So and So flunked a campus course the other day.

Yeah, howzat?

The Dean said he couldn't see his girl for two weeks.

Prof. Quener: I had to stop using that cigarette lighter you gave me for a birthday present.

Mrs. Q.: Why?

Prof. Q.: Because, I was always trying to pick my teeth with it.

Anonymous: Footprints on the sands of time were not made by sitting down.

Frank Baker: Do you know that Dickens sometimes worked six weeks on one line.

Jesse Peirce: That's nothing. I've worked five years on mine and the women won't swallow it yet.

WORLD'S NEWS IN BRIEF

Lobbying is "big noise" in Washington just now. There will still be lobbying in the future, but it will be more open.

Hoover is on his first long trip since his inauguration. He is to make several speeches in the South and West as a part of the celebration of Light's Jubilee. He speaks in Dearborn tonight.

The Fall bribery trial goes to the jury Tuesday, seven years after Albert B. Fall is alleged to have taken a bribe from Edward L. Doheny, in the notorious oil scandal.

Sinclair Lewis is writing of his impressions of the strike area in Marion, North Carolina.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

"Just see how many things I got right"—exclaimed the freshman as she proudly displayed a chemistry notebook which contained several R's (calling for reactions)!

Mary Lovet: "What is this "Lizbeth" benediction that everybody says?"

A freshman: "Will someone please tell me where Forrest Robertson's rose garden is?"

Ed Osborne: "I think it is natural for anyone to horse a person—if he has a chance."

Stuart Button: "The reason that o many of the automobile advertisements have a woman at the wheel is to show that the car must be a good one—it can stand up under a woman's driving."

Jimmy Anderson: "That story Dr. Wilson told was a "Jewsy" morsel of wit."

Helen Gleason: "I'm going to have my picture made. Must I look pretty, or like a thinker?"

Have you heard that Dean Barnes sang a solo at the New Providence Presbyterian Church a few Sundays ago? If you have, don't believe it if you weren't there, for it's just another frosh mistake—which came about in this way: Phil Vogel gave a few make-up freshman intelligence tests for Dean. So, when one frosh asked another who this Phil Vogel is, he was told that Phl sang a solo at the New Providence Church the previous Sunday.

"No, you're wrong", replied the first frosh; "that was Dean Barnes who sang."

Song of Theism Students
If there should come another flood,
Then to this book I'd fly;
If all the earth should be submerged,
This book would still be dry.

Why doesn't the faculty make the power plant obey the rule, NO SMOKING?

One of these Freshmen thought that the Fall Festival was another name for the Mountain Hike.

Lawrence Somers in Physics: "If I tied 250 pound weighs on my feet, I couldn't chin myself."

Prof. Walker: "Well, we'll use a block and tackle and demonstrate."

Anna Beachboard, explaining the Law of Friction: "It was something divided by something else, and I don't remember what the other one was."

Mrs. Minton, in Spanish class: "Yes, class, Eloise Garrett is just getting her ideas, now that I have her in my class."

Cecil Marley, in Systematic Class: "Hitch your wagon to a star."

Lucy Ann Voorhees: "Keep your seat and there you are."

Daddy Knapp in Chapel: "The Student Council will meet in Pearsons Parlor tonight at 6:30.

"The Three I Club will meet in Pearsons Parlor tonight at 6:30.

"The Freshman class officers will meet in Pearson's Parlor tonight at 6:30.

"The Red-Head Club will meet in Pearson's Parlor tonight at 6:30."

Voice From Rear: "I'll bet the red-heads will win out"—and they did.

Question on Biology test: "What is the mirror on the microscope used for?"

Bob Crothers: "To see myself in."

Another question: "What is katabolism?"

Frank Neff: "The study of the cat."

On to Vandy! !

THE OPEN FORUM

Since it is quite evident that The Open Forum is for the purpose of expressing personal opinion, we take this opportunity to contradict the letter of last week's issue.

The writers of this article were no doubt Freshmen since we upperclassmen would display such a lack of college spirit and loyalty. What if the band practice isn't so hot, it sounds swell at a football game. Ask anyone with the real Maryville pep. Did you ever hear of anything that was a success without practice ——Well, that's our band!

Some people don't care for anything but their own racket but we aren't some people. If you don't like to hear the band practice, show that old fight spirit and pretend you do anyway.

Come on fellows! Everybody up! Fifteen for our band because we're proud of it.

—Robert and John.

(Editor's note: The ladies referred o are not freshmen.)

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas God, in His infinite mercy and wisdom, has seen fit to call unto Himself the brother of our friend and classmate, Helen Coulter, be it resolved, that we, the members of the Junior Class, assure the bereaved family of our heartfelt sympathy and prayers.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be read in chapel, a copy printed in the Highland Echo, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Extra Cleanliness
It has a real value!

The students who get ahead fastest in college, keep clean in all particulars every day. Think a minute and see if this isn't true.

We call these persons "clean-cut". They command our respect. We find ourselves wanting to like them. They have a "pep" and a confidence that we envy.
But we needn't envy them, because the likableness that comes with daily extra cleanliness . . . the health, clear-headedness, and attractive appearance . . . are advantages that anyone may have.

The cost is little; the returns are great.

Blue and White Line Presents Stubborn Bulwark When Goal Line is Threatened by Honaker's Men.

Oct. 18— The Highlanders pushed forward to a victory of 7-0 in one of the hardest fought battles seen this season. The Middle Tennessee Teachers aggregation from Murfreesboro, perhaps spurred on by the fact that thei last game with Maryville, which was played in 1922, was a decisive victory in their favor, held the Highlanders for three quarters scoreless.

The lines of both elevens were practically impregnable, when the opposing team threatened the goal.

Calloway, that hard fighting half back, brought joy to the Maryville spectators in the Fourth Quarter by placing the ball across the line. The trusty toe of Bonds made good the kick giving the Highlanders their score of 7-0.

Punts and forward passes were the chief tactics used by both teams. The Highlanders were able to complete only three passes during the entire game.

The spectacular part of the game came in the first half when by means of a series of end runs Maryville placed the ball on the five yard line with two downs. The Highlanders were able to advance the ball only to the three yard line in the next two downs. It was much like the old proverbial stonewall, or, perhaps more like an unconquerable ject. A long punt by one of the embryo Instructors brought the ball back to the fifty yard line and a seemingly easy touchdown was lost.

Red hair usually signifies lots of pep and daring. It is true in the case of one freshman girl on the Hill who so far has never failed to kiss her matron goodnight every night. Boys, a hint to the wise is sufficient: be sure to kiss Mr. Mac when he comes to tuck you in bed.

Ruth Eshelman says: "There've been two mice in our room lately and nearly scared me to death."—But that isn't the half of it. Just wait until next April.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The ol' Band tooted pretty well last Friday night.

However, at a football game it would seem that "solos" by the cornet artist were a little bit out of order.—"United we stand; divided we stand also."

The football announcer is proving quite a convenience to moonshiners.

This column would be incomplete without some reference to that victor of victors, Tom Cooper, '32.

Rumor has it that Brent Stearns "rode" into the Tennessee-Alabama game on the back of an Alabama tackle.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The Girls' Tennis Tournament is gradually coming to a close, as the second round has been completed and, for some, the third round. The following girls were successful in defeating their opponents and thus are eligible for the third: Elsie Short, Imogene Crowley, Iva Babcock, Pauline Howe, Nez Hamrick, Eva Hampton, Polly Covington, Margaret Haynie, Olive Clopton, Grace Stevenson, and Kitty Hodges.

No doubt, we shall know the girls' tennis champion by the end of the week—and even then everybody will begin to practice all over again for the spring tournament. So far the tournament has been most successful in regard to sportsmanship and competition.

Love seems to be in the air even more than usual during these past few days. Perhaps the mountain hike has something to do with it, but at any rate the girls in the tennis tournament are more than affectionate for they speak about loving thirty, forty-five—what a line they must have.

"It won't be long now", say the coeds as Miami cuts off their crowning glory.

Who's Who Among The Highlanders

Captain Lowell Newton MacDonold is from Harrisburg, Illinois. Mc- he played freshman football. This is his third year and he has one more year to play for the Orange and Garnet.

Carl Storey hails from Culleoka, Tennessee. This is Storye's third year at Maryville. He lettered last year and has one more to go.

Robert Watkins comes from Winston-Salem, N. C. He played freshman ball at Duke University. "Farmer" is playing his third year here. He lettered last year and has yet another year as a member of the football squad.

Maurice Carper is from Radford, Virginia. "Judge" says he had never heard of Maryville so he went to Tusculum in his freshman year. That year in the Maryville-Tusculum game Carper played three quarters for Tusculum. He has made one letter and is supposed to be singing his swan song this year.

"Nickel Bill" Hope hails from Lawrenceville, Illinois. He has won his "M" two years and is also making his last stand for his Alma Mater.

Clifford Overly the big sophomore, otherwise "Mountaineer" comes from Wheeling, West Virginia. Last year Overly was one of the few freshmen to win his letter. This is his second year and he has two more to play.

BASKETBALL STARTS

The call for basketball practice was issued last week. All aspirants to the squad will report to the alumni gymnasium. There are several old men back and competition for the various positions promises to be strong.

"Slim" Waddell, this year's captain, was chosen all-conference center last year, and will probably be in line for that honor again this year.

JUNIORS WIN FIRST GAME IN TAG-FOOTBALL

Oct. 14.—The juniors and freshmen fought to a scoreless tie on Wilson field. Both teams were fairly evenly matched.

This afternoon a play-off showed the juniors having a decided edge, the final score was 6 to 0. Buchanan intercepted a pass and ran twenty years for the only touchdown.

Nelson and Shelley looked best for the juniors while Roddy was the best man the freshmen had to offer.

THETA EPSILON

Theta Hall was crowded with old and new Thetas Saturday night and much of the pep and enthusiasm of opening night was still in evidence. The meeting was called to order by the acting-president, Margaret Haynie, and opened with prayer. Then the roll was called and minutes were read, and other business dispensed with as quickly as possible. A very good program had been arranged by the program secretaries, Mary Ella Sullivan and Elizabeth Caldwell. It was in the form of a play called "School Days". Among those in the cast were: Dorothy Keller, Sara Thomas, Mary Lovette, Virginia Hech, and Mary Cortner. Elise Slater, a popular member of Theta last year was back with us and we certainly enjoyed her music. The meeting was adjourned with Theta song and motto.

AS SHAKESPEARE WOULD SAY IT

1. There goes my friend.
1. Avaunt, oh, my soul, in human form there doth appear before mine eyes the vision of a lover.
2. I don't know the answer.
2. Tho 'twere evil to think upon, yet by my fay have I to inform thee that the settling of the question dost escape me.
3. Let's eat.
3. With divine emotion of our internal beings, and an intrepidity of manner rather a deified soul, the feedbag let us Jon for the ensuing consumption of the heavenly fodder.
4. I feel ill.
4. It hath heaven pleased upon my skull to place the dire forebodings of eruption, bestowing scourge and cleavings of the marrow into my several bones.
5. Hello!
5. Marry, my excellent, noble, beautified, most honored benevolent lord, methinks thy welcome here in this place is a feather in the cap of most auspicious fortune.

SENIOR WISDOM GLEANED FROM THEISM PAPERS

Scientific Explanation: In that it is a Classification of the States of Consciousness produced by an unscrupulous cause.

The law of Parsimony: Do not hunt for other causes of something if one cause is good enouf.

Evolution arises as the result of various ACTORS from within and without.

Huxley used the term Agnostic to denote the result of thought.

THE Y. W. CANDLE LIGHT SERVICE

The annual Y. W. candlelight service, held Sundady evening after vespers, was very impressive. After the recessional all the lights in the chapel were turned out and candles were lighted in the four candelabra on the stage. Eleanor Henry played a beautiful violin solo. Louise Carson spoke a few words to the new girls about the Y. W. pledge and how the girls and Y. W. can help each other. Mary Elizabeth Deaderick spoke to the old girls, reminding them that, while primarily for the new girls, the service was for them too. Then, both old and new girls, led by the cabinet members, marched around and lighted small candles at the tapers held by the two officers. While marching, the girls sang the Y. W. song "Follow the Gleam".

Mrs. Snodgrass: "Be sure to take blankets to the football game, girls, to wrap up your limbs in."

"That would be a heck of a standard for valence, as I see it."—Prof. Griffitts in Freshman Chemistry.

COLLEGE PLAYERS TO PRODUCE PLAY FOR LIBRARY BENEFIT

Bowers are the lovers. Stanley McCool is well suited to act as the girl's father, while Gladys Graham takes the part of the mother. Bill Graham depicts the younger brother and Lois Dillow is the (petite soeur). Edith Woolsey, Bob Crothers and Dot Marshall also have parts in the play.

It is not known just when the play will be produced on the Hill, but everyone who reads this article has fair warning to start saving pennies now so that when the play comes off there wll be a crowded house to see "The Family Upstairs".

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Perhaps in no other extra school activity is stage-fright feared more or even as much as it is in debating. To live up to the moment when you take your place on the platform without that "misgiving" is not normal. If you are "as cool as a cucumber", as the expression has it, at such a moment you had better see a doctor, for something is wrong with you. On the other hand that nervousness can be overcome to a great extent, and should be controlled.

—:—

here are three ways by which stage-fright may be somewhat lessened. If they were all carried out fully possibly it would be eliminated entirelly.

—:—

The first is by acquiring a full knowledge of your subject. If you know all there is to it you feel an assurance that you can handle the situation.

—:—

Breese and Kelly put it: "If you are not sure of your subject refuse to speak on it." That means refuse before you go on the platform—not afterwards.

—:—

Often college students who enjoy public speaking are asked to speak on certain subjects at a moment's notice. Only a few have control enough to refuse.

—:—

The second method is by an irresistable desire to overcome an opponent. One debater on the Hill says the only time he can speak in public extemporaneously is in buttal.

—:—

That same person almost has to hold to the chair to keep from getting up too soon.

—:—

The third method is by forgetting oneself and remembering only the principle he is trying to persuade his audience to adopt.

—:—

Yet there is a thrill about stage-fright not like that which comes from mice.

—:—

Dr. Rogers: "The universe is an event." I guess that is alright, but somehow it reminds me of the statement by Dr. Betts, the Religious Educator, to the effect that "to be born a brother is an art."

HALLOWE'EN ON HILL FETED WITH GALA PARTIES

Seniors Are Guests As Other Classes Celebrate Thursday.

COMMITTEES AT WORK

All Staints Eve Gives Chance For Classes to Show Originality.

The season for ghosts and goblins is again here, and we'll soon hear the moan of the witches, "When shall we three meet again, in thunder, lightning, or in rain?" Nothing daunted, the various classes on the Hill are developing plans for a festive Hallowe'en.

The junior party will be in the basement of the Southern Methodist Church, which is to be decorated like a barn. There will be proms and between each prom a stunt. They are very enthusiastic about the concluding number on their program. They call it "good eats." The committee chairmen are:

Decoration - - - Mabel Dickerson
Entertainment - - - Hessie Keeton
Refreshments - - Virginia Osborne

The sophomores are planning a royal party. We suppose that's what to call it, because it will be held in the Palace. An orchestra composed of sophomores will furnish music during the picture. After the show the class will go to the basement of the Presbyterian Church for refreshments. The committee chairmen are:

Decoration - - - Virginia Crider
Entertainment - - Kathryn Hodges
Refreshments - - - Ann Smartt

The freshmen will perforce hold their party on the Hill. The gym their party on the Hill. The gymnasium will be decorated as the scene of a harvest party. Everyone is expected to come in costume. Part of the evening will be spent in proms. The chairmen of the various committees are:

Decoration - - Tootsie Nash
Entertainment - - Margaret Melody
Refreshments - - Jean Campbell

All three of these Hallowe'en parties are open. A member of any class may invite someone from any other class to his own party. Miss Molly says that those going to parties off the Hill may leave at seven o'clock.

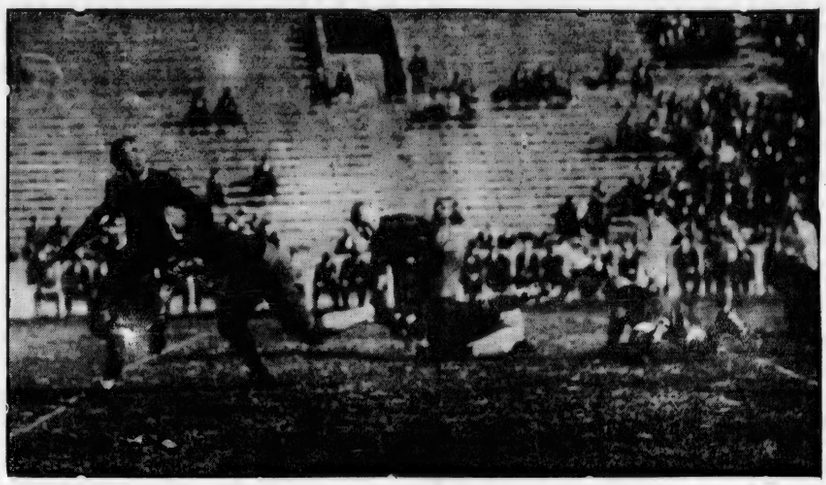
Seniors, of course, may attend the Program Complete; Tickets On Sale This Week.



The date of the Fall Festival of Music, November 4, is growing near. Rumor has it that Miss Hale has completed the program which is now ready to be printed.

It is interesting to know that the numbers in which Miss Horton will appear are a part of the program she gave before a group of American artists after completing her summer work in piano. Critics commented most favorably on her work and were the cause of an invitation to her to record some of these numbers for phonograph records. Since only those whose artistry is of the very highest order are solicited by the best recording firms to make their records, one may well understand what a genuine treat the Fall Festival holds for music lovers.

Miss Smartt will take two numbers from her post-graduate program, the second MacDowell Concer-

WRITERS' WORKSHOP HOLDS OUTING ON LITTLE TENN. RIVER

Embryo Literari Enjoy Picnic Supper; Faculty Well Represented.

The old and new members of the Writer's Workshop went on the annual fall picnic instead of holding the regular Wednesday meeting. Four cars containing the twenty-two 'pen pushers' left the Hill at 3:30, and after a pleasant drive of about twenty-five miles, reached their distination which was the forks of Little River above Townsend. The men gathered wood and soon two huge fires were burning brightly. Bob Jones calling "Hot Dogs!" And for some time the members of this august assembly busied themselves getting on the outside of hot dogs, pumpkin pie, apples and coffee.

After supper, the writers grouped around the fire and Jesse Peirce took charge of the initiation of the new members who were Edith Nash Isabel Cannon, Frances Leisenring and Bill Graham. This procedure was the source of much amusement. Two principal features of the evening were the rendering of the "Charge of the Light Brigade", by Bob Jones, and "Sweet Adeline" with canine accompaniment by Glenn Cross and Jesse Peirce. Every one seemed in the best of spirits judging from the wise cracks, shouts of laughter, and merry songs.

Dr. E. R. Hunter, Misses Gamble, Heron, Clemons, and McReynolds; Mabel Dickerson, Jane Morrow, Isabel Cannon, Viola Petit, Hessie Keeton, Helen Plant, Peggy Mevis, Frances Leisenring, Edith Nash, Bob Jones, Brent Stearns, Jesse Peirce, Glenn Cross, Leland Gilmore, Kemp Davis, Bill Graham, and Joe Gamble.

Trip To Vandy Furnishes Inside Information on Men Away From Home

Studies Not Entirely Forgotten By Grid Heroes Even In Face of Overwhelming Vandy Encounter.

(By Jess Peirce)

"Maryville, Maryville, Rah, Rah, Rah!" trails away in the distance as the bus bearing Maryville's gridders turns into Court street, and the Highlanders are on their way to Vandy.

The boys don't say much on the way over to Knoxville. They are thinking about the game ahead of them, I guess, and of the little group that saw them off. They know how good a team they are up against, and how much they want to crash through with this game. They manage to kid Ira a little about staying till Theism is over, and Carper takes a few digs about the fair sex, but the game is uppermost in the minds even if they don't like to talk about it.

In Knoxville the men pick up quite a bit. True to training rules, they buy apples and peanuts at the news stand, and the Benn brothers pool their money on a Saturday Evening Post. The special car is waiting in the station so we all get on. Brute Crow counts every body twice, and still finds one missing. On third count, finds that he has failed to count Coach Honaker, who has been covered up by a pile of bags.

On the train the usual disorder prevails, with the condemning of the railroad company as the leading topic for conversation. "Pee Wee" Overly holds the center of attraction for awhile, being an adept manipulator of the Yo-Yo, and a silver-tongued wisecracker of admitted renown.

At Oliver Springs we are confronted by the Taylor Hotel, which somebody says belongs to the Maryville College Taylors, and everybody is glad to see something that reminds them of home.

At each stop the monotonous drone of "Brute" Crow breaks the silence with irrelevant passages from an education textbook on "The Problem of the Adolescent". McDonald and Carper are listening with an interested air. Ten minutes more and it is "Judge's" turn to read. All the fellows do not take a vacation on these football trips.

The train waits for us at Harriman while we hurry to the hotel and get lunch. The lunch is already for the crowd, and while the men eat, the radio entertains with selections from Knoxville. In a minute our old friend Bob Anderson announces the next number. We get a kick out of that.

Some of the fellows start a game of "Old Maids" in the compartment, and Bill Hope finances it with a box of matches. This is a lot of fun, but the big sensation comes when the Nashville papers arrive. Captain Lowell, is bigger than the rest, so he sees them first. The fellows don't think much of Blinky Horn, I gather from their remarks directed toward his write-up of the Maryville-Vandy fracas that comes off Saturday.

It gets on towards seven before the brakeman announces that Nashville approaches, and everybody is in a good humor, figuring that a big meal is just ahead. Taxis meet the train and the men pile in.

'LILAC TIME' FIRST MID-WINTER '29-30 DRAMATIC SEASON

Alpha Sigma To Give Famous War Story. Thetas Pick Comedy.

Oct. 26—With more than five weeks yet until the date for which the first literary society Mid-Winter program is scheduled, two of the societies have chosen their plays for these programs according to the respective committees. The date for the Alpha Sigma Mid-Winter is December 9. The play "Lilac Time" has been chosen by the committee of which Frank Baker is chairman to be presented on this occasion. Many of us have seen "Lilac Time" either on the stage or on the screen, and know that it is a worthy production.

December 16 the Theta Epsilon Literary Society will present for its Mid-Winter program "Dilly of Bloomsbury", a rollicking comedy, according to Margaret Haynie, acting president of the society. The cast has been chosen for try-outs, according to Miss Haynie, but none of the positions have been permanently decided.

The plays for the programs of the Athenian and Bainonian Societies, both of which are scheduled for after Christmas, have not yet been selected, but the committees of both societies are searching diligently for the most suitable plays to be found. Last year the Athenians put on "The Poor Nut", a thrilling comedy of college life. This year the committee is searching for a deeper and more dramatic play, according to Forrest I. Robertson, chairman of the committee. The Athenian date is January 13.

The last Mid-Winter program this

Suppose The Faculty Should Consider Girls' Football?

The meeting will please come to order! The business before the faculty represented here today is to decide whether or not girls' football will be permitedt at Maryville College.

Immediately Mrs. Snodgrass arose and said,

"Why, Mr. Chairman, the game of football is too rough for the young ladies to participate in; they might injure their limbs."

Miss Gamble, however, objected, saying,

"I don't think so a tall. I would much prefer to see them playing than to hear them yelling."

"Sure enough, I agree with Miss Gamble," responded Miss Heron, one of our most loyal football enthusiasts.

"Why not allow them to play intercollegiate soccer?" questioned Miss McReynolds. "Someone has said, that is, we are told, that soccer is girls' football."

"Perhaps, we should allow the young men and young women to ponder over the subject at hand and arbitrate among themselves until they arrive at a conclusive result," suggested Dr. Stevenson.

"At any rate," added Professor Kiger, "let's do this thing in chronological order."

"Ye gods!" exploded Mrs. Minton, "from time to time I've seen these moonshiners in action, and I have no doubt that these girls would be excellent in the huddle system."

"Yes, those little problems come up all the time," replied Professor Walker. "It might be well to drop the matter for a while. It is too weighty a question to decide now."

"But, you haven't even considered it from the financial standpoint," said Mr. Proffitt. "It would really cost too much, all those fancy uniforms and headgear the girls would demand."

"Let's postpone the decision until the next meeting and in the meantime be getting more data on the subject," suggested the chairman.

The suggestion was puto into the form of a motion which was carried and the meeting was adjourned.

"Well, that's enough for that," replied Miss Green, as the faculty passed out (of the room).

"And," added Dr. Hunter "as my 'amen' corner in systematic class would say, 'Ditto'."

Maryville Repulses Commodore Drive Four Times Near Goal Posts.

BONDS, WHITE INJURED

Askew Runs 65 Yards In Third Quarter to Thrill Spectators.

(By Bill Graham)

Oct. 26, Nashville. (Special to the Highland Echo.)—Marville College Highlanders went down before the strong Vanderbilt grid machine on Dudley Field this afternoon.

The final score was 33-0.

Although the ball was kept in Maryville territory during the greater part of the game, time and time again the Highlanders flashed a driving attack which surprised the Commodore eleven and the stands. Calloway punctured the Vanderbilt line often enough to keep the Commodores on their toes every minute. The Gold and Black attack proved too swift for the Maryvillian defense in the end, as seen by the margin of five touchdowns. McIlwain gained most consistently for the Commodores, while Askew provided thrills with several sensational open-field runs.

The Highlanders were up against a better brand of football than that seen in the Smoky Mountain Conference, but they worked together in praiseworthy style. Watkins at center was missed considerably, and several injuries did not help Maryville's chances. Bonds tore a cartilage in his left side and "Easy" White suffered a kidney injury.

Calloway's punting average was not as good as that of Schwartz, the Vanderbilt kicker, but he was quite successful in booting the leather out of bounds, preventing the Commodore safety man from running the ball back. The big sophomore halfback performed creditably in bearing the brunt of Maryville's ball carrying, passing, and kicking.

First Quarter

The Vandy kick-off went over the goal line. Calloway punted to Leonard on Maryville 38 yard line. Leonard and McIlwain in two plays tok the ball to the 10 yard stripe. McIlwain made 5. Maryville stiffened and held for downs. Bonds tore

Saturday afternoon more than six hundred students yelled hysterically at a green board representing a football field, upon which an Orange and Garnet and a Black and Gold ball took turns in representing play by play the game between Maryville and Vanderbilt.

The entire program was a success, save at one interval when the Radio succumbed to an electrical charge from a nearby motor, and the operator had disappeared.

College Audiences

Maryville was fortunate enough have have some good singing in chapel the other night. There were some who did not appreciate it. Not everyone likes classical programs. This is as it has been and ever will be.

Some of us, whose tastes have been cultivated mainly by hearing the productions of third rate vaudeville and minstrel companies were evidently not overly impressed by these operatic selections, but some did enjoy it, and doubtless others would have liked it more had they been allowed to listen undisturbed by the frequent monotone conversations which accompanied the singing.

Such conduct on the part of college students is inexcusable and cannot be called anything but rude. We would not insist that everyone enjoy such program to the fullest extent, but we do insist that those who want to, be given a chance.

It is not our purpose to take the fun out of life, or for that matter out of a lyceum number, but merely to point out that humor takes on a different aspect at a formal gathering. The good-natured fun poked at a stage-hand in a pep meeting becomes ill-mannered vibratory at a lyceum.

Our social life is one of the phases of our existence that should be cultivated in college. Let us develop just as broad a foundation as possible, and being men and women, put away childish things.

—O—

"What is so rare as a day in June?" asks the poet. Comes his answer from a fellow-artist, "October's bright blue weather." Could the first of these have seen the college woods, since chill of fall has wielded a colorful brush upon the foliage of the luxuriant growth to be found there, he could have answered his own question.

Are we to be so compassed about with the duties of the scholastic grind that we do not find time to enjoy the wonders of nature which present themselves at our very doors?

What better way to spend a half hour before breakfast or a Sunday afternoon than to wander through the college woods and thrill to the fragrance of pine and the babble of the inhabitants of the glades?

The college woods is one of the beauties of the college to which we point with pride both while we are here and after we are gone.

It is ours to enjoy—may we use it.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His infinite power and wisdom, has seen fit to call unto Himself the Father of our beloved friend and classmate, Louise Carson, be it hereby

Resolved, That we the members of the Senior Class of Maryville College, assure the members of the bereaved of our heartfelt sympathy and prayer, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these Resolutions be read in chapel, a copy printed in the Highland Echo, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Frosh: Well, Professor Ellis fined me five cents once.

An actor who can make one feel hot or cold, happy or sad at his slightest will is considered good. How about our janitor?

He: Do you sing soprano?
She: Sure. How's the chorus go?

Chicago: Where's a good place to stop at?
Boston: Just before the "at."

Prof. Griffitts: He died that year—he was killed.
Bob Jones: Er pardon me, Professor, but did you say that he died the year that he was killed?
Prof. Griffitts: No. You heard what I said. He was killed, shot in the Dardenelles.
Bob Jones: So I see, well it's usually fatal when a man gets shot in them.

Tourist: Heap big pineapples!
Indian: Aw heap 'em yourself.

"His past is nothing to speak of."
"So that's what they are all talking about."

ZUPPKE HONORED BY COLLEGE HUMOR

Robert C. Zuppke, whose University of Illinois eleven survived a hectic season in the Western Conference last year to win the football title, has the distinction of being the first person honored by College Humor Magazine for marked success in the collegiate field. The Illinois's coach, whose teams have been a constant menace to schools throughout the country since he took charge of the grid staff at Illinois, has consistently developed championship contenders.

In recognition of Zuppke's winning the Big Ten title two consecutive seasons and his contribution to college athletics, College Humor recently presented him a beautiful Gruen Paladin watch, "The Croix de Guerre of American Achievement." This is the first of a series of watches to be presented to coaches, faculty members and students whose achievements in the collegiate field entitle them to the honor.

LETTERS OF A COLLEGE BOY TO HIS GIRL FRIEND

Maryville College
Maryville, Tenn.

Dere Annabelle:—

I am still here the reesin I didn't rite before is that I am bizzy. You see we fellos have to study or we will be sent home. I don't study all the time cause I cant sacrifice my College education reeding books.

We haven't any bath tub in our hall and I am sure happy about that cause that makes one less rule to obey. I get more baths here than I did at home cause it rains almost every day here Annabelle.

I'll be quite useful when I get home cause I have to make my own bed every morning. But it is rather strange that I have to do that cause they have plenty of strong looking girls here.

We have swell plays here oney you have to use your imagination and that's hard. The girls come to the plays too. They are swell too. You should see the way that they dress up just for the boys. One girl said that she likes me very much but she can't turn my head. No—sir that's me all over-indifferent. I miss you very much.

There are lots of things we don't get here fer instince eggs, tea, and lemon mirange pie.

Well I will have to close for the dinner bell is ringing for if I am late I wont eat. You see the fellos on my table are big and they eat lots. Love and Kisses.

Yours without a Struggle,

Who's Who Among The Highlanders

Ralph Cherry is the only end who returned to school this year. Cherry lettered last year and is one of the few Highlanders that is not expected to return next season. Cherry has rapidly improved and is making a fine showing here in his Senior year.

John White, related to a former Maryville College captain, John Stone, failed to make his coveted "M" last year and after shifting him around to see where he could play they decided to make an end out of him. He is doing some good work and promises to make a better flankman before many seasons have passed.

Ira Morrison is the only letterman from last year's backfield that put in his appearance again this year. Ira, in lettering the past two years have proved to be one of the best defensive backfield men ever to don a Maryville College uniform. This is "Doc's" last year.

Lea Calloway had hard luck in his freshman year. After the first four games last year Lea had exactly 12 quarters, and then fate presented him with a twisted knee. the week before the game with Oglethorpe. This kept him from lettering but Lea is at it again this year and is making up for what he lost last year. He is classed as a sophomore.

Lyman Bonds has been with us before and fate also kept him from lettering his first year. Bonds and Calloway are teaming together to make a great pair of halfbacks and promises to wreck many a hefty line in times to come. Bonds has another year or two at the Hill providing—(?)

Wilfred Kellogg Smith, most of us remember him as a Yankee, played on last year's baseball team. "Smitty" did not play football but this year he decided to play. Smith is an adept hand at handling punts and should improve on the other points before the year is out. Smith is classed as a Junior but will probably not return here to school next year.

Woodard Gabbard, another Middle Tennessee boy is fast learning the tricks of a college halfback. He seems to have brought with him a natural ability to pass the ball as well as kick it. He is one of the few freshmen that is getting to show his wares and should prove a valuable asset ere his senior year rolls around.

Highlanders Slight Favorite In Home Coming Game Friday, Nov. 1, With Milligan On Illuminated Field

BASKETBALL WORK BEGINS

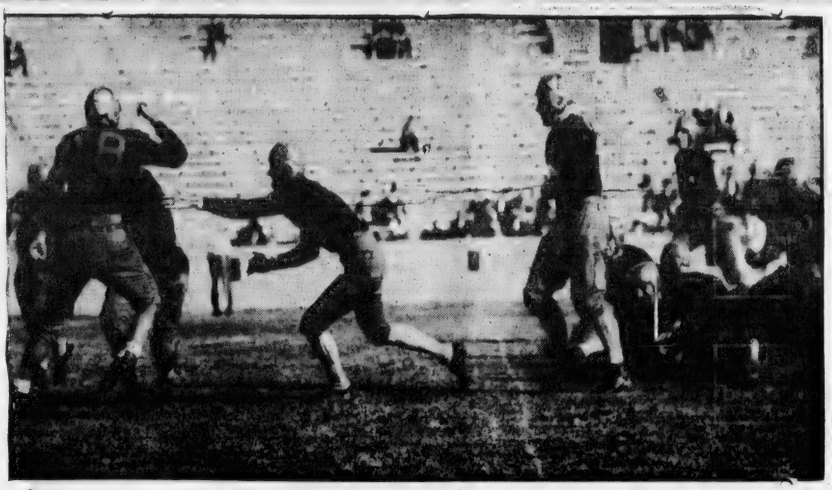
Old and New Men Reporting On Hardwood Court.

Maryville College basket ball practice started last Monday with a very encouraging number of basketeers out for practice, which amounted to warming up. And although the practice at this time is merely for the purpose of getting a line on the new material, Captain Waddell says there are several new faces on the court who show very promising form.

The fact that four of last year's letter men, Harold Bird, "J. D." Davis, "Diz" Vincent, and Merle Delaney are lost to the squad means that some of the new aspirants from the freshman class will have a good opportunity of displaying their wares on the hardwood floor during the 1929 and 1930 season.

The regulars who are to be relied upon for the backbone upon which another hard playing basketball team may be built, are, Kemp Davis, one of the fastest forwards in the Conference, John Stone White, another dependable forward, "Suitcase" Waddell, our most excellent center, chosen as the All-Conference Center last year and is now the captain and mainstay of the Highlanders, and fourth is that steady hard working guard Lewis Reed. Ralph Cherry and Lee Calloway, two fast substitutes from last year, are expected to add many thrills to the basketball fans during the coming season.

Most of those who are trying out for the team seem to be well acquainted with the tactics of the game so that all signs are pointing to a very successful year on the Highland court.



HICKS FROM HANKSVILLE

Will you please let Us Who Know
Come into your campus life where burning ashes glow?
You're wonderfully wise, and we shall sing your praise;
You're faithful, loyal and true—tho' It was only yesterday you entered on the scene
Such humble, thoughtful freshman that no one could be-mean.
You put our minds to study; and now, without a doubt,
In this world there's nothing cultural you don't know about.
Living above the common, soaring above the skies,
Consuming knowledge by the wholesale, working as the wise,
Until at last, you quite surpass things that're made for men.
But Life is to the simple; come down and live again.
And learn to be merry, bright, up-to-date, and cheery,
From the very recent High School Hicks from Hanksville.

ACTION IN MARYVILLE-VANDY GAME WAS FAST AND FURIOUS AS SEEN BY THIS PICTURE OF McILVAIN ATTEMPTING A LONG RUN FOR THE COMMODORES

FOOTBALL FORECAST

Since W. W. Roper picked Georgia Tech to take Tulane for a ride last week, the Highland Echo takes the liberty of publishing the following forecast of this week's games.

Alabama—20	Vanderbilt— 7
Auburn —0	Tennessee—40
Florida— 0	Harvard— 7
Georgia— 7	Tulane—13
Georgia Tech— 7	Notre Dame—21
Ole Miss—13	Sewanee— 0

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Those who saw the game at Vandy saw the real Maryville spirit in the team that faced the Commodores.

Jack Keefe, the WSM radio announcer was right in saying that Maryville had the "fightin'est team seen here in a long time."

We hate to mention Tom Cooper's name in this column two weeks in succesion, but his escapades deserve something.

After having seen the Kentucky band and the Vanderbilt band, our vote goes to Kentucky's.

We never did find out the names of Doc Morrison's two guests at supper Saturday night.

The Maryville cheering section showed plenty of pep during the whole game.

HOREACE GREELEY UP-TO-DATE

"Go west, my boy, go west! And if you happen to pick up an extra ticket to the Big Game, wire me, and I'll go west, too."

She: I want that car in the window.

He: Well, it's in the window!

"Is that football player graduating this year?"

"No. I understand he's renewing his contract."

Highlanders Lose Uphill Struggle To Strong Vanderbilt Grid Machine 33-0

off six, Morrison added a yard, and Calloway punted out of bounds on his 29 yard line. Cherry nailed Leonard for a two yard loss. Leonard passed to McIlwain on Maryville's 11 yard line. Thomas fumbled and Maryville recovered on the four yard line, Calloway punted out of danger. McIlwain made two first downs in three runs and went over for the first score from the two ard line. Abernathy place-kicked the point. Score: 7-0.

Calloway kicked off to Rosenblatt on Vandy 37 yard line. McIlwain made it a first down. White stopped Thomas, and Schwartz kicked over the goal line. Bonds made two thru right guard, three more through the same place, and Calloway kicked to his 45 yard line. Thomas circled right end for 19. Bonds was injured and replaced by Woodard. Four Vandy runs brought the ball to Maryville's 6 yard line, and Leonard broke through for a touchdown. Abernathy made the point: Score: 14-0.

Schwartz's kick-off went over the goal line. Three Maryville plays got only a couple yards and Calloway kicked to Leonard, who fumbled, Carper recovering.

Second Quarter

A Maryville buck failed, and Rosenblatt intercepted Calloway's pass on the 44 yard line and sidestepped his way to a touchdown. Abernathy kicked for point. Score: 21-0.

Taggart made a beautiful run of the Vandy kick-off to his 42 yard line. Calloway got 6 through McDonald's guard. Calloway kicked out on Vandy 16 yard line. Vandy began a march down the field which ended when the Highlanders took the oval on downs on their 25 yard line. They exchanged punts, Vandy recovering Taggart's fumble on 17 yard line. Calloway intercepted a pass and reeled off 34 yards before he was stopped. Calloway made 10 and a first down at midfield on a delayed tackle smash.

Third Quarter

Morrison ran the kick-off back to his 25 yard line. Calloway punted to Askew, who twisted his way 65 yards for a touchdown. Points failed. Score 27-0.

Calloway kicked off to Askew, who carried the oval to Maryville 35 yard line. Askew lost 2, and Schwartz kicked out on Maryville 25 yard line. Calloway gained 5 then kicked. They exchanged punts again. Storey spilled Askew for 3 yard loss. Faust made 10 for a first down. Calloway nailed Scheffer for no gain on a wide end run. Highlanders again took the ball on downs. Calloway got 5. After an exchange of kicks, Calloway again crashed through a hole made by McDonald for 6 yards. Woodard got loose for 23 yards through right tackle, putting the ball on Vandy 45 yard stripe.

Fourth Quarter

A couple Maryville plays failed and they exchanged kicks. Woodard got two. Calloway plunged through right guard for 10. Smith lost 9. White recovered Calloway's blocked kick. White was injured and Benn replaced him. Calloway punted to his 25 yard line. Several Vandy plays were good for yardage, Scheffer taking the ball to 8 yard line, where Thurman circled left end for touchdown. Point failed Score: 33-0.

Smith ran the kick-off to his 33 yard line. Smith got 5 around left end. Calloway pushed through for 7 yards and a first down. Bowman's pass to Woodard was good for 5. Calloway's pass was grounded and he kicked. It was Vandy's ball at midfield as the whistle blew. Final score: 33-0.

BARNARD IN BAD WAY

William Barnard, senior, was in a situation we read about on the train enroute from Nashville to Knoxville on Saturday night. Having attired himself in the usual collegiate Pullman garb, he found himself in the middle of the aisle with the berth he had thought his being occupied by anoter, and no other place of sleep available. After calling a consultation of manager, Coach and others, arrangements were made.

LAST NIGHT GAME OF SEASON HERE

Alumni Invited To See Battle With Milligan College.

The home-coming game this year is to be played with the Milligan College "Buffaloes", Friday, November 1, at 7:30 p. m. The game was originally scheduled to be played against Carson-Newman but has since been changed.

The game will be the first home-coming game to be played at night. This will be Maryville's fourth home game of the season and also the last game that will be played under the lights.

Milligan is coached by a former Maryville College student and athlete, Jean McMurray. Jean said at the start of the year that he probably would not have a very good team. Since the start of the season Milligan has steadily improved and is now considered as one of the best teams in the Smoky Mountain Conference. Milligan in her game with Carson-Newman upset the dope to beat the Parsons by the score of 13-0.

Maryville is endeavoring to have the largest crowd of the year at this game and is doing everything in its power to make this the biggest and best game to date. Over a thousand invitations have been sent out to former students and alumni and this game should see many an "old grad" back on the Hill again.

Barring any unlooked for injuries which may crop out in the Vanderbilt game Marville should be in good shape to perform before the alumni.

NATURE ON THE CAMPUS OF MARYVILLE COLLEGE

(By Robert West)

The campus of Maryville College is one of Nature's play grounds. Practically all birds, small animals, and other examples of free life may be seen playing their part in making the campus a very interesting place for a Nature lover.

The word Nature, to the average person, has a very distinct and impressive appeal. He immediately forms mental visions of all the things which make up his personal method of looking at Nature. He cherishes a longing to study Nature from the stand-point of an observer, but too often allows some form of stimulation to supress this natural longing. But about the easiest command to obey is given in William Cullen Bryan's "Thanatopsis", in which he says, "Go forth under the open sky, and list to Nature's teachings."

It has been said that the southland harbors many Nature lovers. Certainly one can hardly remain in the South without being impressed with its wonderful mountains and its verdant forested regions. And the campus of Maryville College is not only in the South, but it is also one of the beauty spots of Nature. Its spreading cedar trees furnish the protetcion and the home for numerous varieties of birds and for the little grey squirrels which have taken to the sheltered surroundings of the peaceful campus. Anyone who has in his heart and in his mind a love of natural beauty can not fail to be impressed with the calm way in which Nature bestows her beauties on College Hill.

VISITS COLLEGE MAIDS

President of Blackburn Here To Examine Shop.

Dr. Hudson, President of Blackburn College, Carlinville, Illinois, visited Maryville College last week for the purpose of obtaining inside information about the College Maid Shop. Blackburn College is a junior college, limited to 250 students, and it is a self-helf institution. It is now confronted with the problem of finding more work for its students, each of whom is required to work 2 1-2 hours per day. At present, 61 boys are at work on a new building which is being erected, but when it is finished they will have no work. Dr. Hudson plans to start a College Maid Shop for the girls, and give the boys the work in the dining room which had formerly been done by the girls. He seemed enthusiastic over the Shop, and believes that the idea will meet with approval at Blackburn.

COOPER INTERVIEWED

When interviewed by Echo reporter, Tom Cooper, the One-eyed Connelly of Maryville College football, refused to give details of his trip to Nashville at present, but an article will appear in an early issue giving some of the intimate experiences of the trip.

Art Club Organizes

The aspiring artists of Maryville College met on Saturday evening at 6:30 oclock in Pearsons Parlor for the purpose of organizing an Art Club. The following officers were elected:

President—Edith Nash
Secy.-Treas.—Marie Repass
Program Secy.—Helen Thompson
Editor—Vivian Craig

Plans are now under way for worthwhile discussions and many good times.

Triangle Club

Monday, Oct. 21—Sevnty-five members and guests were present at the autumn open party of the Triangle Club this afternoon, which, due to rain, was held in the Alumni Gymnasium instead of in the College Woods.

Following the presentation of the following program, refreshments were served and a game of snap was enjoyed.

TRIP TO VANDY

Bonds climbs in the driver's seat and has to be reminded that he is a passenger.

On the way to the Andrew Jackson, where we put up for the night, Hardy Gillespie wants to know what town is ahead and they have to tell him it is still Nashville. Carper takes the register apart when it stopped ticking at a stop light.

Tolliver shakes hands with the doorman, thinking he is Andrew Jackson, but the rest go on inside just like they had stayed there before. We get a place to sleep, and then some of the fellows work up a bigger appetite with a game of indoor baseball. All are on deck, however when Coach hollers, "Soup's on."

The meal proves a big success. They even give the football boys desert. The fellows seem to have forgotten the game for a few minutes, and act natural, reaching across the table, pulling jokes, and even figuring on where to go for the evening. During the meal Carl Storey gets a call from outside saying that a couple of girls want to see him. Hope offers to go, but I grabbed him by the coat, and let Carl go on unmolested, thinking maybe I'll gt a chance to meet them myself, which I don't. Hayes Williams and Maynard Layman come in during supper, and throw the old line around a bit, then coach tells the gang to be back and ready for bed by eleven. Everybody is anxious for a show, just to take their minds off the impending danger, and we split up by twos and threes to seek amusement.

The first five minutes that Smitty and Judge and I spend looking at the town shows us most of it, since we do not know it well enough to find our way around the suburbs. On our way out Church street (that's the one that crosses Fifth avene, you know) we met Bill Hope and Lyman Bonds just leaving the entrance of the Keith's theatre. Knowing they haven't had time to take the show in, we ask them how they liked it. Hope says it is fine, but Bonds is not such a liar, and he just says, "See how you like it." We didn't go in either for the same reason the others went to the ten cent show around the corner.

When we get back to the hotel the others are already holding a massaging party for the new men, but I firmly decline an invitation, realizing that I will probably have to sit in the press box the next afternoon. This forethought on my part is mostly due to the fact that I attended a similar entertainment at Bristol last year.

Coach stands treat to the whole gang before we retire. The treat consists of one large black tablet to be taken before going to bed. Since Bonds can't swallow such a large dose, he gets Ferguson to suck one for him till it wears down to the size of a hen's egg.

Carper and I plan to sleep together, but we can't. We ocupy the same bed, but it is no use. Carper thinks he is in the Vandy Game, and I think he is too. In the morning I feel like I've been through the game myself.

At breakfast the regulation ham and eggs stare the boys in the face, and they wait on each other just like one hog on another, and soon put an end to that meal.

During the morning Coach gets to see a little of the village when he isn't interviewing reporters or hunting for Brute Crow. Ira and I go up to the radio station and meet the announcers, and I can't get Ira to stop talking to the lady who is showing us around, and when I do, I can't get the woman to pay any attention to me, because she is looking at Tom Cooper, which Ira has picked up from somewhere. And that just reminds me—Cooper blows in this morning on the south end of an engine tender looking like the hero of an Octavus Roy Cohen story. He has been riding all night, having been stranded when the pullman in which he was riding was side-tracked at a freight yard to receive a load of flour. Morrison gives him a bath, but warns him never to darken his bathtub again.

The boys are in a good mood when the gong sounds for chow once more, and the rations this time are very substantial, with no sweets. There is quite a crowd here from Maryville by this time, and Manager Crow is busy dealing out complimentary tickets. In a few minutes the bus takes them out to the battle grounds at Dudly Field and they're off!

to and the delightful "Irish Jaunting Car" in which is given a most realistic impression of a two wheeled Irish cart jogging over the rough country roads of the Island.

Besides the talent from outside the college, our best local talent from the Music Department will be used. Eleanor Kuhlman, whose voice is always a delight to hear, will appear in a group of songs, two of which will be taken from the great German composer, Schumann.

A quartette which promises to be a most gratifying combination and a credit to the college will be included in the program. This quartette is composed of Eleanor Kuhlman, Merle Bebe, Yervante Topolian, and Phillip Vogel. They will sing Lostis' beautiful "Goodbye" and "Memories."

Another musical attraction of the program is a cellist, Miss Margaret Melody, who will appear on the program with Miss Elizabeth Myers, violinist, and Miss Butcher at the piano.

With a program made up of such varied talent we have every reason to believe that the Fall Festival will be as great a success as it promises.

Much of the success of the program in chapel was due to the hard work and ingenuity of Bob West and Larry Sommers, who were in charge. They did a mighty fine piece of work.

JUDGE GAMBLE ADDRESSES LAW CLUB

Oct. 24—Last night at the regular meeting of the Law Club in Alpha Sigma Hall the club had an opportunity to hear Judge Gmble of the local law firm of Gamble, Crawford, and Goddard. Judge Gamble is one of the ablest lawyers of East Tennessee and is well known throughout the state.

Judge Gamble showed the ambitious young club members the need of being prepared before entering the profession of law—especially in History, Science of Government, Psychology, and in Law itself. He urged a policy of honesty, and told the members not to take a case because they might need it, but to investigate the justice of it and stand for the right.

Judge Gamble said the lawyer was different from other professional men in that he had to be able to cope with others in their own field of learning.

By Logic B. Reasons

Honorable Judges, Ladies, and Gentlemen:—Believe it or not, on whichever side you prefer, but here is the official Pi Kappa Delta question for this year. Resolved: That the nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament, excepting such forces as are needed for police purposes.

—:—

That is a wonderful question, and indeed it is a question. It so happens that this was the first choice of our own Tennessee Alpha Chapter in voting for a question. Last year we had our choice also.

—:—

We hope the affirmative side wins in order that we may each one soon have our private policemen, for of course the affirmative will try to remain within the boundaries of the question by saying the "need" at least three each.

On the other hand it would probably be more economical for the negative to win, for the advocates of this view will be sure to expose the enormous expense and waste for us to sink our grand navy and destroy our army machinery which really costs only a few hundred billion dollars annually.

—:—

As I go deeper into this question I see almost unlimited possibilities, and, at least, one impossibility—say everything on the subject in twelve minutes if you can.

—:—

But that is a point in our favor. Of course there must be enough material to take up the time, but suppose there were only enough and my colleague should forget part of his—and use some of mine.

—:—

Prof. Queener: "I have about come to the conclusion that college men can't make a speech because they are not convinced one way or another."

—:—

An opponent of this view: "Where were all you debaters, orators, and systematic speakers when he said this?"

—:—

As a friend said on another occasion, "I, for one, was in the back yard jacking up a sagging ego."

Reeder Carson—"Which is more dangerous: playing foot ball, or sitting in the bleachers with a crowd of enthusiastic fans?"

HEID'LB'G CHORUS ON LYCEUM FRIDAY NIGHT IN CHAPEL

Second Number of Course Shows German Students in Native Garb.

SING IN ENGLISH, TOO

Heidelberg Chorus Contains Eight Talented Men; A Real Treat.

The Lyceum Committee presents the Heidelberg Student Chorus for our appreciation Friday night at eight o'clock in Voorhees Chapel.

This chorus of male voices is one of the finest group of singers on tour anywhere and will present a program that we can attend with confidence.

Each of the singers is a soloist and the rich harmony which they produce as an ensemble is exquisite.

Several of the numbers are rendered in their native tongue, but much of their singing will be in English. With their shining black boots, white breeches, and blue coats, topped by a student cap, they present a colorful scene, and remind us of the movie production of "The Student Prince."

The Russian Cossack Chorus, which was here several years ago was a great success, and we predict the Heidelburg Chorus to be as good. Tickets are now on sale in town and on the Hill.

OHIO CLUB GETS LETTER FROM GOV.

Chief Ohioan Sends Greetings To Students Here.

The following letter, received this week, is of great interest to the Ohio Club:

Office of the Governor, Columbus, Ohio, October 29, 1929.

Mr. Ray J. Dollenmayer,
319 Carnegie Hall,
Maryville College,
Maryville, Tennessee.

Dear Mr. Dollenmayer:

I learned with much interest that an Ohio Club has been organized amongst the students of Maryville College. The many Ohio Clubs throughout the country have much of interest and help to keep alive the feeling of a loyalty to our great State.

I congratulate you and your students upon your formation of this Club and extend to them my most cordial greetings.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Myers Y. Cooper.

MISS BUTCHER JUDGES

At the East Tennessee Educational Association Miss Mildred Butcher was selected from a large number of music teachers to act as one of the judges in a Music Contest between the high schools of Knoxville, Chattanooga, and Cleveland. The contest was largely conland. The contest was devoted to stringed instruments. This honor not only reflects the talent and ability of Miss Butcher but also indicates the excellency of our music department.

WELSH—RENEGAR

An announcement which will bring much sadness to many Maryville friends is that of the marriage of Miss Mildred Renegar, Class of '28, to Robert S. Welsh, Class of '29. The wedding occurred very suddenly on October 11, 1929, in New York City. The unfortunate victims are making their home in New York, where Mr. Welsh is employed in the Bell Telephone Laboratories. Mrs. Welsh is survived by her mother and grandmother, one brother and two sisters, Miss Alice Rengear, '31, and Miss Bill Rengar, '33. Mr. Welsh is survived by his parents, a sister, and a brother, Welsh, '30. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the members of these bereaved families.

Fall Festival Tonight

Tonight the much heralded Fall Festival of Music will be held in Voorhees Chapel at 8:00 P. M.

Among those on the program are -Miss Lucy Horton, and Miss Fancher Smartt, two graduates of Maryville's Department of Music. The best of the college talent will be augmented by several artists from out of town. The admission is thirty-five cents.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB CONDUCTS RESEARCH

Choose Greek Name, Elect Officers For Year.

Lambda Tau Psi, which means "To discuss concerning the mind", met on Wednesday afternoon in Dean Barnes' classroom. The following officers for the organization were elected:

Chairman of Executive Committee - Viola Petitt
Chairman of Program Committee - Mary Elizabeth Deaderick
Chairman of Membership Committee - - - Jane Morrow

Thomas Whitehead and Stanley McCool were elected to serve on the program committee with Miss Deaderick; Helen Gleason and Paul Dickerson complete the membership committee.

The subject which was discussed at the meeting was "Effeminate Men and Masculine Women." The discussions were lead by Hessie Keeton and Cyril Brown.

The psychology club conducts a questionaire. The following are answers to this question: "What do you think of the men on this campus?" The first thing that the girls answered is given as follows:

"The men all look alike to me."—Lucy Lee Silcox.

"I have nothing to say."—Rachael Grubbs.

"Handsome creatures."— Cora Houk.

"Insignificent piece of protoplasm but I love 'em all."—Mary Lib Deaderick.

"I think they're pretty dumb."—Georga Burke.

"Where are they?"—"Runt" Hunter.

"My opinion ain't much."—Olive Clopton.

"They mean nothing to me."—Margaret Haynie.

"You'd be surprised!"— Louise Morley.

"Darn little."—Grace Stephenson.

"I couldn't answer in one sentence."—Eleanor Kuhlman.

"Shall I bite?"—Billy Tronchi.

"Silence is golden."—Evelyn Seedorff.

"None of them interest me."—Margaret Auld.

"All the good ones have graduated."—Peggy Mevis.

"Nothing."—Elizabeth Myers.

"I think they're all Tookey."—Carol Cushman.

"I think they're all cock-eyed."—Mary Lovette.

"All the nice ones live out in town."—Frances Lisenring.

"I haven't seen but one."—Conchita Bertrand.

EXPRESSION STUDENTS SEE "THE TAMING OF THE SHREW"

Oct. 30—This afternoon twenty of the second and third year expression students boarded a special bus for Knoxville. Their destination was the Tennessee theatre where they watched with interest Douglas Fairbanks' interpretation of "The Taming of the Shrew". The trip was arranged by Mrs. Veech and was entirely successful from the time they left the Hill until the time they returned to find that the gates were locked and they would have to walk to the dormitories from Court Street. According to some of them, one of the most interesting parts of the trip was the time when the bus parked in front of the drug store while the driver brought out ice cream cones for everyone.

Several Alumni Send In Letters Of Interest To Their Many Friends

Reactions of Graduates Many and Varied In Epistles To The Editor; All Are of Opinion That Alma Mater Means Much To Them.

86 Chittenden, Ave.,
Columbus, Ohio,
October 29, 1929.

Mr. Jesse Peirce,
Editor, The Highland Echo,
Maryville, Tenn.

Dear Jesse:

The Echo is surely a welcome visitor here at the University. When I came here this fall I put away practically everything except work towards my Master's degree. Naturally, I miss glee club, quartet, and Echo activities very much. When an issue of the Echo arrives I stop everything else until I have found out how the last game came out, what the Council is trying to do, what the editor has to say, what sort of jokes got by Dr. Hunter, etc.

I am taking graduate work in Physics and Mathematics. I was somewhat undecided last June as to what I should do next, but I believe I have chosen the right thing. I become more interested in my work every day.

I must close. A test in Theory of Equations is coming tomorrow. Luck to you throughout the year.

Yours sincerely,
Jack C. Cotton.

P. S.—Letters sent to the above address will reach me,—any number of them!

October 29, 1929

Dear "Maryville":

It is no small task that the Editor of the Echo has assigned me. What I am doing, that is, to say what I am doing is easy enough—I'm doing library work at the Public Library, and enjoying it thoroughly. But to put into words my reaction to my Alma Mater! I feel as I did last year when Dr. Hunter assigned "Sand" as a composition subject. I've just one big feeling about Maryville, a happy, grateful, feeling that will be with me always. "Perhaps what you learned here", was wise, for again, words fail me. Suffice it to say, that I learned to love Maryville. My wish is that everyone leave our Alma Mater, loving it.

May the Home-Coming Game be a great one, the Mountain Hikes, Lyceums, Mid-Winters, everything be great successes, and life on College Hill as ever, happy and inspirational.

Sincerely,
Mary Christine Benn.

Mr. Jesse Peirce,
Editor-in-Chief,
Highland Echo,
Maryville, Tenn.

Dear Jesse:

Sorry that I did not get to your letter sooner. Returned from Nashville to find that I was snowed under with labor.

In regard to your letter the following are answers as best I may give them.

1. Acting General Secretary and Boy's Secretary Y. M. C. A. Decatur, Ala. Also Supervisor Physical and Health Education Public Schools Decatur.

2. Maryville NOW and FOREVER.

It was a great pleasure to see you in Nashville and think of the old Gang down at C. E. Every good wish for the Echo and for you Personally.

Your sincere friend,
H. Maynard Layman, Hoss.

My Dear Friends of the Alumni and M. C.:

It is very thrilling to be an M. C. alumnus and to receive mail from the Highland Echo Editor asking questions such as, "What are you doing?", "What is your reaction to your Alma Mater?" and "What did you learn here?" In a very large way it helps to relieve that funny feeling that "It's all over now."

What am I doing? I'm almost in school again, pursuing my voice study from Maestro Ernesto Gargano, vocal teacher and Grand Opera conductor and also studying Italian—keeping me busy five mornings of the week. I am still doing choir work and have recently become a member of the Greater New Orleans Choral Society. New Orleans rightfully deserves the name of "America's Most Interesting City".

My reaction toward the Alma Mater? What more can be said than "Once a Maryvillian—always a Mryvillian." The main thing I learned in Maryville made up of classroom work, music, athletics, religious, social and all outside activities WAS and IS that Christian Fellowship is foremost in Maryville and because of right leadership there I am striving to make it foremost in my life in whatever field I happen to be.

I would like very much to be there for the Home-Coming Game to help yell Fight 'em M. C. and You can't beat Ma-ry-ville.

My love and best wishes to all my friends out of school, in school and in town. If any of you come to New Orleans please come to see Mama, Dad and me at 3820 St. Charles Avenue.

Sincerely,
Jimmie Catherine Rule.

408 Alexander Hall,
Princeton Seminary,
October 28, 1929.

Dear Jesse:

I was interested to hear of the plans that are being made for the Home-Coming and I hope that all will turn out well. Here is one alumnus who would most certainly choose to be back on the Hill for that occasion if that were at all possible.

We boys up here in seminary from Maryville, eight of us altogether, are having quite a "studious" time, that is of course supposing that the others are doing as I am trying to. I am in the middler year of my seminary course delving into the further mysteries of Theology and absorbing a bit more Hebrew, learning something of Apologetics, and History not to mention a number of the other courses. In addition to my classroom work I have charge of a small church near Trenton. So it seems that one keeps as busy in seminary as in college.

Those of us who have had our alloted stay at our Alma Mater canot forget the many good times we had there, the friends we made, and I hope we don't forget all that we learned. One really gets something at Maryville which is called, I guess, "the Spirit of Maryville" which makes him look at the world with the Christian outlook, and face all its problems with the determination to win out and be the better person for it.

I shall always be interested in the events back on the old Hill and the progress of the college. May this year be the most successful Maryville has yet experienced.

Sincerely,
Wilbur M. Franklin.

ORANGE AND GARNET FIGHTS TO SCORELESS TIE IN HOME COMING GAME WITH MILLIGAN 'BUFFALOES'

Highlanders Unable to Solve Defense of Team Coached By McMurray.

MARYVILLE MISSES BONDS

Many Old Grads See Last Night Game To Be Played Here This Season.

Nov. 1— Maryville alumni were treated to a rare bit of entertainment on Friday night. Jean McMurray's Milligan College "Buffaloes" invaded Wilson Field with a lot of pep and vigor, not mentioning fight, and proceeded to hold Coach Honaker's cohorts to a hard-fought scoreless tie.

Many former Maryville students witnessed their first night game. A large crowd saw the game with an eager expectant feeling that Maryville would win by a comfortable margin, but most of the old grads had to reconcile themselves to the fact that another Alumnus, Jean McMurray, was just as determined that his tribe of pigskin toters was not to be humiliated.

Jean deserves plenty of credit for his success as a coach of a college eleven. Then it is to be expected when you think that only a few years ago Jean was under the tutelage of Coach Honaker. Jean was one of the few men if not the only Maryville man ever to make five letters in college competition.

Maryville was without the services of Bonds, White and Ferguson

'ECHO' GETS DATA ON HOME COMING GRADS

Addresses Will Enable Alumni To Reach Friends.

The Highland Echo booth dedicated to the task of gleaning all possible information concerning the old Maryville students, who returned for the home-coming game Friday night, has functioned. And, now that we have the signatures of old students ranging over the alphabet from Anderson to Watkins with occupations including doctors, lawyers, Prof. Griffitts' immortal sentence "Hold Classes", and pushing a Yo-Yo, our project has been successfully carried out. May more Alumni be produced is our wish for Old Maryville.

The following people signed up, and their address will probably be of interest to many:

STUDENTS REVEL IN HALLOWE'EN PARTIES

All Enjoy Only Underclass Parties of the Year.

Everyone, it seems, enjoyed the Hallowe'en parties. The freshmen welcomed their opportunity to become acquainted with each other and made the most of it. Proms help that way you know. What with the gay costumes and harvest decorations and soft lights the gym presented a festive appearance. Festive, too, was the group gathered in it.

The sophomores walked right off the Hill and went to the picture show. "Fazil", although a tragedy did not cast a damper. After the show, the crowd went to the basement of the Presbyterian Church, which was decorated in cabaret style. During refreshments a musical program was rendered.

The basement of the Southern Methodist Church was the scene of the junior party. Between proms the various numbers on the program were given. The juniors suffered the misfortune of having their chicken salad sandwiches stolen, but all who attended the party say that they had leads to eat. Perhaps it was for the best after all.

This gala occasion of open parties comes but once a year, and we regret that it is passed. Maybe, though, the witches wouldn't be lenient a second itme. Oh, I almost forgot to say, "A good time was had by all."

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas God, in His infinite mercy and wisdom, has seen fit to call unto Himself the brother of our friend and classmate, Harold Baer, be it resolved, that we, the members of the Junior class, assure the bereaved family of our heartfelt sympathy and prayers.

Be it further resolved that a copy of the resolutions be read in chapel, a copy printed in the Highland Echo, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Alumni College Spirit

We notice in last week's Echo that Rube Goldberg says college spirit is the "bunk". We find that Mr. Goldberg refers to the alumni variety, and there is no better time to come to the defense of the alumni than in an issue dedicated to our own graduates.

None will admit sooner than we that the so-called college spirit that exhibits itself at many Home Coming Games, when college spirit means a state of disgusting inebriation and a few hours of schoolboy assininity, is the "bunk".

Nor are we so overwhelmed by an effervescent sentimentality for our senior associates that we cannot see that for most of us, the pleasant friendships we have formed here will be but subjects of fond reminiscence in the future. That is most natural. Neither are we so blinded by the materialistic impulse that we advocate the disgarding of everything that has no evident utility.

Surely there is no harm in harboring a feeling of loyalty to one who has endowed us with a better opporutnity to take our place in the world. And to do this, we need not lose all sense of proportion. Certainly there can be no signs of an unbalanced mental state should we, after years of endeavor elsewhere, have a longing to return to the scenes of our former carefree existence. There is something of the urge that causes many great men to reflect with ecstacy upon the scenes of their boyhood, and to return on occasions to the 'ole swimmin' hole" back home.

We will admit that there is a difference in the spirit before and after graduation, but the difference lies in the fact that the alumni, seeing from afar, see it whole.

Armistice Day

Since there will lbe no Highland Echo issued next week, we take this opportunity to remind the students of the fact that next Monday is the annual celebration of Armistice Day.

As we get further away from the original Armistice Day, our impression of it and what it means grows dim, as indeed do all impressions with the passage of time. None of us, however, will ever forget the great struggle which that day terminated.

Since the close of the World War, the trend of thought and speech on Armistice Day has been toward the dawn of a new and more permanent peace, and not in an attempt to harrow the feelings of those whose loved ones were sacrificed on the field of selfish internationalism. "They have not died in vain", is more true now than ever before. We look over the past year and see with thankful hearts the progress made in outlawing war by the peace pact of Kellogg, and note with optimism the attempts at furthering good-will among all nations.

It is not all done, however, and it is up to us to keep before us the ideal of a warless existence, and to make Armistice Day a celebration of the beginning of peace as well as the end of war.

LETTERS OF MARQUIS de LAFAYETTE TO HIS WIFE

(As translated from the French by Henry Whipple)

Mr. Whipple is one of our best known authors, and the Echo has has excluisve right to his translations which will be run for the next few weeks on this page.

Foreword:—History is a collection of facts which informs one as to what has happened in the progress of the world. History is valuable for this. But can not we go further, can we not peek behind the scenes and look into the lives of the men who have predominated history? History, I have said, is a collection of facts; but do we want mere facts? Let us learn the true man, the man who lived, the man who had heart-throbs, the man who would have been a friend. For this, we turn to their letters. What could better contain the true thoughts and aspirations of the great? It is in this form that they have poured out their souls to their loved ones, and the loved ones in turn have preserved these outpourings.

Shortly after the Florida gale, there were several letters found in the basement of M. Bourbon's mansion. These letters were tied in blue and rested securely in a little rosewood casket. Upon perusal they were found to contain the words written by Marquis de Lafayette to his wife. Because these letters contributed many new details of the American Revolution to our present knowledge, and because they presented to us the real LaFayette, I have taken it upon myself to translate them from the French. Let us peer behind the curtains, and in peering, learn.

April 3, 1778.

My Beloved Wife:

Before I left the sun-kissed shores of France, my dear, I promised you I would write to you at every available opportunity. As I am a man of my word, you will not be surprised that I am writing this letter just one day after my arrival in America. America!

What a horrible place to send a civilized Christian! I believe that there will be plenty of fighting, and that is really what the king sent me over here for. At any rate, I am glad that my army came with me. I might need it.

But let me tell you of the events which have taken place since I last saw your slender figure waving to me from the dock. We stood out to open sea with a fair breeze from the southeast. My gallant fleet spread its white sails as it slipped out on the bosom of the great Atlantic. We were in high spirits, but these were soon lost in the monotony of the voyage. I shall not attempt to tell you the details of the crossing. It was uneventful, unless one would mention a huricane or two. Suffice it to say that I busied myself with wondering what I would wear when I reached New York and by playing checkers with my rear-admiral, M. Rendezvous.

One fine day we saw land, and it was not much later that the tall Metropolitan tower loomed against the sky. I must admit that it presented an impressive scene, but to me the Statue of Liberty was much more interesting. As we entered the harbour a consort of American frigates cruised out to meet us, and, amid the roaring of cannons and two verses of the Star Spangler Banner, we docked.

We docked, my dear wife, but my first desire was to set sail for home again. I do not want to deprecate America, but it is true that I have never seen a more desolate land. As I said before, King Louis must have been crazy to send me over here.

And, wife, I wish you would do your best to put down the rumor that the Dutch bought New York from the Indians. From the way things look, I would say that the Indians bought the town from the Dutch. I had never seen an Indian, and I never want to see another one, but this country is full of them. Why I can never go into a subway without seeing a car-full of the creatures. And ten to one the conductor will be a redskin with a bow and arrow. Most of them are given to chewing gum and cigars. I certainly hope that this tribe will never get over to France.

After I took my army ashore I looked around for a white man. It was not an easy matter to find one, but it was not long before I saw one standing on the corner of Broadway ad Forty-second street. I asked him if he happened to be General Washington, but he answered in the negative. However, he did know where to find the Father of His Country, and he guided me to the office of the great American general.

I found George looking over the baseball scores. It seems that the White Sox had won their first game with the Yankees, and I was immediately informed of the fact. Following this rather enthusiastic outburst, George and I got down to business, and I found him to be a mighty nice fellow. He took me out to lunch at the automat and then up to see a few of the boys. We found Peter Stuyvestant and Governor Morris playing poker with Paul Revere. You have heard of Paul, haven't you, wife dear? He is the chap who won the Kentucky Derby last year. He is very chummy, and told me how Mrs. Stuyvestant uses Peter's wooden leg to mash the potatoes.

Well, he proved friendly enough to let me sit in the game. Which reminds me, please deposit a few more francs in our trust company. I have not yet mastered the art.

I must retire now, but I shall write to you again very soon. Give my love to Mme. Boudoir.

Your Little,
Laffy.

April 28, 1778.

Dear Wife:

It was yesterday that I had the pleasure of witnessing my first fotball game. The Iroquois Indians entertained the great Vassar team and beat them. It was really quite remarkable. The score was nothing to nothing before the game started, but it was not long after the opening whistle that Vassar made six points. They made the six points all at once. But the Vassar team was put at a disadvantage when the Indians scalped the fullback just before the half ended. Arrows flew thick and fast throughout the rest of the game, but the real point of interest came when, with one minute to play, Chief Chang Lee tomahawked the quarterback just as he was about to break away on a long run. After the game the savages did a war dance through town and stole three barber poles.

I left the stadium as soon as I could, for I wanted to get down to the river in time to see Father Marquette pass on his flat boat. I got there just in time to see him presented with a copy of Daniel

NO ECHO NEXT WEEK

On account of the Highland Echo contract, calling for thirty issues for the school year, it is necessary that we suspend operations for one week.

Although the editorial staff is disappointed in being forced to withhold its offerings from its readers, it looks forward to better work after so long a vacation.

All Juniors, Sophomores, and Freshmen are requested to go to Webb's Studio and have pictures made for Chilhowean, beginning, Tuesday, November 5th.

In connection with the booth which Bob West kept last Friday night for the registering of the alumni, Bill Graham and Forrest Robertson had planned to erect another booth where the children of the alumni could be checked and kept safely until the game ended. This was indeed a noble idea and perhaps would have worked well under the supervision of these excellent nursemaids. However, we hear the plans fell thruogh because Bill couldn't find a suitable cap and apron and Forrest began to be afraid that children would not heed his reasoning!

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

Dean Barnes in chapel:
"The results of the freshman psychology test will now be handed out, after which the cheerleaders will please come forward."

Merle Underwood to librarian: "I want a Spanish book that we have to read. I don't know who wrote it."

Aaron Posegate: "I can't understand this mountaineer dialect down here."

Seen on board in Prof. Walker's room: "Alice Renegar functions in terms of secant."

"It takes one tramp to catch another", said Elizabeth Ledford bumping into a man on Main street.

I wonder why the boys wear their coats to supper on Sunday nights. Maybe it's only the weather.

Chicagoan: "Why doesn't it rain hard here and get it over?"

Maryvillian: "This is a southern rain; it doesn't believe in hurrying through life."

"Eyes" for blind flying!

Three new G-E contributions to the conquest of the air

LINDBERGH, flying blind much of the way, hit Ireland "on the nose" as he winged toward Paris. Now, as an aid to air navigation comes the magneto compass, a product of General Electric research, which gives pilots a navigating instrument of extraordinary accuracy.

Meanwhile, two other General Electric contributions to aviation have been developed—the electric gasoline gauge and the radio echo altimeter. The ordinary altimeter shows only height above sea level. The radio echo altimeter warns the pilot of his actual distance above ground or water by flashing green, yellow, and red lights on the instrument board.

Every year hundreds of college-trained men and women enter the employment of General Electric. Research, similar to that which developed "eyes" for blind flying, is one of the many fields of endeavor in which they play an important part.

'Highland Lassies' Remembered Here

Many Girls Earned "M" While at Maryville.

Once upon a time there was a group of girls on the Hill known as the "Highland Lassies". For several years, until the fall of 1928, this group predominated in girls' athletics. It was in the time of "those good old days" when girls' intercollegiate athletics was almost as popular as the activties of the "Highlanders."

The seniors will remember some of the basketball stars of former days, especially Mary Ella Sullivan and Virginia Pearson, wearers of the "M" who were members of the basketball team in 1927, captained by Emily Simpson. Annie Vanderslice was a guard on that same team. After graduating from Maryville with a Magna Cum Laude, Annie attneded a Biblical Seminary in New York. Sally Dickey, from Texas, was on the varsity team all four years, playing guarl.

Jimmie Rule, one of the most popular girls who ever attended Marville, was a member of the '27 squad. Lutie Toole, '29, was a star guard on the same team. Lutie is teaching at Washington College this year. When Emily Minton attended Maryville she made "A" in athletics as well as her acadmeic work. Emily is a teacher at Maryville High now, and we often see her around the campus.

Cross-Country Run To Be Held Nov. 15

On the day of the Maryville-Carson-Newman football game there will be run the annual cross country run, open to all Maryville College men.

The men who are to enter the run this year, should report to Arthur "Shorty" Shaw or Jack Coughlin at once, so that the course may be learned and the men get in shape. If you think or know that you can run don't fail to get into this race for there will be something for the winners. Anyone is eligible.

Proffitt's Department Store has offered a loving cup to the winner, and other prizes for the others. Here's your chance Fellows! Get into this thing and win THAT CUP!

SENIORS BEAT SOPHS IN TAG-FOOTBALL

Nov. 1.—The seniors took the measure of the sophomores in tag football today 13-6, playing in the best game seen yet this season.

The sophs scored first in the second quarter when Hitch caught a punt as it left Shaw's toe, and raced 35 yards for a touchdown.

In the second half, Billy Mayer got on the receiving end of several long passes for sensational gains, finally snagging one for a touchdown after four sophomores had juggled the ball around for a few seconds. The seniors forged further ahead when Sprouse took a pass from Hoyt for another score.

The seniors next play the juniors for the inter-class championship.

A pedestrain is one person who has found that it doesn't pay to go straight.

MORE ABOUT MILLIGAN GAME

who were injured in the Vanderbilt fray last week.

In the first half neither side could gain much of an advantage and each team tried to rely on a defensive game. Passes were few in this half and neither side could gain much by the overhead route. Maryville was in scoring distance once only to fumble and lose the ball and Milligan punted out of danger.

Maryville started out with a rush as the second half began, but again Milligan repulsed the attack. Calloway made several good gains on a cut-back play that was employed by the Honakerites.

During this half Calloway also succeeded in getting off several nice kicks. Maryville played in Milligan's territory a large part of the last half and started an attack by the overhead route. Several real gains were made, Morrison snagged one pass that was good for thirty-five yards.

Milligan also showed an adeptness at the passing game and once succeeded in bringing the ball within Maryville's own twenty-five yard line. Much credit which was due to the Milligan passing attack belonged to Taylor, fullback, who was on the projecting end of all of their passes.

Both teams played a good defensive game but the offensive powers of both did not seem to click to advantage.

This game was the last night game of the year and shows that night football has great possibilities of drawing even larger crowds than daylight games do.

Maryville plays one more home game this season. Carson-Newman comes here for the last game on November 15.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The Highlanders missed the ballotting services of Bonds Friday night.

In fact, Maryville's regular backfield would be hard to pick out on the basis of the playing lineups so far this season.

The Milligan team had a good defnse for most of Maryville's pet plays.

Comment on the seniors' pyrotechnic display has been very favorable.

Doc Morrison used the old noodle on thse pass plays.

It was a god thing for Doc that Tillie Bird wasn't there to yell "Where's Iry" every time he could not find "Iry" in the huddle for signals.

Apparently Jean McMurray didn't study under Coach Honaker several years for nothing.

Although the old grads did not see their Alma Mater in victory this time, they certainly saw some mighty good football played by both teams.

Guess it will be another whole year before we moonshine under the floodlights again.

Who's Who Among The Highlanders

Louis Reed, better known as "Louie", is playing his second year of football at Maryville College. Louie didn't come out until near the close of last year's practice, but he has been working hard this year and is due to earn his letter in football as well as in basketball. Louie captained last year's Highlander quintet and he has yet another year at the Hill.

Millard Tolliver comes from Kentucky and he has proved that the hills raise big boys. Tolliver is one of the biggest fellows on the squad and makes up for this disadvantage by possessing a great amount of the vital factor called "fight". Tolliver failed to letter last year but has seemed to hit his stride this year and should make a valuable man on the gridiron.

Tom Cash has rapidly developed under Coach Thrower's tutelege and now he is able to fill such big shoes as Hope's and Carper's, that is if any such calamity should happen. Cash has proved his metal so far this season and by next year he ought to be playing regular. He is classified as a junior.

Welch Bowman is the product of one of Maryville College's former athletes, Pat Shores. Bowman can

HIGHLANDERS PLAY LENOIR-RHYNE NEXT

Honakerites Away From Home This Week.

The last illuminated football game of the season was played Friday night, and now those who are looking forward to another home game will have to await the coming battle with Carson-Newman on November 16th. In the meantime the Highlanders will journey to Asheville, N. C. to engage in a tilt with the Lenoir-Rhyne College.

The Carolinians have been showing very good form and a hard fight is expected. Although they have suffered a few defeats still they have faced some severe foes, so let's all back the team when it leaves on November 7th.

Maryville's recent tie with Milligan has given the team a little more of the old revengeful spirit and now watch Lenoir-Rhyne, Carson-Newman, and Emory and Henry bow before our unconquerable backfield.

As for reactions to our Alma Mater, they are favorable. If we were to preach, we'd advise everybody at Maryville to study his lessons and to be good liitle boys and girls who heed carefully the injunctions, propositions and chronologies of their dear teachers. Five of the above alumni are able to recite in Hebrew the first five verses of the Bible. Now we ask you, is that not an accomplishment That ought to be put in the annals of the College for preservation.

Two copies of the Echo reach the Seminary more or less regularly each week. They go the rounds so that we all have the pleasure of reading your paper. You'll forgive us for not having eight copies coming here. You know what it means to go to school, have the expenses connected therewith, and have occasional (or oftener) dates.

At the present time we are preparing for our Centennial Celebration. Dr. Wilson is expected to arrive tonight. We are all looking forward to seeing him. Frei, DeHaven, and Conrad are on the committee to register our guests, and so we shall see him and make him welcome.

More power to you always,
Ed Conrad.

P. S.—Ernest was so busy as chairman of the committee receiving guests for the Centennial that he turned this job over to me.

The following are excerpts from a personal letter to the editor:

Dear Jesse:

School has settled down to the ruts, and I feel like the preacher who was addressing the tailors' convention, and used for his text the words, "only a remnant shall be saved." If I pull through this year, I'll be a marvelous man.

All nonsense aside, it is wonderful here. The beautiful campus, the excitement of being a part of a famous university town and the university itself—the vast fields of knowledge that open up to the explorer, and the fellowship with man and God,—all combine to make life here ideal.

We are eight—we Maryvillians, Usner, Wood, Wriggins, Harold, Franklin, Tull, Fell and myself. All in Alexander—very much like home! Quiet and peaceful like Carnegie!

I made the quartet, so still try to sing for a living.

Regards,
Red Courtenay.

Dear Marywillians:

It seems good to be an alumnus of Maryville College, to meet people everywhere I go who know about our alma mater, and to be out in life rubbing shoulders with the practical man of affairs, yet, I am constantly reminding myself of the four swift joyous years I spent at Maryville. Here it is a struggle, not the kind of struggle some people are accustomed to, but a fight for the necessities of life, there you have life in its fullest, moonshining, friendships some of them worth a million, a team to yell for, hot dogs on Saturday, and occasionly you pause long enough to let studying interfere with your education. All in all college days are the best days.

May we alumni never forget the Maryville spirit, may the team fight as have all Maryville team, may you students make the most of your college life because you will need it later.

Sincerely yours,
Florian Hopkins.

TRIANGLE CLUB

Oct. 21—That there is considerable interest among the members of the Triangle Club in forming a more stable organization than has been the practice heretofore was brought out in a discussion at a meeting in Theta Hall this evening. Due to the increased membership over previous years it was decided that the club draw up a constitution and have more meetings than in the past. No definite action was taken on the matter.

The following program was presented:

Webster's new dictionary. It was a wonderful volume done in eel skin.

Following this public demonstration we returned to the Betsy Ross Cafe where we caught the old girl just about to sew on the fourteenth star. Fortunately, George knew the correct number of states in the union and made her take off two of the stars.

After singing three stanzas of Marching through Georgia we left for the Boston tea party. A couple of minute men were striking the hour just as we arrived. I drank three cups of tea offered by John Adams and was just reaching for more when we were interrupted by John Brown's raid. John thought he could stage a Fourth of July celebration with a can of powder, but we stopped him.

Upon our return to Philadelphia we found Tom Edison and Henry Ford standing on the street corner trying to decide which one of them had discovered the sewing machine.

Nothing else to-day, dear wife.

Teacher: Johnny, if your father could save one dollar a week for four weeks, what would he have?

Modern child (promptly): A radio, an eletric refrigerator, a new suit and a lot more furniture.

Book Agent to Farmer: You ought to buy an encyclopedia now that your boy is going to school.

Father: Not on our life. Let him walk, the same as I did.

I wonder what is the occasion of the assemblage of new faces at the faculty table. New faculty members? We believe not. Just a few students who have attained proficiency in the tossing of water and bread et cetera.

Janet McCreight: "He had a farm on which he reared boys."

Willie: What did I learn today, teacher?

Teacher: Why do you ask?

Willie: They'll want to know at home.

Prof. Griffitts: Last year an unheard of thing happened—a student flunked out of college and passed my course.

Raulston: He just studied chemistry and went nuts, that's all.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

When we leave our Alma Mater and scatter throughout the world it is not to forget. Memories linger with those of us who go away, and bring us back to the "Home Coming". The activities on the Hill cause us to live again the by-gone college days. And those of us still here appreciate the interest of our older friends and realize their sincerity.

—:—

Seieng so many alumni recalls to our memory many of those who held Maryville's head high from the view of forensics. Just to mention their names causes an emphatic jesture.

—:—

There was Sam Horace Franklin, a famous debater who won so many medals that he needed a chest to keep them in (a considerable extent of it was gold coin, however). He won the Rush Strong Medal in '21, the Alexander prize '22, and the Bates prize '24.

—:—

Then there was Edward Cornelius who was college orator for three years. He won the College Medal in '23, the French Medal in '24, and the Alexander prize in '24.

—:—

Lina Hodges, a debater and a member of the Highland Echo Staff, on the Temperance prize in '22.

—:—

The record of Professor Verton M. Queener, our own coach, is more fascinating than a biography of Franklin or Richelieu.

—:—

Someone has said: "Nature formed but one Betty Keown, and then broke the die."

—:—

We remeber one occasion when the "Honorable Opponents" of Defoe Pemberton so thoroughly convinced the judges that he had just delivered a wonderful oration on the debate platform that they gave him the count.

—:—

We also remember the time that Nelle Watkins answered a question of her "Worthy Opponents" before they had time to record it.

—:—

The end of a list of such famous ones is only an interrupted thought.

—:—

Question in Theism test: "Is it (the moral argument) "or is it not considered a strong argument? Answer 'yes' or 'no'."

—:—

Well, "yes". I'll bite. Which is it?

Hessie Keaton: "It's fun being a girl, though. It's like being a martyr to a great cause."

Tom Whitehead: "Screen stars are typical women."

Opening Program Of Glee Singers Given Next Mon.

Operetta, "Cleopatra", Will Furnish Comedy; Crawford Talks on Program.

SEVEN NEW MEN IN CLUB

Solos, Quartets, Ensemble Effects, Promise To Please Audience.

The Maryville College Glee Singers will open the 1929-30 Season in Voorhees Chapel on November 25, at eight o'clock. The chorus of sixteen voices is preparing to give Maryvillians a program that will rank with any presented on the Hill this year. Seven new men are helping to uphold the reputation which the organization has enjoyed in former years.

The first half of the program consists of novelties and numbers by the chorus and quartet. It ends in a grandioso with the singing of "The Lost Chord".

"Corky" Crawford will fascinate and please the audience with a chalk talk during the intermission.

A feature this season is the program to be presented in the last half of the entertainment. The comic opera, "Cleopatra", a burlesque of modern college life, is expected to provide a laugh a minute. William, a student is lamenting the faet that "Cleopatra", his sweetheart, is receiving attentions from other men. He decides to disguise himself as a ghost in order to frighten his rivals away. When "Cleo" is having a big time with a group of students, the ghost appears and frightens everyone away. One by one, Pompey, Anthony, and Caesar are interrupted in their wooing.

Other troubles arise, and "Cleo" all but commits suicide. The action of the lovers in the meantime adds interest to the performance. The plot is developed to a satisfactory end through humor and comedy with many surprises.

William T. Swaim, Jr., a former Maryville student and a graduate of U. T., was recently elected president of his class in Western Theological Seminary, in Pittsburg.

Last year Bill was awarded a $50.00 cash prize for making "A" in all his courses in the Seminary. He will complete his Seminary work next year.

DEAN SOUDER IS ILL

Forced To Relinquish Duties And Return Home.

Dean Souder entered upon his work as Dean of Men in September last with every prospect of a successful year. Unhappily, however, he had hardly more than begun his work when he suffered a recurrence of an illness that sent him to a hospital in Minneapolis last winter. He had made such a good recovery last spring that the specialist who had charge of his case gave him a perfectly good bill of health.

Since he could not throw off his illness as he wished, he decided, with the approval of physicians, to return home for the rest of the college year, with the hope of entirely recovering, so as to be able a year hence to take up again the deanship of men at Maryville.

Students and faculty all regret very much Dean Souder's illness, and they hope earnestly for his steady and complete recovery. He is a worthy representativ of old Maryville.

News of his safe arrival at his home, at Milbank, South Dakota, came to hand last week.

'FAMILY UPSTAIRS' BY COLLEGE PLAYERS TONIGHT IN CHAPEL

College Actors Perform In Comedy Coached by Mrs. Veech.

"The Family Upstairs", a comedy of typical American family life, is being presented tonight at eight o'clock in the chapel by the College Players.

The Family is the kind we all know. There isn't a single member that wouldn't die for every other member, yet they indulge in the usual family rows.

Hazel Bowers and Leland Gilmore,, as Louise Heller and Charles Grant will give new ideas to old moonshiners.

The annoying kid sister, and even more annoying 17-year-old brother, Lois Dillow and Bill Graham, run true to type.

There is a younger brother in the Grant family, too. His part is played by Bob Crothers. Mrs. Grant is Edith Woolsey.

The Family have a neighbor, Miss Calahan, Dorothy Marshall combines this part with her duties as property manager.

Faith Taylor is stage-manager.

The Family, with its scrapes, scraps, and merry times, Father Heller (Stanley McCool) scolding the youngsters, Mother (Gladys Graham) trying to be sure that Louise marries the right man, and so on, furnish a very interesting and amusing evening's etertainment.

This play was presented in Birmigham by professionals a year ago, and was well received, and promises to be a big success here.

Y. W. PLAYS LARGE PART IN ACTIVITIES

Plans Now Include Sale of Christmas Cards.

The Y. W. C. A. is one of these organizations which always seems to be in perpetual motion, never stopping in the good work it promotes the year through at Maryville.

The latest undertaking of the Y. W., although an annual one, is the selling of Christmas cards. It is hoped in this way among other ways, to raise money for the new building, for which plans have been submitted. At present the motto is, "Buy your Christmas cards from Y. W."

Five days of every week, girls go down to the Mission in Battle Branch and lead the children in games, songs, and other means of recreation and entertainment. This community work is also extended to the Orphanage where Y. W. conducts a big sister movement with the children there. Special programs are arranged at definite times for the boys and girls. The service rendered in this respect is of great

Heart Attack Keeps Senior Confined To Bed

Being compelled to stay in bed for weeks at a time does not seem to dishearten our friend at the left, for she directs many college activities from her home with the same thoroughness and dispatch that she did when she was a regular student here.

Helen Crowder, a member of the class of '30, was stricken with a heart attack before school opened this year and has been confined to her bed ever since. Helen was elected president of Theta Epsilon for the year, and had made many plans for the fall rush week. These plans she directed from her bed despite the fact that she could not see them put into action. To Helen goes much of the credit for the success of the society this fall.

Having a great deal of time in which to do nothing in particular, and as she herself will tell you, with no place to go and nothing to spend but the days, one can do a lot of work that we who have a larger freedom cannot do. For instance, Helen has planned the Thanksgiving entertainment offered by the "Y" each year, and she is even looking forward to the festival of May Day with plans already suggesting themselves to her as she is recuperating.

The dog she is so fondly studying is not of the live variety, but is one of the things her many friends have sent her to keep her in good spirits.

Helen lives just a block from the campus and would be glad to see any of her friends when they have a moment's leisure.

TEN FROSH CHOSEN 'ECHO' APPRENTICES

Results Are Close in Contest; Papers Very Good.

The freshman apprentices have been chosen and are already at work. The process of selection was rather complicated, for the papers or themes were first graded by the English teachers and then given over to the Committee on Selection, consisting of a faculty representative, Dr. Hunter, a student council representative, Louise Carson, and a Highland Echo representative, Jesse Peirce. This committee submitted twenty-five of the best papers to the joint faculty and Highland Echo committee which is composed of Dr. Hunter, Dr. Hussey, Professor Davis, Jesse Peirce, Forrest Robertson, Hessie Keeton, and Edith Nash. This committee elected from the twenty-five best, ten apprentices who are Mabel Frost, Alma Hatmaker, Margaret Melody, Rosemary Shoopman, Roberta Robinson, Winn Barr, Aubrey Bradshaw, Gordon Benn, William Cudney and William Patterson.

Selecting the apprentices was no easy task for there were many well written papers under consideration.

E. Leslie Jones Dies

E. Leslie Jones, brother of Miss Anne Jones, registrar of the College, died at his home on Wilson Avenue, November 7th., and was buried in Charlestown, Ind. the 9th. A sister in Indiana also survives.

BAINONIANS, ATH'NS PICK MID-WINTERS

"East is West", "The Cardinal" To Be Given After Christmas.

Nov. 15—After very extensive searching in the realms of dramatics for Mid-Winter plays the Athenian and Bainonian Dramatic Committees have made their choices. It is an arduous task, but the committees have worked faithfully and are well pleased with what they have found.

The Athenian Literary Society will present "The Cardinal" by Louis N. Parker, January 13, 1930. Forrest I. Robertson, chairman of the committee said: "This is one of the most dramatic productions I have ever seen. It should grip the interest of a Maryville audience." The play is in the period of about 1500 and the scene is laid in Rome.

The Bainonian committee of which Muriel Hall is chairman has selected "East is West" by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer. This will be given February 24, 1930. The Bainonian Society won the Loving Cuv given by Theta Alpha Phi last year, and an effort will be made to retain the cup this year.

Government Position Open

The United States Government has a position open for a student well versed in Chemistry. The title is Junior Chemist, and the renumeration to start is $2000. Anyone interested may get a detailed report of it from the Echo Office.

'GOD, GREAT REALITY' THEME OF WORLD WEEK OF PRAYER

Students Conduct Worship At Chapel Exercises Each Day.

During the past week the young people of the world have been observing a time of prayer. The purpose of this week of prayer is to unite all young people in fellowship and meditation about God. The theme for the week was "God the Great Reality."

The services on College Hill, conducted under the auspices of Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. began Sunday with a sunrise prayer meeting. The main feature of this service was a talk by Dr. Knapp on the subject "The Eternal God."

The subject for Tuesday was "God, the Father of All Men", with Louise Carson leading. Wednesday's subject was "God in the Experience of Man"; the leader was Stuart James. On Thursday the subject of Dr. Stevenson's sermon was "God through Christ". Frank Neff played on the organ Handel's Hallelujah Chorus. On Friday Viola Pettit gave a talk on the subject "God through Christ". Hayden Laster conducted Saturday's service on the subject "Faith and Worship."

We have enjoyed these chapel services conducted by the young people's leaders. A week of prayer is a week of inspiration and of renewed zeal for right living. Truly did the poet speak who said,

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

DR., MRS. ALEXANDER GIVE ENGLISH PRIZE

English Students Offered Award For Grades.

A great many students will be interested to know that through the generous provision of Dr. and Mrs. John M. Alexander there is provided annually, beginning with the preset year, a prize award to be given to the member of the Senior Class, who, during his college course, has made the best record in English.

The conditions of the award are: that (1) the student have taken at Maryville at least twenty-one semester hours of English courses which are applicable to a Major or Minor sequence in English; that (2) the student have been in attendance at Maryville College for at least four semesters.

The determination of the award is to be based upon grade averages in classroom work, together with the students' record of participation in extra-curricular literary activities. The final decision of the award is to be made on the basis of these factors by a committee consisting of the English faculty. This prize is to be known as the "Alexander English Prize". The amount of the

Injuries Keeps Scoring Small In Last Home Game

Parsons Hold Orange and Garnet Eleven to 0-0 In First Half.

WATKINS, STOREY GOOD

Second String Men Get To Show Form on Soggy Gridiron.

The flashy running of Calloway and the heavy charging line proved too much for the mighty Fighting Parsons, and they were forced to submit to a 12-0 score on the local field.

The Highlanders played the best game witnessed on local field during this season. Perhaps the fact that some of them were playing their last home game for the Alma Mater was instrumental in bringing the winning score out of the morass and mud.

The heavy charging line together with the paralysis of their passing attack by the mud, and the repeated gains by the Orange and Garnet backfield spelled defeat for the visitors. The Maryville line crashed through the Carson-Newman line repeatedly to stop the back's for losses.

In the first two periods the teams seemed well matched but at the beginning of the third quarter the Highlanders struck their stride and gave the Parsons a real fight.

The fact that the field was slick and muddy made the game a little slower than usual, but the mud soaked ball and the lakes and swamps were of no avail when the Highlanders planted their ball over the tally line twice.

Calloway was the outstanding star of the game. He repeatedly out-witted the opposing team and dashed through for substantial gains, scoring both touchdowns.

The line-up was as follows:

Maryville		Carson-Newman
Benn	E.	Howard
Hope	T.	Lawson
Storey	G.	Wolfe
Watkins	C.	Kelley
Tolliver	G.	Gambil
Overly	T.	Harwood
Cherry	E.	Sherwood
Taggart	Q.B.	Iddins
Peacock	H.B.	Allen
Calloway	H.B.	Taylor
Morrison	F.B.	Bowman

Substitutes were: Maryville—Woddard, Benn, Cash, Teffeteller, Smith, Bowman, Ferguson, Blair, Atkins.

BARN WARMING 28TH

Celebrate Thanksgiving With Rustic Festival.

A barn warming will be held in the Alumni Gymnasium on Thanksgiving evening, November 28. This entertainment is sponsored by the Y. M. and Y. W. organizations and has become an annual event on the Hill. Olive Clopton and Kemp Davis are the committee in charge of the program, which will consist of stunts, music, and games. Any suggestions for making the program more enjoyable and snappy will be gladly received by those in charge.

Miss Mollie had given her consent for a minstrel in the chapel but the organizations have been unable to execute the plans for a successful performance of this kind. The suggestion and plans for the Minstrel came from Helen Crowder, and it is hoped that they can be carried out at a later date.

So come clad in simple array for the barn warming. There will be fiddling, joking, and general merriment throughout the evening.

NOVEL COURSE DISCLOSES ASTRONOMICAL WONDERS

The most interesting astronomy class of the year was held last Monday afternoon from one o'clock until three o'clock. This was a special session. Since it proved a greater success than any of the preceding special sessions, all of which have been held at night, this class will hereafter meet every Monday afternoon.

"Each member of the class will immediately direct his telescope toward the Maryville Pair Orchard," said Dr. Knapp very soon after the class had assembled, "for there is no time to be lost in observing the interesting phenomena.

"Now," said Dr. Knapp, after looking twice to be sure that everybody was ready for instructions, "we shall proceed. Here, in front of Thaw Hall, are the first stars to be observed. You will instantly perceive that the larger one is mooning over the smaller. Is every telescope focused on this nebula?" the instructor asked, looking about the class. "The larger one can be seen quite clearly, and is easily located by the halo about what is called the "head". The other is dark and is brought to the attention of such distant observers as we only by flashes from the depths of a darkness which has been named "eye", "eyes" in the plural. Everyone, upon close observation, will notice this queer insignia in flame, which is on both of them." Dr. Knapp turned to the blackboard and drew a circle about the figures "30".

"Next you will direct your telescopes toward the grassy slope across the street from Baldwin Hall. There, resting in the topmost boughs of a tree, is an air bubble. Encased in the bubble is a beautiful building, which you will at once recognize by its architecture as a Spanish castle. Penetrating more deeply into this phenomenon, we see two parts of the constellation standing over a harpsichord of futuristic design. These two also wear that same odd insignia, but it has been dulled by the years. The third part of this constellation is seated at the harpischord. Small digits extending from it move up and down the keyboard. That is neither lightning nor a comet which flashes between the two standing.

"The most mystifying and inexplicable phenomenon of the day is yet to be seen. Focus your telescopes upon the spot, at the rear of Anderson Hall, from whence all those flames are coming. There you see two parts of a constellation. The one seems to———."

The bell rang just as Dr. Knapp reached that point, and the class adjourned until the next Monday afternoon.

Student Trade

Do students appreciate the support given the college by the business men of the community? We are aware that the support is, at least in part, an attempt to direct the student trade, but that is no more than we expect. It is not our purpose here to advise anybody to spend more money—that is the pleasure of the advertisers. We feel, however, that we do have a right to ask students to patronize those merchants who think the student trade is worthwhile and who appreciate it enough to support the paper.

We ask the students to glance through the advertising section and notice who our advertisers are, and to remember them the next time they go to town to make a purchase. It takes no longer and no more money to buy from the men who are willing to turn back to the school a part of the profit they realize, and without which our publications would be impossible.

Patronize the Merchants who advertise in the Highland Echo!

One Thing More

In a letter to the editor recently, a graduate went to considerable length to describe the physical unfitness of several men who entered graduate school after finishing here. Only one man out of eight passed the physical examination. Maryville was severely criticised by the examiner. This caused us to think, for some reason.

We were able to point to one or two examples of physical deficiency here which we feel might have been avoided if proper care had been exercised. Again we thought.

We need a system of physical examination that will compel the students to keep themselves in good health all the time. There are many minor details of health that only an examination by a competent physician can reveal, and students usually do not have this examination made of their own accord. When students enter most schools they are compelled to undergo a rigid physical examination. If any defects are present, they must be corrected within a limited time. We feel the need of such a system here at Maryville.

The physicians from town very generously provide us with free clinic service at intervals during each week. This we appreciate and would not like to lose. Might we not arrange with these doctors to have an examination of all students made with little added expense to the students or the college?

We are charged a fee for athletics, lyceums, the library and so forth. A nominal fee for medical service would be gladly welcomed by the student body if the facts were taken into consideration.

We are not trying to argue for such a step. That we need it is obvious. How to obtain it is something we suggest be taken up by the student council.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom and mercy has seen fit to call unto Himself the brother of our friends and classmates, Richard and William Marston, we, the members of the Junior and Freshman Classes assure the bereaved family of our heartfelt sympathy and prayers.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be read in chapel, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy printed in the Highland Echo.

MOUNTAIN HIKE

Sunshine proved to be a very acceptable place for holding the Fall Mountain Hike this year. Since the hike was held later than usual, it was thought that Tremont, which was also considered for the outing, would be unfavorable on account of weather conditions and the distance. About two hundred saw fit to take part in this Fall Diversion and apparently enjoyed it thoroughly.

The porches of the numerous summer cottages ere very convenient shelters from the occasional showers which occurred throughout the day. Of course the scenery was not as beautiful as it was several weeks ago, yet the invigorating mountain air and steep climbing gave the hikers much vigorous exercise and excellent appetites.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEETING

The Ministerial Association met on Wednesday night, Nov. 13, in Athenian Hall. The chairmen of the various committees gave reports on the work which the respective committees are doing. Ed Cooper reported that the Almshouse Committee is doing much personal work and that many boys are interested in conducting this work. Paul Edris next gave an account of the work being carried on in the country churches, which afford a great deal of training to those interested in Christian work. Al Duff and Hayden Laster told of the problems which have to be met at the Mission and what has already been done to meet these problems and needs. After the Mission report, James Fenemore related the work which is being successfully carried on at the jail. Finally, Ira Morrison announced that the annual party of the Association would be held next Monday afternoon.

Esther Horton: "Ibanez was born in Valencia and died in January."

RESOLUTIONS

God in His infinite mercy and wisdom has called to himself the mother of our dear classmate, Miss Dorothy Drake, and we of the Freshman Class of Maryville College extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy, praying that the Triune God will assuage their grief.

THE OPEN FORUM

Long ago in ages past, it was customary for girls to stay in their homes, sheltered from wind and weather, passing the time away by tedious embroidery and fine sewing. No wonder they were pale and weak. They were restricted from exercise, the thing which every human being ought to have. They were taught to believe that exercise was "unlady-like".

In this enlightened age, however, everyone knows that exercise is a necessary thing. All health rules require at least one hour of exercise a day. Is Maryville College old fashioned, that she is not providing adequate opportunities for exercise for the girls? There are two gymnasiums belonging to the college, but the boys have the use of these nearly all the time, besides having two handball courts. Girls may use the large gymnasium one hour a week for the class team to practice soccer, or the sport then in season. Even then there are many who do not care for that game, or who can not come at the special time that the gymnasium is allotted to the girls. Is one hour a week enough exercise to build healthy, strong bodies

Tennis cannot be depended on very much because there is only one court for each of the girls' dormitories, and one of these lacks a net. How can so many play on one court? Besides, Maryville weather soon puts a stop to tennis. The swimming pool is open at specified hours for the girls, but many have classes or other duties which keep them away from that form of exercise. Anyway, there are many who cannot swim and so would not get much exercise from that source.

What is needed for the girls in Maryville College is an equipped gymnasium with a locker room and showers adjoining, where girls may go individually or in groups at any time of the day they have time, and where they can exercise in whatever fashion interests them most. Of course we could not expect to have this right away, but there should be some provision made immediately for those girls who would like to exercise every day. There are two vacant rooms on the third floor of Anderson Hall, which are not being used for anything. If the girls were allowed one of these rooms and a little equipment—such as, a tumbling mat, a pair of parallel bars, and some swinging rings—it would be a big help. Of course this temporary arrangement would not be adequate to meet the needs of all the girls, but it would help out until more could be provided.

We have been asked why we do not engage in some kind of regular exercise, so our muscles would not be so flabby. We would if we had the chance. Of course, girls do not need bulging muscles, but what we have should be strong, not flabby. This is not directed against any supervisor, but is a plea for the consideration of the health, development, and interests of the girls.

Signed,
Athletic Girls.

Calloway Looms as Triple-Threat Man In Emory-Henry Struggle

Honakerites Trounce Lenoir-Rhyne 20-7

Taggart Shows Rare Form In Broken Field Gallop

Nov. 9—Asheville, N. C.

Tearing his way through the Lenoir-Rhyne forward wall for repeated gains, Calloway, Maryville's fleet-footed halfback led the Highlanders to a well earned 20 to 7 victory over the Lenoir-Rhyne "Bears" at the Memorial Stadium field before a large but quiet gathering of fans.

Coach Gurley's Bears drew first blood scoring a touchdown late in the first quarter. Punts were exchanged by the two teams and after failing to gain through Maryville's powerful line, Lenoir-Rhyne completed a 30 yard pass, Hager to Lemon, who scored the Bears' only touchdown of the game. This was a very deceptive pass and was well executed by the Lenoir-Rhyne offensive.

From then on Maryville seemed to take on new life. Calloway started his brilliant line plunging, but as he couldn't carry the ball all the time, Maryville was held for downs near the center of the field and Calloway punted out of bounds on Lenoir-Rhyne's six yard line. The Bears failed to gain and punted to Taggart who returned the ball to the 23 yard marker. From here Maryville used a series of line plays to put over her first touchdown. Calloway made the touchdown and also added the extra point a moment later. For the rest of the half Calloway and Jones engaged in a punting luel with neither having an advantage.

As the third quarter began so did the punting duel between Calloway and Jones. Calloway kicked out of bounds on the 10 yard line and a moment later Tolliver blocked Jones' kick and Maryville recovered the ball. Maryville failed to gain and an attempted field goal by Bowman was blocked by Rhyne. A few moments later a punt was returned for Maryville's second touchdown. Calloway again made the extra point.

Led by the dashing Calloway Maryville made her final touchdown as the game neared a close. Calloway made a run of 35 yards before being forced out of bounds, and a few seconds later he made the remaining 30 yards and Maryville's final touchdown. Little did it matter that he missed the extra point for according to the Carnegie Foundation News Bulletin he had earned his week's wages and then some.

Calloway was the outstanding man on the field but Jones and Kiser also gave a good account of themselves.

FOOTBALL FORECAST

The following scores are predicted by the Echo for this week.

Yale— 7	Harvard— 0
Indiana— 0	Purdue—13
Michigan—10	Iowa— 6
Northwestern— 6	Notre Dame—14
Navy—18	W. Va. Wesleyan— 0
Army—20	Ohio Wesleyan— 7

Due to Thanksgiving Day games in the Southern Conference, none will be played this week. The Echo will predict these games next week.

CROSS COUNTRY

Nov. 15—The annual Fall cross-country race was held this afternoon during the Carson-Newman game. Results of the run over the five-mile course are:

Davis, first; Taylor, second; Booher, third. Time: 34 minutes.

The winner receives a silver loving cup donated by Proffitt's, second place a gold medal, and third place a silver medal.

Orange and Garnet Hopes Rest on Flashy Halfback to Hoist Flag of Victory Saturday

Coach Honaker Points Squad For Final Test of Season; Stiff Opposition Expected From Virginians.

Our ancesors have always said that the last is always best. Whether this is true in all respects is not to be proved, but so far as Maryville is concerned her last football game is bound to be the best game of the year.

Of the teams composing the Smoky Mountain Conference, Emory and Henry and Maryville have the best claims for the football crown of 1929. Emory-Henry has won all of her conference games and Maryville has also won from her Conference opponents with the exception of a scoreless tie that was played with Milligan here this year.

Emory and Henry had previously beaten Milligan and this puts Jean McMurray's fine team out of the running. On Armistice Day Emory and Henry journeyed to Bristol and gained a 28-14 verdict over J. G. Lowe's King College Tornado, a team that Maryville won from by the score of 15-6. This gives Emory and Henry the dope advantage on Maryville.

Regardless of the outcome the Emory and Henry team boasts of one of the best drilled combinations of the school's career. They have several outstanding men in their camp. Some of the better known of them are Littlejohn, Cather, Moore, Mackay and others of equal ability. Moore and Mackay make two of the finest ends in the Conference, and they are both sure of every pass that is heaved in their direction. Littlejohn's ability to punt, pass or run with the ball has proved many a weary day's work for some coach.

Maryville will enter the fray as the under-dog, but you can't keep a good team down; and this is exactly what you may expect to see when Maryville launches into her last game of the 1929 football season at Emory, Virginia on November 23rd.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The last few football contests here have disclosed a noticeable fact.

The Highlanders' threat as a grid machine becomes more dangerous when they break their habit of playing straight football and open up a little.

Coach Honaker's bag of tricks will be tested thoroughly this week up at Emory-Henry.

In playing for the Smoky Mountain Conference Championship, the Highlanders will meet a foe worthy of their mettle.

Capt. McDonald will be back in the game, after nursing an injury for two weeks.

We predict that Mac will play one of the best games of his career.

Several of the boys will be donning Orange and Garnet football togs for the last time.

It will take everything the Highlanders have to conquer the Emory-Henry warriors.

Will you be there to back them up?

SENIORS CAP LAURELS IN TAG FOOTBALL

Nov. 9—The Senior class won the Interclass tag football championship, defeating the Juniors 6 to 0. The game was hard-fought and very even.

The Seniors scored the lone tally of the game late in the third period when Sprouse pulled the old hide-out trick and received a 25 yard pass from Brown for a touchdown. The try for the extra point failed.

The Juniors threatened early in the game, getting the ball on the Senior's one yard line, after blocking a punt. A try for a field goal failed, and the ball went over to the Seniors.

The Juniors were seriously handicapped by the absence of their Captain, Shelley. Sprouse was the star for Seniors, while Nelson played a great game for the Juniors.

Final results of the tag football tournament gives the Seniors 5 points, the Juniors three, and the Sophomores and Freshman one-half point each, toward the class cup.

Freshman: "I wish I were dumb so I'd have some excuse for flunking four of my subjects."

GIRLS' SWIMMING

Saturday, November 9, at 3:30, Bainonian and Theta fought for honors in swimming. The meet went to Bainonian by a high score but Theta fought hard and in losing showed good sportsmanship. The winners of the various events were as follows:

Breast stroke	Bain. C. Cushman
Side stroke	Theta C. Foster
Crawl stroke	Bain. H. Vale
Back stroke	Bain. R. Buchanan
Tub race	Bainonian
25 Yard Free style	Bain. H. Vale
Plunge (dis.)	Bain. P. Henry
25 Yd. Back Stroke	Bain. P. Henry
Cracker Race	Theta D. Drake
Polo Game	Bainonian
Dives	Theta I. Hamrick

The final score was 51-27 in favor of Bainonian. There are some excellent swimmers out this year, and Jack Coughlin believes he has good material for a varsity, having already received bids from several schools. The pool will be open from ten to eleven-thirty on Monday mornings for those wishing to pass their life saving tests.

Eva Ellis, reading some old English in an 1825 grammar, exclaimed, "Why, how can you compare 'wife'? Here's: wife, wifer, wifest."

Frosh Student Wins Girls' Tennis Crown

Fall Tournament Completed After Hectic Weather.

The girls' tennis tournament sponsored by Y.W.C.A. has finally come to a close after a successful, but rather delayed season, due to the rain. Successful, with regard to the sportsmanship exhibited, and to the number of girls who entered.

At the beginning of the tournament there were approximately fifty entrants and last week that number had dwindled to the two final contestants, "Nez" Hamrick, and Kitty Hodges, with Nez the winner. Margaret Haynie and Pauline Howe were eliminated in the semi-finals.

Nez comes to us from Pennsylvania; and says that she has played tennis about as long as she can remember. She has a strong, slean-out serve and a swift well-placed return. Best of all, Nez is a peach of a sport. Her "victims" are witnesses to that fact, although in her playing she put a lot of the upperclassmen to shame.

Eight Maryville Women Visit Berea College

Miss Clemmie Henry, Miss Mollie Caldwell Among Visitors To Kentucky.

Eight women, including Mrs. Chandler, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Koella, Mrs. John Webb, Miss Elizabeth Smith, Miss Clemmie Henry, and Miss Mollie Caldwell, took a short trip to Berea, Kentucky. They left Maryville early Tuesday morning, November 5, and returned Wednesday evening, November 6.

They visited the Berea Industrial School, which has an enrollment of two thousand, and which is composed of the college proper, the normal school, the high school, grade school, and kindergarten.

Among the interesting things which they saw were the Churchill Weavers, a nationally known concern for the weaving of fine materials; the College Baker, which furnishes the town as well as the college with pastries, breads, and cakes; and the Boone Tavern, a hotel which is run by the college, and where they were entertained.

Mr. Weir, now acting dean in one of the departments there, and a former student of Maryville, with Mr. Kenneth Leisenring, brother of Frances Leisenring who is a student here, showed the group around.

It was an interesting trip, and Miss Caldwell advises anyone who has the opportunity to visit there to do so.

Annual Pillow Fight

Carnegie Prepares For Row and Then Disbands.

About 10:30 last Sunday night the third and fourth floors of Carnegie Hall suddenly quieted down. If a person could have seen through the doors, he might have been surprised to see the occupants of the rooms on fourth floor waiting in tense eagerness for any sound of strife. He would also have seen them gripping brooms, pillows, basins of water and various other deadly articles of warfare. The members of the third floor were similarly equpped and were also intently alert. It had been rumored about that Mr. Mac had already bought several one way tickets and would probably buy some more. Some one also mentioned that Prof. Proffitt was perfectly willing to finance a cause as worthy as the one Mr. Mac had in mind. However, no tickets were bought. The occupants of both the third and fourth floors, after waiting impatiently for about 15 minutes went quietly to bed. There was no fight that night—but sometime it will break! It did—Friday night.

ALEXANDER ENGLISH AWARD

prize is twenty-five dollars, which will eventually be increased to sixty dollars.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Alexander have made contributions to the college in past years, having given many valuable books to the library. Mrs. Alexander has been a teacher twenty-five years and Dr. Alexander is an active minister. This award should stimulate new itnerest in our already strong English Department.

New Piano Is Pride Of Music Department

Best Obtainable, and Much Needed Is Baldwin Instrument.

A valuable addition has been made to the equipment of the Music Department of Maryville College in the form of a fine Baldwin piano. It was purchased recently and made its first appearance, on the Hill at the Fall Festival of Music.

The Department of Music is to be congratulated on having so elegant an instrument. It is the product of the skill and resources of one of the largest of piano-houses—the Baldwin Company. It is of the very flower of their work, both in quantity and quality. As to quantity, it is the largest piano they make. As to quality—one needs only to listen to it at a chapel service. It has excellent tone productive qualities. Everything about it goes to show that it is a high-class instrument. Provided that good care is taken of it, it should see many years of service on the Hill.

Not only is Miss Hale pleased with the improvement, but it is satisfactory to all. Miss Hale remarked, "Not only the Musc Department but everybody in the college will share in its benefits."

Thus far, the history of this instrument has been necessarily brief. In making the purchase one of the old pianos was traded in. It's existince here may be summed up in its use in the Fall Festival, the Heidelberg Chorus, and in giving life to the daily exit from the chapel service.

J. N. Sayre Speaks Here

Disarmament Plan Presented; Students Impressed.

On Friday, Nov. 7 Mr. John Nevin Sayre, who has just returned from abroad and who is an expert on the present conditions in Europe, spoke in chapel about the present conditions of world peace. After chapel he very graciously consented to stay awhile and talk to the students. He spent three periods in the Y.W. auditorium discussing his work and answering the questions of the different students.

Mr. Sayre believes that gradually the world will come to complete disarmament. He believes in arbitration—the "Come, let us talk it over" policy in settling international disputes. He also believes that if the United States would make arrangements to cancel war debts, she would give the other nations an incentive to do the same thing, and thus take a long step toward establishing world peace.

value to both the community centers and the Y. W.

In a few weeks the Y. W. and Y. M. will start a campaign for the Fred Hope Fund, and it is desired that every student do what he can for this worthy benefit of our great alumnus in Africa.

The recently completed tennis tournament was a feature of the Y. W. athletic committee, and another one of similar nature will be featured in the spring. The prayer meetings that are held every morning, and the Sunday afternoon meeting are developments of the Y. W. The organization also has charge of obtaining maids for all social affairs where there is such a need.

Although these are but a few of the many worthy things that the Y. W. sponsors and accomplishes during the year, they are sufficient to show that the organization is an invaluable one on the campus.

CHEMISTRY CLUB

The Chemistry Club held its regular meeting last Tuesday evening in the Chemistry lecture room. The program for the evening consisted of a report of the life of Edwin Slosson, a famous chemist, who died recently. This report was given by "Jimmy" Anderson and was made very interesting and enlightening.

The Chemistry Club meets every two weeks on Tuesday evening, and an interesting program is always given. If you are interested in what is going on in the scientific world of Chemistry, you will enjoy our programs, and we shall enjoy your presence.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

An interesting thing about the students who are out for forensic honors this year is that they are nearly all working in two fields—in two of oratory, debating, and extemporaneous speaking. Selecting our teams this year promises to be a miniature convention tournament in itself.

—:—

Sam Hatcher, a junior and president of the Law Club, is showing an interest in debate that will make a second Douglas if continued.

—:—

Edwin Shelley, president of the junior class, shows a quiet reserve of knowledge and ability that would make any opponent fear to reveal his plan, lest it be riddled and shredded.

—:—

E. Phillip Vogel, a senior and president of the Ministerial Association, has a law degree already. When he emphasizes his ministerial convictions with the persuasive art of the lawyer there is nothing left to do but accept the conditions he lays down.

—:—

Robert West, president of the Carolina Club, is ready and fully capable of taking Senator Simmon's place as leader, if it should ever be necessary, so far as debating and oratory is concerned.

—:—

J. Stuart James, president of the Y.M.C.A. has the distinction of being the only member of the debate squad who has debated for as much as two years and has never lost a debate. He also won second place in the Pi Kappa Delta Provincial contest in extemporaneous speaking.

—:—

Forrest I. Robertson, president of Pi Kappa Delta, is the only member of the class who has debated for three years. He was a delegate to the convention last year.

—:—

From this outlay you might think that the debate class is only a president's club, but it isn't. Members of all groups are in the debate class and these are only examples to show it.

—:—

Of course there are many officers other than presidents and many of these presidents are officers in other organizations.

—:—

From a letter: "Mr. Reasons, I don't just understand your position. Are you a college debater on the Hill?"

—:—

No; I'm only an expert critic. Very few Logical Reasons are used in college debates now-days.

THANKSGIVING CELEBRATION IN GYM ON THURS.

Frosh On Program; Societies Will Put on Colorful Demonstrations.

REFRESHMENTS PROMISED

Prize Awarded For Best Stunt. All Are Cordially Invited 8:00 P. M.

The barn warming this year promises to be a very interesting affair. The Y. M. and Y. W. organizations are working hard to make it a big success. It has even been rumored that there will be refreshments. In this case a small admission fee will be charged.

The committee in charge, led by Olive Clopton and Kemp Davis, is putting forth much time and effort to prepare a rpogram which will amuse and interest everyone. Except for its general features, the program has been kept a secret. It will probably occupy about two hours. Among other numbers there will be an orchestra—of what sort or of whom it will be made up we do not know. There will also be other muscial numbers and stunts. These, five in number, will be put on by the four literary societies and the Freshman class. From past experience we know what sort of stunts the societies can put on, and the Freshman class seems to have some good material in it, so we may be sure there will be five good peppy stunts.

Everyone who comes out to the Alumni gymnasium on Thursday evening, Nov. 28 is assured of a good time for the barn warming is sure to be snappy and enjoyable.

PROFESSOR HOWELL MADE DEAN OF MEN

Appointed To Post Left Open By Dean Souders.

The selection of Professor George D. Howell, head of the department of Chemistry, as Dean of Men comes as a pleasant surprise to the men of the college. The position had been left vacant by the resignation of Dean Souder, who resigned on account of illness.

Those responsible for the selection of a successor to Dean Souder are to be congratulated upon their choice of Professor Howell. He is a man well liked by the boys and one who, evidently, understands them. Living, as he does, in Carnegie Hall he comes in close contact with the young men and their problems.

The office of Dean of Men is a new one at Maryville College but we can feel certain that it will be ably and successfully carried on through Professor Howell's administration.

BOB WETMORE LOSES LEG BY R. R. ENGINE

Former Student Had Planned To Return to School.

The many accidents that occur each year never seem so drastic as those to whom some person we know is the victim.

On November 6 while inspecting a particular division of the Reading Railroad near Philadelphia, Bob Wetmore, a former Maryville student, lost his left leg when a shifting engine unexpectedly took a siding, and caught Bob on the track.

Bob was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia undergoing an extremely delicate operation. Infection had set in and his life was despaired of; however, he rallied and by this time is past the most serious danger mark.

Bob had planned to re-enter Maryville the second semester as a Junior, but it is not yet known just what his plans will be. Last year he was a member of the band and the orchestra, playing the silver flute and the bass horn.

Men's Glee Club of Fifteen Trained Voices

GLEE SINGERS WILL ENTERTAIN TONIGHT

Novelty Quartet To Give Numbers; Girls Aid in Chorus.

The Maryville Glee Singers will present their annual Fall Concert tonight at 8:00 o'clock in the chapel. This is one of the big musical programs of the year and is well worth the price of 35c (70c for two).

The novelty quartet will sing a few popular numbers and a very pleasing and snappy effect will be given by both the boys' and the girls' glee clubs in "Singin' in the Rain." "My Task" and "The Lost Chord' will add stateliness and beauty to the performance. While the words and actions in "Cleopatra" are uaranteed to keep you luaghing during the whole act.

Don't miss it. 8 o'clock tonight!

LAW CLUB HONORS DR. J. H. McMURRAY

Political and Social Science Prof. Speaks on Law.

The main feature of the program was a concise explanation of Parliamentary Law by Dr. McMurray. He placed a large chart before the club and explained the characteristics of the motions and privileges. This chart was one that Dr. McMurray himself has made up for simplicity and accurateness.

After Dr. McMurray had finished speaking he was elected to Honorary membership in the Law Club. This is the only person to be elected to Honorary membership of the Law Club under the present constitution.

Forrest I. Robertson, editor of the club, read an oration on the constitution written by Lex King Souter of William Jewel College. This oration won first place and a $1500 prize in the national contest held in California last year.

FROSH RECITAL GIVEN

Best Beginners in Expression Show Real Talent.

Mrs. Veech and Mrs. Morton presented several of their best expression pupils from the beginners class in a short recital on Friday afternoon at three o'clock in the Y. W. auditorium. In spite of the bad weather there was a fairly good number present who enjoyed every number of the program, which was as follows:

Negro Wedding - - Ann Trewitt
Mary Cary - - Lucy Ann Voorhees
Little Boy Blue - - - Elsie Bowden
Coquette Conquers - - Lura Nash

Both Mrs. Morton and Mrs. Veech were very pleased with the outcome of the program and have said that a simular performance would probably be given every two weeks.

BATES ORATORICAL CONTEST DEC. 17

Large Number To Try For Prize In Alexander Contest

Nov. 23—A meeting of those entering the Bates Oratorical Contest was held in the chapel this morning immediately after the chapel service. The contest is open for girls of the senior and junior classes this year. The prize is forty-five dollars in gold. Dr. Hunter who is in charge of the contest announced that the contest would be held December 17.

Six girls are entering this contest this year. They are, Evelyn Seedorf, Viola Pettit, Alice Rhea, Jeanette Moore, Ruby Bailey, and Hope Snider. The subjects to be used are, "The Smoky Mountain National Park", "Not by Bread Alone", "Woodrow Wilson and Idealism in Government", and "Society's Responsibility for Crime."

This oratorical contest was for boys of the junior and senior classes last year, and was won by J. Hayden Laster.

Another contest is now under way which is the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest under the supervision of the Religious Education Department with Dr. Orr as chairman of the committee. More than ten apsirants met with the committee last week and heard the details of the contest. The manuscripts must be handed to the committee on or before January 4, 1930. The subjects to choose from for this contest are, "The Deity of Christ", "Salvation Through Faith", "Christ's Atonement for Sin", and "The Resurrection."

The prize in this contest is $100 in gold. It was won last year by Anna Lou Miller, and Viola Pettit who tied for first place.

The contest this year is for boys.

PROFFITT'S STORE HOLDS ANNIVERSARY

Release Fowls From Second Story Window Tuesday.

Proffitt's have this week been celebrating their Tenth Anniversary with a great anniversary celebration. Some very clever and unusual features have marked the advertising and much attention has been directed both to the sale and the occasion which it celebrates.

On Wednesday, twenty-seven fowls— chickens, guineas, geese, ducks and turkeys were turned loose from the second-story windows and the large crowd, gathered in the street below, enjoyed many merry scrambles for the prizes. Free inches have also been served each day and an old-fashioned "spelling bee" was held on Friday evening.

The management of this store is 100 percent for Maryville College

DR. AND MRS. SILSBY HOME AFTER FORTY YEARS IN SHANGHAI

Aged Missionary Wins Student's Admiration As He Tells of China.

Nov. 19—Today Dr. John A. Silsby, a Maryville alumnus who, with his wife, has spent more than forty years as a missionary in China, spoke in chapel.

Dr. Silsby was born in Richland City, Wisconsin, in 1857. Most of his youth he spent in the South. In 1875 he entered Maryville College, which then boasted three buildings, Baldwin, Memorial, and Anderson. The faculty consisted of a president, Dr. Bartlett; two professors; three women teachers; a tutor; and two student assistants.

In college Dr. Silsby early met Dr. Wilson, with whom he edited and printed the first monthly paper of the school, the "Maryville Student". For two years he was editor of the "Maryville Index" also. All of this newspaper work was done in a small job-printing office in Memorial Hall.

Together with Dr. Wilson and James Porter, Dr. Silsby organized the Maryville Y. M. C. A., one of the first college Y. M. C. A.'s in the world.

After receiving his A. B. degree at Maryville, Dr. Silsby entered Lane Seminary. On graduating from that institution he began preaching in Lansing, Tennessee. In the fall of 1887 he went to China as a missionary. For many years he was the head of the Lowrie Institute and the executive secretary of the Educational Association. In the latter capacity he served in the committee that completed the translation of the Bible into the Shanghai dialect.

In 1927 Dr. and Mrs. Silsby were honorably retired from mission service. Because of impaired health they returned to the United States. They plan soon to return to China to resume their missionary work.

SENIORS CELEBRATE AT COULTER'S HOME

November Party To Depict Poverty of Class.

The Seniors will hold their November party tomorrow night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Coulter. The members have been asked to come in very plain dress to the "Poor House".

When the guests arrive Happy Farnham and Brent Sterns will give an intelligence test to discover whether the poor house or the asylum for the insane should take charge of them. Then six of the unfortunates will give dissertations on "Why I Had to Come to the Poor House". The next number on the program will be a play, featuring two old ladies in a poor house. For the concluding number of the program, the Committee on Intelligence will submit its report to the group.

Since the Coulter home is too far from the Hill to reach by walking without causing undue weariness and fatigue, the Class of '30 has decided to complete the plan of the party by riding out fn the official college bus, namely the College Truck, with Jess Peirce as chauffeur.

To all wishing to visit the Poor House be ready at 7:15 for a jolling ride to your new home.

"Okey, please move your arm so I can lean back."—Anita Ghigo.

Highlanders Fail To Capture Title; Lose To Emory-Henry 24-0

Orange and Garnet Line Looks Good But Backfield Fails To Stop Littlejohn and Peters. McDonald Plays Superb Game At Guard.

(By Jesse James)

Nov. 23—Emory, Va.—(Special)—The crack team of Coach Jackson Maryville College Highlanders went down in defeat before the cial to Highland Echo)—The this afternoon on Fullerton Field before several hundred fans. The crowds cheered and shivered in the bleachers while the two teams battled one another on a field covered with mud and water, and while the weatherman continued to send down the snow until the spectators could follow the ball only with difficulty.

The final score was 24-0.

From the beginning the Emory-Henry boys opened up with a flashy attack that netted them a touchdown for each quarter of the game, although the struggle was in their territory for most of the third quarter. The Maryville boys fought doggedly throughout the game and threatened on several occasions with well-timed end-runs and off-tackle plays, but the flashy backfield of the Wasps, built around halfback Littlejohn, proved too much for the Highlanders and kept them on the defense. Mackey and Peters, end and half-back respectively, proved themselves dangerous men, also. For Maryville, Taggart, Calloway, Ferguson and Storey gave a good account of themselves, and the whole team kept the Jacksonions on their toes all the time. Only three passes were attempted by Maryville, but the second resulted in a gain of about 15 yards.

COACH HONAKER IS HIGHLANDERS' PRIDE

Has Coached Winning Teams Since Fall of 1921.

Coach Honaker is one of our own southern men. He received his high school training in Rocky Gap, Virginia and went on to Roanoke College at Salem, Virginia, where he graduated in 1912. Soon after he finished his college work he began his career as coach at Lincoln College in Illinois. He stayed here two years then went to Baldwin and Wallace College in Ohio until 1919, when he again changed and went to Georgetown College in Texas. Maryville heard of his remarkable record there as coach and finally succeeded in getting him here in September, 1921.

When Coach Honaker first came Dr. Wilson was afraid that such a small man could not handle such a

STUDENT COUNCIL ACTS

Plan To Have Snap Every Two Weeks, Now On.

Nov. 20—The Student Council met last night in Pearsons' parlor for its regular meeting. Various problems were discussed. A committee reported that permission had been obtained from the college authorities to have snap games every two weeks, provided the students have no more than two social functions for that week when the snap was asked for. A committee has been appointed to arrange for these snaps and no one else need ask. The committee is composed of Carol Cushman, Anne Smart, Ed Sprouse, and Arthur Shaw.

The council considered a motion to have tickets issued for the students in the college activities such as athletic games. This motion was to have tickets instead of using treasurer's receipts. The motion was voted down.

GAME AT EMORY PUT ON WIRE TO CHAPEL

Pep Committee and Highland Echo Sponsor Feature.

Nov. 23—About three hundred Maryville students enjoyed the Maryville-Emory and Henry game this afternoon. Although the weather conditions were severe and even snow drifted down at times, still not a single sound of discontent arose the temporary stadium—the chapel.

The inimitable Frank Baker proved to be the verbal Nick Altrock to the amusement of the spectators. He placed the description of the game on such a high level, that at several times the cheering section was lost, as to whether the ball went forward or backward.

When a thing happens once it can be an exception but when it occurs twice then it is an institution, more or less, so it looks now as if Maryville, through the aid of some of her most outstanding leaders, will be able to attend football games played in other states and still eat supper at Pearsons.

Let every one remove his hat to Jesse Peirce, who is taking the leading roll and is becoming the proverbial Santa Claus to the unfortunate students of Maryville College, who find it impossible to attend the games.

Official Photographer of Chilhowean Is Man Of Long Association With College

Very few of us knew anything about Maryville College when Mr. Webb, the proprietor of Webb's sutdio started taking pictures on the Hill. For four years beginning in 1897, Mr. Webb studied at Maryville College.

Cameras were scare in those days but he had a small four by five camera with which he started his annual put out by the college and photographic career. When he came to Maryville, the only college buildings were Anderson, Baldwin and Memorial.

Mr. Webb started in photography in earnest when he bought a small place on Main Street in 1905. He had very little equipment at first but has been gradually enlarging his supplies.

After working for twelve years in his office on Main Street, he sold it and bought the studio at which he now does all his photographing.

Photography is interesting and enjoyable for a pastime, but when you have to work at the studio all day for a living, it gets rather monotonous and uninteresting.

Mr. Webb has worked on every has a complete file of them.

He says that there has been a great evolution in college activities. The Chilhowean has changed from not much more than a pamphlet to a well organized leather-bound volume containing an interesting catalogue of the students and their activities.

Mr. Webb is one of the best known and the most popular of the business men of Maryville.

Red Cross

The Red Cross drive, from November eleventh to twenty-eighth, gives a distinct call to college students to do their part toward helping humanity in an upward fight for life. Almost everyone knows and appreciates the good work done by this organization in alleviating pain and distress in times of national disaster, flood, famine, fire, war, all put forth their claims to the Red Cross. The fact that the funds for the upkeep of his order are solicited from tht large mass of humanity makes it all the more significant. We do care for our brothers.

There is another phase of the work done by the Red Cross that we do not hear so much about, but which goes steadily on, making better men and women and saving the lives of thousands every year. This is the educational work which is carried on through the colleges and universities throughout the world. Last year at 197 instittions instruction in Red Cross administration was offered. Practically every institution of higher learning gives some instruction in Red Cross lfe saving. We have here on our own campus several who have taken and passed Junior and Senior tests. This work is proving invaluable in preventing loss of life through drowning.

Remember the good work this organization is doing, and if possible support it with a contribution.

THE OPEN FORUM

Edtor The Highland Echo:

Dubitess, we have on College Hill several couples that are proficient moonshiners, and probably there are very few who do not succeed to a certain extent in the extra-curricular activity, yet we must admit that there are many methods used. To determine, off hand, which of these methods is the best would be extremely difficult and untrustworthy. For, if we should ask the moonshiners, each would, probably, say that his own method was undoubtedly superior to all others and thereby we would get as many opinions of speriority as we have methods.

Since well-matched couples are, and should be, an important product of college life, I think it expedient that Maryville College should make a forward step and be a pioneer in the field—I mean campus—of scientific moonshining. She should get statistics on the successes and failures of the different kinds of moonshining and from these determine that method which would secure the greatest output of blissful two's.

This is a day when things are being standardized according to scientific and dogmatic theories. Why have we so long neglected the oldest of our arts? It, too, should keep pace with the onrushing of time. If we had all the methods of moonshining standardized, giving close attention to the cause and effect, who can tell what the consequences would be?

Probably the way to get the greatest benefits from moonshining would be to have a standardized method and to have included in the curriculum a required course in "Luvology", which would be a thorough course in recitation and drill. Then by detailed developments on this fundamental principle the art of moonshining would keep step with the other arts of the day.

Progress is what we want and success in moonshining is progress indeed!—A. Bachelor.

LETTERS OF MARQUIS de LAFAYETTET TO HIS WIFE —by Henry Whipple

May 3, 1778

My Dear Wife:

This morning the British sent word that they wanted us to come down to the Battery and skirmish a little before breakfast, so George and I drove down in his big new French car, a Chevrolet, followed by our armies. It was a very nice battle, and I like the English very much. When we tired of fighting, Cornwallis, George and myself went in to the Betsy Ross Cafe for some ham and eggs. I can not describe this dish, dearest, but it is strictly American. It tasted very good, too, but I can never learn to like anything better than a good fried mouse.

Just as I was making a flank attack on a fried egg, I happened to look out of the window. I saw the strangest sight of my career, but I was told afterwards that it is an almost daily occurance in this unaccountable America. General Jackson was standing in the middle of the street taking pot-shots at the grey head of Barbara Fretchie. He used his new air-rifle with so much delight that it took away my appetite. The fried egg looked at me reproachfully from the platter, but I could do nothing about it.

George took me out sight-seeing after breakfast. He insisted that I see his oyster farm. I had never seen an oyster farm. I thought they grew wild like canteloupes. But there on the river bank George had a dozen boxes in which he kept the oysters. He explained the process to me, and although it may seem cruel to you, you must remember that Amercians are cruel at heart. They have to be to shoot so many buffalo. But as to the oysters:

These little animals often come strolling up on the river bank in search of food. It is then that they are captured, sometimes after a long struggle. The poor little oysters are snatched from their family and loved ones so that they may grow fat in captivity. Their home life is utterly destroyed. They are put in these boxes with plenty of food. Thus they are prevented from leaping about and playing as they were wont to do. They are made to sit still all day long, and this lack of exercise coupled with the presence of nourisihng food causes the oysters to become fat and lazy. These over-grown oysters, it seems, are very popular with the American public.

Well, dear wife, I must leave you now. In the morning George and I are going down to the Delaware. I think it is a peninsula.

Good-night, Dear One,
Your
Laffy.

ATTENTION JUNIORS

Nov. 20—The Junior Class met today to take action with regard to unpaid dues. A motion was made and amended that Juniors who do not pay their first semester dues before the last day of having class pictures made, will not be allowed to have their pictures in the annual unless they sign an I. O. U. for the amount.

Nov. 23—Dr. Wilson was again present at the chapel service this morning after a noticeable absence from the Hill of several days. He had left for Chicago on Friday morning, Nov. 15 in order to attend the meeting of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church.

The General Council is an official organization of the Presbyterian Church which takes care of the business not accomplished at the yearly meeting of the General Assembly of that church. Dr. Wilson has been a member of this Council evey year that it has met.

Virginia Hech (translating in Latin Class)—I guess I'll have to return this sentence to my teacher.

SPORTS

FIVE MEN END CAREER ON ORANGE AND GARNET FOOTBALL MACHINE

Watkins Organizes Crew of Wrestlers

Encouraged By Success Last Year's Team Merited.

"Farmer" Watkins having laid aside his pigskin togs and having taken to himself the dignified name of "Coach" Watkins announced Saturday night after the return from Emory and Henry that he would be ready to entertain all candidates for a Maryville College wrestling team at the gymnasium Tuesday evening.

Farmer undertook to train a team for the college last year and started this branch of sport in Maryville with signal success. His team composed of men with little or no previous experience won two meets from the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. and gave the students of the college some good exhibition matches in inter-mural meets.

Farmer is making an effort to get several meets for the team this year and in that way make it well worth while for any candidate to take the training. Meets are practically assured with the Knoxville Y. and the Chattanooga Y., and efforts are being made to meet Bristol and Asheville Y's as well as the University of Tennessee.

Before the opening of the regular season a freshman-Varsity meet is being planned. If the candidates wil report immediately they should be in shape for a match about a week before the Christmas holidays.

Farmer wants to emphasize to both the freshmen and upperclassmen that no previous experience is necessary and that phenomenous physique is not required to make a good wrestler. He says that regardless of a man's ability to make the team the training will be valuable.

Followers of this sport will be interested in knowing that Walter Hedrick one of last year's wrestlers is now coaching at the Chattanooga Y and that he has written regarding a meet here.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Although the Emory-Henry game was a disappointment to many of us, it must be remembered that this game was the only blot on an otherwise successful season.

It doesn't take any school spirit to support a team that always wins—anybody can do that.

On the other hand, a true criterion of the morale of a student body is its reaction in defeat.

When we say "we won" and "they lost", we only give ourselves away.

If you could have seen Capt. McDonald out there in the snow and mud Saturday, you would have discovered a new side to his personality.

Mac certainly played one of the best games of his career.

The Highlander schedule for next year will include Kentucky and probably Vanderbilt, too.

Coach Thrower Completes Fourth Year As Tutor of Highlander Forward Wall

Assistant Grid Mentor Has Put A Strong Line on The Field This Year As Usual; Serves Also As Coach of Track

Robert Caperus Thrower came to Maryville in September, 1921, with Coach Honaker. He held down the tackle position admirably during his undergraduate days, being captain of the great team which tied Tennessee in 1923.

He was center on the basketball team, and his prowess on the track team is well remembered as a holder of the shot-put record.

"Bob" is Coach Honaker's right hand man during football season, acting as line coach. Maryville's forward wall this season is no exception to the well-drilled lines which he has put on the field each year.

In the spring of the year, Thrower coaches track. Aside from these duties, he manages to start a number of freshmen off each year on the idiosyncrasies of the Spanish language.

Inter-Class Basketball

The Inter-class basketball match which is being conducted under the supervision of the Y. M. C. A. begins today, at which time the Juniors will play the Freshmen. On Tuesday afternoon the Seniors and Sophomores will play. The champion class will be chosen on Wednesday afternoon, the game being between the winners of Monday's and Tuesday's game.

Every year the Y. M. C. A. sponsors this inter-class basketball program, it not only affords much pleasure and friendly rivalry between the college teams, but also is instrumental in showing the coaches what basketball material is available from the various classes.

EMORY-HENRY DUMMY BURNED (?)

Nov. 20—The burning of Emory-Henry in effigy failed to take place this evening due to the fact that some misguided person made away with the dummy under cover of darkness.

This did not dampen the spirits of the several hundred students who gathered around a huge bonfire back of the Alumni Gymnasium. Jesse Peirce led the crowd in some snappy yells and songs, and the pep session ended with a snake dance.

Lloyd McCulloch (in Systematic Speech)—Laughs, Laughs, Laughs. What do you laugh about?

SOCCER

Nov. 20—The first Soccer game of the season was held in the Alumni Gymnasium. The freshmen won over the sophomores, but the teams were well matched, as was shown by the final score of 3-2.

Varsity Swimming Prospects Bright

Meets Being Arranged With Other Schools.

Prospects for Maryville having a varsity swimming team and meeting in competition with other schools are growing brighter every day. A large group of candidates are working out daily in the pool under the direction of Jack Coughlin, who is acting as coach and trainer.

Arangements are already being made with other colleges and universities for meets. Rollins College at Winter Park, Florida has offered to meet the Maryville team. Other possible meets are being arranged with: Vanderbilt, Tusculum, Carson-Newman, Emory nad Henry, and Peabody.

Porter French has been elected temporary captain.

Seniors Honored At Last Pep Meeting

Big Crowd Gives Impressive Ovation to Honakerites.

Nov. 21—The five senior members of the football team were honored by their fellow classmates at the final pep meeting of the year tonight in Voorhees Chapel. The five men winding up their gridiron careers this year: Ralph Cherry, Judge Carepr, Bill Hope, Doc Morrison and John Taggart, were presented with small leather helmets emblazoned with a garnet "30", as momentos of their football days.

Turkey Smith representing the business men of Maryville, read a list of the men who had made possible a banquet to be given the football squad on December fourth. Jesse James presented the silver loving cup, donated by Proffitt's to Davis, the winner of the cross country run.

The Head Cheerleader, who early in the evening, bemoaned the weak yelling was forced to change his mind, as the gang later put every thing they had in the yells, and made the last pep session a big one.

Dr. Orr: "What is your topic today, Mr. Mizer?"

Mr. Mizer: "Hell."

Mr. Orr: "Give it to us, please."

TO——

I am so lonely, dear
Here with three stars—
All I can see from here's
Black boughs and sky
Dark with the cloak of night,
Sweet with spring's scent
Why am I all alone
Here in this night?

Dark hair and warmth of lips,
Strength tall and straight!
You might be with me, yes
Even 'til late.
Wish I could walk with you,
Look at you,
Talk to you,
Wish I were with you!
With you and your love.

Here by this window
So lonely, so dreamily,
Here with three stars
And those boughs waving ghostly!
Think I will sleep a bit—
Shut my eyes tight to this
Aching and loneliness
Dream of you hours, dear
You and our love!

NEW BAINONIANS GIVE PROGRAM

"So's your old antique" a great success, etc.

Last Saturday night the new girls of Bainonian gave a program which showed the old girls what a wealth of talent the new members possess. Frances Leisering and Virginia Ross were the committee in charge of the entertainment.

The first number of the program was a musical selection by Pat Henry and Margaret Melody, after which Merle Beebe gave a number of jokes on the old girls. The last number was a play, "So's Your Old Antique", the principal characters of which were Mary Lou Chumlea, Lura Nash, Marion McMurray, Sue LeGard, and Jean Campbell. Margery Jones and Helen Vale were the property managers.

The new girls are to be congratulated on such an excellent program. The old Bainonians feel that the new members possess an unusual amount of talent and ability.

RESOLUTIONS

The members of the sophomore class extend to Mary Cortner their deepest expression of sympathy in her hour of sorrow. The death of her brother, Emmett Cortner, an alumnus of Maryville, has caused grief to the family and to many friends.

It is the earnest desire of the sophomore class that the bereaved family may be comforted at this time by the grace and love of God.

The Resolutions Committee.

THE STUDENT'S STORE CELEBRATED TENTH ANNIVERSARY

and loyally supports every movement for the interest of the school.

Mr. D. W. Proffitt, president of the company, is a graduate of the College in the class of '16. "Dave" was a guard on one of the best basketball teams the College ever had. He was president of the Alumni Association for 1926-27, and has planned and arranged a number of the football banquets which the local business men have given the team.

"Shorty" Storey, manager of the piece-goods and hosiery departments, and who also looks after the advertising, was a member of the class of '27. "Shorty" was employed in Proffitt's during the years he was a student, and while working many hours a week, yet maintained an enviable college record. Mr. Storey is now a member of the Alumni Executive Committee and is always ready to give time and thought to its problems.

Martin Nicely, the capable manager of the Cash Basement, was one of the best "south-paw" pitchers the College ever had and many a victory back in '13, '14 and '15 was due to his skillful work.

"Turkey" Smith, the genial manager of the men's department, is always boosting for Maryville. In his college days, he held down the full-back position on the foot-ball team and came to be greatly dreaded by opposing teams. This year, Mr. Smith has charge of the banquet for the football men and is sparing no effort to make it a success.

Mr. L. G. Walker, Secretary and Office Manager, although not a graduate of Maryville College has always been greatly interested in, and an enthusiastic booster for the school. His interests in Maryville College have indeed been far reaching for his wife is a graduate of the College, a former May Queen and one of the most popular young women who ever graduated from the college.

The entire force at Proffitt's regard the College as Maryville's greatest asset and we are glad to join their many other friends in extending our congratulations on this occasion to "The Student's Store."

WOMEN FROM TATE WANT WORK FROM COLLEGE MAID SHOP

A representative from the Tate Marble Quarries and a delegation from the Woman's Club, also of Tate, Tenn., visited the College Maid Shop Thursday with the view of finding work for the needy people of their city. The visitors stated that there were nine widows in Tate who were without any means of support, and who would become objects of charity unless given some sort of work to do. It was their plan to start a small factory similar to the College Maid Shop, but after talking the matter over with its Director, Mrs. McMurray, the delegation came to the conclusion that they would buy cut garments from our factory, and do their own making and selling of the products.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Stirred by the incentive from Professor Queener's remark sometime ago to the effect that the greatest trouble with college speakers was that they were not convinced of anything or didn't believe anything strongly enough to try to get anyone else to believe it, evidently some of the young aspirants in the debate class have decided on something. They have been almost able to persuade us that they decided on the right side too.

—:—

Wright Frost, who recently had an operation performed in his throat in order to be a more eloquent orator, sounded like a young Clarence Darrow as he gave his view of some "trite customs." No Bryan fundamentalist rose up to the defense.

—:—

Dick Strain from the land of the California grapes, could easily have been the author of the "Eighteenth Amendment" without any material change in it. However, with that adroit political instinct of Hiram Johnson, he sad he was neither supported by the Anti-Saloon League nor a member of the W. C. T. U.

—:—

We bet he would be a member of the D. A. R. if the letter E were inserted.

Under Roy Taylor's impassioned plea for justice to the striker in the Southern industrial situation we saw a more earnest conviction than the famous William Hayes could show in the actual trial.

—:—

Perhaps a real test of friendliness comes when one owes us something. John Johnson thinks the friedship of Europe is worth millions of dollars to us and that we should cancel their war debts to show it.

—:—

In his alternative view, however, he suggests a plan a step beyond demand. He would provide a way for them to pay the debts.

—:—

The latter view would be more business-like for us, and at the same time would be just as satisfactory to Europe, no doubt.

—:—

Cyril Brown is a man who has always believed in debating. And now he would initiate an almost compulsory rule of debating in high school for preparation in argument.

—:—

Girls should never be compelled or even encouraged to argue. Yet we cannot make any discrimination in this day of suffering suffrage.

COACH HONAKER

large team, so for the first few practices Dr. Wilson sat out on the bleachers to add both moral and physical support if it were needed.

Maryville's team's knowledge of fundamentals will always be a reflection of good coaching, and because of this, many of our former football players have been successful coaches. Honaker keeps his men in excellent condition and in this way aims not only for better football players but for better men.

During the past season, Coach was confronted with a peculiar problem. At the beginning of the year, he found himself with one letterman in the backfield. Then about the middle of the season, when the Orange and Garnet backfield was beginning to exhibit signs of a smooth working unit, three first-string backs dropped out of school. This was enuogh to add gray hairs to any coach's head, but Honaker offered no alibis and set to work to devlop another combination. The Highlanders' showing against Emory-Henry was a disappointment to Maryville's coach, but it was the only defeat suffered by his proteges with teams of Maryville's class. The Vanderbilt and Kentucky defeats were expected, as these teams are both strong members of the Southern Conference. The Emory-Henry game is the only blot on an otherwise enviable record for the season.

THE FAMILY UPSTAIRS

Nov. 19—Last night the College Players in their first production of the season, presented Delf's comedy, "The Family Upstairs". The play was presented to a large and enthusiastic audience and met with approval on every side.

The director, Mrs. Veech, was particularly happy in her choice of a cast. Leland Gilmore, an ardent lover, played opposite Hazel Bowers who interpreted to the life the position of "Louise" with great credit. Stanley McCool and Gladys Graham, as father and mother of the household, performed the ordinary family disagreements, yet were able to show that these disagreements were only habits and not cause for separation. William Graham and Lois Dillow played the parts of the younger members of the family. The major characters in a play can function in their best only when supported by the less conspicuous characters. This support was not lacking in this play.

The play presented that phase of family life which is most interesting to outsiders, and most misery-provoking to the members themselves. The mix-up caused by the mother's intense desire to see her daughter married—happily if possible—was finally cleared away but only after great grief to all. From concluding appearances they lived happily ever after.

Ministerial Association

The Ministerial Association met on Wednesday night in Athenian Hall. The devotions were led by Comer Fowler. Bob Wallace and Paul Edris gave special music. Dr. Stevenson gave us a very interesting talk.

VOL. 15 MARYVILLE, TENN., MON., DECEMBER 2, 1929 NUMBER TEN

FOOTBALL MEN RECEIVE TWENTY LETTER AWARDS

Five Seniors Among Those To Letter on This Year's Grid Team.

1930 PROSPECTS GOOD

Ends, Backs Need Experience To Develop a Strong Grid Combination.

With the echoes of the '29 Highlander grid season dying away, the following men are announced as letter-winners on the Orange and Garnet eleven:

Guards: Capt. McDonald, Storey, Tolliver.
Centers: Watkins, Ferguson.
Tackles: Hope, Overly, Carper, Cash.
Ends: Cherry, Reed, White, D. Benn.
Backs: Taggart, Calloway, Bonds, Morrison, Bowman, Woodard.
Manager: Crow.

For the last twelve weeks these men have been out working six days a week trying to give Maryville a team worthy of its name and coach. This they have succeeded in doing, even though Maryville's 1929 record is not an unbroken string of victories.

Five of them have completed their term of service in a Maryville football uniform.

In the line, the sterling performances of Capt. McDonald, Storey and Watkins have stood out all year. These three have made the center of Maryville's line its strongest bulwark in attack and a discouraging impediment to enemy advance at every stage of the game.

Calloway has done outstanding work all year. He has borne the brunt of Maryville's attack in great style. Maryville opponents will see more than plenty of this half-back ere another two seasons pass by.

Prospects for next year look good. Coach Honaker will probably have experienced men at all positions except the two ends. This is his hardest problem, and a most important one, as was demonstrated in several games this year.

In the line, the regular center, the two guards and one of the tackles will be back, with at least two experienced men to fill the other tackle berth. In the backfield, led by Calloway, there will be men

NEW SPANISH CLASS

Mrs. Minton Organizing Group For Advanced Work.

With the help of several of the students who have completed the Spanish course, Mrs. Minton is organizing a new class. This class meets every Saturday at 1:10 and will be devoted to Spanish conversation. It is open only to those students who are studying or have completed advanced Spanish. This year the class is an experiment and no academic credit will be given for th work. If the experiment is successful, in the future the class in Spanish conversation may be added to the courses offered by the Spanish department.

PEARSON'S IS CLEANED

Bucket and Brush Brigade Working Hard.

Pearson's Hall, for the last week has undergone a thorough cleaning under the supervision of Mrs. Butcher. Curtains have been hung, windows washed, and floors mopped. Often the girls have heard this request: "You must wash your transoms and doors." Many transoms and doors still remain unwashed but the hall as a whole looks like a differnt place. It is surprising how much improvement can be made by hanging a few curtains and using plenty of soap and water.

ELEVEN MARYVILLE GRADS IN NEW YORK HOLD CELEBRATION

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Brown Scene of Gay Party On November 23rd.

Eleven Maryvillians took time out last Saturday evening from worry concerning Wall Street and the attending of various renditions of the follies to talk over old times with college mates. Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Brown received us at their apartment at 7:30 and we left reluctantly at 11:30.

Ed Driscoll's powers of invention were strained to the utmost as he revealed the history of past Maryvillians. None was excepted from his share of embarrassment at Ed's phenomenal knowledge of his secret life. The major attack centered on Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hembree who were left in the lurch because of the non-attendance of our latest couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Welsh.

And refreshments? Thanks to Forrest and Dorothy after eating so much pumpkin pie and other good things, we had to taxi home.

Those present were: Jessie K. Johnson, '21, student at Columbia; Forrest Brown, '22, Student Secretary, National Student Council; Mrs. Forrest Brown, '24; Annie Vanderslice, '27, practice teaching in New Jersey; Rosalie Edmondson, '27, office work; Marjorie Frey Hembree, '28, pastor's assistant, Newark; Sam Hembree, '28, student at Columbia; Barbara Welbon, student at National Bible Institute; Edward Driscoll, '29, student at Union Theological Seminary; Bob Dance, '29, student with Halsey, Stuart and Co.; and Grace Gamble, '29, student at Columbia. Two loyal Tennesseans, Myles Horton and Paul Guthrie added to the jollity of the evening.

JOHNSON, NELSON GET WOMEN'S VOTES

Bainonians and Thetas Choose Illustrious Seniors.

Nov. 30—Thea Epsilon met in Pearson's at 6:45 tonight and elected the following officers:

President—Marjorie Nelson
Vice President—Margaret Mevis
Secretary—Dorothy Kellar
Program Secretaries—
Ann Smartt, Mabel Frost
Publicity Chairman—
Ruth Houghton
Treasurer—Ernestine Heddon
House Chairman—Billy Gruchy
Sargeant-at-Arms—
Mary Sue Glover
Critic—Cora Houck

With the women of Maryville College securing the influential positions on the Hill it is hoped, and indeed, assurred, that great improvements will be made during the term.

Bainonian Literary Society met at 6:30 tonight for the purpose of electing officers. The following officers were chosen:

President—Marion Johnson
Vice President—Ruth Buchanan
Secretary—Agnes McGuire
Program Secretaries—Edith Nash, Merle Beebe
Publicity Chairman—"Pat" Henry
Sargeant-at-Arms—Helen Vail
Critic—Hilda Farnham

Three Bainonians were present and each one gave a short talk, the theme of which was, "How glad I am to be back."

COLLEGE PLAYERS TOUR

Nov. 30, Kingston, Tenn.—The townspeople were entertained by the Maryville College Players here tonight. The Players presented the three-act comedy "The Family Upstairs" by Harry Delf.

The crowd which gathered in the auditorium of the high school was very entusiastic in its response to the love-makng and other antics of the characters in the production.

This makes the third presentation of this play by the College Players this season.

FIRST MID-WINTER OF SEASON NEXT MON.

"Lilac Time" Will Have All-Star Caste; Elaborate Stage.

On the evening of December 9th, the Alpha Sigma Literary Society will present "Lilac Time", a drama of love and war.

The hero, Phillip Blythe, is a young English aristacrat who is drven from home under the stigma of cowardice. He enlists in the British forces over in France. His subsequent rise to lieutenant-adjutant under the kindly Major Halloway, his bitter clash with Captain Watlinge, his love for the captivating Jeannine, his departure for enemy territory as a spy, his reported death, and his final return is told in a charmingly simple manner. The lighter, mirthful element of the play is furnished in the ludicrous speech and actions of the jovial Cockneys, Hawkins, Simpson, McCane, and Harris.

ATHENIAN ELECTION

Forrest Robertson Rewarded For Faithful Work.

Dec. 1—The Athenian Literary Society elected officers for the second term of the year last night in Athenian Hall. The election was conducted in fine, orderly fashion by the president, J. Hayden Laster. If the election was quiet, the members no less strongly supported their favorites. Speeches were made on behalf of some of the candidates. The officers elected were as follows:

Forrest I. Robertson—President
Stiles McMillan—Vice President
Homer McCann—Rec. Secretary
Edgar Shepherd—Program Secy.
Richard Strain and George Osborne—Critics
Comer Fowler—Editor
Louis Blair—Sergeant-at-Arms

Notification was also given by Homer McCann that at the following meeting an amendment to the Constitution would be introduced which, if passed, would require the society to elect two program secretaries instead of one.

One of the Best Short Stories That Has Come Our Way Is

Highbrow Love

A Collegiate Love Affair. It Begins Here and Will Be Concluded Next Week.

Important in campus gossip is the rumor that Thornton Cromwell and Olive Lee are to be married immediately after graduation this June. True it is, that all during the last four years, no one has been able to repress a smile at the sight of this unaesthetic, unromantic couple, appearing everywhere, arm in arm. Conjecture has been rife as to how this couple ever fell in love, but in reality, it happened this way:

At exactly three minutes to four one sunny autumn day, a thin, scrawny face slowly emerged from the huge dictionary resting on the library table. Over this slender countenance was written an expression of frantic worry, almost despair, which neither the huge tortoise shell spectacles nor the belligerent, pointed nose could hide. Plainly Thornton Cromwell was in what he would call "an inextricable predicament."

It seemed incredible that Miss Haskin, with all the subjects in the world from whch to choose, had selected "Love" to be the subject of the first Freshman English theme. The results of three hours' relentless toil were seven words crowded together at the top of a long, white paper: "Love is that quality or attitude which."

Throughout his three years of high school, for Thornton was one of those gifted pupils who just can't be held back to the normal promotion scale, the dictionary had been for him an almost iseparable guide and companion. Was not the dictionary in a great measure responsible for his possessing the medal now dangling defiantly over his narow chest, but which he had been awarded by Platts County "for the best composition (not over 10,000 words) on the Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire"? Yet this time the dictionary had ruthlessly deserted him; in its pages no longer could he find that word which would release in his mind and imagination a torrent of inspiration.

As he turned reluctantly away, Thornton knew that this composition must depend on his ideas, that there was no refuge. But, he had no ideas on the subject. His reading, his recreation, in fact his whole life had been conducted with a view to educational efficiency, and into this replete existence a thought of love would have been as out of place as a fish in the middle of the Sahara.

But, a Cromwell, with a brilliant record behind him, and a phenomenal future ahead, could ill afford to remain idle. With characteristic ingenuity, Thornton decided to break up the problem into its various factors. After but a few minutes, he had produced the following outline:

A. Love.
I.—The stimulus
II. The requisites
III. The significance
IV. The value.

Aside from alleviating somewhat the blank, bare appearance of the sheet of paper, the outline had accomplished nothing. View it as he would, the problem seemed insoluble.

At this moment his meditations were abruptly ended by a voice saying, "What's the matter, Thorny? You look as if you'd lost your last friend."

Thornton's first impulse was to

PRACTICE HOUSE IS HELPING HUMANITY

Girls Learn to Manage Home In Home Ec Project.

If you go to the rear of Thaw Hall, enter the most inconspicous of many doors, and ascend to the second floor, you will find yourself in a cozy six-room apartment. This is the practice house, which has been sponsored by the home economics department for the last seven or eight years. The purpose is to give senior girls an opportunity to obtain practical experience in managing a home.

Two girls under the supervision of Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz live in the practice house for three weeks. With the money that they would spend for board in Pearsons they plan a budget for all expenses and have to keep within its limits. Their work is divided into two parts, the housewife's duties of planning the meals, marketing,

NU GAMMAS CLOSE

Hold Last Meeting of New Girls "Y.W." Organization.

Saturday night all the Nu Gamma Sigma groups held in the chapel their last meeting of the year, for now the new girls are adjusted to college and Nu Gamma's work is done.

The program consisted of nine novelty stunts, each stunt being given by two groups in combination. After the stunts, the group leaders gave to the girls souviners telling what Nu Gamma stands for.

An important feature of the evening was the presentation of pennants to those groups who had perfect attendance at all their meetings. These groups were those of Virginia Crider, Mildred McKenzie, Margaret Haynie, and Georga Burk.

In the basement of the chapel were served refreshments consisting of frozen fruit salad with whipped cream, and cheese clips.

THANKS GIVEN BY WOMEN OF BALDWIN

Many and Varied Are The Items of Interest to Coeds.

The population of Baldwin Hall was, as all other saints should have been, thankful on Thursday, November 28.

"Irish" Terry was thankful because there was no moisture falling in silver sheets from the southern blue pierced by Chilhowee's lofty mountains.

Marion McMurray was happy because she had paid the penalty for participating in the pillow-fight two weeks ago and was no longer "moonshined."

Margaret Melody was grateful for the Thanksgiving dinner of excellent demi-tasses served with good coffee.

Jane Duke must be vain. She could think of nothing to be thankful for other than the fact that the new one-dollar bills have her picture on them.

Miss McCorkle was delighted that the barn was to be warmed at seven-thirty in the evening.

Anne Banks was glad that there would be classes tomorrow.

Ruby Conrad rejoiced that the Highlanders beat Emory-Henry so decisively, due, of course, to the fact that the Maryville left tackle, a Senior man, played so well.

Jane Mitchell was thankful for Little Queener.

Lois Cupler was sure that the nation would join her in expressing relief that Ramsay and Coolidge signed that treaty.

THANKSGIVING VISITORS

Among those whose countenances lighted up the Thanksgiving season on Old College Hill, are such well known former campus celebrities as Eleanor "Peggy" Bird, Nettie Wade, Elizabeth Woodard, Frances Easley, W. B. Jones, Roger Rusk, Reggie Voorhees, Fancher Smartt, Ruth Blake, Bland Morrow, Margaret Lowrance.

'ECHO' INVESTS $300 IN OFFICE AND EQUIPMENT

Steel Furniture Adds To Staff Efficiency; Long Needed Here.

NEW OFFICE IS IN THAW

Program Includes Training of Members in Newspaper Management.

The Highland Echo has invested about three hundred dollars in a newly equipped office in Thaw Hall. The money for the innovation has been accumulating for the last few years from the earnings of the paper, and there is still a couple of hundred of dollars left over.

When the present Echo staff made its plans for this year, one of the specifications was that they have a place in which they could meet and work comfortably. The quarters in Anderson Hall were not at all suited to such a large staff as was provided for by the action of the student body two years ago, and it would have been useless to attempt to furnish such a small place with fine office equipment.

After some little consultation with various departments, administrators, and so forth, the Echo was assigned space in the vestibule at the girl's entrance to Thaw Hall. A partition has been built, and steam heat supplied, making a very attractive and comfortable office for this important branch of college activities.

The office has been equipped with two all-steel Art Metal desks, office chairs, a metal filing cabinet, typewriter stand, and Faries lighting fixtures. This is a wonderful beginning, and can be added to as the need presents itself and the money is available.

The Editor and Business Manager are well pleased with the new home of the newspaper, and invite any who have tme to visit them.

An attempt is being made this year to make the paper not only valuable to the student body, but to acquaint the members of the staff with the fundamentals of the newspaper game in such a way that they will be able to use their experience to advantage should they enter the news field. The work is so divided that through the year all junior and senior members will handle all phases of the work.

It is hoped that before many more years pass, the college will see fit to introduce journalism as a part of the English course.

CHILHOWEAN CONTEST

After Prize of $2,000 For Best Book-Cover Design.

The staff of the 1930 Chilhowean has entered its book into a contest sponsored by Mollay Co. of Chicago. This company makes covers for college annuals and is offering a prize for the best designed cover which carries out the theme of the book. Work on the Chilhowean is well underway with most of the senior pictures ready for engraving. This year's annual will be different from any year book ever published at Maryville and promises to be extraordinarily good.

PATTERSON IS ILL

Expected To Be Up Soon, After Two Weeks' Illness.

Nov. 30—For the last two weeks William Patterson, a freshman Highland Echo reporter, has been in the Memorial Hopsital ill. His class has sent him flowers; many of his friends have called often to see him; and we are glad that he is now much improved in health. He will be out of the hospital this week, no doubt, and will soon resume his class work.

A Bad Impression

Maryville has an enviable reputation for putting on good programs. Nothing that does not pass the censors is allowed to be presented in the chapel. Thus we assure our audiences that they will see or hear nothing objectionable from our stage. Would that we had the same serious consideration devoted to ascertaining whether or not all performances were worthy of our time and money.

The adverse criticism which followed the concert last Monday night is no evidence that it helped to make the programs on the Hill more popular. In reality it did more harm than good, for the standard of the Glee Singers has been high.

We are not trying to throw cold water on the Glee Singers a college activity. We cannot sing—we are not out for that form of exercise. We will not even insist that the Glee Singers be good.

But if we are to have a group go from this college into the many parts of the State, as the Glee Singers do, we have a right to ask that they be fairly representative of the school. Very often the impression of Maryville depends on the impression of the Glee Singers.

May we also correct an erroneous idea that is expressed rather unthinkingly by those in whose hands the destiny of this organization lies. They err who say Maryville audiences do not appreciate good music, and jazz and noise are the main and only form of entertainment we appreciate.

Tennessee Should Be More Careful

When interviewed by a News-Sentinel reporter, one of the University of Tennessee's flashy pigskin toters announced in regard to the oncoming fray with Kentucky that he felt just like Tennessee was going to play Maryville. We sincerely hope he still feels that way since Tennessee's hopes for Southern honors have been blasted by the Wildcats.

May we be permitted to be just a little unkind and remind the Tennessee hopeful that the Highlanders made FOUR first downs on the Wildcats, while Tennessee made TWO.

To the News-Sentinel we'd like to say that we never have gotten a decent break from their paper yet, but we do resent that sort of disparagement. It not only sounds bad coming from a member of a team which refused to play Maryville instead of Carson-Newman between two hard games, but it doesn't look good in print. But we suppose both parties concerned realize that by this time.

—o—

If you have ever been in Pearsons around the region of 10 p. m. and heard those calls of "Sh-h! Let's have the hall quiet, girls!" you will be very much surprised to hear of Miss Molly's conduct on her trip to Berea College. One night at the hour of ten, in the lobby of the Boone Tavern hotel, she was called down by the butler for talking too loudly. Of course we think it is all right to talk as loudly and as long as you wish, but in Miss Molly—well, we were surprised.

LETTER FROM THANKFUL CARNEGIE MEN

Here is a letter sent by some appreciative Carnegie man to John Hendry's father:

November 28, 1929
239 Carnegie Hall

Mr. Eddy Hendry,
Dear Mr. Hendry:

We are full and thankful. Everybody has had a good time except me, and I have had a good time too. I have only one regret; that I am not twins or a bigger man. This is one time that I feel well bred. I have enjoyed watching the other fellows eat, especially John. I have reached the conclusion that John is a man of few words and many eats.

I have believed in Thanksgiving Day since early youth. This one has strengthened my belief. Pardon the personal "I", we are a gluttonous group of starved boarders from Pearsons Hall, but we have hopes of becoming either abdomenally satisfied or distressed.

The most popular phrase here at present is "Cut yourself another piece." Scottie has taken time out, but will begin again soon. He eats any given quantity.

We are all convinced of the truth of the scriptural injunction, "God helps them who stop themselves"—but try and do it!

They say the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, but it would take a tour to reach ours. (Editor's note: hearts or stomachs?)

As we are too full for utterance we must close.

LETTERS OF MARQUIS de LAFAYETTE TO HIS WIFE
—by Henry Whipple

May 4, 1778

My Dear Wife:

I was wrong. The Delaware is a river. We had a little brush there and it brought me much fame I must tell you about the whole affair. It seems that the Hessians, who are a very fine grade of mercenary soldiers, were encamped down at Trenton, the capitol of New Jersey. George wanted to go down there and chase them farther inland so that the buffalo could destroy them. So George and I cooked up a little scheme to surprise them.

It was as cold as the north pole and the snow came down in great drifts. The day was dark and cloudy. We two generals took our armies down to the river and then proceeded to buy up a couple of hundred boats at auction. The idea was to sneak around in back of the camp and when all was quiet to jump out of the bushes with rifles in hand.

Well, everything was ready, but just as we started to cross the river an iceberg floated around a bend a few miles upstream. This was most discouraging, especially when several more followed, but George was not daunted in the least.

"Come on boys", he shouted and suddenly we found ourselves out on the Delaware dodging icebergs. We looked like a group of pedestrians on a busy street. We looked around for several hours before Washington gave utterance to those famous words that shall forever ring through the annals of history; those words that inspired the struggling men to greater deeds: "Don't sink the ship."

It was two o'clock in the morning when we finally pulled up on the opposite shore very tired and cold. There followed a long march to Trenton, and as we neared that city we saw the lights of the Hessian camp glowing from out the darkness. The whole plan worked well, but were exceedingly fortunate in that the German soldiers were making Whoopee. They had filled up on beer, pretzels, and weinerschnitzels and had gone to bed early. They evidently had not been notified as to a battle and so were entirely unprepared to meet our attack.

We captured them all, but we did not know what to do with them. George wanted to feed them to the alligators, but I would not stand for any such blood-thirsty treatment of an enemy. Up to that time I had thought that an alligator was a ropical frui, but I was taking no chances. I advised putting them in solitary confinement, and this is what we did.

The next day all the papers came out with my name in headlines. The reporters did not know that George was in the battle too. They thought I was solely to blame, and thanked me for my great service. I could not help but blush at their remarks. By noon that day my front yard was filled to overflowing with signature albums. There were albums of all colors and sizes. I did not have time to sign them all, and as I did not want to hurt the feelings of the kind Americans I hired a boy to sign them for twenty cents an hour.

Worn out after the hard day, I must seek my bed.

Love to you, dear,
Your
Laffy.

BASKETBALL WORK BEGINS IN EARNEST AS SEASON NEARS

Competition Keen For Places On Highlander Quintet.

FACE HARD SCHEDULE

Waddell, Reed, and Davis Form Nucleus of '29-'30 Team.

Out of the eight lettermen who toiled on the hardwood floor of the Alumni Gym last year, only fifty percent returned to school this year, namely Captain Waddell, ex-captain Reed, K. Davis and John White.

These four men will no doubt form a nucleus around which Coach Honaker expects to build another of those flashy Highlander quintets.

Maryville will sorely miss the services of Bird and Davis who were mainstays on the team for four successive years. Bird graduated and Davis finished his allotted four years as a Honakerite. Another member of last year's squad of lettermen not to return is William Merle Delaney who was transformed from a guard into one of the best forwards that graced the court for Maryville last year. Although Everette Vincent was only a Freshman last year he showed that he has the possibilities of making a good basketball player with a little more coaching. Let's hope he returns to school next year.

Of the four lettermen back this year, one is a center, one a guard and the other two are forwards, meaning there is an opening of one guard berth. Several members of last year's squad are the most likely looking prospects, they are Cherry, McMillan, Wooten, Ferguson, Calloway and possibly a few others.

In case Coach Honaker finds that some new man is better than the above named he will more than likely use him instead of some of the older fellows whose time is about up.

Maryville has a good deal to work for this year owing to the fact that they lost the Smoky Mountain Conference Championship last year by the meager margin of one point. We might mention here that the outstanding player of this game was Waddell, captain of this year's squad. "Suitcase" scored seven field goals in the second half at Kingsport and this feat enabled him to make the mythical Conference quintet.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Favorable comment has been noticed toward the action of the Athletic Board of Control.

The Board's resolution is obviously interpreted as a step in the right direction.

From all appearances, the underclassmen seem to have left the upperclassmen in the "lurch" in this basketball tournament just completed.

The tournament disclosed some promising material for Coach Honaker's quintet, too.

With "Suitcase" Waddell showing his old form and Louie Reed turning his attention from football to basketball, things are beginning to look mighty good.

Kemp Davis looks faster than ever, too. He ought to ring up plenty of points before the season is over.

The Highlanders are out for the Smoky Mountain Conference title this season, having lost out by a single point last year.

WRESTLING

Considering the fact that wrestling is a relatively new sport in the college sport calendar, relatively unrecognized with no paid Coach, it got off to an auspicious start during the last week. Farmer Watkins had hoped that there would be enough men to make both a good team and interesting local competition and his wish came true, for during the first week approximately twenty men reported for practice, some good and some not so good, but all ambitious and willing to learn a modern edition of one of the oldest sports renouned in classic sculpture and modern sport sections.

Besides Farmer only one veteran of last year's team has reported for practice that being Shorty Shaw 138 pounder who tossed his man last year like a bull pup on a rag doll. The other men have as their assets good physique and willingness to work.

A list of the men and their weights are: Marston 133, Vandersice 163, Hatcher 152, Carr 164, Lee 141, Lorenzo 148, Cooper 125, Topolian 150, Buchanan 125, Cash 158, Watkins 158, Shaw 140, Peacock 133, Young 137, Cromer 126, Frost 125, Ross 145.

ATTENTION!

In recent times the practice has increased among athletes at Maryville of loaning sweaters with the varsity "M" to other men.

The Athletic Board of Control has requested that this practice be discontinued.

There is reason in this resolution of the Board. It is not exactly in keeping with the athletic standards of any college to see fellows, who are not letter-men, wearing such sweaters frequently on the campus and even borrowing them to use as "crutches" in the popular art of hitch-hiking.

It is very probable that this practice has been the result of thoughtlessness rather than indifference. Like any thing else, a varsity letter is an honor only so long as it is considered as such.

The Athletic Board is confident that further action will not be necessary.

LETTER AWARDS

who gained enough experience this year to equip them for valuable service as pigskin toters next year.

As usual, Coach Honaker, Maryville's "Gray Eyed Man of Destiny", is making no predictions, but we know that he shall again put out a team worthy to wear the colors of the Orange and Garnet.

Sophomores Annex Basketball Laurels

Juniors Claim Cellar Position In Class Tournament

The inter-class basketball games sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. has ended to the glory of the Sophomore Class. The first game was between the Freshman and Juniors in which the Frosh sang victory to the tune of 24 to 16 with Lewis, Bowman, and Dinsmore as the outstanding players. The second game was between the Sophs and Seniors in which the Sophs emerged on top with the score of 18 to 9. Wooten was the star in this fray.

The consolation match between the Juniors and Seniors ended in a 14 to 12 victory for the Seniors.

The match to determine the champion was played on Friday night and ended with the Sophs becoming the champion hardwood runners of the Hill.

FOOTBALL BANQUET THIS WED. NIGHT

Maryville Businessmen Hosts To Pigskin Toters.

Dec. 2—Members of the football squad are looking forward with keen anticipation to the annual football banquet, to be tendered to them by local business men, 7:30, Wednesday night, December 4, at the Evans Hotel.

The program for the banquet has not been completed as yet, but an outstanding feature will be the election of next year's Captain. The presentation of gold footballs to the five graduating members of the team will also take place. These five who have brought their pigskin careers to a close are: Bill Hope, Ralph Cherry, Judge Carper, "Doc" Morrison, and John Taggart. Speeches will be made by the coach, and some of the players.

COMPLAINT OF A NORTHERNER

It isn't snowing snow to me
It's snowing vile catarrh,
The whooping cough, and childish croup,
And all bad things that are.
It's snowing down wet feet, bad colds,
Sneezes and sniffles, too—
This bunk about its' beauty
Is all lost on me and you.
Just think of all the germs there are
Descending with this weather!
How many sloppy streets there are—
A-wandering through the town!
Don't you talk in words of poetry
Of the beauty of the snow.
I'm not guessing that it's awful.
No, indeed. I guess I know!

CLOPTON A VISITOR ON THE HILL

Last week we were honored by a visit from Robert Clopton, class of '26, who has recently returned from work in Honolulu, where he was teaching. He is now in the employ of the State Agriculture department of Alabama.

While in school here, Bob took an active part in the publication of the Echo, and so, was much interested in its new office and equipment in Thaw.

Bob is a brother of Mary and Olive Clopton, who are perhaps better known by the present students.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

The psychology club held its regular meeting on November 27. Hilda Farnham made a report on the test of aggressiveness of members of the club. Whereas the normal aggressiveness of boys is indicated by zero and of girls by sixteen and four tenths, the aggressiveness of members of the club was found to be seven tenths for boys and eighteen and eight tenths for girls.

Kemp Davis gave an interesting talk and read a paper on the psychology of leadership. The club members engaged in a general discussion on the qualities of a leader. It was decided that a leader must have determination, self-control, justice, tact, intelligence, ambition, a sense of humor, and enthusiasm.

FRENCH CLUB

On November 27, the French Club held its meeting in the Y. W. C. A. reading room.

After the business part, an enjoyable program was given by the different members.

The first number was a violin solo by Elizabeth Myers accompanied by Miss Butcher. Then followed a French reading by Allan Herdman. The last number, in which all the members of the club were able to participate, was the working out of a French puzzle.

The program was worked up by the program committee with Helen Plant as chairman.

This was the first time that the meeting was conducted almost entirely in French rather than English. The attempt was quite successful, and hereafter the meetings will be conducted in French as much as possible.

SENIOR PARTY

Over the hill to the poorhouse
We're wending our merry way,
We, the seniors of '30,
Wise as well as gay.

So sing the seniors as the truck carries them to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Coulter, which has been converted into a poorhouse for the occasion.

A somberly attired matron met them at the door and gave them an intelligence test. Part of the test required the completion of such sentences as, "Moonshiners feel—rich, stingy, free, happy, bashful" and "To dine at Pearsons means—wrestling, eating, bread-throwing, starving. Those who flunked the test were considered ineligible and were required to tell how they came to be in the poor house.

Laughing makes one hungry. The seniors had been laughing. Therefore, the seniors were hungry. Imagine their chagrin when someone started passing sticks of candy. They laughed some more and grew hungrier. Then, lo! dinner was announced. The meal consisted of roast pork, potato salad on lettuce, cranberry jelly, butter and hot rolls, pumpkin pie with whipped cream, and coffee.

Do you remember those weird voices that rudely awakened you at eleven o'clock last Tuesday night? The seniors were singing.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Edgerton of Chesterhill, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Verne Faires and two sons, Bob and Jo, of Xenia, Ohio, spent the Thanksgiving vacation with Dr. and Mrs. Barnes, 216 Indiana Avenue. They left for home on Saturday morning.

HIGH-BROW LOVE

regard Ted Rawley with a frown of disapproval, then as an inspiration occurred to him he pleaded, "Ted, if you but will, you can render me invaluable assistance. I am confronted with the task of writing a theme on "Love". My knowledge on the subject is negligible. I implore you to help me."

"Ha, ha, that's the best one I've heard in a long time," gurgled Ted, scarcely able to repress a roar of laughter. "You know, old man, that I'd do anything I could for you, but love just isn't my line. But haven't you got any ideas on it, anyway?"

Thornton slowly shook his head, "Not one idea, save for this outline which I have just written."

Ted mournfully viewed the outline, then said, "I'll tell you what, Thorny, you're all wrong. You take this subject "love" and try to treat it as if it were a physics problem or something. It's not like that at all. Love's something beautiful that makes poets out of blacksmiths, and fools out of wise men. You can't learn about it by redaing, the only thing is experience. You've got to fall in love, then write down how you feel, and there you are."

PRACTICE HOUSE

keeping the accounts, and cooking; the maid's work of washing, ironing, cleaning, and doing the various other household tasks. One girl is the maid and the other the house wife during the first half of their stay; then they exchange work.

During the three weeks they spend in the practice house these girls serve, as a test of their achievements, a tea, a buffet luncheon, and at least one formal dinner.

About eight years ago Mrs. McMurray conceived the idea of having this practice house in connection with the Smth-Hughes course. About that time a woman in Washington, D. C. wrote Mrs. McMurray saying that she wished to give her furniture to some worthy cause and would like to know some place where it would be useful. Mrs. McMrray suggested the practice house. The woman sent furniture for five rooms.

Visit the practice house and hear the girls singing,

"Oh, we wash, wash, wash,
And we rub, rub, rub,
For the clothes are soiled and dirty.
Then it's up squash, squash,
And it's down scrub, scrub
Every morning at five-thirty
We work all day without much pay
Our house spotless to make
It's not a lark, but we work till dark,
For our future husband's sake.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

One of the greatest assets to a debater is the ability to acquire a vast store of information. Needless to say, a debater must be more than a mere information bureau, but if one has a logical style and fluent speech, what he needs is information. There is one little book written on debate that says there are three ways of obtaining information, namely, (1) read, (2) read some more, and (3) keep on reading.

—:—

There may be other ways of course, but, at least, these are all practical for beginners.

—:—

Little Mary Lovette had some good reports or notes to give to the class last week, but it almost seemed that she wished it could be done without going through with it all.

—:—

A speaker's worth or ability is often measured by his power to move people. We have in the debate class the one who moves more people and moves them oftener, perhaps, than any other person on the Hill. Comer Fowler moves the entire school almost every hour—from one class to another—by merely ringing the bell.

—:—

We must remember also Viola Petitt's victory in extemporaneous speaking last year at the Pi Kappa Delta Convention. Then, she tied for first place here in the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest. Now she is out for laurels in debate.

—:—

E. W. Luckhart was a prominent orator in his high school days, but he lost on one occasion with a perfect alibi. He has vowed to take that chap in tow yet, even if he has to go to the Senate to do it.

—:—

William R. Graham is the one of our number who takes honors in almost every phase of college activities from debating and dramatics to swimming and golfing. He is a good example of the English type of general knowledge as opposed to the American specialization.

—:—

Last year we missed the happy face of Alice Rhea because she had too much to do to appear in our line-up. But it looks now as if she were going to hold the honors of her "Kentucky Home" as high as the "Wildcats" did against the "Volunteers" the other day in football.

—:—

Robert Jones: "Pardon me, but is the information you are going to give in this report worth anything as material?"

Wright Frost: "Yes, I wouldn't give it if it wasn't."

—:—

That sounds like an authority to be quoted, all right.

Students Get Chance To Help Fred Hope

Maryville Grad Is Busy Taking Christian Industrialism Into Heart of Dark Continent. Lecture Wednesday Evening By Dr. Good.

Dr. Wilson made an address to the students at the regular Vesper service Sunday night, which will serve as an introduction to Fred Hope, what he means to Maryville College, and what Maryville College means to him. This address therefor served also as an explanation of the Fred Hope Campaign which will be conducted this week.

The campaign will be conducted this year as it has been in the past, on Wednesday evening after supper. Dr. Good, formerly a missionary to Africa, will give an illustrated lecture onAfrica concerning the work which has been accomplished there and the work which should be done. Dr. Good is an interesting lecturer, made doubly so because of the deep love he has for the work in Africa. The speaker's father was also a missionary and is remembered as a noted explorer.

On Thursday morning the chapel monitors will pass out pledge cards for the Fred Hope Drive. The student will be asked to pledge any amount they feel able to pay toward this great cause. New Maryvilians, you will be astonished at the amount of improvement that Maryville's industrial missionary, Fred Hope, has brought about in Africa. This campaign has always been a great success both financially and spiritually, and it is to be hoped that the same results, or even greater ones, will be obtained this year.

DR. HSIEH SPEAKS TO FULL HOUSE SAT.

"Roosevelt of China", Lecturer, Is Well Received.

Dec. 8—Last night a large Maryville audience heard a most educational and entertaining lecture on "Awakened China" by Dr. Tehyi Hsieh, the "Teddy Roosevelt of China". This address was presented as the third lyceum program of the year.

After appearing in the costume of Old China Dr. Hsieh came forth in faultless American attire and presented his lecture in logical Western style. Although born and reared as a Chinese citizen he speaks English fluently and with almost perfect enunciation. Dr. Hsieh is an orator of international fame and last night he held his audience in perfect control for more than an hour and a quarter. His expressive jestures and impersonations enhanced immensely his style. Although for the most part his address was serious, and certainly the theme was throughout, his caustic wit and humor afforded unusual entertainment for his hearers.

Dr. Hsieh is a broadly educated man and his knowledge of the relationship between the civilization of China and that of America is perhaps unexcelled. He said soon the best of our own civilization added to the best of China's would make China equal to any progressive nation, and that there are now opportunities of leadership found in China which could not be equaled anywhere.

ATHENIAN MIDWINTER DATE CHANGED

Dec. 7.—The date for the Athenian Mid-Winter program has been changed from January 13 to January 27. Forrest I. Robertson, chairman of the Dramatic Committee, said this change was made in order that both the Athenian, the Alpha Sigma, and the Theta Epsilon societies might have more of Mrs. West's time for coaching the plays. The Athenians will produce "The Cardinal", a stirring drama of early sixteenth century Roman life, by Louis N. Parker. Rehearsals for this play have already begun.

MRS. W. P. STEVENSON INJURED BY FALL

Hip Broken When Ladder Slips Friends Sympathize.

Some people believe that bad luck comes to the person who walks under a step ladder, but bad luck, indeed, comes to the person who falls off a ladder.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Stevenson was seriously injured when she fell off a ladder while hanging curtains in "The House in the Woods." An x-ray taken Thursday morning in Knoxville revealed her hip broken in several places. She was attended by a nurse both to and from Knoxville and made the trip in an ambulance. At present she is slowly mending the break which will necessitate her staying in bed from two to four months.

The news of this accident has been received with much sorrow by her many friends on the Hill and elsewhere for Mrs. Stevenson is indeed, "a friend to all". She and Dr. Stevenson always welcome the college students to their lovely home in the college woods and are eager to help at all times.

Mrs. Stevenson's room is full of flowers and remembrances from her friends. The student body of Maryville College, as a whole, is remembering her with flowers. Many of the organizations on the Hill are sending their mesages of sympathy and wishes for a speedy recovery in forms of gifts, flowers, and other remembrances.

"LILAC TIME" TONIGHT

Voorhees Chapel The Place; 8:00 O'Clock The Time

Voorhees Chapel is the scene of the first Mid-Winter play of the season when the Alpha Sigma Literary Society presents "Lilac Time" tonight at 8:00 o'clock. The fame of Maryville midwinters extends far beyond College Hill and the bearers of the Alpha Sigma expect to widen that circle considerably tonight.

The hero, Frank Baker, and the heroine, Margaret Haynie are performers whose reputations are already established. They will have ample support in the remaining members of the well-chosen cast.

"Lilac Time" contains both drama and mirth and is a tale of war and love. The story has been adapted to both screen and stage and has been warmly received by many audiences.

A brilliant success is predicted for "Lilac Time" and—well—just follow the crowd.

MARION JOHNSON CALLED HOME

Marion Johnson's many friends will be sorry to learn that she has been called home on account of the serious illness of her mother. Since reports of Mrs. Johnson's condition show no improvement, Marion will not be expected to return until after the holidays.

School will reopen January 4

CHRISTMAS CAROLS FEATURE OF CHOIRS PROGRAM ON DEC.15

Music Especially Prepared By Vesper Choir Under Miss Henry.

On Sunday evening, December 15th, in the Voorhees Chapel will occur one of the most beautiful services of the year—the Annual Feast of Christmas Carols, given by the Vesper Choir. The choir this year includes some of the finest voices on the Hill, under the expert direction of Miss Frances Henry. Those who attend Vesper services are already acquainted with the excellence of the work done by the choir—and a great deal of extra time has been spent on the Christmas Carols.

The choir will be assisted this year by several instruments, under the supervision of Miss Mildred Butcher; by Miss Ethel Adkins and Miss Mildred McMurray at the pianos; and by Frank Neff, Jr., at the organ.

The program consists of traditional Christmas Carols of all nations. Some of these date back to the 15th Century. Your favorite carol will be on the program—and you will probably learn some very beautiful new ones. Dr. Stevenson will address us in his own inimitably inspiring manner. The program is concluded with the anthem, "Adeste Fideles."

The service begins at 7:00 o'clock, but we suggest that you be in your seats at 6:45, since you will want to see the impressive candle-lighting ceremony.

STUDENT COUNCIL GETS EXTRA DAY

Request of Students Granted; School Reopens Jan. 4th.

The Student Council of Maryville College met December 3rd, having as its principal purpose the discussion of holiday extension. The Council voted to put its stamp of approval upon the petition gotten up to the effect that in order that the students might spend New Year's Day at home, another day for Christmas holidays was desirable. A committee was appointed to confer with Dr. Wilson regarding the matter. The faculty acceded to this request at a meeting on Thursday.

DR. HUNTER ABSENT

Dec. 6—Dr. E. R. Hunter, head of the English Department, returned today from the annual meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States held in Lexington, Kentucky, on Thursday and Friday of this week.

The purpose of the Association is to regulate the standards of education in the South. About four hundred delegates from the various schools and colleges were present. We feel assured that Maryville was well represented at this important meeting. The business before the meeting was confined to routine of administration and matters concerning college authorities.

Dr. Hunter reports some very significant events, however, and these will doubtless interest all. He was deprived, wittingly or unwittingly of the cap to his toothpaste tube, and his fountain pen. There is some hope that this fountain pen may be recovered, but it is feared that the other article is gone for good.

Luminaries in "Tilly of Bloomsbury"

Virginia Hecht and J. Stuart James play the heavy roles in Theta's Midwinter next Monday. "Nick" White, the bespectacled man on the left, is the stellar comedian.

LIBRARY IN COURSE OF REORGANIZATION AND DEVELOPMENT

Dec. 7—This afternoon the library was closed in order that it might be moved and properly arranged in the new shelves. All those cases by the girls' entrance, which aroused everyone's curiosity for so long, contained new metal cases shelves and tables.

The old card index has been replaced by a new one twice as large The old wooden reserve shelves in the main library have been replaced by new metal bookcases. In the back room many new shelves have been set up. Altogether there has been space added for about 20,000

MERITS OF HONOR SYSTEM PRESENTED

N. S. F. A. Recommends Study Of This Vital Question.

(Note—This series of articles on the Honor System is being printed simultaneously in all the college newspapers in the United States. A series of five articles dealing with matters pertaining to the Honor System will follow. This release is being made by the Committee on the Honor System for the National Student Federation of the United States of America, with a hope that the students of this country will give serious thought to the problem of student honesty in our colleges.

These articles were prepared by James Theodore Jackson, Chairman of the Committee on the Honor System. The writer would be glad to hear from students concerning this problem. Please address him at P.O. Box 958, University, Alabama)

Of all the problems that confront student leaders and college administrators, that of student honesty in classroom work and campus relations is probably the one that is first in importance and interest today. When students meet, this problem consumes a large part of the time given for discussion of student problems; when college administrators meet, this problem is widely discussed. It is a perplexing problem; it is an important one.

Some colleges and universities attempt to solve this problem of student honesty by means of the Honor System. Under the Honor System, broadly speaking, the students are given absolute freedom from surveillance by faculty members or proctors. His word is his bond.

ORPHANS GIVEN PARTY

Y. W. Sponsoring Treat For Girls From County Home

On the evening of December the fourteenth, the Y. W. C. A. will give a Christmas party to the children in the orphan's home. In the Y. W. auditorium the orphans will give a program consisting of a play, readings, and a drill.

The feature of the evening that will be of chief interest to the children is, of course, the Christmas tree and Santa Claus. The presents that the girls give to the orphans will be hung on the tree and distributed by Santa Claus.

FRANK SCRUGGS IS MARKET SPECIALIST

Word has just been received that Frank Scruggs, of the class of '18, has gone from Boston to Jacksonville, Florida, where he is Market News Specialist for the State of Florida. He broadcasts every evening over WJAX certain market information.

Scruggs spent 1920-21 in Europe, and upon his return, entered graduate school at Georgetown University in Washington, where he earned his Master's degree.

DEBATE SCHEDULE NEARLY COMPLETE AS SEASON NEARS

Two Men Will Go To National Tourney at Wichita, Kans. Next Spring.

Dec. 7—The debate aspirants of Maryville see a day of reckoning just beyond the holidays in the tryouts for the varsity team January 13, with one debate dangling before them even before that time. One debate will be held with Albion College of Michigan before the debate class the second week in January. The exact date is not yet decided. Professor Queener, the debate coach, will pick a team from the class for this contest as it comes before the regular team will have been selected. This is a rather unusual situation for Maryville but promises to be interesting.

January 13 a tournament will be held from which varsity teams of six women and either six or eight men will be chosen. The contests will be strong and hard fought as there are now five former varsity men in the class and determining voices from last year's freshman team clammering to be heard, and a number of others who are just as interested in debate.

The debate schedule is not complete yet in every respect but, as arranged so far, is as follows:

January, week of 6—Albion College
February 17—Carson-Newman and Normal (triangle)
February 21—Carson-Newman and Teachers (girls' triangle)
February 27—King and Tusculum (triangle)

PAGEANT WILL BE GIVEN BY Y. M., Y. W.

Christmas Story by Sarah Moore Staged.

The Y.M.C.A. and Y. W. will, as is customary, give a Christmas Pageant this year. This pageant, "Echoes of Angels" will be given in the chapel on Wednesday evening, December 18, at 6:30.

Many students will be interested to know that "Echoes of Angels" was written by Sarah Moore who graduated last year. Miss Moore's pageant is a short story representing life in medieval times. A young knight is searching for angel echoes which he has heard and cannot rest in peace until he hears them again. The prelude to the story, is also very pretty and will be unusually effective when staged.

The cast has already been selected and is now at work. The following people have been chosen to take part in this pageant:

The Knight - - Jesse James
The Minstrel - - Bob Jones
The Jester - - Homer McCann
The Virgin - Louise Carson
The Priest - - Hayden Laster
The Maiden - Margaret Haynie
The Shepherds - - Ira Morrison
Ray Dollenmayer
The Angels - - Helen Gleason
Ann Smartt, Eloise Garrett
The Choir Boys - Yervant Topolian
Bill Hanna

The committee in charge of this Christmas pageant are working to make the lighting, costumes, music and all the setting in general, as impressive and beautiful as possible.

KNOXVILLE CLUB HOLDS MEETING

The Knoxville Club met Thursday, December 5, for the purpose of electing officers and reorganizing for the coming year. The following officers were elected:

President—Rachel Grubbs
V. President—Belvadora Johnson
Secy.-Treas.—Bess Truan

SENIORS GO TO PALACE

The Seniors will go to the Palace Theatre tomorrow night to see "The Iron Mask". Since the class has recently had a party, the theatre outing seemed to be the best diversion from the usual course of social events which may be participated in. Light refreshments will be served at the Bakery immediately after the show.

Cold Snap Furnished Thrills For Devotees of Winter Sports

"—And this is the sunny south; why, I expcted to play tennis and go swimming all winter." Well, there's still a good chance to go swimming but you'll have to break the ice to do it. Talking about ice, I wonder how many know that there is a good pond for ice skating just off the north end of the campus.

This pond has been frozen over hard enough to skate on from Sunday night till Friday morning. Only a few were out on Monday but on Tuesday several enthusiasts from the college and some from town were getting back into form. Dr. and Mrs. Crothers, Miss Green, Jesse Peirce and Bob Crothers were cutting all sorts of fancy figures in the morning and afternoon.

That night about eight pair of skates were put to good use. The fellows played crack the whip and blackman until their feet refused to move. During the game everyone tied to polish the ice up at least once in his hurry to catch someone. "Buck" held the highest score of falls per game.

Several college men put on the blades for the first time with success. Anyhow they learned that ice is not as soft as it should be for beginners, and it freezes with the slippery side up.

Who Are You?

We notice in one of the college papers that fifty percent of the graduates of its class of 1929 are in graduate or professional schools. While for our own graduates the ratio is lower than this, this is certainly indicative of the trend of modern education.

Not so many years ago a high school education was deemed sufficient for all except those who were to become professional men. Now a college education is considered the logical thing, and one who has not had this four years under a college roof is regarded with pity. It appears that the time is approaching when a man with merely a college education will be looked upon with the same feeling. "Too bad he couldn't have gone to graduate school" will no doubt be the comment when the next generation faces the cold, cruel world with college diploma in hand.

Thus do we find the competition growing keener every year, and lest we take too seriously our title of the "privileged class", let us stop to consider such an evidence of progress in education.

Let no man think more highly of himself than he ought to think.

—O—

Late Again!

To be late is to enter the status of the fashionable, according to some people's etiquette, but modern business and social programs allow no such freedom. The world is run according to the clock, and those who would take and keep a place in the world, must accept the restrictions of the timepiece.

It has come to our notice lately that there is a great disregard for that virtue known as punctuality here on the Hill. Even those who will not admit that to be late is a breach of etiquette, will grant us that it is at least disconcerting to the audience and the performers to have patrons straggling into the auditorium for half an hour after the opening of the program. Students who leave the Hill for Sabbath school in time to arrive for the closing remarks are not forming a habit of punctuality. It is not so much that we miss the program, but we are forming habits which will be detrimental in after years.

The same general statement can be made concerning the opening of programs. If a performance is scheduled for a certain time it should begin at that time. At least this would encourage promptness on our part.

It is just about as easy to be on time as to be late, and it looks a lot better.

LAW CLUB

Dec. 5—Last night the Law Club met in Alpha Sigma Hall for the regular meeting. The cool atmosphere which seemed to pervade the room when the lawyers first entered was practically forgotten if not actually raised several derees during the parliamentary drill at the beginning of the program. There was a matching of wits shaded only once this season and that was in the arguments over the first constitutional amendment early in the fall. It was truly a "warming up" period for the program which followed.

Next in order Homer McCann, program secretary, read an oration to the club. This oration on disarmament which was entitled "Hickory Stumps" was written by John C. Gewacke, of Nebraska Wesleyan University, and won first place in the National Oratorical Contest of the Intercollegiate Peace Association.

E. W. Luckhart gave a speech of his own make on "A Plan for World Peace" which was little short of an oration. He would have one world instead of many nations.

"The Outlawry of War" was discussed by J. Stuart James. In Mr. James' opinion war cannot be outlawed by mere peace pacts. However, peace discussions are all over the world and cannot but have a valuable psychological influence.

We hope by this time that Bill West has cut this wisdom tooth she's been talking about lately. Someone has suggested that the ring she wears around her neck would make a good teething ring. No doubt she's made use of it already. Of course, you know it's Lea's.

LETTERS OF MARQUIS de LAFAYETTE TO HIS WIFE —by Henry Whipple

This is the last installment of the letters of Marquis de Lafayette to his wife, and we hope the readers of the Echo have enjoyed these splashes of wit and humor.

The author would rather we kept his name as Henry Whipple, but we do not think this is fair to our readers., so we are disregarding his wishes with our humble apology.

The author is none other than our famous campus-humorist, Brenton Stearns. We wish to congratulate the Will Rogers of 1940.

June 22, 1778.

My Dear Wife:

I am just as famous today as I was yesterday. I have done nothing but attend Elk meetings, Rotary Club luncheons, and join in the Chamber of Commerce parades. I am tired of this public life. I think that I shall retire for a day or two and go down to Mount Vernon. I shall write you from there tomorrow.

Lovingly,
Laffy.

May 4, 1778.

My Dear Wife:

Mount Vernon is a very lovely little spot. I came down last night by pullman, so I did not see much of the country. The grounds are beautiful and the gardens superb. The mansion is on a pretty little hill which slopes down to the river bank. I wish that you could enjoy it all with me. You would be amused as well as pleased.

All the work here is done by black men. They are quite ludicrous They love to sing, play the banjo, and in their spare time they love to roll little cubes with numbers on them. It seems to be a kind of game, and yet from the prayers that are issued up one might view it as a religous ceremony. I wanted to learn the method, but George told me that I had better not. I was disappointed, but said nothing.

We had an Indian attack this morning. We all hid in the cyclone cellar, and the savages got away with nothing but two cows and a Ford car. Such occurances have been so common that I do not mind them at all. George said that the Indians were much worse during the Gold Rush in California

Later on in the day the Washingtons held a tea in my honor. I met quite a few celebrities. Let me name a few of them so you can see what kind of people I have been with all afternoon. There were the two Smith Brothers who are working on a new model cough-drop, Daniel Webster, a leading figure in the W. T. C. U. movement, Patrick Henry of "Give me liberty" fame, Daniel Boone with a bear skin in one hand and a grape vine in the other, Sir Walter Raleigh with Pocahontas, and Mussolini. They were all fine people.

That is just about all the news. I'll start home tomorrow night, because the British are going to surrender at Yorktown. That will end my activities here. I shall be glad to see you again, dear wife. So tout de suite until next week.

Your fond husband,
Laffy.

LETTERS OF A COLLEGE BOY TO HIS GIRL FRIEND

Maryville, Tenn.

Dere Annabelle:

I am writing you another letter to let you know that I am still in College. I am eating an apple.

You can have the gold cigarette lighter you gave me last Christmas, I won't need it any more. I want to thank you for the paper and envelopes. Also you forgot the stamps.

I am out for wrestling and Farmer Watkins is the Coach, but he is no ordinary farmer cause he knows lots of tricks. Only he makes us do a lot of foolish things. Every day he makes me weigh on a scale with my bath robe on then he weighs the bath robe, which is foolish cause a bath robe can't gain any weight. I guess that is just another rule they have here.

We got a library here at Maryville but the boys don't do much studying cause the girls come to the library too. One girl tried to talk to me but I didn't answer no sir that's me all over—Studious—isn't it Annabelle.

I saw Kemp Davis today, but he won't be here long cause he knows too much. Why do you know I heard him tell a girl lots of things I never even heard of before. I won't tell you any more about him cause he sure is soft on girls and I don't want you to fall for him.

That cake you sent me was fine oney I broke that new tooth I had fixed free last summer. When are you going to send me something good to eat?

My Heart Pants for you.
"Lory".

STORY ELECTED TO FOOTBALL CAPTAINCY OF 1930 MARYVILLE ELEVEN

Highlander Cage Season Opens Fri. Night with Alumni Furnishing Opposition

METTLE OF VARSITY TO GET REAL TEST

"Grads" Will Boast Well Known Heroes of Former Days.

Maryville basketball enthusiasts will have the first chance to view this year's basketball team on next Friday night, December 13.

The opposition will be furnished by former Maryville College students and alumni. Some of whom are: J. Davis, Bird, Marion, McMurray, Delaney, McCall, Thrower, Veech, Gamble and possibly a few others.

Some of this bunch are fairly well known to the student body and the others are able to introduce themselves equally well on the hardwood floor.

The alumni have beaten their Alma Mater the past few years but the luck seems to have turned this year and Friday, the thirteenth is the date set for the downfall of Maryville's by-gone heroes.

Coach Honaker is somewhat handicapped this year by the lack of time before the Christmas holidays. The first game this year is a week earlier and this detracts from the time that is usually given to the fundamentals and preliminary work.

Scrimmaging has already been installed on the daily menu and the coaches are fast assembling an aggregation which is to stem the onrush of Highlander opposition.

Some of the new men have been showing real ability and the coaches seem justified in believing that Maryville can win some of the games that the schedule calls for.

The first cut was made Tuesday and the players that were dropped were mostly composed of members of the ever-aspiring Freshman class. Some of the men that were dropped might have developed into good basketball players but only so many men can be handled and coached with any degree of capability on the part of the coaching force.

The Highlanders will play Kentucky on October 11 next year.

GIRLS' SOCCER

The girls' soccer tournament came to a close last week, and now attention is being put on basketball. The final soccer game was played by the Freshman team and the Junior-Senior team. Both sides played hard and well, and it was a close game. The Junior-Senior team barely won the victory, and the championship, with a score of 3-2.

WRESTLING

The first wrestling meet of the winter sport season will be held in conjunction with the Maryville-Alumni basketball game on next Friday.

As much as possible class lines will be adhered to and upperclassmen and Freshmen will be matched, but where it is impossible to give good matches in this way good men of the same weight will be matched, regardless of class.

As the game will have to start by eight o'clock the wrestling matches will be started around seven o'clock, and last approximately an hour. In all probability there will be about ten five-minute matches.

The wrestling team has been very much handicapped during the last two seasons because of lack of equipment and Coach Honaker and the Athletic department are now casting about to remedy this. Samples of good mats are being examined with the view of purchasing a new 20 by 20 mat, to be the property of the Maryville College wrestling team. It is expected that this mat will be ready for use when the wrestlers return from their Christmas holidays.

Arrangements have been made for a meet with the Knoxville Y team just after the holidays but no definite date has been set.

The Howard College girls are trying to get a girl's basketball team which will play with other colleges.—The Howard Crimson.

One of the most modern gyms in the South is being erected at Roanoke College.—The Brackety-Ack.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The basketball joust between the Varsity and Alumni this Friday night ought to be close, with the odds leaning a little in favor of the athletes of former years.

Those who haven't seen Jean McMurray play have a treat in store for themselves, if this Maryville alumnus is present Friday evening. Coach Bob Thrower manages to cover a lot of territory even when he's standing still, and when he moves he doesn't move slowly, either. Capt. "Satchel", alias "Suitcase" Waddell will see to that. Then there's Mr. Joseph Gamble, too, who is no slouch on the hardwood court. Besides these, we shall probably see a couple of the members of last year's Varsity in action—Merle Delaney and J. D. Davis. With this colorful crew in concerted combat, the Varsity will have to step to a lively tune to beat 'em.

The wrestlers are scheduled to begin their bone-crushing thrillers at seven bells sharp, so come early.

We wish to take time out here to compliment the football squad on its selection of next year's captain.

Storey's performance at his guard position has stood out all season. Time and time again in the Kentucky and Vanderbilt games, he broke up plays by out-charging his man. He is deserving of the honor given him, and will make a corking good captain. We wish him the best of success. His selection is a credit to Maryville.

In this issue we have printed Bob Thrower's choice of an All-American Football Team for 1929. Coach will defend and discuss his selections at one of the society meetings this week.

BANQUET CLIMAXES PAST GRID SEASON

Squad Feted at Evans Hotel by Local Business Men.

Dec. 4—Carl Storey, star guard on the Highlander eleven for the past three years, was elected to the captaincy of the 1930 Maryville College football team at the annual football banquet tonight at the Evans Hotel. The election of this popular and deserving athlete climaxed a highly successful banquet tendered to the 1929 football squad by local business men.

After the men had eaten their fill Toastmaster "Turkey" Smith and ex-Mayor Cox, congratulated the team on its season's record, and what it had done not only for Maryville College but for the town itself. Judge Crawford presented gold footballs to the five graduating Seniors: Bill Hope, "Doc" Morrison, Ralph Cherry, John Taggart, and Judge Carper, and also to Captain Lowell McDonald and Manager Crow.

Each of these men responded with a speech. The toastmaster then called on Coach Honaker, who after reviewing the past season, closed by saying that he was very optimistic regarding next year's team.

The banquet was a huge success and the football squad is very grateful to the local business men.

VETERAN GUARD IS HONORED BY MATES

New Captain Has Performed Steadily in Stellar Style.

Those unfortunate ones who were unable to attend the football banquet last Wednesday night, were aroused about ten-thirty with fifteen sharp blasts ending enthusiastically with "Captain Storey".

Carl comes to us from a town famous for its lack of sign boards advertising Lucky Strikes, namely, Culleoka, Tennessee. It appears as if Carl is living in circles and makes a complete turn every four years, for he was captain of his team at Culleoka during his Senior year, and now is to pilot the Highlanders during the last year of his four at Maryville.

Here are just a few things that might prove interesting to ye gentle reader—but this is very confidential—Carl played the pivot position for three years in high school, and it is a sworn fact that he never lost a moment out of a single game during those three years. Since coming to Maryville he has enjoyed a most successful football career—he has lettered every year, with the exception of his Freshman year.

So here's to Captain Storey. If he continues the old fight as he has been showing here during the past three years then we predict that all of the Maryville opponents will be printing Story's picture on their stickers—for that's the only way they can lick him.

DEBATE

March 4—Chattanooga (here)
March 17—Teachers and L. M. U. (triangle)
March 28—Berea and L. M. U. (girls' triangle)

Our team will be away from home for all the girls' debates but visiting teams will debate on our platform the same night that our teams are away.

Two men wil be selected to go with Professor Queener to the National Convention of Pi Kappa Delta which will be held at Wichita, Kansas, March 31 to April 4 inclusive. One will be a debater and orator; the other a debater and extemporaneous speaker. This team will have seven debates on the road—four on the way to Kansas and three coming back. The schools to meet in these contests are Centre College, Evansville College, Westminister College, Kansas State Teachers' College, Oklahoma Baptist University, Hendrix College, and Union University.

The freshman boys team will debate with the University of Tennessee and possibly the girls' team also.

MERITS OF HONOR

Those colleges which use the Honor System, as a rule, believe that it is efficacious in instilling into students a love and respect for honest dealings one with the other; that it is a vital force in the building of character in students; and that it inculcates into the college youth strong and lasting principles of good citizenship that will serve him well in after-college days, when he has left the protecting influence of college professors and fellow-students, and the wholesome deterrent effect of student disapproval of shady conduct.

On the other hand, many colleges, in fact a majority of the colleges of the United States, do not favor the Honor System. They think that its advantages are greatly outweighed by its disadvantages; they consider that such matters are academic, and that they should be handled by paid faculty members rather than by students whose experience is comparatively limited and whose judgment is not fully developed.

Between the Honor System, in which faculty control is nil, and the system of faculty espionage, in which student control is nil, are many intermediary systems. In some colleges the Honor System is in force in certain departments; in some it applies to matters outside the classroom; but in most of them the Honor System attempts primarily to regular honesty in scholastic work.

A number of colleges are in the midst of a great upheaval on account of the problem of the Honor System. A few have abolished it within the last few years. A few others have installed it. Others are seeking information concerning it in order that they may try to install it, or if they already have it, in order that they may make improvements.

HIGH-BROW LOVE

At this point Thornton coldly replied, "That's all very well, Ted, but have I not made it clear to you that I have had no experience with this phenomenon "love' and furthermore I desire none.

"Aw shucks, I almost forgot that you're that type. There's no use, Thorny, I guess you'd better give up—but wait a minute. I've got it See that girl over there. Olive Lee's her name, I know her. I tell you what to do. You write down three or four questions on the subject, I'll take them over to her and tell her you want to know about them, see? She'll be able to tell you anything you want to know, she's a 'whizz' at everything. Only, don't ask any dumb questions like 'discuss the causes and consequences of love', or something like that. Put some life and feeling into them, get me?

Thornton was not quite sure whether he "got him" or not, but he did feebly nod assent. Never before had he depended on an outsider, let alone a girl, for information, and the idea made him quail. Yet Thornton, recognizing that persistence carried too far is mere obstinacy, found himself searching for a few live questions on love. Turning to his outline, he found that point number one was "the stimulus". Something in Thornton's logical head almost shrieked "What is the stimulus of love"—but no, that seems to be just what Ted considers objectionable, too didactic. The question should convey the impression of feeling and life, should they, well this must be what he wants: "How could I earn your love " That should prove quite satisfactory. With regard to the second point, "the requisites of love" such terminology as this would doubtless be effective: "Could you love anyone like me?" Thornton paused to wipe the sweat which, trickling down his high forehead had accumulated on his glasses. Again consulting the outline, he found point number three to be "its significance." That did not seem to lend itself very well to flippant phraseology, but after some seconds' deliberation, Thornton evolved: "Do you know what it means to love and to be loved?" The fourth point, "the value of love" he slyly clothed in this question: "What would the world be without love?"

Thornton secretly was very pleased with himself, feeling the assurance that he had touched all the vital issues of this subject, love, and yet had presented these issues in four questions that were as live and personal as even Ted might wish. He called over Ted and had him deliver the slip of paper to Olive Lee who sat at the far side of the room. Peering furtively from the corner of his glasses he watched Ted say a few words, probably to explain that the note came from Thornton, saw her unfold the paper, read it, then blush furiously. Now she scribbled off a few words on a paper, gave it to Ted, then hastily left the library. Thornton, baffled by the girl's actions, yet thrilled with the joy of an entirely new experience, could scarcely wait to read the message which, written in a shaky hand, was, "Meet me at the post office at six."

Further data on this case has never been recorded, but Miss Haskin, herself, has admitted that Thornton received an A on his first English theme.

THETA MIDWINTER

Mildred McKenzie and Esther Horton are stage managers.

The conflict between two English families furnishes the basis of the story. The mix-up that the heroine, Virginia Hecht, gets in when she attempts to deceive the would-be aristocratic family of her lover, Jesse James, will keep the audience enthralled and amused throughout the whole play. Lawrence Somers, as Stillbottle, the sheriff, is the most comical figure seen on the Maryville stage since the days of Maynard Dunn. Nick White, with his characteristic "rambunctious" outbursts, plays the part of Percy, Tilly's brother, to perfection. Don Briggs, as Lucius Welwyn, plays the part of a philosophical, shiftless scholar who realizes that he owes everything he has to his energetic, kind hearted wife, portrayed by Margaret Mevis. In contrast to this devoted, tho poverty-stricken, couple there are the hero's parents, the hen-pecked Abel Mainwaring and the haughty Lady Marian skillfully depicted by Edwin Osborne and Marjorie Nelson.

Nothing quite like this play has ever been presented on the Maryville stage and it will be well worth seeing.

Tickets may be bought for thirty five cents each at the Bookstore, Walker's Drug Store, and from various members of Theta.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

William Barnard, of the last two years interested in debating and oratory is hoeing a wide row in both ths year. He is more ambitious than the majority if he carries out his plan of working a considerable amount on them during the Christmas holidays. Only a few, I would say, do that.

That is the secret of leadership, however, for a leader is one who steps in ahead of a crowd.

—:—

Only two girls are trying for the position of college orator for girls, Ruby Bailey and Lucy Lee Silcox. At present both of them seem more advanced with their orations than the boys are.

—:—

One thing that speaks well for Homer McCann is that he has been treasurer of nearly every thing he has had a hand in on the Hill. If he can persuade fellows to give up money around this place, he must be good.

Of course we all remember that grandstand play Ralph Teffeteller made last year while catching in a baseball game.

If Clarence Bratschie can build as strong an argument as he shows prowess in the gym team exhibitions he will need to make no rebuttal for his opponent will have none.

We have representatives in the debate class from nearly every college activity. Paul Edris, a cheer

The first time we ever heard Alice Renegar debate she just bottled up her opponents and told them where to find material.

The question for debate is: Shall we throw away our guns and fight like a man or shall we retain them and carry on a civilized war?

—:—

Disarmament might bring peace though, for any modern soldier would be ashamed to start out with a bow-gun.

LIBRARY

volumes. This will put into circulation many books which have been inaccessible because of lack of space to handle them properly. The old wooden shelves have been converted into magazine racks, these extending the magazine reserve shelves.

An addition which cannot be overlooked is the new Encyclopedia Brittanica. This is the new fourteenth edition. The print is much more readable and the binding more beautiful and more durable than the old edition.

But it is not the library alone which has been improved. In the museum several new display cases and eight or nine new display tables have been added. The window shades which were put up at the beginning of the year mainly to protect the museum displays, also help those who study on that side of the library in the early morning.

With the new equipment, the library will be more uniform and will offer even better service than it has heretofore.

STUDENTS PLEDGE NEARLY $1000 To FRED HOPE WORK

Dr. A. I. Good, Missionary Scientist, Puts Drive Across

As a result of the annual Fred Hope Drive nine hundred and thirty-fi-ve dollars was pledged in chapel Thursday morning by the faculty and student body. Dr. Wilson will inform Mr. Hope at once of the usual success of the campaign and that the amount wil probably be increased after the holidays.

Mr. Hope's representative and co-worker, Dr. A. I. Good is one of the best speakers and lecturers which the Maryville students have heard. He is not only a great preacher and missionary but a scientist and historian as well.

Dr. Good's father was also an explorer, scientist, and missionary. It was he who really opened up the interior of Africa for Christian service. He also began a translation of the Bible in the native language—a work which his son is now endeavoring to complete.

At one time Dr. Good's father sent a collection of five hundred butterflies to America. These were very rare specimens which had not been discovered before. Like his father, Dr. Good is very interested in collecting new butterflies. Since he does not have time to catch them himself, he employs a native to do this for him. Of course Dr. Good labels the butterflies before sending them on to America. In a few days Dr. Good expects to lecture at the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburg. An invitation to speak at this great institution of scientific investigation would in itself prove the worth of the man as a scientist.

After having heard Dr. Good speak, every student showed a greater interest in this work which our Missionary, Fred Hope, is carrying on in Africa. It might be well to state here that a tardy pledge will be acceptable at any time.

Miss Caldwell has requested that all portable and talking machines of any description be taken home by the girls and left there. The reason for making this rule is abuse of the use of the victrola by owners and non-owners. Therefore, those who wish to sleep from three to six in the afternoon may do so without the customary bedtime lullabies!

THETA ALPHA PHI INITIATES FOUR COLLEGE ACTORS

Roberta Hickman, Hazel Bowers, Graham, Morgan '27 Thus Honored.

Dec. 14—The Maryville chapter of Theta Alpha Phi National Dramatic Fraternity held its fall initiation meeting Wednesday night, December 11 at the home of Mrs. Lewis Veech on Court Street. Mrs. Veech is an- instructor in the Expression Department and is a member of Theta Alpha Phi. The initiation was held on this date because December 11 was "Founder's Day". Four new members were initiated and received into the fraternity. They were Roberta Hickman, Hazel Bowers, William R. Graham, and John Lucy Morgan.

Miss Hickman is a senior, and one of the most talented and popular performers in Maryville. Perhaps she is best remembered as the nurse in "Romeo and Juliet" and as the leading chaacter in "The Thirteenth Chair". She is a graduate in Expression.

Miss Bowers is an expression student and has already been seen in two plays this year, both "The Family Upstairs" and "Lilac Time".

Mr. Graham also is an expression student and has been in the two plays mentioned this year. Many will remember still his outstanding ability as a young lover in "The Thirteenth Chair" last year.

Mr. Morgan graduated from the College in the class of '28. He was one of the star performers in dramatics while he was a student and has since been coaching and working in dramatics.

THETA PLAY TONIGHT

"Tillie of Bloomsbury" Will Amuse and Entertain Capacity Crowd

Tonight in the chapel Theta Epsilon Literary Society will present the second mid-winter of the season, "Tilly of Bloomsbury".

The story consists of the activities of two English families, one of which is an established member of the aristocracy, and the other of the upper middle class. The cast is one of unusual ability, with Virginia Hecht and Stuart James as leading characters. Mrs. West coached the play.

"Where the Hilltop's Crowned with Cedars"

Spirit of Christmas Reigns

Is There a Santa Claus?

The child who asked this question of a great metropolitan newspaper, was told by the editor that there was. Describing Santa Claus as the spirit of giving, this editor put a new and lasting conception of the fourth century saint into the child's mind, and reminded others of their responsibility in making Santa Claus real.

We feel that College Hill has caught this spirit of Santa Claus to an unprecedented degree this year. The spirit which prompted the magi from the East to bring gifts to the Child of Bethlehem, is in our midst. The effects are self-evident. Because we have caught this spirit of giving, how many of our dark-skinned fellow men in Africa may not catch the same spirit? How many of the orphaned children of the town are having their idea of Christmas brightened by the thoughtfulness of their friends? How much is Battle Branch being made to find Santa Claus a not too distant benefactor?

No one knows exactly, but surely this spirit is finding its way to the hearts of men, women and children because we too believe in Santa Claus.

May this ideal pervade our Christmas season, and continue to make us happy.

The Editor.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PAGEANT PORTRAYS UNSELFISH GIVING

Colorful Drama of Royal Life To Be Seen At Chapel Wednesday Night.

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. will present their annual Christmas pageant on Wednesday evening, December 18, at 8:00 o'clock in the chapel. Christmas pageants are always full of the spirit prevailing at this time of joy and good will, and this one is indeed no exception to the rule.

The pageant is entitled, "The Echoes of Angels", and includes a cast of about fourteen students. Jesse James takes the part of the knight; the minstrel is portrayed by Ira Morrison; Homer McCann is the Jester; Louise Carson takes the part of The Virgin; Stanley McCool becomes the stately priest; the maiden is interpreted by Margaret Haynie. Besides these main characterizations, are groups of shepherds, choir boys and angels. The theme of the pageant centers about the sadness of the maiden, the jester, and the knight due to their professed uselessness. However, the minstrel with his silver tongue shows them that by simply doing the everyday things of life and lending aid whenever necessary they can become useful and consequently regain their happy spirits. Throughout the pageant, the voices of the angels color the pageant in all its aspects.

It will indeed be a fitting close to our work before the disbanding for the holidays and help to put everyone into the reverent attitude which is so frequently unobserved during the Christmas time.

ORCHESTRA HAS PARTY

Movie Enjoyed by Proteges of Miss Butcher.

Thursday evening was theatre night for the members of the orchestra. Twenty-three of these musicians went with Miss Butcher to the Palace. The picture of the evening was "Two Lovers", a tale of Spain in the sixteenth century, starring Vilma Banky and Ronald Coleman. In place of a comedy there was a vaudeville act.

After the show the company visited Walker's, where delicious refreshments were served. The comment was made that this was probably the last time this year that

THREE HIGHLANDERS ON SMOKY MOUNTAIN CONFERENCE TEAM

Milligan, Emory and Henry Place Three; Tusculum, King One.

Three Maryvillians are honored with places on the All-Smoky Mountain Conference Team picked by the coaches of the conference at Greeneville, Tenn. last week. Carl Story, popular 1930 Captain-elect, Lea Calloway, sophomore flash, and Clifford Overly, the Beau Brummell of the Highlander squad, were rewarded for their outstanding play throughout the season.

The selections of the coaches are considerably representative of the entire conference. From end to end the line has speed and power, and th backfield has a punch and versatility that would combine to produce a formidable array of gridders.

Bowman, of Milligan, and Mackey of Emory-Henry are placed at the ends. Bowman played tackle last year, being shifted to guard this season. He is good on defnse and is an excellent pass receiver. Mackey's work on both offense and defense made him a valuable asset to his team. In his freshman year he made the Ohio State first team. Snell, of Carson-Newman, and Townley of King, were also mentioned.

At the tackles,—Brown, Milligan's captain, has duplicated the performance which obtained for him, the mythical tackle selection last year. "Big Wagon" Overly has clicked in great style for the Highlanders all year, even though he was handicapped with an ankle injury. Woodman, of King, Whiteside of Emory-Henry, and Goldberg, of Carson-Newman, were considered as possibilities.

Carl Story cannot be praised too highly for his play at guard. He has a bulldog tenacity plus intelligence. His election as Maryville's captain is a deserving honor. Baker, Emory-Henry's guard, is light, but fast, and a sure tackler. Lowell McDonald, Highlander leader, and

NO SCHOOL ON MONDAY

You who have been wondering whether there will be school on Monday following the Christmas holidays may put away your doubts. When the faculty decided to grant the request for the extra day, the only thing they decided was to give us the day and then if it was found necessary later in the term, the day would be made up.

Phin Taylor A Sketch by Herdman

As like as not, if you've ever passed through Rockport, you've heard of Phin Taylor. It seems as he's the most talked-about fellow in the whole town, an' it's really too bad, awful pitiful.

You see it's this way—he's not exactly crazy—he never done nothin' to hurt no one or nothin' like that, though of course our Ma's never used to let us play down in Keets' Creek, down there by his house, 'cause it's like they say, you can't never tell what'll get into them folks. Well, anyway, he's not crazy, he's just sort of, sort of "off" as some folks put it.

The whole trouble as I sees it, is that somewhere or other someone put a bunch of crazy ideas into his head, and he ain't never been able to get rid of them. He's forever talking about departures and arrivals, but goodness knows he don't never get nowhere hisself. It's like this, he says: We ain't never supposed to arrive. He says, when you start out you're just supposed to keep on goin' and goin' and goin' and if you ever arrive—well, it's just too bad for you. Why he even tries to correct Noah Webster, the fellow what wrote the dictionary; Phin says Noah was all wrong about that word 'goal." Phin says a goal is not something you want to reach. He says it's something you want to try to reach. As if there was any difference between wanting to reach a thing, and wanting to try and reach it. And, oh yes, folks what's been in his house says he has a motto hung up on the wall "I strive not to arrive, but to strive". Has anyone ever heard anything queerer than that?

No sir, it sure don't do no good havin' people like that running around loose in Rockport.

The orphans presented a Christmas program in the Y. W. auditorium Saturday night. The first number was a drill by fourteen girls, each having a card on which was printed one of the letters from the words "Merry Christmas".

When the program was concluded, Santa Claus came tumbling down the chimney and distributed to the orphans the presents that their college big sisters had prepared for them. Each of the children also received a bag of candy and an orange.

A great deal of appreciation is due the Y.W. girls in charge: Gwendolyn Green, Ellen McCulloch, Ruth Sharp and Betty Wilbur.

SENIORS END SOCIAL SEASON WITH MOVIE

Final '29 Whirl Is Topped With Refreshments.

The class of 1930 held it's December party at the Palace Theatre last Tuesday night. For the sake of variety it took the form of a theatre party and proved to be a great success. After the show the class adjourned to Walker's Drug Store where hot chocolate and chicken sandwiches were served.

"The Iron Mask", starring Douglas Fairbanks, was the picture of the evening and, along with a Larry Semon comedy, furnished a fine entertainment. During the early part of the evening the class cast aside their dignity and regaled themselves with peanuts and popcorn, obtained from the corner stand. The stand owner expressed himself as being sorry that the class had not given him any warning so that he could have been prepared for the rush.

About seventy-five Seniors were present and, of this number, about fifteen girls and a like number of boys were dateless. However even valiant efforts at singing, by the girls, failed to bring a rise out of the independent gentlemen.

CAROLS INSPIRE VESPER AUDIENCE

Choir Under Miss Henry Renders Christmas Music.

Beautiful and inspiring was the formal Vesper service Sunday evening, at which the Vesper choir presented its annual recital of Christmas carols. The chapel was dimly lighted with candles, which lined the aisles and the platform.

The carols sung are those of all nations and of all ages, some of them dating back to the fifteenth century. In addition to the numbers given by the entire choir were solos and quartets. Two of the quartets sang outside the chapel.

The instrumental music was under the direction of Miss Butcher. The instruments were violin, cello, organ, mouth organ, and guitars.

Dr. Stevenson gave an address in keeping with the rest of the service.

A program similar to this was prepared by Miss Henry last year but was not given because of the epidemic of flu in the college.

Roberta Hickman has taken a sudden interest in feline friends. For particulars see anyone on Wilson Avenue.

College Widows By "Buck"

First it might be a good idea to explain the term "College Widows" for a few who do not know who or what they are. A college widow, defined by a college widow, is a poor, forsaken girl, shunned by everyone. The only one who will love and care for her is hundreds of weary miles away. A college widow can never have any fun, but is always left out in the cold, cruel world. She is a heartless (she gave it away) creature who is always remarking on how much better things were last year when HE was here.

However, college widows are not what they seem or what the above description implies that they are. They may appear to be sweet, innocent young things, absolutely unacquainted with the ways of the world; but.——the average college widow knows how to get her man. She knows every nook and crannie within the moonshining limits and a good many outside of them. She can name off rule after rule concerning moonshiners and she can state whether or not the authorities are very strict on this, that and the other rule. She may be able to recall the number of times these rules were broken. In fact there is very little (barring studies) that a college widow does not know.

It is next to impossible, however, to find a fully initiated widow with an A grade in classes. While the one and only was at the college, there was no time for studying. And now, since he's gone away, most

Is Honesty Dead?

The current propaganda being broadcast by the National Student Federation in regard to the Honor System may seem to us students of a Christian institution to be entirely without application here. We might well wish this to be true. However, we know it is well-founded.

Is the principle of honesty so dragging in the dust of desire for quality credits that the students cannot raise it? We are loath to think it. Yet the amount of cheating indulged in daily on the Hill would tend to strengthen any accusation to that effect.

This is not a question for the faculty—they cannot regulate it even to the smallest degree. It is a problem for the students to consider. We do not advocate the Honor System for Maryville for several reasons, but we do feel that the question of integrity raisd by the Student Federation is one which strikes much closer home than we care to brag about.

We are following the articles about the Honor System which are sent out by the Student Federation with keen interest, and would be glad to receive the reaction of the student body concerning the Honor System as an institution of the problem on the Hill.

—O—

TO ARMS

According to Dorothy Dix, syndicate writer of advice to women, it is unethical for a gentleman to take a lady's arm except on several specific occasions, such as to keep her from injury or danger. The lady may take the gentleman's arm upon very formal occasions when it is proffered her by the gentleman.

This has been determined doubtless, by long experience. Miss Dix's advice on the question was sought only after long and painful investigation by the leaders of youthful destiny.

And now—we hate to have our illusions so shattered and strewn at our feet—we learn that the syndicate stuff written under the nomme de plume of "Dorothy Dix" is written by a mere man!

Imagine our embarassment.

WE SUGGEST THAT SANTA GIVE

To Prof. Griffitts—More time for Chemistry Lectures

To Ruth Davis—three or four inches vertically

To Earl Blazer and Conchita Berran—more moonshining periods

To Mrs. Worley—fun in Florida

To. Mrs. Stevenson—a speedy recovery

To Dr. Stevenson—a larger vocabulary

To Jane Glascock—a Cornetless stocking

To all the Matrons—a victrolaless Christmas

To Third Floor Memorial—more water.

To all the Dorms—more heat

To us all—A MERRY HHRISTMAS! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! !

DEATH OF MRS. JOHNSON

Word reached the Hill last Sunday that Marion Johnson's mother had died. Marion's many friends on the campus sympathize with her in the time of her great sorrow. Marion is expected to resume her work here after the holidays.

HIGHLAND FLINGS

Prof. Kiger: "How do you know that that miracle was performed by the sea?"

Pat Roddy: "Because it says here that he cured them of divers diseases."

Frosh: "I want to go to war."

Soph: "Don't you know if you go to war the enemy will kill you?"

Frosh: "I'm going to be the enemy."

First Soph: "Did you get all those questions in the test?"

2nd. Soph: "Yes, it's the answers I missed."

Frosh: "What do they do in a war when a marine is killed?"

Soph: "Put in a sub-marine I guess."

Ira Morrison is getting good training for a medical missionary. He rode a bicycle from Chicago to Maryville last year.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

Freshman Echo apprentice: "The selections sung by the soloists and quartets were very good, while perhaps the most inspiring were those rendered by candle light."

Wise sophomore: "Did you know that Miss Molly's in "Who's Who in the South?"

Freshman: "No, I didn't know it. What society is giving that play?"

Fred Hope Drive at Maryville College on Today

ALPHA SIGMA MID-WINTER

Dec. 14—The initial mid-winter play of the season was presented last Monday evening by the Alpha Sigma Literary Society in Voorhees Chapel. "Lilac Time" was attended by an unusually large audience and intense interest was shown from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

Frank Baker, as the hero, and Margaret Haynie, as the heroine, showed superior ability and the talent of the whole cast was brought out by the sudden changes from joy to sorrow that occurred in the war story. Excellent French was spoken by those representing the peasantry. The English portrayals brought forth favorable comment and the comical "tommies" ran true to form.

The scenery of the first act represented well the garden of a French cottage and the interior of the peasant's home used in the last two acts, while necessarily simple, was very effective.

The ever popular "Lilac Time" was sung in the intermission by Miss Anne Smartt, and Porter French used his mandolin to good advantage with a group of war-time songs. The dramatists have made an auspicious start, and, if "Lilac Time" is a standard by which to judge, the Hill will be the scene of some fine mid-winters.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL!

THE HISTORY OF THE HONOR SYSTEM

Four colleges claim the honor of having been the initiator of the Honor System. William and Mary College claims to have begun the use of the system in 1779. South Carolina College (now the University of South Carolina) claims to have begun the use of the Honor System at its founding in 1801. The University of Virginia claims to have initiated the system in 1842. Finally, Washington and Lee University puts forth claims to having been the originator of the Honor System, their claim dating back to the administration of General Lee as president.

It is impossible to say exactly which of these colleges is in fact the mother of the Honor System. Probably William and Mary College did have some kind of system under which the students were placed upon their honor, and under which an Honor System prevailed in spirit. Perhaps the honor of the students was appealed to at South Carolina College from the time of its inception. But the preponderance of the evidence seems to show that the University of Virginia was the first institution to make definte plans for an Honor System, to draw up an honor code, and to adopt a definite plan of legislation, control and system of penalties.

Washington and Lee's claim dates back to the administration of General Lee, following the Civil War. Therefore, the University's claim antedates that of Washington and Lee by a score of years or more. However, Washington and Lee can indisputably lay claim to having the oldest complete student Honor System in the United States, for at that institution the Honor System embraces every phase of student life.

The Honor System originated in the South. It spread slowly at first, because it was a marked departure from the Old World idea of governing students.

The system as we have it today is the product of a process of evolution. As conditions have changed, the mechanism and means of enforcing the Honor System have had to be changed in order that pace might be kept with process. Today no two do or can have exactly the same Honor System on account of the varying conditions that are found in the different colleges.

The system, as it was inaugurated at the University of Virginia, came as a solution of the problem of handling the students. A laxness had grown up in the University with regard to student honesty. The Honor System was greatly needed. It evolved. It was the product of the long-visioned idealism and the formidable courage of Thomas Jefferson, who was chairman of the first Board of Visitors of the University. When differences between the faculty and students were referred to the Board, under the leadership of Jfferson that body usually were very lenient with the students.

In short, the system was able to be inaugurated at the University of Virginia on account of the arrangement of the buildings, Jefferson's ideals of school management, the existing social conditions in the South at that time, and the strong Christian character of the professors at the University during its early history.

Can there not be great worth in an institution that has existed in many excellent schools for nearly a century?

MRS. STEVENSON HOME

Dr. Stevenson reports that Mrs. Stevenson is now resting comfortably at home. A bed, which is known as a fracture-bed, has been secured to make her more comfortable and easily moved. Dr. Stevenson says that Mrs. Stevenson will probably have to remain in bed at least three months before she is entirely well again. During this time her college friends can make her long hours in bed more pleasant by visiting her frequently.

Miss Wilkinson: "I enjoy this part of the play because its silly."

1929 and a New Year just over the hill, we take this opportunity to wish every one a most cheerful as well as happy and prosperous three hundred and sixty-five days throughout 1930. In line with our custom of former years we will again usher in the New Year in gala fashion by means of a Mid-Nite frolic which is to start at eleven o'clock Tuesday, December 31st. Last year a theatre in announcing their annual Mid-Nite showing, stated, "We trust to have the pleasure of your company at our fun frolic. A good time will be had, and you'll feel very much at home." Now we claim this too, but leave out "Feel at home", because we are going to give away noise makers of every kind.

CHATTANOOGA RAIL-LITES OPPOSE HIGHLANDERS HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

VISITORS PRESENT CRACK COMBINATION

Last Contest To Be Played Before Holidays.

The Chattanooga Rail-lites, the foremost professional basketball team in the South and possibly in the United States, will play the Highlanders December 17 on the local court. The Rail-lites are known throughout the country as one of the strongest teams ever to don basketball uniforms. The game should be one of much interest, for the hard fighting Honakerites are to face an almost unconquerable foe. However, if the Highlanders show as much fight and hard playing as they did in their game against the Alumni then there are many things which can happen.

The game will be the first real game for the Maryville quintet and it will be backed by much of the spirit and enthusiasm shown before the Christmas holidays, so with a fighting team and backed by loyal rooters we are hoping for the proverbial spilling of the Dope bucket.

CO-EDS BEGIN BASKET BALL

Women's basketball practice has begun in earnest and the work-outs are really becoming interesting. There are a large number out who show promise of real basketball talent.

Many of the upperclassmen are back, among them some of last year's crack-players. Virginia Crider, Sarah Thomas and Christine Foster. Miss Weller will pick a coaching squad from all the class teams in another week, but games will not begin until after Christmas.

All co-eds interested are requested to report to Miss Weller in the Alumni gymnasium.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The Varsity earned a clear-cut victory Friday night. They just naturally looked good, and thusly established strong hopes in Maryville basketball enthusiasts. Captain Waddell was "hot", as Coach Thrower soon found out, and Ex-captain Louie Reed was playing his usual steady game at guard.

Lewis showed up well at the forward position and we expect to see more of this newcomer to the Hill.

The Alumni had an excellent array of basketball talent, but were clearly up against it when they tried to cope with the smooth-running combination and co-ordination of the Highlander Varsity.

When Joe Gamble used to play for Maryville, he was particularly noted for his knack of taking 'em off the backboard, and apparently he still has the habit. His all-around play against the Varsity was praiseworthy, to say the least.

The Highlanders are up against a tough proposition tomorrow night. The Rail-lites boast several players of natonal basketball reputation.

Bill Redd, center for the Rail-lites, was all Southern center when he played for the University of Chattanooga, and is considered one of the greatest basketball players the South has turned out. Fred Ford is a former member of the Cleveland Rosenblooms, nationally known quintet.

The visitors will play a bang-up whirlwind game that will surely test the mettle of the Highlander combination.

The selection of three Highlander Gridmen for mythical honors on the official all Smoky Mountain Conference eleven is welcome news to the whole student body.

HIGHLANDERS DRUB ALUMNI CREW 29-20

Varsity Not in Danger Once During Entire Game.

Maryville College Basketeers showed their supremacy Friday night by defeating the former Maryvillians.

The score does not tell how easy it was for the Highlanders to run up a very heavy lead in the first few minutes of play, with Davis, White, Waddell and Lewis showing the way, the score of the game was never in doubt.

The first of the game was very fast and consequently a good many bad passes resulted on the part of both teams. During the first half, Thrower, McMurray and the rest missed innumerable shots at the basket.

At times the Highlander offense was clicking with clock-like regularity. Their defense was very good considering that this was the first game of the year. Waddell, captain of this year's team, made several long shots in the early part of the game, and Lewis, a freshman, set the house in an uproar by making some difficult shots in the first half.

WRESTLING

Dec. 13—The first wrestling card of the year, given tonight in the Alumni gym, as a preliminary to the annual Maryville-Alumni game, was enthusiastically received by the students. The Cooper-Peacock match in the 125 pound class, and the Cash-Carper match in the unlimited class, featured the card.

Cooper bewildered his opponent with some plain and fancy toeholds, but was forced to give in to Peacock's superior weight. Cash was declared winner, by time advan-

Cochran, of Milligan, are next in rank.

The competition for center position resulted in the selection of Schwartz, of King, with Snodgrass, Henry's attack. He is alert, elusive, an excellent back. Calloway is one of the best backs seen at Maryville in a long time. He is fast, has driving power, sidesteps with ease, and has a most disagreeable stiff arm. He also passes and kicks when called upon. Trimble, King half-back, Milligan's flashy center, giving him a close race.

Moreno, Tusculum's little field general, is nominated at quarter. He is a hard man to stop and an able director of his team's attack. Edwards, of Milligan, and King, of King, were likely possibilities.

Littlejohn was generally adjudged the best back n the conference. He is an all-around man and has successfully borne the brunt of Emory-was given mention.

The fullback, Taylor, of Milligan, possesses marked ability as a passer and kicker. This may be attested to by the Highlanders alone, whom he kept from a hard-fought victory over his mates.

This group of men would present a dangerous front, without a doubt, and their selection to the conference Hall of Fame rings the curtain on the grid season of 1929.

IT'S HARD ON VAN DYKE

It's fine to be in Maryvile, and even study here
In these old college buildings in a southern atmosphere,
To be a Maryvilian, and a loyal one at that--
But now it's in another place I want to hang my hat.

So it's home again, and home again, at Christmas time for me!
My heart is turning home again,
and there I long to be,
In that land of friends and home-
folks beyond the Mississip,
I'm waiting now a few more days to take that longed-for trip.

I like a lot of students, the most of them are nice,
And some of them are very kind
to help me over ice;
But, oh, to take your hand, my dear, and ramble for a day
In a nice mid-western woodland where nature has her way!

I know that Maryville's wonderful, yet something seems to lack
The rules are too much with you;
you keep always looking back.
But the glory of the Present is—
at Christmas we'll be free,
And all the students on the Hill
as happy as can be!

Oh, it's home again, Home again,
the Ozarks now for me!
I want a train northwestward bound through Kentuck and Tennessee.
To that blessed land of hills and vales, beyond the space that bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight, and the folks all sound their r's..

COLLEGE WIDOWS

of the time is spent in writing or reading letters and the rest of the precious, flying minutes are filled with sweet thoughts of him.

If you notice a college widow with a worried look on her face, you'll know that she didn't get a letter from him for a whole day; and if you happen to see or hear one who looks like she would bite your head off if you spoke to her, then it's a sure sign that two days have gone by and he hasn't written a single thing to her.

College widows are the mail (or male) man's chief source of worry. If there were no such beings in the world the number of letters to be delivered would be decreased by half. The time saved would amount to approximately one hour every day. On the other hand, the stationery and postage stamp manufacturers would very nearly be forced out of business.

This problem of "What shall we do with our College Widows", is one of the greatest that Maryville must face. It might be possible for us to help organize a club for them; or possibly a charity fund and a donation of loving bachelors could be given. It seems a shame that all those perfectly good college widows are going to waste when there are so many even here at the college who would be willing to help them out if only a little encouragement were given.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS!

MUSIC DEPARTMENT PRESENTS CONCERT

Two Men Featured on Twilight Program Thursday.

A Twilight Recital by undergraduate piano students of Miss Hale was given on Thursday, Dec. 12, at four o'clock in Voorhees Chapel. This recital was out of the ordinary in that it featured two young men, Lee Calloway and Conrad Quenelle, who performed with unusual excellence. Miss Hale declares that this is the first time in her experience here that any young men have been advanced far enough to play for such an occasion. The program which was given is as follows:

Hungarian - - - Koelling
Margaret Melody, Lee Calloway,
Marion McMurray, Conrad Quenelle
Etude - - - - Wollenhaupt
Margaret Cragan
Romance in E Flat - Rubinstein
Edna Broyles
Whims - - - - - Schumann
Grace Proffitt
Improvisation - - MacDowell
Lee Calloway
Cavalier Fantastique - - Godard
Virginia Carter
Liebestraume No. 3 - - - Liszt
Mildred McMurray
Prelude C Sharp Minor - - -
Rachmaninoff
Mildred MacKenzie
Stoccato Etude - - Rubenstein
Garnet Manges

The last number, Stoccato Etude, by Miss Manges, a post graduate of the department, was played especially to bring out the beautiful tone quality of the new Baldwin piano. Miss Hale expects to give these delightful twilight recitals a regular place on her program for the musc department.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

What will we debaters do while we are away for the Christmas holidays? The majority of us, no doubt, will do just as other students do, nothing, so far as studying is concerned, and I suppose that is as it should be, for what is the purpose of the holidays? But there is one suggestion we might make here for debaters at Maryville. Do not be misled by thinking that because the try-outs for the teams come up in January that there is an abundance of time yet for preparation. If no preparation is made during the holidays it is just as next Monday would be. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

—:—

Of course many of us will have opportunities to make speeches varying in degree of importance during the holidays. I myself have two such invitatons now. Any of these wll be good preliminaries in eliminating stage fright.

—:—

Another thing you might remember is this. If any of you play Santa Claus don't give the children any toy pistols, torpedoes, or other disarmaments.

—:—

It is a pity to deny all these implements to the boys though just for the sake of education.

—:—

If you can convince the little fellows it is only for police purposes it will pass, no doubt.

—:—

There is more psychology to this than you might think. We talk of educating the people for disarmament but Santa Claus always brings the boys toy guns.

—:—

To further show that education, by denying toy armaments to boys, is the sure road to disarmament, we do not buy toy cannon for little girls, and when they grow up into women they are all for disarmament.

—:—

But, like the model debate outline, I suppose there would have to be something to take its place.

—:—

And oh, if we could only work that with whistles also, what a world of peace there would be.

WRESTLING

these people would be together as a group. In due time the return trip to the Hill was made. When they reached the edge of the campus, and before the group broke up, cheers were given for Miss Butcher and for the orchestra, and thus another happy evening was brought to a close.

"I'll mix with lords and ladies
In Society I'll reign,
I'm gonna buy me a high silk hat
And a gold top walking cane."

So sing the men of the Senior class since they have decided to dis-inguish themselves from the common herd by carrying canes, which will be known as "Senior Canes". So don't be surprised when you see a male member of the Class of '30 striding to chapel swinging one of these ornaments.

BATES ORATORICAL CONTEST POSTPONED

Dec. 14—The Bates Oratorical Contest which was to have been held on the night of December 17 has been postponed until January 13. This contest is for girls of the junior and senior classes this year and the following girls have entered: Evelyn Seedorf, Viola Pettit, Alice Rhea,, Jeannette Moore, Ruby Bailey, and Hope Snider. A prize of forty-five dollars in gold is given to the winner. Formerly this contest has been held at the opening of the commencement exercises in the spring but it has now been moved up to the latter part of the first semester.

Give Her Elizabeth Arden Toiletries

THE loveliest women of London, Paris and New York use these four Preparations. They were created by Elizabeth Arden as a part of the famous Skin Treatments given in her Salons. Miss Arden recommends them for daily use at home according to her scientific method.

Venetian Cleansing Cream. Melts into the pores, removes all impurities, softens and soothes the skin.

Venetian Velva Cream. Nourishes without fattening, keeps the skin smooth and velvety.

Venetian Ardena Skin Tonic. Tones, firm and whitens the skin, keeps it clear and fine.

Venetian Special Astringent. Braces relaxed muscles, firms the contours.

Ask at the toilet goods counter for a copy of Elizabeth Arden's book, "THE QUEST OF THE BEAUTIFUL." It gives instructions for the use of all the Arden Venetian Toilet Preparations in the correct home care of the skin.

DR. R. E. VALE TO LEAD MEETINGS

Annual Religious Services To Be Held February 4-14. Eagerly Awaited.

The annual February Meetings are almost here again. These services, which will begin February 4 (Tuesday) and end February 14 (Friday) have been held for over half a century and have become an established part of the College curricula. This year the leader will be Dr. Ewing Vale, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Oak Park, Chicago. During his former pastorate at Knoxville, Dr. Vale became thoroughly conversant with the history and service of Maryville College and, since that time, has had the honorary degree, L.L.D. conferred upon him by this institution, of which he is now a director. Therefore Dr. Vale is well acquainted with Maryville College and what she stands for.

In "Who's Who in America", we find that Dr. Vale was born in Ewington, Ohio, and received his preparatory education at Ewington Academy. In 1909 he went to Washington and Tusculum College, Greeneville, Tenn., where he earned his A. B. degree. Having decided to enter the ministry, Dr. Vale entered Princeton Theological Seminary and graduated in 1912. Then, between the years 1917 and 1922, the degrees D. D. and L.L.D. were conferred upon him by Washington College and Maryville College respectively.

It is interesting to learn, also, that Dr. Vale is now a trustee of Washington College and has been a director of Maryville College since 1920. Another important office which he fills is that of Chairman of the Extension Board of the Chicago Presbytery, which is indeed a great honor.

Dr. Vale is an excellent speaker and is greatly in demand—a man in the prime of life who is doing a great service for Christ. He succeeded Dr. Vander Meulen, last year's leader, as pastor of the Oak

WORK PROGRESSES ON '30 CHILHOWEANS

Features and Theme Remain a Deep Mystery.

The 1930 Chilhowean staff seems to have done a good job of keeping their activities secret thus far. First there was the election in chapel of the statistics of Maryville College. As yet no one knows who is the most popular couple or who is the prettiest girl, in fact everything done to date has been kept from the student body. This is the first year that this has ever been attempted and it is believed by the student body generally that the Chilhowean staff is inwardly pleased by keeping such important news to themselves and thus arousing unbounding interest in the students.

The staff reports many inquiries concerning the theme that is to be carried out and also about the dedication. It is not known why the staff is hesitant about letting this information out but if the purpose is to arouse interest in this year's publication, it has certainly succeeded. As stated recently, this year's cover for the Chilhowean has been entered in a $2000 cover contest and this is just proof that the Chilhowean staff is putting forth its best efforts in order that Maryville College might have an annual that Maryville students will be justly proud to claim as their very own.

ECHO STAFF LOSES

Members of the Highland Echo Staff who are not returning to school are two freshmen apprentices, Mr. Patterson and Miss Mabel Frost. Mr. Patterson finds this climate injurous to his heath so thought it best to discontinue his work here. Miss Frost prefers to go to school nearer her home, since she lives in Arizona.

ROBISON'S HOST TO 15 MARYVILLE STUDENTS AT XMAS

Four Daughters of Alabama Pastor Are Part of Large Reunion.

"Do all these people come from Maryville College? I don't know when I've ever seen so many people from one place." The speaker was a Birmingham lawyer, the time—Thursday night after Christmas, the place—the Robison home, Five Mile Manse, Birmingham, Alabama. Sarah Howe sat at the piano rendering the Alma Mater, while thirteen other Maryvillians sang lustily. After the song, the gang gave some peppy yells.

"Gee!" said the swain on Sarah's right—"you folks surely do have school spirit up there. Are they all like that?"

At this point, Roberta Hickman dragged Willie Nelle Harold and Hayden Laster forward.

"Folks, I wish to announce that Hayden and Willie Nelle are now engaged to be married. Willie Nelle, let them see the sparkler."

The audience was favored with the famous Laster blush, Miss Harold modestly exhibited the ring, and Doc Morrison arose from his place by Lutie Toole, walked over, extended his hand to Hayden and said:

"Welcome to the ranks, old fellow."

Every year Rev. Robison gives an after Christmas party for the people of his parish. But this year instead of being the usual Sunday School party, it was the scene of a typical Maryville reunion. Four of the Robisons, Martha, Alice, Lillian and Roberta have made Maryville their Alma Mater. The Maryville guests were, Roberta Hickman, Velma Farley, Willie Nelle Harold, Hessie Keeton, Lutie Toole, Sarah Howe, "Doc" Morrison, John Wood, Herbert Wood, Hayden Laster and Claude McClendon.

MISS McIVER LEAVES

Takes Position In Girls' School, Has Best Wishes.

Miss Estelle McIver, former third floor matron of Baldwin Hall has left Maryville to assume her duties as matron of the girls and additional work in the office of the Rabun Gap-Nacoochee School, a Presbyterian Mission School in northern Georgia.

Miss McIver faithfully carried out her duties at Maryville, and it came as a surprise to the girls when her departure was announced at a short Christmas program held in Baldwin parlor on Wednesday before the holidays. Miss McIver came to Maryville last September from the Lees-McRae Junior College at Banner Elk, N. C., where she served as teacher, matron, dean of women and in other offices for a period of twenty years.

She is a very efficient woman and it is hoped by all the girls that she will enjoy the the work in her new location.

BACK AS SONG LEADER

REV. SIDNEY E. STRINGHAM WILL CONDUCT SINGING

Former Alcoa Minister Leads Services for Ninth Consecutive Time.

Rev. Stringham, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Auburn, Illinois, will be the leader of song during the February Meetings. Mr. Stringham has led the song service for many successive years and has every year given complete satisfaction in rendering us an invaluable contribution toward the success of Marville's great annual religious campaign and festival.

THE FROSH DEBATE.

Try-Outs Are Held Today; Men and Women Compete.

Jan. 6—The halls of Maryville will ring today with the arguments of the aspirants for honors on the freshmen debate team. Both boys and girls of the debate classes will be heard. Six of each will be chosen to represent the college. Some of the material, especially among the girls, promises to be of a strong type. A great interest is shown among those trying out for the teams.

Next Monday the varsity try-outs will be held for both men and women. There are indications of the strongest competition among the men that has been found in years.

PAGE MR. QUEENER

Dr. Hunter has put forth the suggestion that Verton Queener, Democratic demogogue, might be questioned concerning the burning of the executive office in Washington, in which city Mr. Queener spent his holidays. Also the fire in Anderson might be a Republican retaliation, since Mr. Queener's office is located there. Both fires occurred the same night, anyway.

MRS. BUTCHER'S RADIO

On our return to Pearsons after the holidays we heard music issuing from some unseen source. Wondering who dared defy Miss Molly's ban against portable victrolas, we began to investigate. The music came from a handsome new Atwater Kent radio installed in Mrs. Butcher's room. The girls will enjoy greatly the music afforded by this instrument and feel somewhat consoled for the loss of their portables.

MARYVILLE GROUP DINES; COLUMBIA SCENE OF REUNION

Grace Gamble '29, Jessie Johnson '21, Entertain Friends In New York.

Dec. 24—Five Maryvillians gathered around the festive board to celebrate the holiday season in true southern style at Whittier Hall, Columbia University, New York, today.

Miss Jessie Johnson, class of '21, and Miss Grace Gamble, class of '29, candidates for master's degrees at Columbia, had as their guest for the holidays Miss Isabel Brown, of Maryville. Miss Brown is now studying at the Westminister Choir School, Ithaca, New York. Jesse Peirce was in New York visiting his former room-mate, Edward Driscoll, class of '29, and student at Union Theological Seminary.

Since it is always good weather when Maryvillians get together, the five aforementioned Highlanders gravitated toward Whittier Hall at noon, where the girls prepared some delicious food which had been provided by generous Christmas boxes from home. Many, varied, and ancient were the tales that travelled around that table. Those who know the participants can use their imagination.

Ed Driscoll says the girls at Maryville don't have any idea what it means to invite a man to lunch and be forced to slip him into the dining room with a shoe-horn. Ed is gradually getting used to New York, though.

BATES PRIZE CONTEST

Date Now Set for Next Tuesday Night.

Jan. 6—The date for the Bates Oratorical Contest has been changed again. This time it has been changed from Monday night, January 13 to Tuesday night, January 14. This change was made because the Varsity debate try—outs come on Monday and some of the women who are in the oratorical contest are also trying out for the debate team. It was thought that both contests in one day might be too much.

This year six girls are contending for the Bates prize of $45.00 in gold. They are Evelyn Seedorf, Viola Pettit, Alice Rhea, Jeannette Moore, Ruby Bailey, and Hope Snider. The contest will be held Tuesday night, January 14 in the chapel.

MR. QUEENER AWAY FOR CHRISTMAS

Mr. Queener spent his Christmas vacation working. On Thursday, December 19 he set out by motor for Washington, D. C. in order to work on his master's degree at the Congressional Library. However, he did not forget to play Santa Claus, for he took along Bill Elzey and one of Bill's best friends, thus helping them on their homeward way. On the last two days of December Mr. Queener attended a meeting at Duke University. From there Homer McCann accompanied him to Maryville. They arrived here on New Year's Day.

Miss Parker: Will you spell the word, please?

Mack Bolton: Is it compulsory?

Miss Parker: No, it's homologous.

FIRE IN ANDERSON HALL STIRS TRANQUILLITY OF CHRISTMAS EVE ON HILL

Blaze Is Smothered Before Serious Damage Results.

Dec. 24—A blaze was discovered in the bell-ringer's room in Anderson Hall about eight o'clock this evening. It was subdued by firemen from the local fire department, who extinguished it with chemicals. It was not necessary to use the hose which they had in readiness.

The fire was started by a percolator which had been left in the window-sill by Comer Fowler and Stuart Button, who were spending the holidays in Anderson Hall. No damage was done other than the loss of the window and marring of the furniture in the room.

The conflagration cannot be laid to carelessness of the men concerned, however, for they had turned off the current at the main switch before going out for the evening. Someone turned on the main switch in order to have lighting facilities in the hall, and the percolator, being connected directly with the current, caused the sill to catch fire.

Several people were coasting on the Hill beside the chapel, and they noticed the smoke and flame first. A great deal of credit is due Ralph Teffeteller and Brickey Lequire, whose presence of mind resulted in the alarm being turned in, and a stream of chemicals being played on the blaze five minutes after it was discovered.

Anderson Hall is the oldest building on the Hill, and is still doing real service in housing the executive offices and class rooms.

ATHENIANS BEGIN DAILY GRIND IN PLAY REHEARSAL

"The Cardinal", By Louis N. Parker, Promises Unusual Dramatic Qualities.

With the return of the students to College Hill the Athenian Literary Society takes the stage for daily rehearsals of "The Cardinal". This dramatic play of early sixteenth century Roman life will be presented as the Athenian Mid-Winter January 27. Mrs. West, head of the Expression Department, is directing the play and a concentrated effort by the society has begun to make this the outstanding production of the season. No stone will be left unturned.

The play itself is Louis M. Parker's most dramatically gripping production. It is an undying literary attainment in the field of drama.

The cast is an experienced one made up largely of expression students, graduates in that department, those doing post graduate work, and members of Theta Alpha Phi Dramatic Fraternity. The committee is elated over the fitness of the characters for the interpretation of their parts. An opportunity is presented the stage manager, Thomas Whitehead, to exhibit some very beautiful settings. Mr. Whitehead is now planning his scenery. The progress of the play at this stage practically assures a very successful Mid-Winter.

DR. WILSON WELL

Has Recovered From Illness Before Holidays.

For several days before the holidays and during a large part of the Christmas season, Dr. Wilson was confined to his home with the flu or bad cold that is prevalent at this season of the year. He was missed at the chapel and at his office during the last week of school before Christmas. In the first days of school in the new year, however, Dr. Wilson was with us again.

HAROLD-LASTER

Two Seniors Engaged During Holiday Season.

Yes, she has one—a diamond that is worn on the third finger of her left hand. There's one thing about giving an engagement ring at Christmas; it doesn't necessitate another Christmas present. At least they're starting in a thrifty way.

This interesting engagement was announced at Roberta Hickman's house party down in Alabama. Can't you just hear Roberta announcing it in her expressive way! But then, an engagement is just an old Maryville custom—a senior privilege.

Hayden says that he surely made up for lost time although the vacation they spent together was short (Lost time? When? Where? How?) At an rate, here's to them. May there never be a missing link in their ball and chain.

PRESENT STATUS OF HONOR SYSTEM

Colleges Asked To Consider Honesty in Exams.

Eighteen months ago the present chairman of the Committee on the Honor System for the N. S. F. A. gathered extensive information concerning the prevalence of the Honor System in American colleges and universities. The information gathered then is believed to be valuable; conditions have not changed materially since that time.

In reply to a general questionnaire containing questions pertinent to the Honor System, 417 colleges sent information. 160, or 39%, of these colleges operate under some kind of Honor System. In 129 of them it is used wholly; in 31 of them it is used only partially. Of these 31, twenty-one use it only in certain select advance classes. Seven employ it in certain departments only, while three have the system in handling matters that do not pertain to examinations, (e.g. the handling of library books.)

On the other hand, 251, or 61% of the colleges replying do not have the Honor System. They operate under the faculty espionage or the proctor system, whereby the students are closely watched while they take their examinations, whereby no trust is placed in them, and whereby the shrewder man wins, be he the student or be he the instructor.

This survey shows that there are now 10% more colleges using the Honor System than were shown by a similar survey to be using it in 1912. In that year 66% of the colleges usng the system were colleges for men, 17% were colleges for women ony, and 17% of them were co-educational. In 1928, 15% of those using it were for men, 35% were for women, and 50% were co-educational.

Of all the colleges in the South that replied, 60% use the Honor System. 36% of all the colleges in the Northeastern group that replied use the system. 23% of the colleges of the North Central group use it, while 38% of the colleges of the Western group that sent information have the Honor System.

In several universities of the United States the Honor System

Vacation Seen From Many Sides

One more day of starvation
Then we'll go to the station
Back to civilization
The train will carry us there.

Two weeks of vacation
Then we'll go to the station
Back to Pearsons' starvation
The train will carry us there.

To a visitor on the Hill on December 18, the above song might have sounded like a national anthem. Some would sing it with plenty of pep and enthusiasm, thinking of the happy vacation when they'd be home. Others would sort of hum it softly while they were walking mechanically along to one of their classes, probably thinking of some girl back in the old town. Nearly everyone had it ringing in his head during classes when he was supposed to be reciting.

Some daring individuals had already gone. Now they were leaving in a constant stream and in every imaginable kind of vehicle. Phil Vogel was one of the first to leave and his means of transportation was an old Ford. Buck and his sister went one step worse by attempting a trip on a motorcycle. One boy, proud owner of a flivver with everything that might rattle taken off, very ingenuously cut eye-taken off, very ingeneously cut eye-over his head to serve as a windshield.

A very common means of travel among the boys was "bumming". This noble art has been developed to a high degree of efficiency by the numerous backers. The boys that were still determined to "hit the highway" even after the ice, snow and thermometer all fell with a thud on Thursday morning, had to use all the tact, poise and judgment that they possessed or freeze in the attempt.

However, by no matter what means, nearly everyone arrived safely home; enjoyed a delightful Christmas vacation; ate too much of everything; and is now back on the old Hill, studying hard and trying to learn something before the fatal exams.

Looking Ahead

The miracle of Christmas is passing. Again the people of the world have come out of their shells of selfishness and allowed the spirit of Christ to rule their lives for a short period of time, and now they are gradually withdrawing into their shells. Nevertheless the effect of the miracle is still with us, and causes us to look forward with more hope than ever. A people that can come to such a place once can do so again. We would perpetuate the miracle of Christmas.

The year which is only six days old will open up untold opportunities for us students of Maryville to put to excellent use the principles which have been regenerated in us at Christmas. As we look forward to new and better things for the coming year, may we be determined to learn more, to accomplish more, and to live more than we have in the past. In the rush of preparation for examinations New Year's resolutions will fade. With the coming of a new semester our hopes and aspirations may become dim, but it may prod our conscience a bit to be reminded that this year we have one year less to live than we had last New Year's Day. A grim reminder, surely, but one which should spur us to new efforts for 1930.

We Apologize

The News-Sentinel has called our attention rather forcefully to the fact that last fall we attacked an article in their paper dealing with the U. T.-Kentucky State game, and in our comment we were unfair to the U.T. players. In verifying this, we find that we were unfair to U.T., inasmuch as the article in the Sentinel gave only the reporter's impression, rather than the players' attitude toward the game. We are sincerely sorry that we proceeded on advice of others without strict verification of facts. We are glad to have this called to our attention.

A Suggestion For Reading
We suggest to faculty and students that they read John Erskine's article on Education in The Red Book.

How many at this season of the year have not confided to their roommates that "parting is such sweet sorrow."

Those who rode the Southern at Christmas time are certain the old Testament attributes the existence of the railroad to the higher powers, for it says "The Lord made all manner of creeping things."

Enroute to Maryville a la bus, Marian McMurray exclaimed: "Look at those old fords in the fields. They stand around just like horses!"

Ray Dollenmayer also enroute to Maryville a la same bus: "I guess the reason Alma Hatmaker rides in a Pullman drawing room is because her father makes the hats for all the Pullman porters and conductors?"

Special to the Highland Echo
London, England, Dec. 5, 1929

The most destructive fire of recent years broke out this afternoon at two thirty o'clock, causing three deaths and damaging property to the value of two million francs, three hundred and seventy-five thousand marks, and seventy eight shekels. The Times Square home of the great African financier, Socrates Plutarch, was saved only by Sherlock Holmes' timely detecting the whereabouts of the fire department.

Lynn Boyd, 33, 314 Baldwin Avenue, Jesse Pindell, 47, 111 Memorial Boulevard, and Stanley Gaylord, 6, 50 Pearsons Street, lost their lives.

The one-ring circus owned by Mr. Madison Gardens Picadilly had just opened its first London performance when the main tent caught fire. Great havoc was wrought as the animal cages burned and the wild beasts escaped into Fifth Avenue. Several hypotenuses, rare specimens of prehistoric animals owned exclusively by Mr. Picadilly, broke loose. Some of the larger ones were captured and returned to the keeper, who refused to take responsibility for them, saying, "Perhaps maybe Monsieur Motley would return the hypotenuses in chronological order." Three almanacs, valued by Mr. Picadilly at two rubles each, were burned to death. Mr. Pindell's death was due to his having been bitten by a savage hieroglyphic.

At four thirty o'clock it was not known who set fire to the disastrous conflagration, but the members of Parliament had organized a literary society. They chose as its name "Theta Bainonian", which is also that of the Southeastern Harried Proctors and means "we always get our man." They were searching Carnegie Alley for the thief when the paper went to press.

BOOTS

When it rains upon Maryville College, and it sometimes does in the early spring, there are fifty-seven varieties of boots (not all of them manufactured by Heinz) to be seen on College Hill.

There are tall blond boots which reach to the knee and thus have a greater volume for the collecting rain than the short brunette ones which are trimmed with red; there are those which do or do not lace up the front; and there are galoshes which seem to possess in its entirety the olden power of flapping their tops when the flapper wearing them wills that they flap.

Then, the cannon boots. These are nothing more nor less than huge rain-protecting coverings for the very useful and effective cannons in front of Pearsons, Memorial, and Baldwin Halls.

It is not very likely that we shall see "Suitcase" Waddell wearing his favorite pair of boots again soon, because Miss Fortune instead of Miss —— seems to have been on their heels. As "Suitcase" stepped into his room, one boot was braced against the opposite wall and, as he attempted to move it, became wedged firmly between the walls. With the aid of three friends, Waddell was able to extricate himself, feet intact, but it is said that the building will in all probability have to be burned down in order to remove the boot so that the room can be occupied again.

Won't life be thrilling for the young lady of Africa when she sees Mary John Metcalf's boots? Perhaps it is already known, though, about Johnnie's contribution to the Fred Hope drive.

Boots in general are useful articles. Civilized woman could not live without them because she would die without them; she could not die without them because she could not live without them because she would die without them. Pardonnez le francais, but—Chevrolay Coopay?

BOB JONES STILL ILL

Bob Jones, member of the Class of '30 was unable to come back to school on account of illness. His old lady,—Doc Morrison,—when interviewed, stated that Bob has lung spots which are thought to be recurrent from an operation and pneumonia which kept him in the hospital a greater part of last summer. Bob spent several days in the hospital before the holidays began, but felt himself able to go home. He has the sympathy of the student body and their hope that he will soon be back on the Hill.

QUEER ENGLISH

(Baltimore American)

We'll begin with a box, and the plural is boxes;
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes.
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of mouse should never be meese.
You may find a lone mouse, or a whole nest of mice.
But the plural of house is houses, not hice.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be cows or kine,
But the plural of vow is vows, not vine,
And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is tooth, and a whole set are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular's this, and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one may be that and three would be those,
Yet hat in the plural would never be hose.
We speak of a brother, and also of brethren,
But though we say mother we never say methren.
Then masculine pronouns are he, his and him;
But imagine the feminine—she, shis and shim!
So the English, I think, you all will agree
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

WHERE, WHO AND YOU

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee?
A key for the lock of his hair?
Can his eyes be called an academy
Because there are pupils there?
In the crown of his head what jewels are found?
Who travels the bridge of his nose?
Can he use when shingling the roof of his mouth
The nails on the end of his toes?
Can the crook of his elbow be sent to jail?
If so, what did he do?
How can he sharpen his shoulder blades?
I'll be darned if I know, do you?
Can he sit in the shade of the palm of his hand?
Or beat on the drum of his ear?
Can the calf of his leg eat the corn on his toe?
If so, why not grow corn on the ear.

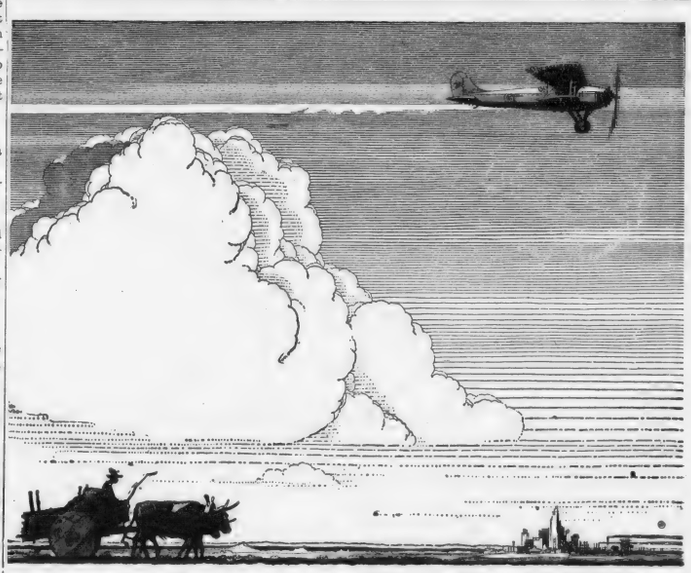
THE OPEN FORUM

January 3, 1930

Editor The Highland Echo,
College Station,
Maryville, Tennessee.



Dear Sir:

For some time preceding the Christmas Holidays, and particularly the last few days, the students boarding at Pearsons Hall were very persistent in continuing to talk and make noise while the blessing was being asked. Even since Christmas the same thing happens. The conduct needs to be improved during this brief moment when we express our gratitude to God for the blessings of life. Nothing could more emphatically evince a spirit of selfishness and indifference toward God and things sacred than for us to continue to remain thoughtless about this matter, disregarding the rules of common courtesy and culture.

The standard can be set up by those now eating at Pearsons and it can be maintained next year by them. Every year the Freshmen and new students will at once conform to it if the old students demand it and set the example themselves.

At this time, the occasion for good resolutions, it is most appropriate for the standard to be established immediately, and sincerely upheld by all.

J. Stuart James.

UP FROM THE OXCART

"Acceleration, rather than structural changes, is the key to an understanding of our recent economic developments."—From the report of President Hoover's Committee on Recent Economic Changes

YESTERDAY, the rumble, creak, and plod of cart and oxen. To-day and to-morrow the zoom of airplanes. Faster production. Faster consumption. Faster communication.

Significant of electricity's part in the modern speeding-up process is the fact that during the last seven years, consumption of electric power increased three and one-half times as fast as population.

General Electric and its subsidiaries have developed and built much of the larger apparatus that generates this power as well as the apparatus which utilizes it in industry and in the home.

The college-trained men who come every year to General Electric take a responsible part in the planning, production, and distribution of electric products, and at the same time receive further technical or business training.

MARYVILLE ENGAGES KNOXVILLE "Y" AND U. T. IN NEXT TWO CAGE BATTLES

TEPCOS DEFEAT MARYVILLE TWICE

Pros Display Superiority In Opener; 2nd. Game Close.

Dec. 17—After holding the highly touted TEPCO Five (formerly Chattanooga Rail-Lites) on even terms for three periods, at the Alumni Gym tonight, the Highlanders succumbed in the final quarter to the superior passwork and experience of the visiting quintet. The final score was 38 to 28.

By dent of remarkable defensive play and a fast breaking offensive, the Highlanders played the Tepcos to a standstill for three quarters. The fast passing attack of the visitors was broken up time and again, and Maryville scored, often, as a result of fast breaking by Davis, White and Lewis. The Tepcos seemed off their shots in the first half, which ended 14 to 13 in their favor.

At the start of the fourth quarter the Chattanooga team began passing and shooting with deadly accuracy and gradually drew ahead of the Scotties. Goeckol and Hackett starred for the Tepcos, while Capt. Waddell, Davis and Reed played good ball for Maryville.

The box score:

Maryville—28		Tepcos—38
Davis (4)	r.f.	Cox (2)
White (5)	l.f.	Goekel (14)
Waddell (6)	c.	Redd (7)
Reed (1)	r.g.	Phillips (6)
Cherry	l.g.	Holland (3)

Substitutions: Maryville, Lewis (2), Woodard (5), Parks, Ferguson, West. Tepcos—Hackett (6), Holland, Lanter.

Chattanooga, Jan. 4—The Chattanooga Tepcos again beat the Maryville College quintet, with the score of 32-21. While the score was in favor of the Pro's still the Maryville squad out-played them during the last half. The score at the half was 21 to 8, and through the fast playing of the Highlanders the final ended 32 to 21. This certainly sounds good to Maryville basketball enthusiasts. The Tepcos are not only acclaimed within the State but hold quite a reputation throughout the entire country as being a strong team. The two games have proved that we have a fighting team—let's back them.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

The Highlander quintet seems slated for a highly successful season in '30. Their improved showing against the Tepcos Saturday indicates that future opponents of Capt. Waddell and company have no time to lose in preparation for the onslaught of the Highlanders.

It was rather difficult to decide whether they were playing basketball or just a friendly game of football Saturday night.

The referee was not very sure at least.

It is hoped that not a few rooters well journey to U. T. next Saturday night to see Maryville engage the Vol gladiators.

Quite a number of the Maryville engagements with Tennessee do not exist as pleasant memories in Vol circles.

The Highlanders can give 'em another nightmare if a real mob of rooters is on hand for the contest.

Let's Go!

Dear Mr. Editor:

In writing to Santa Claus this year, I neglected to specify that I am a student at Maryville College. Consequently, among my gifts I received:

2 cigarette lighters
1 year's subscription to "Breezy Stories"
1 cocktail shaker
1 pair dancing shoes
1 pair sun glasses

I will exchange any or all of the aforementioned for one copy of Dorothy Dix's latest publication "Rules of Conduct for 1930."

Sincerely,
"Red" Flannels.

A new requirement has been added to the course of the girls who work in the dining hall. In addition to transporting food from kitchen to table, clearing tables and washing dishes with maximum speed and minimum breakage, they must wear long dresses. Miss Darby says that the girls who work for her must be stylish.

BLAZER ELECTED BASEBALL CAPTAIN

1930 Leader Looks Forward To His Fourth Season.

Earl Blazer, star southpaw hurler for the Highlander nine, has been elected as captain of the 1930 baseball aggregation. A ballot was sent by mail to each of last year's players, and the results of the votes cast showed a decided majority for Blazer. Franklin "Shorty" Roberson, manager of the team, received the ballots before the holidays but too late to print the results in the last issue of the Echo.

Blazer has an enviable record in baseball, having earned three major letters in this sport. His principal specialty is pitching, although in the past with the redoubtable Gene Gabbard in the box, Blazer took charge of all important business around the keystone sack, taking a turn in the box now and then to chalkup a victory for Maryville. He is a hitter of no mean account, too.

If the weather permits, it will not be so far off until baseball practice begins, and with this curly black-haired gentleman at the helm, we predict another "Maryville" base ball season.

Certificated To Be Awarded Lettermen

In the future, an athlete who wins a varsity letter in a sport at Maryville will also receive a certificate identifying him with that award, it was decided at the last meeting of the Athletic Board of Control. Such certificates will be an added advantage to athletes who desire coaching positions and the like after graduation from college.

The Athletic Board elected Ed Sprouse manager of Track, with Elbert Lippard as his assistant. Both men are familiar with the various departments of this sport.

The officers of the Athletic Board of Control are: President, Robert Watkins; vice-president, Louis Reed; secretary, John Taggart.

Two Hard Games On This Week's Slate

Team at Home Tuesday Night; Travel to Knoxville Sat.

The schedule for the coming week shows two very interesting games. On Tuesday night the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. plays on the local court. To assert that this will be a game of much interest is unnecessary in that the Knoxville "Y" is one of Maryville's yearly rivals. The "Y" quintet defeated the Carson-Newman team 27-16, and boasts a defensive barrier that is practically impenetrable.

The latter part of the week brings the Honakerites face to face with their age old rival, the University of Tennessee, on Tennessees court. While the Volunteers have won decisive victories over both the Carson-Newman and the Rail-Lites still the Highland quintet is expected to show a fighting form to the spectators on Saturday night.

ATHLETIC CAKE RECIPE

A recent bride asked her husband to copy the radio recipe one morning. The man did his best but got two stations at the same time. One was broadcasting the setting up exercises and the other the recipe.

This is what he got:

Hands on hips, place one cup of flour on shoulders, raise knees and wash thoroughly in one half cup of milk. In four counts raise both legs and mash to hard boiled eggs in a seive. Repeat six times. Inhale one cup of flour, breathe deeply through the nose and sift.

Attention: jump to astride stand and bend the white of an egg backwards and forward over the head, and in four counts make a stiff dough that will stretch at the waist. Lie on the floor and roll into a ball about the size of a marble.

Hop backwards in boiling water, run afterwards. In ten minutes remove from fire and dry with a towel. Breathe deeply, put on bathrobe and serve with fish soup.

All-Faculty Grid Eleven Nominated In Response To Popular Student Demand

Representative Aggregation Presents Formidable Array of Indefatigable Talent To All Comers.

The "College Humorist" offers the following mythical All-Maryville aggregation after perusing the many nominees sent in by campus representatives:

Ends—Miss Kellar, because of her psychological playing could upset all passing schemes.

Dr. E. R. Hunter, at the other wing could give a logical explanation of all plays, and would insist upon systematic execution of them. He could no doubt baffle the opponents with a line of phonetic spelling.

Tackles—Miss Lula Darby, whose years of experience at stopping the rush line at Pearsons, fits her for this position. As such she has no peer.

Mrs. Mary McDermid Minton, whose rich Irish wit would weaken opponents, outbids all competitors for the other tackle position.

Guards—Prof. F. L. Proffitt, vascilating warden of the coffers, playing a tight fisted game, would be sure of playing on the winning side.

At the other guard who could surpass Dean Howell, titian-haired ruler of the men, whose excellent handling of men would enable him to be an impregnable man at this position.

Center—Miss Molly Caldwell, than whom there is no more whom, would assure an airtight line—nothing gets by her, and she can stop anything—in fact she has been known to do so.

Half Back—E. E. McCurry—known to all the fans as "Elusive Erskine", and a mighty shifty man, with a wonderful change of pace.

Verton Queener, by far the best kicker on the Hill, would do the punting. We have even known him to kick unnecessarily.

Fullback— Miss Jessie Heron—absolutely terrorizes the opponents with a smashing volley of withering words. She has no rival for the position.

Quarterback—Prof. Kiger— calling signals in Chronological order, would have the opponents buffaloed—witness any Bible 1 class.

Substitute: Chalmers Brown—better known as "Brownie"—he never fails when called upon to stop leaks.

Coach—Mrs. Nita Eckles West is unanimously chosen as coach, because she has an unlimited supply of plays up her sleeve.

We appreciate very much the business you have given us during the past year and hope to give you better service for the year 1930

A FRIEND

A friend is one who, when the cares of life
Press down upon us with their crushing weight;
When sorrows come that hide all joy and light
And make us feel that we are marked by fate
To walk the earth a stumbler and a blight—
A friend is one who grasps our hands
In steady pulsing faith—and understands.

A friend is one who, when the joys of life
Lift us above our daily tasks and care;
Lift us to heights of undreamed happiness,
To worlds all beautiful and visions fair
A friend is one who shares the gloriousness
Of our flights to far lands,
And though he walks in darkness—understands.

Again a friend is one who, when this life
Demands that we shall each commune awhile
With our own souls, that we shall go apart
Even from those we love, still he can smile,
Can go his way, keep an unwavering heart,
And should we stretch to breaking friendship's bands,
Yet he holds fast to us and understands.

—Jaculyn O'Dell

GOD

The cedar trees were chisled out
By God,
And flung, deliberately,
Against the sky at dawn.
He knew that I would lift a questioning face
To know how He could hurt me so
With beauty.

THE PRESENT STATUS OF THE HONOR SYSTEM

works especially well in the Law School. Are students of law any more honorable than any other class of professional students or graduates? Do professional ethics tend to cause a man who would cheat and defraud in the School of Arts and Sciences, to terminate abruptly such practices upon entering a professional school?

What influence does the size of the institution have upon the success or failure of the Honor System? What influence does the location of a college or university in a city or a village have upon the Honor System? Are women more honorable than men? Are students in one section of the country any more honorable than those in other sections?

This statistical information and these questions are given with a hope that students will study them, seriously think about them, and form some definite conclsions about the Honor System as an educational institution. In what ways does this system give a student more benefits than the faculty espionage system confers?

FEBRUARY MEETINGS

Park Presbyterian Church. Just a few years before he became pastor of this church, Dr. Vale was elected chairman of the Union Presbyterian Committee on the Continent Fund. Directly under his leadership, twenty five thousand dollars were raised for the fund. Dr. Vale, at this time, wrote a continent article, "The Challenge of a Mighty Line", which deals with the history and service of Maryville College. So we have a leader who is deeply interested in the college and who will render us a great service during this series of February Meetings.

Aviation Attracts Many College Men

How to make the best use of the intelligent and enthusiastic man power that is pouring from the colleges of the country has proved to be one of the real problems of the aviation industry. Hundreds of students, looking forward to graduation and their emergence into the world of commerce, have caught the fever of this fresh and swiftly growing business of flying, and have made up their minds to join their fortunes with it. On the other hand, aviation has a tremendous need for eager, trained, and youthful minds to take up its multitude of tasks.

Among the aviation executives who have given most thought to this problem is Guy W. Vaughan, vice president and general manager of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. A very large number of young college men have come to Vaughan for jobs or advice, and college presidents have frequently inquired of him what to do with their young charges eager to get into aviation. To these he has outlined a general primer of the industry as it applies to the collegiate in search of a job.

"It is, first of all," says Vaughan "something of a mistake to regard aviation as one industry, a coherent whole. The industry is in fact a group of many industries which are worlds apart in all except their ultimate aim: to make and sell airplanes, to operate them, and to keep them in the air.

"There is hardly any division of the aviation industry, from metallurgy to test-piloting which cannot be trained for to some extent in a college. There is hardly any division of the aviation industry which is not badly in need of college trained men, intelligent enough and ambitious enough to expand that training by working experience.

"Of course any man fresh from school needs a great deal of practical experience, and hard working experience, before he is ready to slip into a big job. There are very few short cuts in aviation.

"I would advise nearly all men entering the aviation business to get familiar with the stick of an airplane. A few hours of flying teaches things that precepts can never teach.

"Summing up my advice to college men interested in this business, I say this: Decide, as quickly as possible, what phase of the industry is interesting to you. Learn everything about that phase which can be learned from books or from men experienced in it. And, finally, do not scorn a start in some very lowly job. For that, after all, is the best and surest way to learn, and to avoid those later mistakes which come to every man, no matter how intelligent he may be, who has not actual working experience to back him up."

BIOGRAPHY OF HOBO COOPER

The Maryville-Vandy game was to be played on Saturday afternoon and it was already Friday noon. I had to see the game but it is a 500 mile trip there and back and I was broke. The only way I could get there was to forsake my time-honored principles and dignity as a ministerial student and become an ordinary hobo. My partners in crime were Paul Dickenson, a dignified senior and Spike Logan, an ex-hobo.

Dick and I left here at 1 p. m. By evening we were in Rockwood where we caught a ride on a flat truck going seventy miles an hour; forty forward and thirty up and down. This had a bad effect on the ——. This ride took us to a little dump called Crab Orchard, a wide place in the road where men are men and women are glad of it. Here we jumped a freight, snuggled up in a corner of a box-car and tried to keep warm. Sump wanted to make a fire but we had no wood except the box-car. Wood, wood everywhere and not a splinter to burn. We lit matches and looked to see if there were any other hoboes in the car. If there had been we would have just naturally kicked the teeth out of them. I'd have taken the toughest one and made short work of him. Luckily for them, they were absent.

We rode on in this semi-frozen state for forty miles. We woke up to find ourselves side-tracked somewhere in the sticks. At this stage of the game we decided that riding in a common low-down box-car was beneath our dignity, so we agreed to take a step forward in the art of hoboing. The next passenger train that passed had three extra occupants hanging on the back end of the coal car. The train had stopped for a switch. Logan was the first to mount the already moving train and Dick came next. Then it was my turn. I went down the track at forty per until my left gunboat made contact with a switch. I picked myself up and again sold out down the track. By the time I got to the coal car, the train was making tracks. I had an awful time climing on and those wheels wore coming right along. If it hadn't been for Spike grabbing me by the hair and pulling me up, I'd be in the land where all good hoboes are, where you never have to wask your socks and can stay out every night. We climbed up in the coal car but got back into the entrance of the mail car when there was any danger of discovery. Because of my elongated anatomy my head protruded into the envelloping mass of black smoke that was blowing back over the coal car.

Finally we got to Nashville without being caught, our clothes dirty and our faces black. We rushed to the Andrew Jackson, stalked into room 412 and there was Doc and the two Benn brothers in bed. Doc must have recognized us for he said, "I didn't ring for the porter." When he did recognize me he flopped me in a bath-tub. After that terrifying experience, I crawled into bed beside Doc and filled it full of cinders. In spite of the fact that Doc told me never to darken his bath-tub again he threw me in once more, and this time I made a better job of it.

Doc smuggled up some food from the football table, and after wrapping myself around fourteen sandwiches, I began to feel full. The end of the game found me with 20c less in my pocketbook and a little more in my head. I came back via the highway route, but didn't let anyone know that I was the terrible One-eye Connely Cooper.

Mabel: "I prayed for you last night."
Brent: "Next time telephone."

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

Perhaps one reason people make such worthy resolutions on New Year's Day is because we are all just experiencing the refreshed feeling obtained through the holidays. Many are made in good faith for the time being, and often, apparent slight regard for their strict observance later is not proof that they were not made in good faith. At any rate the custom will continue or "carry over" for some time yet.

—:—

Regarding the Maryville chapter of Pi Kappa Delta we are resolved: "To win every debate in 1930." Of course this has been our goal for this entire season.

—:—

This is not an illogical or impossible resolution. Every debate team hould follow the same idea. Of course somebody must lose in order for some one to win, but, after all, which debate are we planning to lose?

—:—

There are enough arguments on either side of the question to win the debate. We know which side an argument is for. Therefore we should win.

—:—

New Year's resolutions seem shortlived sometimes though. Early New Year's Day I read a resolution of a certain man. It ran: "Resolved, That I shall date all 1930 letters correcty." Three days later I received a letter from that man. It was dated January 2, 1929.

—:—

Technically his face was saved since that was a 1929 letter.

—:—

From the way many resolutions passed by Congress work out you might believe that body thinks it is New Year's all season.

—:—

We notice in the headlines that one group in Congress has started a drive to modify the dry law. That group is "all wet."

—:—

We also noticed about the same time that Commissioner Doran said there would be little drinking during the holidays for good liquor was $80 and $100 a dozen. He is too "high and dry".

—:—

The "coast guards" have been making merry in their little "holiday spots" with "rum runners." If we destroy our navy I fear the "bootleggers" will outnumber us and the coast guards will need assistance for police purposes.

Coach Honaker was laying on an operating table ready for an operation.

Doctor (to attendant): "Bring in Ethyl Chloride."

Coach (jumping up): "No Doc. please don't bring a woman in here"

VOL. 15 | MARYVILLE, TENN., MON., JANUARY 13, 1930 | NUMBER FOURTEEN

MID-YEAR EXAMS START SATURDAY MORNING

Dr. J. H. McMurray Represents Maryville College at Nation's Capitol

POLITICAL SCIENCE HEAD TO ATTEND EDUCATION MEETING

American Association of Colleges Meets at Washington This Week.

ACTING FOR DR. WILSON

Delegates Will Be Received At White House by President.

Monday, Jan. 13—Dr. J. H. McMurray is on his way to attend the Sixteenth Annual Meeting of Association of American Colleges, held in Washington, D. C., January 13 to 17, 1930. Dr. Wilson was the logical delegate, but on account of his recent illness, he asked Dr. McMurray to make the trip and represent Maryville in his stead.

Dr. McMurray signified his intention of attending three meetings. The first, Tuesday, January 14, at 2:30 is the Union Mass Meeting. The theme will be "The Place of Religion in American Higher Education." In addition to the regular mass meeting he will be present at the annual meeting of the Presbytrian College Union which is held on Thursday, January 16 at 7:00 p. m. This meeting will surely help solve some Maryville problems for among the topics for discussion are: "Expanding College Budgets and How to Meet Them"; "College Curricula and the Liberal Arts". On Friday, January 17 at 10:00 a. m. this meeting will be continued.

Evidently the delegates are not expected to confine themselves solely to the business of the convention, for, according to the bulletin in the hands of Dr. McMurray, many social functions are planned for their benefit. The bulletin reads:

"On Tuesday afternoon, January 14, 4:30, delegates and their friends are invited to visit Washington Cathedral as guests of Bishop James E. Freeman. On Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. they will be received at the White House by the President, and at 4:30, they will be guests of the American Association of University Women for tea at the National Club House, 1634 Eye Street N. W., Washington. On Thursday at 12:30 p. m. they will be received at the Pan-American Union."

DEBATE TRY-OUTS SCHEDULED TODAY

Freshman Squad Picked Last Week; Varsity Today.

The try-outs for the varsity teams for both men and women will be held today. Eight men and five women will be selected, competition will be strong and this should be one of the most interesting preliminaries that have been at Maryville in a long time.

There is a special tinge to the competition for positions on the varsity squad this year. Besides a number of regularly scheduled debates at home and at other schools, a team will journey to Wichita, Kansas, to the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention there this spring.

Maryville won the provincial championship of Kentucky, Indiana, and Tennessee, at Lexington, Kentucky, last April.

The judges for the try-outs are Professors Hunter, Knapp, and Davis.

Freshmen Team

The freshmen teams were chosen last Monday. The members of the boys' team are Winn Barr, Homer Ellis, Benjamin Groves, William Marston, Leslie Webb, and A Newcomer.

The following compose the girls'

PENECOST ANNIVERSARY

January 10—Dr. Wilson conducted the devotions of the Chapel service this morning. He reminded us that 1930 marks the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the Day of Pentecost. Dr. Wilson then read to us the Biblical account of the coming of the Holy Spirit in A. D. 30. He emphasized Peter's message to the unsaved who inquire how they might know Christ and His salvation.

President Wilson also spoke of the February Meetings which have been such a source of uplift to Maryville students past and present. He expressed the hope that the meetings would prove every bit as successful in the coming season as they have in years passed.

FORMER MARYVILLIAN WINS BEAUTY CONTEST AT KENTUCKY UNIV.

Catherine Lowry Chosen By Cecil B. DeMille As Co-ed Queen.

We notice in the Lexington Leader for January 5 that Miss Catherine Bennett Lowry, former Maryvillian, has been selected as the most beautiful co-ed at the University of Kentucky. This comes as delightful news, to say the least, to her numerous friends and acquaintances here.

Miss Lowry took her first two years of college work at Maryville, transferring to Kentucky State last September. She is enrolled as a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, and is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

The beauty contest was sponsored by The Kentuckian, University year book. Cecil B. DeMille, noted movie director, picked the winner from photographs of 44 nominees for pulchritude laurels.

Miss Lowry and her competitors in the contest were guests of honor at the annual "K" dance a couple weeks ago, and at that time the "Beauty Queen" was presented with flowers in token of her singular honor.

This brings us even closer to the conviction that blondes have the advantage over brunettes. At least, Mr. DeMille apparently believes in giving them the call over their darker-complexioned sisters and we hesitate to disagree with such a famous critic of feminine loveliness.

NOTICE

This notice is given to correct an erroneous impression held by quite a few students, and to keep any who might get too many cuts within the rules.

When a student misses Sabbath School and church, there is marked against him two cuts, not one as some have supposed. This is in the rule book, better look it up.

Pre-Season Debate With Albion College Enjoyed By Debate Classes and Guests

Visitors Display a Smooth, Conversation Style of Debate; Luckhart, Frost, Strain Represent Maryville.

Jan. 9—Last night the opening gun in the 1930 debate season was fired in a non-decision debate with Albion College on the Pi Kappa Delta question, resolved, That the nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament, excepting such forces as are needed for police purposes. The debate which was conducted in the popular open forum style was held in Athenian Hall before ehe membersr of the debate class and a small numbr of interested professors. Professor Queener, our debate coach, presided.

Albion was well represented on the affirmative side of the question by three artful speakers, Leslie Williams, David Anderson, and Marvin Pahl, a team which is making a two weeks' tour in the South which will extend into Florida. Their pleasing personalities brought them into favor with all members of the class who heard them speak.

Although our own varsity team has not yet been chosen Professor Queener selected three men from the debate class to defend the negative for Maryville, E. W. Luckhart Wright Frost, and Richard Strair were selected for this task, and did it in a very forceful manner.

Where questions were entertained from the floor large numbers were propoundeed to both sides for answers. Much information was jotted down by the information seekers who were trying out for the team.

GIRLS PLAN CONCERT

Operetta Will Be Given On Hill February 3.

On February 3, the Girls' Glee Club of Maryville College, assisted by the Boys' Glee Club will present a musical comedy, "In the Garden of the Shah." This is a Persian romance written by Mary N. Dodge and John W. Dodge. Miss Henry is directing the number which is a Y. W. C. A. benefit number. The students will remember the creditable work done by the club last year, and from all reports, this program will be another triumph. Below are the names of those appearing in "In The Garden of Shah."

Jane Duke, Norma Spilatore, Lallie Miller, Bill Hannah, Yervant Topalian, Edwin Shelley, Stanley McCool and Donald Briggs.

Since "Herr" Ramsay wanted to get up early one morning to study, he bought an alarm-clock from Weaver for three dollars. The next morning, fifteen minutes before the alarm should have rung, Herr woke up and turned off the alarm for fear that it would wake him up.

AUTO ACCIDENT

"Willie" Minton's Car Struck By Speeding Motorist.

Jan. 12—This evening at six thirty-five an automobile accident occurred at the college gate on Court Street. Miss Wilhemara Minton, a college sophomore, was driving her Ford sedan on Court street, and as she turned her car into the college drive, a car containing two men and a woman attempted to pass. Miss Minton's car was able to proceed under its own power with little damage other than bent fenders and a damaged wheel. The other car was towed to a garage.

MISS MEISELWITZ AWAY

Miss Elvira Meiselwitz attended the Tennessee State Conference of heads of Home Economics departments of colleges and universities at Knoxville on Friday and Saturday. The subject under discussion was the inclusion of additional home-making training in Home Economics courses.

DR. MUDGE VISITS COLLEGE, ADDRESSES STUDENT BODY SAT.

Stated Clerk of Church Brings Inspiring Message.

The Reverend Lewis Seymour Mudge, stated clerk of the General Assmbly of the Presbyterian Church, visited Maryville College on January 11 for purposes of inspection.

In chapel he adressed the student body on the subject "Enrichment of Personality". The central theme of his address was that ideals are necessary to humanity and that, in order to be realized, these ideals must be incarnated in personality. Destruction of the ideals that our loved ones have for us and that God has for us is the tragedy of tragedies.

Dr. Mudge has the degrees B. A., M. A., Ph. D., and L.L.D. His B. A. degree he obtained at Princeton, graduating magna cum laude, and then entered Princeton Theological Seminary. He was ordained into the Presbyterian ministry and has held the New Jersey pastorates of Beverly and Trnton and the Pennslvania pastorates of Lancaster and Harrisburg.

For several years Dr. Mudge has been prominent in church administration. In 1921 began his clerkship of the General Assembly. He was a pioneer in what are now considered modern methods of chudch finance and administration. His executive ability has elevated him to the position of chief permanent executive officer of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

LAMBDA TAU PSI

The Lambda Tau Psi society held its regular meeting Wednesday, January 8. The topic for discussion was insantiy. Elsie James had prepared an interesting report on "The Minor Forms of Insanity", and Rosalie Batt gave an illuminating discussion of the Major Forms of Insanity. As is the custom, after the specia l reports were over the society was asked to make some comments, and a spirited informal discussion followed.

OFFICE ANNOUNCES NO ETHICS COURSE WILL BE OFFERED

Education Course To Replace Required Study of Human Conduct.

REGISTRATION NEXT WEEK

Upperclassmen Register 21-25, Freshmen 27; Pay Bills 27-28.

The Seniors may be glad to know that Philosophy 3 (Ethics) will not be offered next semester. This was one of the required courses but the requirement has been waived in order that the Seniors who wish to teach may have an opportunity to take the extra education course required.

Two new education courses will be offered, neither of which has ever been offered here before. They are Education 36a, Comparative Education, under Dean Barnes, and Education 27b, Philosophy of Education, under Miss Gamble. There will also be extra sections in the scheduled education courses for Freshmen and Sophomores.

Home Economics 35, Selection of Food and Clothing for Men will run, but no credit will be given for this course. The laboratory period will be Thursday, 8:30-10:20 and the lecture period Saturday at 8:30.

Mathematics 13D, History of Mathematics, under Dr. Knapp will also be offered.

Seniors—Tuesday, January 21
Juniors—Wednesday, January 22.
Sophomores—Thursda, January 23

Freshmen were registered for the year in September. Necessary readjustments for them will be made Tuesday, January 28.

Upperclassmen who were registered for the year in September need not go to the registrar's office.

Registration will begin each day at 9:00 a. m. at the registrar's office in Anderson Hall, and continue until 4:00 p. m.

Students will register with the classes in which they enrolled in the first semester. No changes in classification will be made until the grades are recorded. Those eligible for promotion will be notified.

Students should have their students' cards with them when they register. A duplicate will cost ten cents.

All students will be reported to teacers by Tuesday, January 28, and absences will be recorded be-

ORATORS CLASH FOR BATES PRIZE

Robertson and Laster Meet In Alexander Finals Wednesday.

Jan. 13—This week the air about College Hill will be filled with oratory. Today the preliminary contest for the T. T. Alexander contest will be held. This contest which alternates for men and women is for men this year. The following men are entered: William Banard, Forrest I. Robertson, Robert Swaim, J. Hayden Laster, and Russell Gilmore. The judges will select two from this group who will speak in chapel Wednesday morning in the finals. The prize is $100 in gold. The contest is under the Department of Religious Education and all the subjects are of a religious nature.

The winners of the T. T. Alexander preliminaries were Forrest I. Robertson and Hayden Laste.

Tuesday night the Bates contest will be held in the chapel. This contest which also alternates for men and women is for women this year. This contest is under the supervision of Dr. Hunter. Six people are entered in the contest. They are Evelyn Seedorf, Viola Pettit, Alice Rhea, Jeannette Moore, Hope Snider and Ruby Bailey. The prize is $45.00 in gold.

WALKS STRANGE, ODD AND CURIOUS

Many and varied are the walks of life on the campus. The Hill boasts a few concrete walks but in the main they are abstract. There are dirt walks in which French heels sink, they never swim. There are brick walks which, during the rainy seasons (that is, all year round) have a peculiar instinct (not psychological) of spurting up drops of muddy water on clean silk stockings. Then, there is a board walk, which sometimes appears between Bartlett and the gym during the aforementioned rainy weather— not the Atlantic board walk, however, although there is usually plenty of water surrounding it. The cinder track between Pearsons and Thaw is an ideal place for the testing of strong or weak ankles. Most ankles have a weakness for it.

Not only are there concrete and abstract walks on the Hill but there are many faculty walks in evidence. None is more imposing than Mrs. Snodgrass' pomp and circumstance, especially when she leads the faculty in the annual Commencement march.

Dr. Hunter has a rather non-chalant, yet determined walk. He and his brief case always arrive at the required time. Miss Gamble's healthy stride is noticeable especially when she is called from psychology class. Miss Heron appears to be following her nose when she walks, while Betty Griffes commands herself like a tin soldier. Senora Minton jigs along, as does Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, although Miss Meiselwitz has more of a bouncing motion. Professor Howell walks as if he won't arrive on time and must speed up, yet retain the dignity of the teaching profession.

Another kind of walk on the Hill is that known as the Moonshiners' movement. There is nothing distinctive nor distinguished about it. The couples arrive (usually) at a non-specified time, and how. They seem to have a great leaning for this method of locomotion to say the least.

Of the many individual student movements on the Hill none is more typical of the approaching season of the year, than is the spring walk of Alfredda Scobey. In contrast to this is Janet McCreight's amble from left to right with her feet moving in a parallel position about a foot apart. Her good friend, Elsa Bowden slaps along with her feet point at a 45 degree angle outward. Shorty Roberson's strut is like that of a rooster (no doubt about a hen or a spring chicken). Glenn Murray walks with a perceptible swaying motion from side to side, while Suitcase Waddell shuffles his feet as if he wanted to wear out shoe leather in the quickest way possible.

This attempt at description could be continued indefinitely but not profitably. I hope I haven't stepped on anybody's toes, for it's all in the way you look at it. May I leave this parting injunction, Girls, watch our step, and walk, for the (k)night is coming.

Is The Student Council Justified?

As we hear questions raised from time to time amongst the students, we attempt to express our sentiments in the matter, which may or may not coincide with other's.

Recently someone asked us what the student council was for. It puzzled us for awhile, then we had to admit in all frankness that we could find little excuse for its existence to date this year. True, it picked several prospective dates for the fall mountain hike and referred them to the office to find out which one fitted in with the college plans, but this work could easily have been avoided.

The student council was instrumental in getting an extra day at Christmas—after a non-member had already circulated a petition among half the students. This was not very stirring initiative.

We might mention one or two other things that have come under the care of the student council which had formerly been left to the Christian Associations. They would still be carried on if left there.

We have been bold enough to make suggestions from time to time, but for some reason there is no reaction one way or another. Probably not worth consideration, but then if we have nothing for a student council to do, why have one? We do not say that the student council is not justified in existing, we merely wish to remind it that there is only five months in which for it to prove its worth.

Chilhowean Business

Something that has been bothering us for some time is the poor arrangements under which the Chilhowean is gotten out. Please do not misunderstand us. The Chilhowean looks very promising this year, and we know of no more capable editor or business manager. However, the financial basis upon which the publication rests is such as no business man would care to operate on. The Chilhowean is in much the same shape that the Highland Echo was in before the student council adopted the present regulations.

There should be the same sort of control exercised in the case of the year book as is used in connection with the newspaper. No one would welcome joint faculty and student council supervision of expenditures and receipts more than the business manager, and we know from personal experience.

The people who put out the annual are just as deserving of remuneration for their work as the newspaper directors, and their work should be put on a paying basis, and not left to dame fortune who is not always so generous as some may figure.

We should also suggest that the treasurer of the college be authorized to include the price of an annual in the semester bills. This again would put the publication on a more certain plane.

This is another item that the student council may take up. May.

Frank Baker always likes to get dressed up. The people at the house always think he is going somewhere, and the people he visits always think he's been somewhere.

For the benefit of the freshmen who are still in the dark as to the significance of Florence Wallace's being called "Mademoiselle Wallace", let it be explained at this time. Last year on entering her French class for the first time, she was asked by Betty Griffes, "Are you Mademoiselle Wallace?" Whereupon this answer was given, "Why, no. I'm Florance Wallace."

THE OPEN FORUM

Dear Students and Faculty:

Now and then we hear criticisms of one sort or another about the Echo, but nothing definite enough for use in this column. This is not our idea of making the paper a student publication.

The staff tries to give the students a variety of stories and features, but it is impossible for us to ascertain just what pleases most people and how.

You cannot hurt our feelings by sending along a few bouquets with the brick-bats or vice versa. We will welcome any signed letters. If you want them printed we'll be glad to do it. If not, just mark them "not for publication."

Let's have more students and faculty take a constructive interest in their college paper. We thank you.

Two Down!

A Cross-Section of Justice—By An Observer

"Hats off!" cried the sergeant as Magistrate Moskovitch entered the police court at the Fifteenth and Vine Streets Police Station. The hats came off, and the crowd stood at respectful attention while "his honor" passed through its midst to the foreboding desk beyond the railing.

"His honor" stopped to talk to two important-looking individuals with the characteristic politician derbies, and the indispensable half-smoked cigars. Above the murmer in the room could now be heard the sobs of a blind woman who was standing with her blind husband edly one of abject respect.

Here and part they were the city's unfor-or upper class, but for the most to be elsewhere, but the brass-but-plaining in broken English his need been brought in with them. A short, swarty-faced son of Italy was ex-near the vending pushcart that had "Silence in the court." The sergeant rapped for order as "his honor" took his seat behind the high desk.

"All right now," Magistrate Moskovitch began, "we're going to start the day off right. You see this little girl here"—he pointed to a ruddy-faced child of about fourteen years—" she is collecting money for the police widows Pension Fund. She will take this hat and pass through this crowd, and I want to see every mother's son of you give something. Nobody's to give less than a dime, either." He indicated a hat in the hands of a policeman, and the girl started around. Everybody gave.

Adjusting his glasses, "his honor" loked over the docket for the morning. The crowd waited expectantly.

The magistrate droned," "First case, city against Tom Harron and Andrew Jackson. Harron, and Jackson," he called.

A look of dismay overcast the countenances of two of the racial brothers, and they contemplated the entrance with looks of covetousness, but were conscious of the burly keeper of the peace stationed between them and liberty. At the second announcement that they were wanted up front, they took a last fond look at each other, mournfully shook the outstretched hand of their sole sympatihzer, and moved to the railing.

"Inside the rail," directed the magistrate, as he adjusted his glasses and prepared to examine the offenders. "Jackson, this is the second time you've been up for being a public nuisance. Last time it was for strumming a guitar in front of the Shubert; now it's for pulling newspapers off trash piles, and spilling the trash all over the streets. You've got a good record otherwise, so keep it that way.

"Harron, where do you live?"

"Ah's been living with Mistah Jackson on Vine Street, sah."

"You don't look like you were too fond of work, anyhow. You look like a fighter to me."

"No, sah, Ah never fights, sah."

"You say you never fight. That scar on your cheek looks mighty suspicious to me. See that negro over there, were you ever in a fight with him?"

"Which one?" was the dubious reply.

A faint smile crossed "his honor's" face, as he continued, "You say you never fight, and yet your record shows that you were in the Army during the war. What army were you in, the Salvation Army?"

"No sah, Ah was in France, wid de Unitum States Army."

"You were in the army in France and didn't fight. What kind of a soldier were you?"

"Well, sah, Ah was always on K. P. duty."

At this point an audible titter went over the crowd, but Harron's face was void of any trace of humor. Hs partner in crime merely shook his head with dejection.

"If you come up here again you get thirty days in the workhouse. You can go this time, but you had better find a job that won't make so much work for the Department of Public Works. Next!"

The objects of rebuke moved slowly away from the desk, degradation written in every movement. Magistrate Moskovitch watched them go with a mixture of amusement and pity plainly showing in his usually stern face. Then, "Don't you go dropping those dollar bills on this floor!"

At the first words of the admonition, the darkies stopped dead with apprehension, and when the full content of the sentence had made an impression, they glanced questioningly at each other, and then searched the floor. They raise their eyes from the floor to look into the smiling countenance of "his honor" and chuckling, they shuffled off.

Watkins' Team To Tustle With Knoxville Y. Matmen

The Maryville matmen will open the 1930 schedule on Wednesday night against the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. and although the match is to be played in Knoxville still it is expected that a great number of wrestling enthusiasts will be on hand to back the Highlanders.

The local wrestling equipment has been enlarged during the past week in readiness for the Chattanooga match scheduled to be held here on the 21st. The new material consists of one ten by ten mat, one three by nine mat and one mat

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Even the kids have a great deal of respect for Maryville's athletic mentor.

One little red-head in particular made a big racket when Coach Honaker chucked him out of the player's dressing room over at U. T. Saturday night.

The funny part of it was that Coach kept right on lecturing to the players while said ejective process was taking place.

This Bobby Dodd is just as much a basketball player as he is a football player, which is plenty.

When an opposing team starts "football" tactics in a basketball contest, Coach Honaker knows exactly what to do.

Highlanders Fight Against Volunteer Quintet. Davis Stars

Highlander Star Forward

DAVIS

Tennessee Wesleyan, Knoxville Y. Scheduled This Week.

Next Thursday night, the strong Tennessee Wesleyan team will visit Maryville. This game pomises to be fast and furious, and well worth the time spent. The visitors have always presented a formidable team to the Highlanders and this year is expected to be no exception.

A return game with the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. is scheduled for Saturday night in Knoxville. The sturdy quintet, undaunted by the defeat received here Tesday night hopes to down Honaker's strong five on their own floor.

VARSITY TEAM CHOSEN

This week a varsity coaching squad of five was chosen by Miss Weller. They are: Christine Foster, Virginia Crider, Grace Stevenson, Carol Cushman, and Olive Clopton. These girls will coach the various inter-class teams in practices.

Games will not be started at once but work-outs will continue for three or four weeks.

He puts Joe Woodard and Louie Reed into the game.

In the last two games, Kemp Davis, flashy forward, has really struck his stride. This news does not disappoint us a bit, for Davis certainly knows how to loop 'em in. He was high scorer at Tennessee Saturday night.

The way Pete Parks sneaks around these big boys is rather disconcerting at times. If you pass the ball when you think Pete will be, he generally shows up in time to get it, too.

CARNEGIE BASEBALL

Baseball practice has started unusually early this year. Last Thursday was warm; it felt like spring; it was real baseball weather. Consequently, in the afternoon of that day many horse-hide aspirants performed on Carnegie lawn before a gay and admiring (or rather amused) group of feminine fans who were using the front steps of Memorial as bleachers.

Carnegie had a formidable string of pitchers warming up. First, there was "Uncle Al" Duff. Al got a good work-out, between swinging his mighty right and receiving the compliments of his companions. Then too, Clifton "Dinty" Earle "Speck" Moore with arms as long as his name, added to the miseries of the catcher. He also made it his duty to recover the ball whenever it was thrown too far. Dinty's contributions, however, were mostly vocal. He kept up the life of the occasion. Pat Roddy, Bradshaw, and Harold Meyers helped out. Pat's quite a left-hander, and so is Bradshaw.

The pitchers continued to warm up. In fact, they warmed up all afternoon. Whenever one man would drop-out, there was always a substitute to step up and take his glove. In the course of events, Bill Hannah and Bob Wallace appeared.

But the affair was not what it should have been until the arrival of two people who are necessary to all the Carnegie capers. Miss Peggy Howell and "Little Mac". Miss Howell took Dinty's place at recovering lost balls, and "Little Mac" joined the league of early season hurlers.

Honakerites Trounce Knoxville Y. Quintet

Davis, Lewis, Star in Decisive Victory Over Visitors.

January 7.—With Coach Honaker's fast pair of forwards, Davis and Lewis sinking shots from all angles and an airtight defense keeping the visitors away from the goal, the Maryville College Highlanders ran rough shod over the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. five, twice conquerors of Carson-Newman, to the tune of 45 to 24, the Alumni Gym tonight.

In the third quarter the Maryville quintet hit their stride, and Davis and Lewis sunk some excellent shots. The visiting quintet

The "Y" five put up a game fight for nearly three quarters before they gave way to the superior team play of the Highlanders. The Scotties were slow in starting, and some excellent shooting by Kirk, kept the visitors almost on even terms during the half, which ended 20-14 in favor of the Highlanders.

for the Knoxville team. The box score:

SOME SPECIFIC PROBLEMS

It is the hope of the National Student Federation that all colleges in the United States will give careful attention to the question of the Honor System and make an honest endeavor to do something of value about the question of honesty among students. A keen critic of student affairs and college administration has penned the statement "that the college that winks at dishonesty in scholastic work and other student relations is doomed." Colleges must assume the responsibility of inculcating into the students firm principles of right dealing with their fellows.

But the problem is not to know what the weakness is, but it is to determine how best to remedy this weakness. A large majority of the student representatives at the Fourth Annual Congress of N. S. F. A. last December, expressed confidence in the uplifting power of the Honor System. Therefore, the N. S. F. A. recommends this system to colleges that do not have it; and to colleges that do have it, the N. S. F. A. expresses an intense desire that they exert every possible effort to make the system as efficient as possible.

But the question arises: "Should every college attempt to institute the Honor System?" To do so would hardly display wisdom. There are some colleges in which the Honor Sstem is not needed, e. g., institutions in which all the examinations are conducted orally. There are others in which certain local conditions militate against its successful operation. But in the vast majority of the state, city, denominational, privately endowed, and teachers' colleges, as well as the normal schools, there is opportunity for much development in this field.

However, before any college attempts to adopt the system, the field should be thoroughly prepared by faculty members and student leaders. There is reason to believe that this was done prior to its adoption at the University of Virginia, even, in the summer of 1842. Even that institution, where the Honor System works certainly and swiftly, and where there is a tradition against cheating that has existed for nearly a hundred years, does not urge a college to adopt the system before the field has been thoroughly prepared. They say: "We have the amplest faith in the Honor System and believe that with proper care it could be successfully introduced into almost every American university and would be a salutary influence; but before beginning its introduction, we urge thoughtful, thorough, and patient preparations of the field:

"1. By such general, pervasive conferences with the students as would produce practically unanimous conviction of the merit of the system in the minds of the student body.

"2. By the election to the Honor Committee of men and women who enjoy the amplest confidence of their fellow-students as to integrity, courage, sanity, and sagacity.

"3. By agreement upon impartial and inevitable execution of such a uniform penalty for violation of the honor code as the Honor Committee shall impose, with no mitigation, pardon, or suspenion of sentence.

"4. By the rigorous exclusion from the purview of the committee of all offenses which are not true breaches of honor.

"5. By securing the unanimous consent of the president, professors, and officers of the University to cry hands off and leave the student body the whole responsibility for dealing with well-defined breaches of honor.

"To neglect any one of these five precautions will be, in our opinion, to invite shipwreck," says this great institution.

The installation or administration of the Honor System requires much work that is spiritual, inspirational, and intangible. The students must be educated concerning principles of honor. It must be shown them that they are trusted, but that if they abuse the trust, they will surely be punished. The work of an Honor Committee should be educational instead of corrective; it should be their aim to prevent dishonesty, rather than to punish it.

One thing is beyond question. Before an Honor System can function successfully, a spirit of Honor must be inculcated into the students. An educational program extending probably over a period of three or four years will be necessary. A strong tradition in favor of the Honor System is its greatest asset.

"Belles of Canterbury" A Great Surprise, With All-Star Players.

The new program secretaries of Theta have planned a very interesting program for Saturday night. You will be interested and especially if you have had English Literature, or if you are studying Chaucer. This is a very dramatic comedy-farce on Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales". The characters are:

Freshman—Doris Dodge
Sophomore—Garnet Price
Junior—Elizabeth Caldwell
Senior—Lou Stanberry
Wife of Bath—Hazel Bowers
Prioress—Esther Horton
First Nun—Virginia Crider
Second Nun—LaVerne Burnette
Emily—Mary Lovette
Hippolyta—Mary Ella Sullivan

Coy-Murphy Marriage

Once more Maryville is marryville. Another pair of Maryville's constant moonshiners has taken the fatal step and joined the matrimonial ranks. They are Vera Coy, whom all who were here last year will remember, and Millard Murphy member of the class of '28. The only explanation they offer is this:

Vera was working in the mountains near McKenzie. The young man of the case came to spend Christmas with her. They decided to get married, and took immediate action on their decision. May they have all luck and happiness!

cover, twenty by twenty. With this new material Maryville boasts a good wrestling mat.

Manager Cash and Coach Watkins say that the team is rounding into good form and that a very successful year is expected. The line-up at present stands, with a few possible exceptions, thus:

125 Pound Class, Buchanan, 135 Lee, 145 Shaw, 155 Watkins and Teffeteller, 165 Cash, Vanderslice, Carr and 175 pound class, Overly.

The wrestlers will perhaps give a few exhibition bouts during the intermtssion of the basket ball game with the Tennessee Wesleyan players Thursday night.

Wrestling, although old in history, is still relatively new in Tennessee, and Maryville is to be congratulated for sponsoring a good team. Let's help Watkins and Cash put out a winner.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

More and more there are coming two changes in intercollegiate debating. One change is from oratorical, emotional type to the lighter Oxford nein, and the other change is in the increase of non-decision debates. I wonder if it all is improvement? At least part of it is, but if I were a judge I would want to find a firm argument somewhere in the program.

—:—

Of course judges do not have to be bored in non-decision debates. They can sit up and enjoy the canned witicism.

—:—

We are getting a little practice in diplomatic circles now. Last Wednesday night we discuased this matter of disarmament with the gentlemen from Albion College in a closed debate.

—:—

Mr. Stimson and his delegation has just sailed for the London conference on disarmament. I hope complete disarmament is not adopted before I get to debate. It would be rather disconfitting to our debaters to have the thing we want actually happen.

—:—

That is just a man-size debate trip.

—:—

And I wouldn't be at all surprised if it is one of these non-decision debates too.

—:—

There is one nice thing about a non-decision debate. Every member on both teams goes home fully convinced that he has won.

In reality he has convinced nobody but himself.

—:—

The freshmen team has been selected, and I suppose the lucky mmbers feel that they are through with debate worries, but each one had better get him a can of midnight oil now.

—:—

It is almost time to begin studying for examinations now anyway.

—:—

Dr. Stevenson: "When you entered college last fall as a freshman you had no 'demonstration' that you would graduate.

—:—

The faculty has seen no demonstration of it yet.

MARY McKINNEY ILL

Wednesday, Jan. 8—Mary McKinney went to the hospital today to stay until she recovers from an attack of mumps. Those of us who have never had the mumps sympathize with Mary because we have heard how disagreeable they are. Those of us who have had the mumps know from experience and extend all the condolence at our command to her in her time of affliction. We do hope that Mary will recover in time to take her exams. We should hate to have her miss that pleasure.

MEN ASSIST WOMEN IN 'GARDEN OF THE SHAH' HERE FEB. 3

Operetta To Be Given By Glee Singers Promises To Make Hit.

THEME DESERT ROMANCE

Comed Parts In Hands of McCool, Shelley and Briggs.

At 8:00 o'clock on the night of February 3 the women's and men's glee clubs of Maryville College will present the "Garden of the Shah" in Voorhees Chapel. Judging from the talent represented in the cast this will be one of the big events of the year.

Norma Spilator has the leading feminine role while Bill Hannah is the leading man. These two are ably assisted by a cast which includes Jane Duke, Lallie Miller and Yervant Topalian. The comedy parts of the operetta will be in the hands of Stanley McCool, as the stern and stately Shah, and Edwin Shelley and Donald Briggs as a negro comedian and a pretentious shiek. The stage manager promises many beautiful scenes and effects.

In the operetta two young Americans, accompanied by their negro porter, enter the territory of the Shah to work his gold mines. They fall in love with the Shah's daughter and her friend. The Shiek decides that he wants to marry the Shah's daughter himself and the Shah threatens to hang the Americans and determines to carry his threat out.

HOME 'EC' FOR MEN OFFERED 'A' HOUR

No-Credit Course In Satoral and Culinary Arts.

You probably noticed in last week's Echo the item that Miss Elvera Meiselwitz was attending a convention of Heads of Home Ec Departments in Knoxville. More work for non-home ec students was stressed at this convention, and Miss Meiselwitz was able to report that Maryville is the first college in Tennessee to offer home ec for men, and a bride's course. This report was received by other prominent H. E. leaders with many favorable comments, and eager questions as to how similar courses might be started elsewhere. Maryville is, as usual, a pioneer in the right direction.

The men's course ths year is listed in the catalog as Home Ec. 35, and runs at the A period. Last year due to large number of applicants,

ORATORICAL PRIZES GO TO F. ROBERTSON AND VIOLA PETTIT

Alexander Contest Finalists Are Expression Grads; Pettit Repeats.

The T. T. Alexander prize was awarded to Forrest I. Robertson, Wednesday morning, January 15.

The two men, Hayden Laster and Forrest Robertson, who won the preliminaries, gave their orations before the student body of Maryville College in the regular morning chapel exercises.

Dr. M. M. Rogers gave a short introductory speech explaining the requirements and origin of the award, and introducing the speakers.

Forrest Robertson talked first. His speech was given in a graceful, and forceful manner.

In a simple, convincing manner Hayden Laster presented his oration. He used numerous well-founded references from the Bible.

BATES CONTEST

Miss Viola Pettit won first prize, forty-five dollars in gold, in the twelfth annual contest for the Bates prize in Oratory which was held in Voorhees Chapel, Tuesday, January 14. Five other young women from the junior and senior classes took part in the contest. However, none of them gave Miss Pettit close competition except Miss Evelyn Seedorf, who gave an excellent oration on "Society's Responsibility to the Criminal."

"Not by Bread Alone", the subject of Miss Pettit's oration, and "Christ's Atonement for Sin", the subject of Mr. Robertson's oration, have been winning themes for such orations for several years in succession. Therefore, it behooves a contestant to consider thoroughly the results of previous years before selecting a subject for an address. It appears that these two subjects are inevitable winners, for they must be good material for orations of this kind.

Miss Pettit's oration was well written and splendidly given—in all, entirely worthy of the high award it received. This is not the first time that Miss Pettit has shown herself as a public speaker of merit, for she will be remember as one of the winners of the T. T. Alexander Contest last year and also a winner of the extemporaneous speaking contest at the Provincial Pi Kappa Delta Meeting in Lexington last spring.

"Society's Responsibility for the Criminal", by Miss Evelyn Seedorf, was greatly enjoyed because of the speaker's ability to hold the attention of the audience by the power and strength of her arguments. The annimation, gesture, and forcefulness used in Miss Seedorf's discourse, were genuine proofs of a true orator and real oration.

Principals Of All-Star Cast In "The Cardinal" Here Next Monday

PALACE PROMISES 'TALKIES' IN FUTURE

Management Announces Equipment Now Being Installed.

The management of the Palace Theatre is making arrangements to install talking equipment. Part of the equipment has already arrived, and the management hopes that it will be all here and ready for operation by February first. The contract is for the "Western Electric Sound System", distributed by the Electrical Research Productucts, Inc. This system, which enables voices to be reproduced correctly and naturally, is the same system now in use in the best and largest theaters in the countr. With it, the people of Maryville, will be offered the same program as those shown in large cities.

Many things are necessary in order to make a change like that which the Palace is making. Walls must be padded, sound-proof booth be provided, and other changes made to prevent echoes. The sound originates in the film and through a very technical process passes from one instrument to another until it reaches the stage. With these necessary changes and the new machines it is understood that this new equipment will cost the company thousands of dollars.

Mr. Tony Sudekum, President of the Crescent Amusement Company, says in a recent letter to the Maryville Enterprise. "Along with the installation of talking equipment we shall offer Maryville the best in recent screen releases and the programs arranged for in the near future, are the same that will be offered in the largest cities, and with the new equipment purchases will be correctly presented in a comfortable and attractive theatre."

MARYVILLE PAYING DEBT TO CHURCH

Small New Jersey Congregation Has M. C. Leader.

Here is a bit of interesting matter for those who love their Alma Mater.

In a small New Jersey village on the very top of one of her most picturesque northern plateaus there stands an old Presbyterian Chuch. Hand in hand through the years, separated by hundreds of miles this typical little church has loved that same faith for which our college was foundded. "Blest be the tie that binds"—and who would ever think that this church, consisting of not over a hndrued members would be interested in the challenge of a College in the Foothills of Tennessee. Interested to the extent that its young people would be snding money to pay a student's tuition. A student who planned to enter the Ministry. I know the student, he did not enter that particular field of work. But the little church did not give in vain. The last three men who have served as pastors were men of the Institution and were in a definite way under the influence of the spirit of Maryville. Is it permissable to say the College has paid her debt to the little church?

Five people who live within a short radius of this church are attending Maryville. The Spirit of Maryville is real, is genuine, is out searching to do good. Give to her, and the return will be tenfold, hundredfold, pressed down good measure, running over. I learned in Maryville that her Spirit was patterned after her ititials—M.C.—My College, My Country, My Christ. To reward her is not to do so in vain.

CITY DRUG ORDERS FROM COLLEGE MAIDS

The City Drug Company gave an order to the College Maid Shop for sixteen smocks, and chair covers. The smocks are of green Indian Head piped with orange, while the chair covers are orange with green piping. Both Drug Store and Shop seem well pleased with their transaction. Students, while hiding away banana splits gaze on the new uniforms, because the College Maid girls put forth some real work to make them what they are.

ATHENIAN MIDWINTER ACCLAIMED DRAMA OF UNUSUAL MERIT

All-Star Cast Supports Forrest Robertson In "The Cardinal."

One of the best plays of the year, "The Cardinal", will be presented by the Athenian Literary Society on January 27, at 8:00 o'clock in Voorhees Chapel.

This play by Louis N. Parker, chosen by Mr. Robertson, chairman of the committee because of its unusual dramatic qualities, is a historical drama of the period 1510. Since the setting is in Rome, the audience will be permitted to get a glimpse of the life in the Imperial City at that date. Rome with its collosal architecture, its fine statuary, its arrogant noblemen, and its submissive plebians will be a setting which Maryville audiences do not often have the privilege of enjoying.

The plot which centers around the Cardinal's position, his brother, and the murder of a Roman merchant is intensely interesting. Into the tragedy of the play are woven romantic love scenes. In fact the development of the plot is most dramatically brought about.

Rich and elaborate costumes from William Beck and Sons, costumers of Cincinnati, together with an equally elaborate setting gives us some idea of the quality of this play.

Most important of all, however, is the cast which may be termed truly as "All-Star". Such veterans of the stage Forrest Robertson, who will have the leading role, Roberta Hickman, Jesse Peirce, Muriel Hall, and Leland Gilmore have major roles. Other members of the cast include about twenty Athenians and Bainonians, nearly all of whom heve had previous experience in dramatics. Reports from the expression teacher declare that Forrest Robetson is doing a commendable piece of work with the interpretation of the leading role, that of Cardinal Giovanni De Medici. The entire cast in order of appearance, is as follows:

Lisa - - - - Louise Avery
Benedetta - - - Faith Taylor
Maddalena - Elizabeth Wilbar
Honoria - - - Lois Dillow
Francesco - - Paul Dickerson
Luigi - - - Allen Foreman
Pietra - - - Alexander Jones
Claricia De Medici - - - - Roberta Hickman
Ignazia - - - Edith Woolsey
Beppo - - - - Homer McCann
Giulano - - - Leland Gilmore
Filiberta - - - - Muriel Hall
Cardinal Giovanni De Medici - - Forrest Robertson
Valentina - - Wesley Culner
Peter Ramsam - Emmit Stidham
Bartolommeachigi - - Phillip Vogel
Guido Boglioni - - Hayden Laster

VARSITY DEBATERS BEGIN DAILY GRIND ON P. K. D. QUESTION

Try-outs Held For Both Men And Women Disclose Keen Competition.

FIRST DEBATE IN MONTH

Men's Squad Has Three Veterans From Last Year; Women Have One.

Professor Davis' classroom was the scene of a big disturbance last Monday, the try-outs for the Varsity debate teams. When all the hot air and smoke was finally cleared away and the three judges were revived from the stupor which seemed to envelope them, the doors of this air-tight classroom were closed for another year to such onslaughts of argumentative and persuasive verbiage.

Those who survived the above mentioned struggle are thusly announced as members of the Varsity debate squad for the present season. They are:

Men— Forrest Robertson, Stuart James, William Graham, Roy Taylor, Elton Luckhart, Robert West, Richard Strain, and Wright Frost.

Women—Viola Pettit, Alice Renegar, Mary Lovette, Ruby Johnson, and Alice Rhea.

Coach Queener has the group working on the question every day now, looking forward to the first tri-angular debate, which will be held around February 20th.

So far he has found no one who believes in the affirmative side of the question on "Disarmament", but the conversion of "Red" Luckhart and possibly others is being strenuously attempted.

$200 GIVEN FOR ESSAY ON 'RACE'

Inter-Racial Committee Holds Annual Contest.

As in previous years, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, a Southern organization with headquarters at 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, is offering to students in Southern colleges two cash prizes of $100 each for the best papers on "Justice in Race Relations." Papers should be between 1500 and 2500 words in length and must be delivered to the Commission or placed in the mails not later than May 1. The Commission has prepared suggestions, reading lists, and pamphlets which will be helpful to those desiring to submit papers. These will be sent without charge to anyone applying. Address Commission of Interracial Cooperation, 409 Palmer Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

More than fifty colleges were represented in this contest in 1929

Examinations Prepared To Take Annual Toll of Student Bliss

"To each his sufferings; all are men,
Condemned alike to groan,
The tender for another's pain,
The unfeeling for his own.
Yet ah! Why should they know their fate?
Since sorow never comes too late,
And happiness too swift by flies,
Thought would destroy their paradise.
No more; where ignorance is bliss,
'Tis folly to be wise."

Thomas Gray wasn't so dumb at that, was he? Indeed, the dreadful exams have come! And Gray is not the only writer whom we may quote when discribing the prevailing conditions. Was it not Thomas Paine who said "These are the times that try men's souls!"? When Professor Griffitts faced the frightened freshmen this afternoon he might have said in the words of Mark Antony, "Those who have tears prepare to shed them now." Now is the appropriate time to drag out that thread bare gag that goes something like this:

"Sweet young thing"— "No, that isn't mine on my eye lashes. That's smoke from the mid-nite oil."

The assertive sophomores, self assured juniors and intelligent seniors will tell you that exams are just all in another day's work. Perhaps it is only freshmen who let the exams worry them. The upper classmen have learned to form perfect alibis. They had to. They will say: "What's in a grade? Only book worms work for grades. Grades don't matter. All one gets is attitudes"—and on and on.

That all sounds very well, but freshmen, it won't lower you in any one's esteem to get an extra quality credit. Perhaps it is an old fashioned view point, but there are some people left who think an "A" isn't to be sneezed at.

Did we hear a rumor about honor? Or lack of it. We of the younger generation pride ourselves on being honest and above board.

What's the moral of the tale? Simply this. They are here. We must submit. Eventually they will be over and, to quote our Chemistry Professor, "a copy of the results will be sent to the bereaved parents."

Seniors Are Given Some Advice On Use Of Canes Here—Hereafter

By Julia Terry

Whether or not the senior canes are tender reminders of childhood days of our illustrious men of the senior class, or merely to lend dignity to their position on the campus, is left to the judgment of the student body. There must be some reason for the adoption of canes as the constant companions of these men who are, as their loving fathers say, chips off the old block, and thus as we say, common blockheads. Perhaps the following suggestions will be of some practical value as to the use of these canes in case they have not already been employed in such a manner.

Miss Darby could find use for them in marking off the aisles in and out of the kitchen, or for measuring the length of the skirts of her protegees, and later on for use as fly swatters. The canes might be of use in a costume play, supplementing swords and daggers, or for lending atmosphere to a Hallowe'en old witch costume. Coach Honaker will, no doubt, find them useful in the pole vaulting events during the spring track meets. Canes could be used by the students as well as the seniors for leaning posts, thus relieving the wear and tear on the trees and telephone poles in the vicinity; or they could be used in hurdling the puddles in the sidewalks during the approaching rainy season.

Canes would also be valuable in awakening a slumbering roommate at the end of a lecture or in usurping the duties of Big Ben. Just drop the cane on the floor. The noise will be equal that of the best dollar alarm clock made. Canes might serve as meter sticks in Physics lab; and could also be used in blackboard demonstrations in place of the common yardstick. Miss Butcher might find a cane a very useful instrument in directing the college band. Younger brothers and sisters will be delighted to ride them instead of their old fashioned hobby horses.

For some of the aged members of the class of '30, the canes will no doubht be used in supporting them the rest of the year, most of these canes will be in the hands of the better half of the senior class, and thus be their sugar's cane.

Progress in Meetngs

In the approaching of February Meetings we are looking for and expect to receive much lasting good. As a reminder that we are getting nearer and nearer the epitome of religious worship, witness the change that has taken place in the nature of the meetings within our limited remembrance.

The men who are called upon to lead these meetings from year to year are men of exceptional ability in the Christian Church, men who are capable of leading our thoughts and guiding our actions into harmony with our God.

Would that we might be free from all prejudice and sense of compulsion at these services, and seek that more lasting good which is the inward transformation of a man's life, rather than that which springs up, is seen, and perishes.

We have seen progress in the meetings of the past and we look for progress again. As we grow, our ideas of Christianity, our conception of God, our understanding of our fellowmen must grow with us. For over fifty years the February Meetings have been helping men and women to a larger life. Perhaps all the good was not done that might have been done, but in that too we are advancing.

THE LIBRARY

Should the college library be open on Sundays for the convenience of students and faculty?

From the goodly number of queries which have attracted our attention concerning this question, it is believed that the general reaction among the students to this proposition would be very favorable, indeed. In other colleges the library is available on Sundays, and the same program might be carried out successfully at Maryville with the right kind of co-operation on the part of the student body.

Under the conditions of a possible plan, the doors of the library might be open from the conclusion of the "Y" meetings until supper-time. It would be understood that no studies would be undertaken, no books for study would be issued from the desk, but rather that this period would be available for purely recreational reading only, A good representation of fiction, magazines, religious reading, and other recreational material would be accessible to everyone. It is confidently believed that many would welcome such an opporutnity here. The plan would be entirely in keeping with Maryville regulations if the students evidenced their appreciation of the opportunity granted by cooperating in the spirit of the plan.

Many of us like to delve into a good book when we have some spare time, and Sunday afternoon is certainly a suitable and proper time for this type of recreation. However, it is clear that this opportunity could not be continued if stuents attemped to study in the library at that time or make it a convenient place for practice in the art of elementary and advanced "moonshining."

This innovation cannot, of course, be instituted at once, but with full assurance that the students would cooperate in the spirit of the plan, the proposition is by no means impossible.

The Highland Echo solicits an expression of your reaction to this subject.

THE OPEN FORUM

Editor, the Highland Echo,
Maryville, Tenn.
Dear Mr. Editor:

In regard to your recent remarks concerning the questionable justification of the student council, there is another angle to the situation which you avoided in your criticism of that body.

The Student Council of Maryville College is through no fault of its own handicapped to a certain degree by its lack of authoritative power. Yet, this body is the sole instrument through which the student body may present its wishes to the faculty of the college. True, its influence is not as strong as we might desire, but, if the council were abolished, what chance would the students have of ever receiving a hearing for their views? The council comprises a unified, representative organization of the student body as a whole, and as such it is the only effective means by which we may petition for desired aims and objects. With this means removed, the students could only express their wishes by mob meetings and freak soap-box demonstrations. Such a situation would be absurd in a college group, to say the least.

If the members of the student council were continually boasting of their so-called influence, we might have just cause for criticism, but the members of our present council are far from that type. They are doing what they can without bragging about it, and that is all that can be asked.

We should retain the council!

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

Miss Griffes:—"Are there any questions about the French exam?"

Maxine Bussy:—"Will we have to know the idiotic expressions?"

Virginia Pearson's theism notes "Mohammed says: 'Hell is a place of wine, women and song'." Virginia would have many wayward bound.

For some reason or another, Morgan Biggs refuses to disclose why he invariably gets dolled up in his best suit for each and every theism test.

Lowell McDonald, having received a truly encouraging (?) score on the psychology music test, wishes to announce to his many feminine admirers and others that he plans to udertake a musical career, specializing in piano, voice, piccolo, harmonica, and other instruments which may become popular with the present generation in time to come. WHERE ARE THE CAMPUS KINGS OF YESTERYEAR?

"The great majority of the campus Kings have what is usually called personality," Henry F. Pringle reveals in the February College Humor. "And they follow, with diligence and no small degree of skill, a program approved by generations of alumni. The important thing about college, they have been told, is success on the campus. It was well enough for a prospective teacher to make Phi Bete, America's standard of culture, but the man who planned some other career must concentrate on more important things. Student success counted in that most dim and forbidding of all places, the outside world. The business manager of a college paper knows how to run an office. He knows, the alumni whisper, 'how to handle men.' The athlete of a varsity team has learned how to fight. Life, it is set forth, is very much like a football game. Adopt this system, many an undergraduate has been advised, and the path to success lies smooth before him.

"Among all the disillusionments which follow commencement day, the saddest is the discovery that the very alumni who have shouted the loudest regarding the value of outside activities are often the least inclined to take care of the men who have, as the saying is, made good on the campus. They share with other business men a coldly practical point of view. To an increasing degree they are beginning to make inquiries regarding the scholastic records of the men they hire. It often dawns on the Campus King too late that the accomplishments which mean so much at school were but parlor tricks after all. Why learn to run an office by being business manager of the paper? He could have found out more by working, in an office for six months.

"It may be excellent practice to boss compets and thereby handle men. But the new graduate discovers that no one asks him to handle men."—College Humor.

HEALTH HINTS

In view of the necessity for cultivating a pleasing personality by paying more attention to hygiene, I have deemed it wise and appropriate to prepare this series of articles on Higiene, or care of the health.

This, the first of these articles, will be on the care of the tonsils. It has now been definitely decided what the intended use for tonsils is. It has taken a group of seventy-three scientists, newspaper-men and butlers, exactly seventeen years, fourteen months and thirty-one days to discover the real reason or cause for their being. Here it is. Tonsils are for the sole and express purpose of providing certain impecunious doctors with a living. These doctors charge exorbitant fees for a tonsilectomy (this merely means the removal of tonsils). Hence, let us circumvent these unscrupulous tonsil snatchers. How? Take care of your tonsils! Read the words of Dr. Rockwell, the great mouth specialist.

"Clean tonsils like clean teeth never decay." Therefore, procure a tonsil brush, one with a rather long handle, and one that will clean the concave as well as the convex side of a tonsil." The tonsil creme best suited to brushing tonsils is Pearson's Tonsil Creme, on sale at all drug stores that carry the brushes.

CHATTANOOGA UNIV. PLAYS HIGHLANDERS TOMORROW NIGHT

M. C. DOWNS KNOXVILLE Y.

Jan. 18—The Maryville College Highlanders again took the measure of the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. quintet, at the Central "Y" in Knoxville tonight. The final score was 36 to 14. The strong Highlander defensive play, which has been outstanding in all games so far this season, was too much for the "Y" five, and they did not score a single point in the first half.

Maryville started fast and forged far ahead of the Knoxville quintet and retained the lead throughout. The score at the half was 18 to 0, in favor of the Highlanders. In the second half the 'Y' quintet finally broke into the scoring column, Hunter and Waters sinking some nice shots. But they were not able to get anywhere near the flying Scotties. Substitutes played the second half for Marville. Captain Waddell and Woodard led the Maryville scorers.

The Highlanders are now in great shape and are ready for their next opponents Chattanooga Y. and Milligan.

The box score:

Maryville (36)		Y.M.C.A. (14)
Davis (4)	f.	Hunter (6)
White (4)	f.	Thompson
Waddell (8)	c.	Scott (2)
Reed (4)	g.	Burdge (2)
Cherry (2)	g.	Snodderly

Substitutes: Maryville— Lewis, Woodard (6), Parks (4), Bowman (2), West (2). Y.M.C.A.—Waters (4), Duncan, Maynard.

Louis Penland—"Well, Kim, what's wrong now?"

Chung Kim—"It's like this: I have no money; I like to wear the best of clothes; I like to make the best marks—And I can't do any if it."

Highlanders Swamp Tenn. Wesleyan Quintet, 39-4

Reed Holds Visitors To One Field Goal.

WHITE HIGH SCORE MAN

Bulldogs Overcome Bears In Preliminary, 19-7.

Maryville, led by the whirling White, proceeded to trounce Tennessee Wesleyan last Thursday night. Although White was the shooting star of the fray, he was not the shining light of Coach Honaker's hardwood artists. Reed and Cherry et al, managed to limit the "Bulldogs" to a single field goal and two foul shots. The final score was 39 to 4.

Not in the history of Maryville College has any team been held to such a low score by a Maryville team. The defense of the Highlanders was superb but not all of the credit was due to Maryville alone, Wesleyan was very much off form in the shooting department, hard luck seems to have been the result of such a meagre amount of points on the visitors' part.

Maryville started shooting soon after the first whistle and kept flinging a barrage of shots at the goal during the remainder of the game.

White, with fifteen points, was the individual performer. He seemed to always be "open" when a shot was needed. Lewis and K. Davis also contributed to the Highlander's offensive. Maryville seems to be improving and should give the remaining teams on their schedule a tough tussle.

In the preliminary game the Maryville "Bulldogs" defeated the Blount County Bears by the score of 19 to 7. This game was rather rough but interesting to the spectators. Pete Park and Pat Roddy were the individual stars.

The score and line-up follows:

VETERAN GUARD STARS

REED

Maryville (39)		Tenn. Wes. (4)
K. Davis (7)	f.	Vestal (capt.)
White (15)	f.	Wright (2)
Waddel (2) (capt.)	c.	Pyle
Reed (2)	g.	Culvahouse
Cherry (1)	g.	Wasson

Substitutions: Maryville— Lewis (8), Bowman, West, Woodard (4). Wesleyan—Holback (1), Mullins (1) Jones, Floyd, Davis.

Maryville Wrestlers Win First Match of Season

Tuslers Show Good Form In Primar Bout.

CHATTANOOGA MEET SOON

Cash Defeats Knoxville's Best In Hard Fight.

Maryville's wrestling team opened its 1930 season with a bang last Wednesday when it met and defeated Knoxville Y.'s hitherto unbeaten team 20-15. The second contest will be on our own mats against Chattanooga Y. under the leadership of Walter Headrick.

The evening opened with the 125 pound class. Buchanan faced Askin and after a hard fight in which he was far the superior, Buchanan got a crotch and half nelson hold and threw Askin for a fall. Time: 2 minutes, 45 seconds.

In the next match, 135 pound class, Lee showed some real wrestling and won by a fall using the body scissors and arm lock. This required 3 minutes, 40 seconds.

Maher, 145 pounds, won from Shaw by a fall. Shaw was not up to his usual standard but still gave Maher a tough fight and was conquered only when Maher got a rider and half nelson on him. Time was 6 minutes, 15 seconds.

Although Coach Watkins has not been on a mat in two weeks he came through in his usual form and won the 155 pound match from Pickel by using a crotch and half nelson grip. At no time during the match did Pickel succeed in getting on top of Watkins.

The most hotly contested was that between Weirs and Cash in the 165 pound class. Weirs is rated one of the best wrestlers in Knoxville and had the advantage for the first few minutes but weakened so that Cash beat him by a fall using an arm lock combination. Time 8 minutes.

The 175 pound class was represented by Farrar and Carr. The match was well fought and, although Carr handled himself very well in this his first match, Farrar won by a fall using scissors and armlock grip. Time 7 minutes, 10 seconds.

The final bout of the evening was in the unlimited class. Kelly, one of Knoxville's best, fought against Overly who was wrestling for the first time. The bout went seven minutes before Kelly won by a fall.

NOTICE

Ambitious track men should start taking individual workouts if they are not already doing so. Captain Taggart suggests that those entering any event should take a few limbering up exercises, possibly, play some hand-ball, and skip rope as that will make an awkward man nimble and will give good endurance. A short cross-country run should be taken twice a-week if the weather is favorable. The runner should wear plenty of clothes so as to afford no chance for exposure. One point that was especially stressed was that all workouts should be started and ended by light exercises. Let's start working and put out a winning track team!

Overly shows all signs of developing into an excellent wrestler after a little more experience.

Our squad will face the best team the Chattanooga Y. can put out on Wednesday, January 29. Some new equipment has been secured and everything is pointing to an interesting evening.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Louie Reed and Ralph Cherry ought to be ashamed of themselves for not allowing the flashy Wesleyan forwards at least a couple baskets last Thursday night.

Any time they want to pull the tricks it is perfectly O. K. with us, though.

The Highlanders chalked up another victory to their already good records when they drubbed the Knoxville "Y" for the second time.

If they keep up at the present pace, we can look for another winner for Maryville. "Waddle" Waddell and Co. are certainly working hard to get results.

Farmer Watkins got back in school last Wednesday afternoon, and without any work-outs for two weeks, hleped his mates win the wrestling contest by throwing his man like a bull pup tosses a rag doll around.

With the warm weather (?) greeting us these mornings, those who wish to go out for track had better start to work out, for Coach Thrower and Captain Taggart will be on the job with real gusto before long.

Shoe Dept. Proffitt's Main Floor

4th Floor Boasts Celebreties

Fourth floor Carnegie is indeed a famous floor. No other hall on the campus can boast of a floor with as many celebrities. Even fourth floor of Bartlett has no more lustrious men.

Kemp Davis, Stiles McMillan, and the newly discovered star, "Yankee" Lewis hold honors on Maryville's Quintet. In the past season's football games the backfield was like a well greased machine when the Benn brothers were holding forth. These men were fourth floor men!

The honors of oratory and debating are undisputable. Forrest Robertson, winner of the T. T. Alexander prize, President of Athenian, and Varsity debater, is a gentleman of Carnegie's lofty floor. Four freshmen from the six chosen for the Freshman Debating Team are rooming in the attic. They are Winn Barr, Homer Ellis, William Marston and Andy Newcomer.

The Highland Echo also knows from where to choose its men. Have they not Forrest Robertson as Staff Editor and Kemp Davis for Assistant Business Manager, with Andy Newcomer as his assistant? Are not four of the freshman apprentices found on the fourth floor—Aubrey Bradshaw, Gordon Benn, "Tut" Barr, and Bill Patterson (unable to return after Christmas)?

Even the Chilhowean has its business in the fourth floor; Kemp Davis again a Manager and "Monk" Felknor the Annual's capable artist.

There is also a man, who represents the freshman class in the Student Council. This renowned fourth floorer is none other than the famous Aubrey Bradshaw.

We all admire Frank Neff's ability to make the old chapel reed organ sound like the organ of St. Paul's Cathedral. The Glee Club is fortunate in having in its midst such lofty men as Topalian, French, and Culver.

And when it comes to amusement the fame of the Felknor brothers as impersonators of The Two Black Crows is known the campus over. Even the "back on the farm" tales of Shorty Robinson are as amusing as the alarm clock purchases of "Herr" Ramsey. Then "Dinty" Moore's diaphragmatic laugh and "Pard'n the iron grip" awakes the hall intermittently. It is whispered that Dinty is also a future Walter Johnson.

As to the disturbance what floor has members who could compete against noisy Meyers (with or without his saxaphone) and boisterous Richardson. Dick Marston, however, rivals these two freshman when it comes to noise and disturbance.

Of course all these owls are studious men but it takes such men as Kingsland, Huskey, and Weaver to set a wise example for the other birds. It also takes the dignity of Cooley Combs and Custer Brashear to add the finishing touches to Carnegie's Famous Floor.

However, these men regard their fame as nothing. All they do is for the advancement and betterment of their chosen Alma Mater! Editor's note: And doubtless the proceeds go to provide better homes for Forsaken Feline Friends.

HOME ECONOMICS

the class was limited to Junior and Senior classes—and though this year, the class must run as a non-credit course, it is hoped the class will be full to capacity. Lectures will be open to all junior and senior men, whether or not they are able to do the laboratory work. Any work under Miss Meiselwitz will be well worth your time.

Tentative course of lectures follows:

I. Food Principles and Uses
II. Calories, and the Control of Food.
III. Malnutrition, and the Vitamines.
IV. Minerals, their Occurrence and Necessity in the Diet.
V. Menu-Building, Selection of Complete Meals.
VI. Hotel Menus, their Manipulation; French Food Terms
VII. Abnormal Diets—Colds, Fevers, Building Up.
VIII. Simple Home Care of the Sick.
IX. Etiquette of Dining.
X. Carving, and Table Duties of the Host.
XI. Forms of Home Entertaining. Host'a Responsibility.
XII. Family Relationships.
XIII. Social Etiquette.
XIV. Standards of Clothing Selection.
XV. Fashions and Fads. Appropriateness of the Garment to the Occasion.
XVI. Topic of Choice by Class

All of which leads us to quote our recent inspirational speaker Dr. Mudge, "Social customs may not seem of much consequence, but try to get along without them."

STUDENT VIEWS THE CAMPUS WITH ALARM

Paths Is Subject of Some Timely Remarks.

By Phil Vogel

Two men. One clean, erect, manly, vigorous, with honest eyes, a strong face, and neat clothes; a gentleman. The other dirty, stooped, lazy, shifty eyes, weak face, and unkempt clothes in rags; a tramp.

Two trees. One tall, majectc, full leafed; a thing of beauty. The other stunted, scrubby, dead branches here and there, uncared for; an eyesore.

Two campuses. . . . But no, let us not compare our Maryville campus with a beautiful campus yet. Perhaps there is a loyal college consciousness of beauty latent in every student that can be awakened to achievement. Perhaps the student council will find here something worthwhile to promote ere the student body itself tardily has to act independently. Neither the writer nor any other student wishes to assert himself when surely among all the student council someone can see a need for concern in our campus, by both students and the administration.

The marks of a man, of a tree, of a campus, depict its character and suggest the spirit behind the marks. Look long at our campus. Is it a campus beautiful, with well defined paths through the grass? Hardly; rather might it seem a campus with patches of grass between the mud. It is true that the college pays student helpers for campus upkeep. Perhaps they are doing all they can with their limited funds and their desire to aid the students. At any rate, fellow students, it is we who have made these raggy paths, these mud patches. Can we not change these campus marks into marks of a noble character?

The student council should first secure the cooperation of everyone on the Hill—the student body in chapel, the president of every club, and the administration, each one to push the plan when made. Second; a careful study of conditions should be made, and a plan formed. Let a competent committee, with the aid of "Brownie" or someone else, draft the campus buildings and paths. Then consider whether new paths are needed, of which I believe at least two should be made, one from Thaw to Science and one from the Postoffice to Anderson Hall. The plan should provide for means to preserve the restored paths. They might be lined in some way to prevent the cinders spreading over the lawn. A little shrubbery could be set out at the corners where paths meet, etc., to prevent forgetful students from walking over shortcuts. The mud spaces should be prepared and sown with grass. Tiny "Please" signs could be placed here and there, that students walk not across the corners and reconstructed spots.

Finally, the plan shold be carried out either by the student helpers, or, perhaps better still would be a meeting of all the men students and a dividing into gangs, each to do a section of the work, as their contribution to the college campus. . . . To do all this it is necessary that the entire student body be aroused to back the project and a student opinion created that shall frown upon anyone who habitually walks over spots spots which heretofore have been made mud by most of us. Maryville Hgihlanders, What Character will our Campus have?

PASSION PLAY IS LURE OF EUROPE

1930 Marks Anniversary of Sixteenth Century Play of Oberammergau.

New York—Europe is always alluring to the American traveler, but there is an added incentive for going abroad in 1930. It is the year of the Passion Play. This stupendous spectacle is presented over a period of five months every tenth year, and Americans are attracted to these performances in increasing numbers each time they are given at Oberammergau.

The Passion Play will be given every Sunday next May and June, and twice weekly the following three months. Attendance at the Passion Play is featured on a number of the tours of the newly formed Catholic Students Travel League in 1930.

Besides its religious significance, the Passion Play serves to interest the tourist because of the hospitality of the villagers to the visitors to Oberammergau. Nearly the entire population of this quaint village, which nestles in the foothills of the Bavarian Alps, participates in the performances, and it is the custom that each spectator be housed by a player the night preceding the performance.

The Passion Play, a dramatization of the life of Christ, has been given every tenth year since the plague of 1633. During that year the citizens of Oberammergau vowed that they would re-enact the live of Christ every tenth year as a thanksgiving offering for having been delivered of the inflictive evil.

The Passion Play portrayals are the epitome of emotional acting. Each plaer puts his very soul into his part.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

If you haven't listened in on some kind of oratory sometime in the past week you surely have not taken much part in the college functions about Maryville. The oratorical activities of the week have made a merry time for those who are espcecially interested in speaking. To me there are few greater pleasures than speaking to an audience.

—:—

I must admit, however, that it is rather disconcerting when the judges all yawn at once.

—:—

Viola Pettit is establishing a record in public speaking that is already to be envied. About the most narrow escape she has had yet was a tie for first place in the T. T. Alexander Contest last year.

—:—

That is accounted for, however, in that it was last season when the judges tried to tie everything.

There is a conference on disarmament here as well as in London. Regular meetings are being held around a large table in Professor Queener's office. The same idea that Stimson's delegation is trying to formulate is being discussed too, except the debaters go a little deeper into the subject and try to find a way for complete disarmament.

—:—

And if the delegates to the London Conference don't agree on a plan any better than the debaters do here it will be a hard plan to understand.

—:—

Mr. Hoover says that three or four months should be considered a short time for the London delegates to come to an agreement.

—:—

Then I think that even we should not be discouraged if we don't agree the first night.

ATHENIAN MIDWINTER

Andrea Strozzi - - Jesse Peirce
Papal Messenger - - - - Ray Dollenmeyer
Followers of Strozzi - Edwin Shelley, Jack Coughlin

Members of the cast have worked faithfully to portray the character which they represent in true dramatic eloquence. It is reported that appropriate music will be furnished between acts. Therefore with such a splendid play and such an unusually talented cast, the Athenian Midwinter will be one of the most successful dramas which has been presented on a Maryville stage.

THETA EPSILON

The members of Theta Epsilon Literary Society are promised a treat on Saturday evening, January 25th, when the old Thetas will entertain us.

Miss Betty Griffes will sing. Mrs. Morton will read. The old students remember her in "Little Old New York" last year and the expression students are only too well acquainted with her ability.

Miss Garnet Mangee, a post-graduate in piano, will play.

An added attraction will be some of Paul Bunyan's stories by Dr. Hunter. Those of us who heard Dr. Hunter last year remember his description of Bunyan.

"GARDEN OF THE SHAH"

any more, it's a deep, dark secret. Do the American's escape the gallows of the Shah? Do they win their fair sweethearts? These questions will be answered on February 3 and while you are watching the answer to those questions unfold upon the stage you will laugh one minute at the antics of Sam and quake with fear, in the next, as the Shah thunders forth his decrees and all the time you will be admiring the wonderful scenes presented.

'Garden Of The Shah' In Chapel Tonight

Talents of Both Glee Clubs in Presentation.

MISS HENRY IS DIRECTOR

Proceeds To Benefit Y.W.C.A. Building Program.

No one can afford to miss "In the Garden of the Shah", a musical attraction which is entirely different from the usual entertainments which are given in Voorhees Chapel. A combination of voices from the boys' and girls' glee clubs give the chorus number strength, melody, and charm. One or two of these choruses resemble very much the opening number of "The Desert Song". The solos and duets are also quite exotic in their effects.

This Persian Operetta will not only be an artistic musical production but it will also delight the eye. Those few fortunate people who were present at dress rehearsal were astounded with the magnificent pictures presented by the beautiful costumes of the chorus and principals. The designing and making of these lovely vari-colored costumes was superintended by Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz of the Home Economics Department.

The libretto is interesting, romantic, and comic. The mighty Persian Shah sends for some American mining engineers to work his gold mine. While he is away, the young Americans arrive and of course, meet his daughter, the Princess, and her friend. Both engineers fall desperately in love with the girls, and all goes well until the Shah returns, bringing with him the Sheik whom he has chosen for the Princess to marry. And then complications set in! The colored body guard of the Americans, Sam, has trouble too, for he has some very humorous and exciting experiences with a Persian lady of color and learn to like dates as well as chicken or 'possum.

'Y' ASSOCIATIONS REJECT CONFERENCE

Cabinets Decide Life Work Conference Unnecessary.

The officers and cabinets of the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. recently met and discussed the feasibility of holding the usual Life Work Conference this year. After a full discussion from all angles, both bodies were practically unanimous in their decision that it would be unwise to continue the Conference, at least until it could be reorganized and changed in various particulars. The reasons may be set forth as follows:

First, it was believed that the two Associations in recent years had been sponsoring such a conference, more because of custom than because of the conviction that it was satisfying a definite need.

Second, it was believed that the so-called Life Work Conference had rarely if ever been actually instrumental in aiding students to chose their profession, notwithstanding the fact that the speakers are usually good ones, and in that sense, beneficial to all.

Third, The cost of both Associations, including the expenses of speakers and leaders, to and from, and while at the college usually amounts to around two-hundred dollars ($200.00)—the largest single item on the budget. It was believed that this money could be more advantageously spent.

The YMCA and YWCA expect to procure from time to time several chapel speakers from among various professions, who will be both interesting and worth-while. Thus, that phase of the conference which was most appreciated will not be lost to the student body.

Asst. Recording Secretary - - John Pectol
Program Secretary - Porter French
Asst. Program Secretary - - Yevante Topalian
Censors - Earl Blazer, William Graham, Glenn Cross
Editor - - J. Stuart James
Sergeant-at-Arms - - Oakie Biggs
Janitor - - - Morgan Biggs

Baker was elected by acclamation of the entire society, the first time this has happened in several months.

Life Work

An Editorial

What shall I do with my life? In years past, this slogan was hurled at those who entered chapel on several mornings early in March. Now it would seem that it doesn't make much difference what we do with our lives. At least we are to have no particular guidance along that line this year, according to information received from the powers that have this phase of activity in hand.

Perhaps it is all for the best; we are not sure. There are relatively few who are not going into the teaching profession, through desire or compulsion, and so it is supposed that they need no special guidance for that sort of work. We do not know. At least, we thought the students' opinion might be asked. Since it was not, we assume that the small percent who are not going to instruct the nation's youth does not warrant the expenditure of the money coming from the entire student body.

We who do not look forward to positions as teachers would be glad to have the money used to better fit the teachers for their work, if such an arrangement were deemed advisable.

EXTEMPT SPEAKERS RIVAL FOR HONORS

'College Athletics' Is Topic For Contest.

Jan. 31—Today, in the hall of the Alpha Sigma Literary Society, several varsity debaters will try out as extemporaneous speakers before the usual three judges: Professors Hunter, Knapp and Davis. The man who is chosen will attend the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention this spring at Wichita, Kansas, as both a debater and an extemporaneous speaker. Moreover, he will possibly represent Maryville College at Knoxville in an East Tennessee contest that is being arranged.

Dick Strain, Robert West, William Graham, J. Stuart James, and William Barnard have met with Mr. Queener several ties in preparing for this try-out. They have not met as a regular class, but they have done this extra work under the course in Argumentation and Debating, English 15.

These five men and any others who might wish to enter the preliminary contest today will speak on the general subject of College Athletics. The first vice--president of the Pi Kappa Delta Society has divided this main subject into its phases and has chosen corresponding topics.

MAID SHOP GETS 13 CHATTANOOGA ORDERS

Mrs. McMurray Visits Mill Owners And Convinces

Thirteen Chattanooga mills have ordered several thousand College Maid uniforms for summer wear as a result of a visit made to Chattanooga by Mrs. McMurray last week. She interviewed fourteen mill superintendents, and thirteen of them gave orders.

Some of these mills had been using the winter uniform made by the College Maid Shop, but, when first approacehd with the suggestion that uniforms of lighter weight would be more appropriate, they declared themselves not interested. Mrs. McMurray had with her several samples of the dainty little print ensembles, and when she displayed them, and told them of the varieties of colors and patterns that they could choose from, the superintnedents began to look interested. Soon they had changed their minds and sending for their respective fore-ladies, bade them take the measurements of the girls employed.

Among the mills who gave orders are: United Hosiery Mills, Nick-a-Jack, Carters, Volunteer Knitting, Richmond, Dixie Mercerizing and the Davenport Silk and Hosiery mills.

STUDENT COUNCIL CONSIDERS SOME CAMPUS PROBLEMS

Chilhowean, Highland Echo, Social Snags Brought Before Council.

At the last meeting of the Student Council on January 24, several questions were discussed that are of special interest to the student body.

The first item of business was the appointment of a new Highland Echo committee. This committee, together with a committee from the faculty and the Highland Echo, selects the members of the Echo staff. The members of the committee are: Dick Strain, Lynn Rankin, and Georga Burk.

Another question discussed was that of permitting the men to come into the women's dormitories instead of waiting outside when they are calling for the young women. A motion was carried to the effect that a committee be appointed to take up the matter with Miss Caldwell. In connection with this, the question of providing maids will be taken up, so that the boys may be sure that there will be someone to meet them and present their cards to the young women. The committee appointed consists of Isabel Cannon and Arthur Shaw.

The third question discussed and settled was that of paying for the Chilhowean when paying semester bills. Under this arrangement the fee for the Chilhowean would be paid to the treasurer when the second semester bills are paid. The main advantage of this arrangement would be to make the income of the Chilhowean more or less stable. It was decided that in order to settle this matter fairly, it should be brought before the student body. The committee appointed to handle this matter is made up of Mary Elizabeth Deadrick, Carol Cushman, and W. T. Whitman.

EIGHT MARYVILLIANS AT PRINCETON SEEN

Maryville Representation Is Second to Wooster.

Maryville College has eight graduates at Princeton Theological Seminary this year. They are Walter Courtenay, Ingram Fell, Albert Tull, Merlin Usner, Robert Wood, Wilbur Franklin, John Wriggins, and Harold Gordon Harold. This is the second largest enrollment from any one college, Wooster being first with ten men.

At this seminary, an institution of the Presbyterian church, practically all the leading colleges in the country are represented. Among them are Princeton, Columbia, Harvard, Lafayette, Lincoln, Wooster, Washington and Jefferson, Maryville, Pittsburgh, and Wheaton. Seventeen foreign countries, with a total of thirty-seven students, are represented at Princeton this year.

DEBATE

The varsity debaters are working hard preparing for their coming schedule of debates. Each night from 6:30 to 7:30 they confer in Anderson Hall, bring reports on their individual work and exchange ideas. Next week they are to be divided into their respective teams, and then work will begin in earnest.

Fifty-Fourth Series of Meetings Opens Tuesday Dr. R. E. Vale Is Leader

DR. R. E. VALE

The February Meetings will be conducted by this able Presbyterian leader from Chicago.

Famous February Meetings Offer Inspirational Guidance To Students.

REV. STRINGHAM RETURNS

Song Service Is Made Valuable Part of Religious Program.

Tomorrow morning in Voorhees Chapel at 9:45 the fifty-fourth series of February Meetings will begin. They will last until Friday, February 14.

To old students the February Meetings mean much, spiritually, in the way of past experiences and anticipation of experiences to come. New students have heard of the February Meetings off and on but they have yet to realize their real value by receiving benefit from them, first hand.

The messages will be brought to us this year by Dr. R. E. Vale of Oak Park, Chicago. Dr. Vale left Chicago this morning in order to arrive in time to speak to us tomorrow morning. He comes to us with a wealth of experience behind him and a deep personal interest in Maryville College. During his pastorate at the Second Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, Dr. Vale spoke to Maryville audiences several times. However, this will be the first time he has conducted the February Meetings.

This year, as for several years past, Rev. Sidney E. Stringham will be present to lead us in song at each service. His genial spirit fills everyone with enthusiasm. Indeed, some of us enjoy the singing almost as much as the messages which form the main part of the February Meetings.

The fact that Dr. Vale is not known to most of the students increases our anticipation of the coming meetings.

McMURRAY'S HOST TO SENIOR CLASS

Saint Valentine Feted At January Party.

The January party of the Class of '30 was held Friday night at the home of Prof. J. H. McMurray, and a large number of notables were in attendance. Indeed the affair was one of the "400" kind and, in accordance with this standard, the ladies were attired in evening dresses while the men wore dark suits.

At the door the guests were met by a butler (there is a sneaking suspicion that it was Stuart Butten), and they were then conducted to the wrap rooms by French maids. Upon entering the drawing room they were announced by the butler, and were then subjected to the ordeal of a receiving line. However the burden was lightened, on this occasion, by introductions to such famous personages as Paderewski, Fritz Heifitz, Cornelius Vanberbilt and Will Rogers. There was a short social period and also a short program during which Dr. Ira Morrison conducted a spiritual seance and Jeanette Moore, as Eleanor Glynn, told how she wrote her novels.

The Valentine theme was carried on throughout, even to little hearts of sugar with which the coffee was sweetened. Refreshments consisted of coffee, salad, olives, hot buttered rolls and strawberry sundaes.

EAST IS WEST

Jane Duke, Robert Crothers, Russell Gilmore, and George Osborne are to carry the leading parts in the Bainonian Mid-Winter "East is West", which is to be given Monday, February 24, 1930. This cast is presenting some new actors and we expect much from all of them.

The prologue of the play is laid in China on the Yangtse River. The other scenes take place in Oriental San Francisco. The plot of the story concerns east meeting west.

PROMINENT MEN URGE STUDENTS BUY BOOKS

Value of Textbooks Rises As Years Pass.

Do college students sell their textbooks? This is a timely question concerning an unfortunate custom which seizes many undergraduates in January and June. Thomas Arkle Clark, Dean of Men of the University of Illinois, gives two reasons for these seasonal outbreaks, first, the student's indifference or lack of interest in his work, and second, his need to get out of a financial difficulty. Dean Clark's further statements that "a college student is always broke" and "anything that will immediately add to his bank account seems to him justifiable" will not be challenged.

But immediate cash is not always forthcoming from the sale of textbocks, and the sums obtained are negligible in comparison with the value of the books. The rush to dispose of textbooks at less than their real value is swelled by the thought that now, examinations being over, those old books will never be needed again! Perhaps they'll not be needed for classroom work; but how often graduates moan that they wish they had kept their textbooks, to brush up on a language, to find a certain formula, to locate that line of poetry! The reasons for missing books hastily disposed of are many, but the regret is recurrent that the books are gone, with all the precious notes that added value to them, at least in sentiment.

Again, where will you ever get accepted authorities so economically? The truth is that once you have sold a textbook, you will never replace it, you will even tramp to a library for the required information. Which is not quite as clever as

Where Are the Good Old College Days?

(The following conversation took place on the interurban train to New York City)

Time: Any day 8:00 a. m.

Place: Between Bronxville and the City.

Sub (entering car at Bronxville and taking seat side of Urban, who has been reading newspaper): Nice morning.

Urban (looking up): Yeh, fine day for the football game.

Sub: Who's playing?

Urban: New York's playing the Army. Good game, I guess.

Sub: Yeh, but football isn't what it used to be. They are commercializing it too much. They don't let the boys play the game, anyhow, it's just a battle of coaches.

Urban: That's right, it sure does knock the spirit out of the thing. Used to be the fellows fought for the ole Alma Mater, but now it's just a chance to get some easy dough.

Sub: Sure, and that's not all. The way these students act at a game nowadays is a crime. No regard for the other fellow at all. Why just the other day I read where a couple of people got killed in a rush at one of the stadiums. It isn't safe.

Urban: I wouldn't mind taking a chance on that, but what I don't understand is why the faculty at the schools can't have sense enough to do something about it all. Why it's not safe to send your children to college any more. They don't teach them anything besides. I could stand them raising Cain once in a while if they would do some work with it, but they aren't good for anything except tea hounds and lounge lizzards when they get through.

Sub: I agree with you. College is not what it used to be all right. It used to mean something to be a college graduate, but no more.

Urban: Well, here's where I get off. Going to the game this afternoon?

Sub: No, guess not, are you?

Urban: No. By the way, where did you graduate?

Sub: Didn't go to college.

Uurban: Neither did I. Well, so long.

A Little Light

It has been called to our attention that the people responsible for turning on and off lights in the girls' halls have been falling down on the job. Perhaps they forget that it gets dark rather early these nights, and especially early when the weather is threatening.

The surest way to ruin good eyes is to have to study by poor light. There can be no great point in not turning on the lights a few minutes before the students' eyes reach the straining point.

The same thing may be said in regard to the lights in the mornings, when old man Sol has not yet put in his appearance, but the rising bell has roused us from our slumbers, and with a heavy day before us we must wait until Nature supplies us with illumination.

An investigation committee might be appointed to find out who is responsible.

Busy Lines

Since we have been through the registration and treasurer's lines to get ourselves dubbed college students for the second semester, it occurs to us that we may say a few words on the subject. This being the last time the editorial we shall have that privilege, we do not hesitate to offer our suggestion.

Nothing short of a bread line in a strike area can equal the length of the line or the tax on human endurance due to the slow moving line we must pass through to become bona fide students.

Even more exasperating than the long, snail-pace, unsystematic string of weary students, is the student, who with all the nonchalance of a member of the royalty, pushes his ,or in most instances, her) way into the line ahead of those who have been waiting an hour or more. We had the misfortune to see several brazen examples of such conduct, and we know exactly how it feels. Students with such an attitude have no more right to our respect than those who cheat in other ways, and until they change this attitude, they are a menace to society.

We should like to suggest remedies for these two evils that bring unnecessary weariness to all concerned. First, we feel certain that if a systematic arrangement could be made whereby students register by classes and alphabetically, with certain groups of names at specified hours, it would facilitate matters for students and registrar. A similar program fo the treasurer's work might also be arranged. Of the two, of course, the treasurer's line is most in need of revision. It may be that more help is needed, but whatever it is, we are sure that all will appreciate any shortening of the hours one must stand in line at this season of the year.

Second, it might be a good idea for each one to make himself personally responsible for keeping the embro-roadhogs, from userping the place of those who are waiting. It is not necessary to submit to this kind of imposition, so why tolerate it?

It may be impossible for the registrar and treasurer to arrange things differently, but we feel an effort should be made. At least we hope the college is not impervious to suggestion.

THE OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of the Highland Echo:

To one who sat as a listener to the Athenian Mid-Winter last Monday evening there comes to his mind a point in conduct which he wishes to bring before the student body of Maryville College in an open-minded frankness of manner and style. It is this: those who may have been privileged to listen to "The Cardinal" will remember that at the most climatic moment of the drama laughter broke the smoothness of the plot and the desired effect on the audience. The cast more than accomplished their part, but the audience spoiled the effect. This laughter does not only show the lack of culture on the part of the individuals but also it is a reflection on the college. Surely the students of Maryville College are more appreciative of good drama. Surely the students of College Hill can revert their minds from the seeing of the everyday characteristics of the players, to the seeing of the moods and characteristics the players are portraying! If the students cannot be in sympathy then they should not attend: or, at least, they should repress the showing of their ignorances and incapabilities.

May the writer also add that this is not the first time this behavior has been noticed but that it has in the past soiled other entertainments given by college students.

Sincerely yours,
A loyal supporter of Marville College.

(Editor's note: This is evidently not a student, and comes as a timely suggestion).

Editor The Highland Echo:

In two successive issues I have noticed the abbreviation for the degree of Doctor of Laws, written L.L.D. May I call attention to the fact that the period between the L's should be omitted? The correct form is LL. D.

These may have been only typographical errors; but, in any event, anthing that goes out from Maryville to other colleges and homes ought to have careful attention.

SIX PERSONAL HABITS THAT LEAD TO SUCCESS

The six personal habits that lead to success in the world of business and life in general are: character, health, power, sociability, intellect and punctuality. These six habits were stated by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, President of the Washington and Lee University.

To quote Dr. Smith:

"To develop character be always reliable, dependable, sincere, and truthful. In every business transaction and obligation be honest and honorable; in all judgments of other people, whether friends or opponents, impartially fair; and in your habits and conduct and social relationships rigidly moral and self control.

To be ignorant of how to feed and care for your body is as foolish as trying to drive a car without first knowing something about the necessary parts of it. You are the only driver and caretaker for seven days in the week all of your long life. To have your human machine brimful of health and buoyancy and tireless energy will smooth every road to success.

The third faculty is power, the driving force of the human machine. Whether working, fighting, playing, encouraging, leading, or engaging in competitive games, you should always be persistently energetic.

Sociability, the fourth element requires the habit of being friendly, unselfish, generous, public spirited, and cooperative.

This is the age of brains, of applied science, of the educated, highly-trained expert. Every road to leadership is barred to the stupid, the ignorant,the untrained, to the shallow imitator of the people, to traditionalist unable to break away from the feathers of the past.

And the last is the time element. In all engagements be prompt, whether trivial or important be on time. In this time of economic change time-economy is the straight road to efficiency and success. Laziness, tardiness, slowness of action, hesitation— time waste of every name and variety—will block your road to success and leadership.

—"The Brackety-Ack".

Jesse and Frank intend to stand by the side of the road and wait for some kind-hearted driver to give them a ride in his limousine. This mode of travel would be termed hitch-hiking when referring to any but our esteemed associates. When the two youthful delegates arrive in Delaware they will hire a taxi and ride in glory to the door of their destination— thus making the proper favorable impression for Maryville.

Most all the members of Theta Alpha Phi are pleased with the choice of these two members as delegates, that is, all except Bill Graham who for various and sundry reasons cannot make the trip. Poor Bill,—we offer our sympathies, we've been in that state of affairs too!

HONAKER'S FIVE DEFEAT STRONG CARSON-NEWMAN QUINTET 31-21

M. C. Basketeers Win Two, Lose Two on First Trip

Highlanders Down High Point 25-24. Lose to Davidson.

DAVIS, WADDELL STAR

Lenoir-Rhyne Leads M. C. In Hard Battle.

Maryville College, after losing to Chattanooga and winning over Milligan two weeks ago, invaded North Carolina territory and won two games and lost two.

Maryville lost to Lenoir-Rhyne College Monday night at Hickory, North Carolina by the score of 26 to 17. In this game Maryville failed to get started together but Captain Waddell, Maryville center was the star of the game.

Waddell scored 10 of Maryville's 17 points besides playing a brilliant defensive game. For the winners Ritchie played the best game The line-up follows:

Maryville (17)		Lenoir-Rhyne (26)
White (4)	f.	Lewis
Davis (2)	f.	Kiser (5)
Waddell (10)	c.	Ritchie (5)
Cherry	g.	Cloniger
Reed	g.	Lemon (2)

Subs: Maryville, Woodard, (1); Lewis. Lenoir-Rhyne, Miller (3); Little, Lentz (5); Winicoff, Hines (3).

Maryville won the most exciting game played on the trip by defeating High Point 25 to 24. The whole Maryville team played well in this game. The guarding of Reed and Cherry was above par and White, Davis and Waddell carried Maryville's offensive to the front.

For the local team Hastings center, was the offensive star with 10 points to his credit. The line-up follows:

Maryville (25)		High Point (24)
Davis (19)	f.	Ludwig (3)
White (2)	f.	Cory (3)
Waddell (5)	c.	Hastings (10)
Reed (1)	g.	Litman (1)
Cherry (4)	g.	Mulligan (1)

Subs: Maryville, Woodard (3); High Point, Yacome (3); Walters (1).

Maryville was unable to get going Wednesday night and dropped a good game to Davidson College by the score of 33 to 20. Maryville was cmpletely outclassed but put up a good fight in the first half and at the rest period were leading 14 to 7. Soon after the start of the second half Pritchett, clever forward sunk four straight baskets and Maryville was unable to stem the attack of the Davidson basketeers. Davis with 10 points was Maryville's outstanding luminary. The line-up follows:

Maryville (20)		Davidson (33)
Davis (10)	f.	Johnston (4)
White (1)	f.	Moore
Waddell (3)	c.	Rusk (10)
Reed	g.	Procter (2)
Cherry	g.	Goodson (8)

Subs: Maryville, Lewis, Woodard (6). Davidson, Martin, Gilbert, Pritchett (8).

M. C. TUSTLERS LOSE

Maryville's wrestlers met their first defeat at the hands of Chattanooga Y. in the gym Thursday night to the tune of 20 to 18. On February 14th the team will face Knoxville Y. in the gym and on the 22nd. will go to Chattanooga for a return match.

A good crowd turned out to see the matches which went as follows: Peacock was defeated in the 125 pound class by one of the best wrestlers Chattanooga can boast. Lee was evidently not in his usual form and lost the 135 pound match to Walters in 7 1-2 minutes. The 145 pound match went to Selcer of Chattanooga after 5 minutes of tough fighting with Hatcher who was appearing for the first time. Kinsley won the 155 pound tustle and earned his letter by defeating Ycanya who is from the Panama Canal zone. On account of shoulder injuries, Shaw and Carr were unable to wrestle, consequently, Coach Watkins had to go out of his class and wrestle a heavier man. This match was rated as 165 pounds and was between Watkins 155 pounds and Headrick 174 pounds who is Chattanooga's coach. Watkins lasted 9 minutes but was finally thrown. Cash won the 175 pound match for Maryville by throwing Wright after 6 minutes of hard fighting. Overly came through and won the unlimited match by getting a time advantage of five minutes over Wallace.

The scoring in wrestling is as follows: a fall is made when one man's shoulders are pinned squarely to the mat and counts 5 points, time advantage is gotten by the man who stays on top the most during the ten minutes of the bout and counts 3 points.

TRACK TRYOUTS SOON

First call for track candidates will be about the middle of February according to Coach Bob Thrower. There are only three lettermen returning from last year's team.

The letter men returning are: Captain Taggart, and Abshear dash men, and Carper, in the shot put and discus events. Other members of the squad returning are: Leach, Young, MacDonald and Bratschie.

Some good prospects will likely be forthcoming from the Freshman candidates. Among them are: Bowman, in the javelin throw, Richardson, dashman, and Felknor, in the hurdles and pole vault. Felknor won the high hurdles and pole vault in inter-scholastic competition at the Georgia Tech Relays last year.

Two meets have been scheduled so far, one with Tennessee, in Knoxville, April 5, and one with Chattanooga University, here in April. Maryville will also take part in the Smoky Mountain Conference meet.

POINT SYSTEM

The women's point system of the athletic department is of interest to every woman, not only for the sport afforded but also for the letter award. Each sport participated in gives a certain number of points. This is one of the main reasons that women's athletics are always of the highest quality here on the Hill. Miss Weller would like to have all hiking reports and health charts handed in immediately so that semester count may be made.

CO-ED BASKETBALL

One more week of practice in basketball for the women. This means that the teams must be chosen this week. Practices have been very good this year, showing some excellent material and earnest endeavor. It will be no small matter for Miss Weller and the coaching squad to pick a team of six regulars and four subs. The game schedule will be announced later.

BASKETBALL

In the final game on the North Carolina road trip Maryville managed to win from Catawba to the tune of 27 to 17. Waddell and White for Maryville were the stars.

The line-up follows:

Maryville (27)		Catawba (17)
White (11)	f.	Linn (2)
Davis (2)	f.	Peeler (12)
Waddell (19)	c.	Wiegel
Reed (1)	g.	Robinson (1)
Cherry	g.	Finch (1)

Subs: Maryville, Woodard; Lewis (3. Catawba, Earnheart, Goodman (1).

Maryville journeyed to Jefferson City Saturday night and fought with their ancient rivals, Carson-Newman and succeeded in trimming them by a score of 31 to 21. White and Davis shared the limelight and the whole Maryville team deserved credit for a good defensive game. Horton and Smith were the best bets for Carson-Newman. The line-up follows:

M.C. (31)		C.-N. (21)
White (6)	f.	Ward (2)
Davis (11)	f.	Fergerson (3)
Waddell (7)	c.	Horton (4)
Reed	g.	Smith (9)
Cherry	g.	Sewell

Subs: Maryville, Woodard (4); Lewis (2); Park. Carson-Newman, Cmobs (2); Courtenay (1); Knisley, Carmicheal.

Ministerial Association

The Ministerial Association held its weekly meeting in Athenian Hall on the evening of January 22, 1930.

In the coming meeting Winn Barr, Comer Fowler and George Thompson will each give us a talk on "Coming to Christ" and "Enlistment in His Service."

Let us all come and hear these talks as they will be of real spiritual vaue.

Trials Will Be Held After February Meetings

Dr. McMurray Sponsors Sigma Delta Psi in Local Chapter

MORALITY URGED

Maryville Athletes Get In Shape For Tests.

Date of the qualifying trials for membership in the National honorary athletic fraternity, Sigma Delta Psi, will probably be held immediately after the February Meetings, according to Dr. McMurray, who is sponsoring the establishment of the local chapter.

Maryville College is very fortunate in obtaining a charter authorizing the establishment of a chapter of the Sigma Delta Psi. It not only gives Maryville men a chance to prove their worth in various sports, but also gives them an opportunity for membership in the society which is of national repute.

Sigma Delta Psi was organized at Indiana University in 1912, by Dr. George Fitch. In recent years the society has grown remarkably, and now has 43 chapters in 19 states. The object of the society as stated in the constitution is, "to encourage the moral, physical and mental development and training among college students."

John Sundyall, national president of the fraternity, especially urges that the chapters encourage moral and mental development as well as physical. Regarding the tests the President says, "the standards in each of the tests are not world records, they are in reasonable reach of a strong, well trained youth. But because the tests vary so widely, there is probably not a man in the world who can meet all of them without several years training, and when by several years training one has met the twenty diverse tests, he must be a man of splendid all-round physical development.

A National meeting of the society was recently held in Chicago, and there is a possibility that a southern meeting will be held on April 5th in conjunction with the southern relays at Atlanta.

Improvements and Other 'Ments' for Campus

By Julia Terry

An improvement, according to Webster, a man of many words, is a betterment, a development, an enrichment, and numerous other "ments". A brief discussion of some appropriate ments for the campus might be made at this time, so that they can be considered at the February meeting of the Discipline Committee, the Student Council, the Chilhowean Staff and the Red Head Club, for approval or disapproval.

One of the most needed improvements on the campus is a leap frog arena for the playful men of the student body who indulge in this active sport in front of Pearsons after the noon meal,—or piecemeal whichever it may be. A great many improvements could be made in the methods of locomotion and transportation on the Hill. Traffic lights at the intersection of Pearson Promenade and Thaw Thoroughfare would be advantageous especially for the female members of this institution who dash madly to and from the gym. Velocipedes would be valuable for students having classes alternating between Thaw and Anderson. Lanes might also be marked off designating avenues of speed so that there would not be so much danger of students of small dimensions being run over by their superiors in size.

The library, although it has attained some degree of perfection, shows a lack in a few major details of its excellence. Cretonne curtains over the windows would lend a homey atmosphere and thus give impetus to more colorful conversations of the inmates. A system of ropes and pulleys with little wire baskets attached, would aid the moonshiners in exchanging notes between seven and nine-thirty in the evenings.

Another aid for the benefit of the moonshiners would be a gift of a speedometer to each couple so that the Sunday speed limit could be observed.

There are also two or three improvements that should be made in the various classrooms, for the benefit of the instructors as well as the students. A cuckoo clock in each classroom would be an hourly reminder of the sad condition in which most of us are completely submerged. Inscriptions on the walls, floor, and ceiling would be conducive to at least some kind of recitation from the unprepared victim, and thus prevent embarrassment on the part of the professor for taking unfair advantages of his fellowmen. More Greek courses should be offered since so many subjects are "all Greek" to the innocent ignoramous.

There are some needed improvements in, about, and on the dormitories A campus crier to supplant the old town crier would enable the girls to remember when the seven o'clock curfew had tolled the knell of the parting day. Roof gardens on top of the dormtories would add a finishing touch as well as a bit of color to the buildings; with perhaps, an airdome on Carnegie on which wayward birds could perch. The color suggestion of red might be practicable for the radiators during the winter season; at least, the heating apparatus would appear warm. Safety deposit boxes for the safe keeping of chewing gum during meals would be a desirable improvement in the dining roo, and could be appended to the chairs in some practical manner. Another improvement to Pearsons would be the standing of a cow in that vicinity for the purpose of lending atmosphere to Miss Molly's cowbell.

These by no means complete the list of ments but such a list must be taken in small doses at a time. Perhaps, the cementing between Pearsons and the Book Room will be the first concrete detail to be completed.

ATHENIAN MIDWINTER GRIPS MARYVILLIANS

"The Cardinal" Highly Dramatic Stage Setting Lauded.

That "The Cardinal", which was presented in Voorhees Chapel by Athenian Literary Society last Monday night, was a dramatic production well deserving of the praise which it has received cannot be denied. The cast was unusually large and portrayed the characters with much skill. Forrest Robertson, who had the principal lead as the Cardinal, was especially good. In several of the scenes in which the Cardinal was alone or with Filiberta or Guiliano it seems that he did his best acting.

However, the crowd or group scenes of the play were not so good as they could have been. They were rather stiff and unnatural—and perhaps the only scenes which lacked the magnificance and spirit of the House de' Medici.

Those who had charge of the setting are to be congratulated upon the marvelous effect which they created from old boards and wall paper. This setting combined with the elaborate costumes and excellent characters portrayed, made "The Cardinal" a most successful drama.

GARDEN OF THE SHAH

Mary Elizabeth Deaderick, to paint the scenery which is beautiful and effective.

Miss Frances Henry has been in complete charge of the operetta and has worked early and late evolving new effects for the production and so has the cast which is as follows:

Zohdah, the princess - - - Norma Spilatore
Lohlah, her friend - Jane Duke
Ted - - - - Bill Hannah
Billy - - - Yervant Topalian
Nowohbeh, nurse - Lallie Miller
Sam, colored servant - Edwin Shelly
The Shah - - Stanley McCool
The Sheik - - Donald Briggs

The chorus is composed of both the men's and women's glee clubs.

The operetta will begin promptly at 8 o'clock, and no doubt the chapel will be filled. So come early if you want to see the Garden of Shah.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

The days of preliminary oratory are just about over at Maryville, and now we get to some real study and preparation for the coming intercollegiate contests. There is always an unseasoned enthusiasm about the preliminaries that does not continue. We set forth our best thoughts for the time being in tryouts, but after we have studied deeper into the proposition we look back on our early ideas as only preliminary views.

—:—

Without pointing out where the theory breaks down, this change of view, as we study deeper into the question, supports strongly Mr. Graham's plan of educating the people for peace.

—:—

Bob West, our only sophomore member of the men's team, points out the fact that the world's attitude toward armaments would surely be changed if it were compulsory that all college students write a two thousand word composition on the subject.

—:—

Well, that also, is looking at it from an educational point of view, but I rather imagine that, if it were compulsory for all college students to write a two thousand word treatise on anytihng, there would be at least a rebellion if not a revolution.

—:—

Of course, I have no doubt that Miss Pettit would limit everything—even a four square figure—to three possible viewpoints; one of these would be impracticable; a second would be a physical impossibility; and it would take twenty years to find the third.

—:—

This week the only tryouts, and the only attempt toward oratory among the students, are the tryouts for Extemporaneous speaking. This is becoming a more popular phase of forensic exercise every year. This year some of our most interesting speakers are in the contest.

—:—

Our college orator, Forrest I. Robertson, has announced that he will not enter the French Oratorical contest in the Athenian Literary Society this year.

—:—

Mr. Robertson, who won this contest last year, and is now President of the Society, says he hopes to have this contest during his administration of office if possible.

WHAT TO DO WITH TEXTBOOKS

keeping the books in the first place, and gradually acquiring a personal reference library that may save much time and money for you in the future.

It is a recognized fact that textbooks on technical or professional subjects constitute the basis of a professional library. In many cases these professional books are very expensive, and to resell them at the popular rates would not auger well for a technical career. In general, textbooks formats are becoming more attractive yearly, and do not detract in the least from the charm of well filled bookcases.

Who would have a library composed only of novels? A choice as limited as that would indicate an uninteresting owner; even a calculus textbook on your bookshelves would catch the eye and hint of a many sided character!

These are points in passing, for consensus of opinion suggests that you keep your textbooks for sentimental reasons. President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton University, suggests "Every undergraduate leaving college should take his textbooks with him as a reminder and record of a past chapter in his life and as a nucleus of a library." Perhaps it isn't fashionable to be sentimental. Yet books have become a recognized budget item; and now in many colleges is heard the cry of "Keep Your Textbooks."

There is no library or reference book as handy as the worn and scribbled textbook, which has been your companion, on and off campus. Can you think of anything which would be as graphic a commentary on our college life as the notes and names you have jotted on the margins and covers of these books? To what other books have you granted such intimacy of thought? Provost Josiah H. Penniman, of the University of Pennsylvania, follows this thought with his remark, "I know of no book that can be more properly valued as an 'association book' than the textbook which represents many hours of work and brings to mind some teacher of the past."

CARE OF THE EARS

(Care of the feet will come next week.)

There are three parts of the ear, known as the Middle, Inner, and Outer ears. Disease may strike any or all of these parts but the most common place for disease to strike is between the outer and inner ears.

There are many diseases of the ear but the most common is what is vulgarly known as "Dirtyear". This is caused by an accumulation of dust, sand, dirt, etc. gathering in the ear to such an extent that the hearing is impaired. This condition may often be cured by a local application of a mop and shovel.

Beside Dirtyear another disease that often attacks the ear is that condition known as "Hearing Things". This often comes on one when he is in the company of Sportsmen, Fishermen, Golfers, and the like. When in this condition the patient is often unable to "believe his ears". This malady is not always fatal and may be cured sometimes by the patient going in company with people other than sport-lovers. Quite often the illness has a dire result and the patient acquires the germ and goes around making other people unable to believe their ears.

There is also a deformation of the ear known as "Tube ear". When a person is born with this affliction he can never be cured. In the case of Tube ears the patient has a tube causing everything that is said to him to go in one ear and out the other. People in this condition should be treated kindly by their professors and not held responsible for any thing that is told them. The writer is one of these unfortunate people.

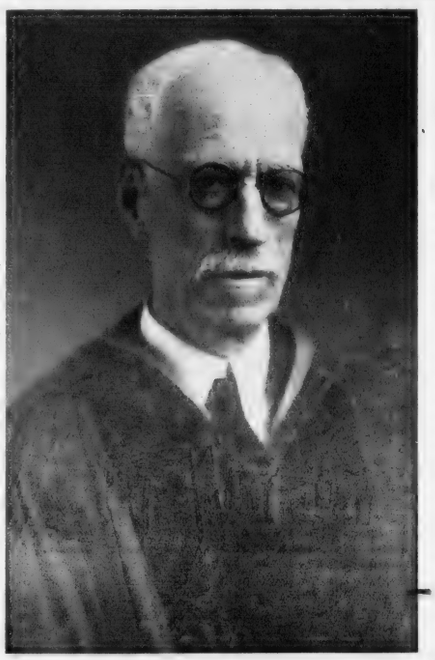
DR. VALE ROUSING STUDENTS IN SERIES OF SERMONS

President Of College Is 72 Years Old On February 17th

ROUNDS OUT 30 YEARS SERVICE AS PRESIDENT

Praise of Dr. Wilson Echoed Throughout The World.

EMINENT PRESBYTERIAN



Has Seen Service on Mission Fields At Home and Abroad.

On February seventeenth, Dr. Samuel T. Wilson will celebrate his sevnty-second birthday. He has been connected with the college faculty since 1884, when he came here as Professor of English and Spanish, six years after he had graduated from this institution.

Dr. Wilson was born in Homs, Syria, n 1858, received his college education at Maryville, his theological training at Lane Seminary, and his Master's degree here.

He has been president of Maryville since 1901, and since his inauguration the college has seen its most phenohenal growth. For thirty years Dr. Wilson has been putting everything he has into the building of this college, and today, it stands as a fitting monument to his unselfish work.

His influence has not been confined to the college, however. He is one of the outstanding men in the Presbyterian church today, being a member of the excutive committee of the General Council. Before ill health made him leave the field, Dr. Wilson was in Mexico under the Foreign Mission Board. His influence has gone out into every corner of the globe, and it is with a sense of deep appreciation of his efforts that the student body of Maryville College sees another milestone approaching on Dr. Wilson's path.

President Samuel Tyndale Wilson

MARY CLOPTON'S WORK

Riding eighteen miles on a mail hack in order to attend the annual State Farm and Home Convention was the experience of two interested mountain women in Leslie county, Kentucky, where Mary Clopton is busy in county deonstration work. Mary graduated last year, and has since been engaged in this mountain work. She rides horseback much of the time, but is forced to walk when the roads become trails. There are no railroads in the county where Mary works, and other hardships face those who are helping these people to a better living.

THETA ALPHA PHI PLAY CONTEST ON College Authors Invited To Try Writing Play.

Theta Alphi Phi announces the rules for its first play-writing contest, which it hopes will become an annual event. Any student in any college or university having a chapter of Theta Alpha Phi may enter plays, as many as he wishes. The plays must be original, one-act, one scene, American in background; must run at least twenty minutes and not more than an hour when staged; and must be written since January 1, 1929.

The states of the Union will be divided into five regions, eastern, northern, central, northwestern, and southwestern. For the prize-winning play in each region a prize of fifty dollars will be awarded.

At the Theta Alpha Phi convention to be held in December of 1930 the prize-winners will be announced. Samuel French Company will publish them in one volume.

'GARDEN OF SHAH' MAKES BIG HIT

Comic Opera Plays To Large Crowd With Credit.

In every group there are always some people who are skeptical about new things, and Monday evening was no exception. But even these people must have been agreeably surprised and pleased with the excellent work of the two glee clubs in producing 'The Garden of The Shah."

The scenery and the costumes merit a great deal of praise. The atmosphere was Oriental to the nth degree. The choice of characters was a very happy one. The chorusses were exceptionally well chosen, and their somewhat splotchy makeup was more than made up for by their excellent singing. The feminine leads were much better than the male leads—we have a sneaking suspicion that one day Norma Spilatore will be a great prima donna. Stanley McCool as the stern Shah, and Don Briggs as the unfortunate Sheik gave excellent interpretations on their roles, while the comedy furnished by Edwin Shelly and Lallie Miller as Sam and Nowchher was side-splitting.

WRITERS' WORKSHOP COLLECTS BALLADS OF SOUTHERN MTS.

Committee of Pen-Pushers To Hunt Ballads, Folk Songs, And Minstrels.

The ballad committee of the Writer's Work Shop is now making definite progress in securing ballads folk songs and minstrels. Not only does it concern itself with hunting out these songs, ascertaining their source, and (if possible) how and by whom they came to be written, but but its members make a special effort to learn those students who are natives of the sections of the country where the ballads are still sung.

Monday afternoon Miss Alice Clemens, chairman of the committee entertained in her home six students each of whom could contribute a ballad, or who could sing those among the already larger collection in the possession of the Writer's Work Shop. The guests sang such songs as "Hand Me Down My Walking Cane", "Barbara Allen", "The New River Train", and "On Top of Old Smoky". It would seem a modern example of

"Little Tommy Tucker Sang for his supper"

because the hostesses had prepared delicious hot chocolate and doughnuts. Miss Clemens, seems optimistic about the interest displayed in the revival of the ballads. Those present at her home were: Louise Marley, Willie Nelle Harod, A. Bradshaw, Edgar Shepard, Jane Morrow and Hessie Keeton, the last two named being the other two members of the committee.

VARSITY DEBATERS POINT FOR OPENER

First Debate For Women Feb. 21; Men Begin Feb. 27.

The varsity debate teams have completed their group conference discussions around the conference table in which all men and all women have been taking part, and now are preparing individual cases for the specific teams. Only a short while is left for this most important work. Every argument that any debater dared rest his case on has been laid before the group and examined, and its weakness exposed. These confernces have been very instrumental in acquainting the debaters thoroughly with the subject.

For all debates Maryville will use the Pi Kappa Delta question, resolved, That the Nations shoud adopt a plan of complete disarmament excepting such forces as are needed for police purposes. The first debate for women is February 21, and the first for men is February 27.

NEXT LYCEUM FEB. 27

The next lyceum number, the fourth this season, will be heard in the chapel on February twenty-seventh. The program will be presented by the Musical Arts Quarettette, which is composed of Marie Roesmalt Rosanoff, Louis Kaufman, Sacha Jacobsen, and Paul Bernard. Their instruments include the 'cello violin, and baso violin. This is the most expensive number of the season, and it should be a real treat for music lovers.

The last program of the season, to be heard in March or April, will be the justly-heralded Holland Bell Ringers.

"A college is a device to bring students together that they may educate each other and that older and wiser students may educate them."—David Starr Jordan.

Famous February Meetings Give Students Chance To Know Christ

Leaders In Song and Thought Inspire Entire College To Consider Religion.

Feb. 10—Dr. R. E. Vale, leader of the February Meetings this year, is doing a great work on College Hill. He has caused the students to think and discuss religion with unprecedented frankness and honesty, and is leaving an indelible impression upon the students' lives.

The service in song, led by Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, is bringing music into the lives of all.

Mr. Stringham's two young daughters assisted in the service Sunday night. One sang with him, while the other accompanied them at the piano.

A summary of the meetings follows:

Feb. 4—Morning Service

The subject of Dr. Vale's first sermon of the February Meetings was "How Much Are You Worth?", taken from Matt. 27:9. In the introduction to this sermon Dr. Vale talked briefly on the economic worth of the indivdual and how much it costs to bring the average young person to the age of eighteen. Then the worth of the individual was taken up and discussed from three points of view, namely: economically, socially, and spiritually. At the conclusion of the address, these words were left with us to meditate upon: "Are you lifting the level?"

Feb. 4—Evening Service

The subject of the sermon on Tuesday evening was "The Second Greatest Word in the English Language", the scripture being Luke 17:10. In the introduction to this excellent sermon, Dr. Vale explained that love is the greatest word in the English language. Then he, by Tennyson's poem, "The Revenge", revealed to us the second greatest word in th English language, duty. The structural steel of duty in our lives was then discussed by showing our duty to God, to our neighbors, and to self.

Feb. 5—Morning Service

"The Relay Race of Life" (1. Cor. 9:14) was a sermon which was greatly beneficial and inspiring. We were told that in the relay race of life we must have the following things: the baton (education), a good position, a coach, the prize or reward.

Feb. 5—Evening Service

The theme of the service, "The Greatest Search and the Greatest Discovery Ever Made—Jesus", was discussed by showing what the Greeks who came searching for Jesus lacked and what serves as guide posts to Jesus. The Greeks who came to see Jesus had beauty, wisdom, wealth, sorrow, and sin in their lives; they came to Jesus because they desired something to heal their sin and sorrow. Dr. Vale then gave the four guide posts to Christ which are: the Bible, Christian people, purity, and obedience.

Feb. 6—Morning Service

Dr. Vale's subject for discussion was "The Greatest Battle You Have to Fight", taken from the scripture lesson found in II. Cor. 16:9. Dr. Vale explained that there is a door open out there in the future but there are enemies. Some of these enemies are, (1) the person you might have been, (2) the person who has inspird you, (3) the person we think other people see, (4) your true self.

Feb. 6—Evening Service

The text of the sermon is found in Luke 23:33. The theme, "What Met at Calvary", was divided into four main points. First, God and man met at Calvary. There Jesus showed hmself a superb specimen of physical manhood and that he was indeed the Son of God who had led a sinless life. Second, guilt and innocense met at Calvary—the guilt of Barabas and the innocense of Christ. Third, life and death met at Calvary. And lastly, the sinner and his Savior met there. In the concusilon of the sermon Dr. Vale left these words with us, "How can we leave Him alone?"

Feb. 7—Morning Service

"Come Let Us Reason Together", was the text of this morning's sermon. Dr. Vale explained the change in mode of thinking in the last

GRAHAM CHOSEN AS EXTEMP SPEAKER

Will Represent Maryville Soon In National Contest.

Feb. 10.—The try-outs for extemporaneous speakers were held last week, and William R. Graham, ranking debater, was chosen to represent the college in this field of forensic activity also. Mr. Graham's smooth and pleasant style of delivery, linked with a thorough knowledge of the subject, should carry him far toward success in the oncoming intercollegiate contests.

The judges had no scanty material to choose from, however, and Mr. Graham was not without close competition. Others, in the contest were Richard Strain, J. Stuart James, Robert West, and William Barnard. The difficulty in choosing from this group comes not in finding one good enough, but in eliminating those who are good.

The general subject for all intercollegiate contests in which Maryvill participates will be the regular Pi Kappa Delta subject for Extemparaneous Speaking, College Athletics.

DONALD BENN STARS

St. Petersburg Times, St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 1, 1930—"Donald Benn, son of Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Benn, has established a new record of accomplishments at Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee.

"He received an average of A in six subject, and obtained a football letter, all in one semester, a feat never before accomplished by a student of that college in the 113 years of its existence.

"To receive an A rating, he was required to make an average of at east 95 per cent, and the record of scholarship is considered unusual and one that reflects credit upon the St. Petersburg schools and its Junior College from which the young student is a graduate."

Faculty Cars—By Julia Terry

Automobiles are a means of locomotion or, perhaps, I should say, labor saving devices by which the members of the faculty are better able to relieve the pressure and weight on their pedal extremitis to say nothing of the conservation of shoe leather, rubber heels, and potential energy.

Statistics prove that the Chevrolet has the highest representation on the Hill with the Essex running a comfortable second; and that there is total number of thirty-one automobiles of nine makes in the hands and under the control of the faculty. Thus, the men and women who guide the destinies of eight hundred students, also guide the waywardness of thirty-one dangerous pieces of intricate machinery.

One-ninth of the Chevrolets at Maryville is directed by Dr. Hunter, his brief case, and his cap, and he performs the duty systematically. Little Queener's daddy drives a car of the same make, a Chevrolet which saw the Capitol of the United States during its Christmas vacation. The Chevrolet has proved that it is not all Greek to Professor Davis, and that its value increases to Mrs. Wrinkle. Mrs. Olin is transported hither and yon by this popular make of car as is Mrs. Snodgrass who drives her own car from the right front seat. Dr. Orr has found his Chevrolet to be satisfactory, and so has Miss Gamble who rides in luxury with the various members of her family as chauffers. Mr. Mac has obtained much service from his Chevrolet and will probably indulge in an-

The Preachin'

Someone reminded us the other day that it was customary for the editor to comment on the February Meetings. It is, but we do it from no sense of compulsion.

We are sure that the student body appreciates the great privilege of sitting under so able a man of God; of listening from day to day to the things which are of vital interest to us all. We feel that the students are wholly sympathetic with the message that Dr. Vale brings us. The large attendance at the service attests this fact.

But already the meetings are drawing to a close. Soon they will be gone. The barometer by which we shall tell the effectiveness of them is the permanent results that follow. Shall we let so much good be lost because we fail to realize the power in such a gadfly, as Plato pictures the prodding of Socrates? Shall we, having been awakened from our spiritual lethargy, again settle back into the rut of indifference? God forbid.

May the desire to know the King of Kings, to find His way of life, keep us ever searching for truth. It is to this that our college is dedicated, and we are proud of it.

—o—

The Goal of An Editor

Dr. Vale gave us a long list of goals which men in different walks of life are striving to attain. He said the editor's goal is success. Taking Webster's definition of success, "the prosperous termination of any enterprise", we heartily agree with Dr. Vale. We will be liberal and say that others, too, desire success. We desire a certain kind.

There has been lots of criticism of our editorials from time to time. Not all of it has been adverse, certainly, but there has been enough to warrant a few inches of space being devoted to a discussion of what our goals are or are not. One of our goals is to keep a feeler out for campus opionion and present it as we feel it. We do not intend, nor do we try, to suit everybody. That is not one of our goals.

We are criticised for printing much destructive criticism. This is purely a matter of personal opinion as to what is destructive. We are not dedicated to a policy of construction, since it is not in our power to actually change things. We will consider one of our goals attained if we can cause others to think, and perhaps to act.

We do not even deem it imperative that we think with Socratic sagacity, let alone express our ideas with poetic sweetness. Such topics as "Spring is Come", "Roses in Bloom", "The Dying Albatross", and kindred subjects have no place in the editorial success of a newspaper. Our goal is not to compete with the essayist on themes of beauty and tender memories. We know better than to try, so we limit our discussions as far as possible to campus problems.

To fail to face the issues as we see them would be too much as though, having been given the choice of weapons in a duel, we chose cream puffs at ten paces.

Hot Water!

Some such shout goes up constantly from the basement of Bartlett Hall every afternoon. There must be a reason. We investigated, and found that the fellows who have been working out in gym classes or wrestling are very frigidly faced with the alternative of taking a cold shower or allowing the muscles to suffer the stiffening aftereffects of no shower at all.

Athletes cannot be developed, men cannot get the full benefit of the well equipped gymnasium, which they are privileged to enjoy, unless hot water be provided.

The track men especially are viewing the situation with apprehension.

What every young girl should know! How to cook.

"I think you're foolish to go to a co-educational college."
"Boy, you don't know that school girl affection."

"And then a Scotchman wore his old clothes because he was going on a blind date."

"How's your new girl?"
"Not so good.'
"You always were lucky."

And then there's that poor fellow who got a shoe shine and remembered he had his roommates shoes on.

"I'll go blind studying so much."
"Don't worry I'll donate the monkey."

"Are all pullman porters called George?"
"Well, one dropped a suitcase on my foot today and he wasn't called George."

"I got a letter from the college that says our Nellie has been stealing."
"What?"
"She's takin' home economics."

Advice to Freshmen: "Consider the fish. If he didn't open his mouth, he wouldn't get caught."

THE OPEN FORUM

February 3, 1930.

To the Editor of the Highland Echo:

Maryville College has a beautiful campus. In this my first year at the fine institution, I have not failed to observe the most ugly practice, of so-called college students, depositing or throwing banana skins and apple cores on the campus. Such a practice not only gives our beautiful campus the aspect of a pig-sty; but it endangers the limbs of pedestrians. Let us ALL have just pride in our college, and Christian thoughtfulness for the other student.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

Prof. Queener tells this one: The late Theodore Roosevelt was speaking at a political meeting in New York City. He was being continually interrupted in his address by an ardent Democrat who sat a few feet from him. Finally the Democrat said: "Mr. Roosevlt, just why are you a Republican, anyway?"

To which Roosevelt replied, "Because my father and grandfather were Republicans!"

"What would you have been if your father and grandfather had been horse-thieves?"

"I'd have been a Democrat!"

ATHENIAN

The Athenian program for next Saturday night contains numbers ranging from Logic to Novelties, and will smack of Valentine. The program is as follows:

InVocation - - - Harry Wood
Alma Mater - - - Society
Logic of St. Valentine's Day - Tom Whitehead
Entirety Nosey - Leland Gilmore
Novelties ala Violin - - - Edgar Shepard
Talk in Chalk - - "Lou" Blair
It - - - - - Tom Cooper
Newsograms - Morris Underwood
End of all good things - -

Everybody out for an hour of enjoyment and for that good Athenian fellowship.

"Can a person be punished for something he hasn't done?"
Teacher: "Of course not."
"Well, I haven't my lesson."

NATIONAL ORATORY

The 1930 National Oratorical Contest is now open for entries. 1930 marks the sixth time that the National Oratorical Contest has been offered. The general subject of the contest is "The Constitution". A list of the specific subjects from which one may choose may be obtained from the Highland Echo office. These orations must not exceed fifteen hundred words in length. Entries close March 25. Each college which desires to enter the competition must select its orator by April 15. The grand finale of the competition will come on June 15 at Los Angeles. Concerning the eligibility, regulations state that any college student in America may enter this contest.

And it pays to win this contest. The total amount of prizes is $3000; the highest of the prizes being $1500 and the lowest $400.

This contest, inaugurated and conducted by the Better America Federation of California is offered every year. Interest in this contest is steadily increasing. In 1929 five hundred and forty-two colleges entered the contest.

Prof. Griffitts: "I want you to get "An introduction to General Chemistry" before the next class."
Bill West: "Where does he live?"

"What's the dummest expression used?"
"I'll bite."
"That's it."

"One more payment and the baby will be ours", exclaimed a young husband as he mailed a check to the doctor.

Deferred payment plans increase production we are told. --

Over the Horizon

HERE they come—the nucleus of an all-electric merchant marine. Yesterday, they were a dream. To-day, they are well over the horizon, linking the ports of the east and west coasts with fortnightly service. The goal of the Panama Pacific Line is to build three more turbine-electric ships, thus enabling weekly New York-Frisco sailings.

Even now, the three liners, California, Virginia, and Pennsylvania, constitute the largest fleet of turbine-electric commercial ships in the world.

Besides propelling these ships, electricity hoists freight, raises anchors, mans pumps, turns rudders, drives winches, and warps the vessels into their berths. It lights lamps, spins fans, operates elevators, cools and cooks food. Its magic touch is apparent on every deck.

All electric equipment, above and below deck, is a product of General Electric.

The planning, production, and distribution of such equipment has been largely the responsibility of college-trained men who are working with General Electric and who have aided in bringing these ships over the horizon.

THREE TEAMS LEFT IN CLOSE CONTEST

Taggart, Murray, Partee Lead Teams To Finals.

Jan. 10—Three teams now remain in the annual Y.M.C.A. intra-mural tuornament, which began January 30. The three undefeated squads of which, Taggart, Murray and Partee are captains, are pretty evenly matched, and a close battle is predicted for the championship. The tournament will be concluded today.

The outstanding game of the tournament therefor, was the Murray-Smith tilt. With a half minute to go, and Smith's team leading 17-15, Murray sank a neat short shot knotting the court. In the overtime period Murray's quintet scored three points while Smith's aggregation could not make their shots count.

Some excellent basketball has been displayed in the tournament, despite the player's lack of practice, and the fact that the team members have never played together before.

Results of the tournament to date:

Smith—20	Osborne—17
Partee—13	Martin—12
Collins—26	Wood—18
Murray—29	Overly—20
Taggart—25	Shelly— 7
Murray—20	Smith—17
Tagart—29	Collins—11

DR. WEST'S HEALTH TALK

Care of The Feet

Feet are among the most important of all conveniences of modern times, and it behooves us, therefore, to take the best possible care of them.

Feet should be walked upon as little as possible, and should be given much rest in soft slippers. If the weather is cool, extending the feet towards the fire often aids the comfort of the owner of the feet. If the weather is cool and there is no fire, wear two pairs of wool sox. Wrap them securely in two or three blankets and sit cozily at home. If it is absolutely necessary to be abroad, wear two pairs of wool sox and a pair of good rainshoes over a sensible-heeled pair of high lace shoes.

Many people will consider such precautions unnecessary, but the writer knows cases where attacks of ingrowing toenail, bunions, and hoof and mouth disease have been the direct result of eating fermented cabbage,—I mean, rather, from going sockless, or sockless and shoeless.

Too little attention by far, has been put on the care of the toes. Toes have just been taken for granted with never a thought of their upkeep. Just because they are out of sight, do not keep them out of mind. There are several rules for toe-health, which I have arranged in order.

First. Toes should have plenty of room in which to grow. In order to give them this room it is necessary to buy shoes at least four sizes too large. This gives the toes plenty of room.

Second. Toes should be comfortable. For the most toe-comfort you should have a small pillow in the toe of your shoe for the toes to recline upon. This prevents excessive toe-fatigue.

Third. Toes should be encased in sox made like gloves, that is, each toe should have a separate stall. This keeps the air from circulating around them thus causing them to be in a draft, which may in turn give the toes a bad cold.

Fourth. Toes should be bathed regularly. At least seven times a day, for this promotes toe-happiness. For the purpose of bathing the toes a small toe-tub should be carried around with one, in which the toes will fit comfortly.

GIRLS' INTRAMURAL TEAMS SELECTED

Juniors-Seniors Play Sophs February 19.

This week the various teams for women intra-mural basketball were picked by Miss Weller and the coaching squad. The first game will be played February 18th between the Junior-Seniors and Sophs followed on the 18th and 21st by the remainin games.

The teams are:

Junior-Senior—

Forwards—Carol Cushman, Grace Stevenson, Olive Clopton; Guards—Faith Taylor, Ruth Buchanan, Ruth Sharp.

Subs—Polly Covington, Gretchen Bowers, Pat Chandler, Boots Cannon and Anne Deal.

Sophomore—

Forwards—Virginia Crider, Mary Gamble, Iva Babcock; Guards—Christine Foster, Dorothy Cable, Edith Kitts.

Subs:—Georga Burk, Ruby Hitch, Anna Beachboard.

Freshman—

Forwards—'Nez Hamrick, Jane Mitchell, Mattie Carpenter; Guards Polly Howe, Martha Storey, Della Sneed.

Subs:—Mary Sue Glover, Evelyn McConnaughay, Leona Marsh, and Sue Prince.

The swimmers have four meets definitcly scheduled so far. It will be quite impossible to put out a first class swimming team at Maryville until a more efficient heating system is installed here, but in the meantime we can give the varsity men our moral support, at least.

THE ATHLETE'S ENEMY

William T. Tilden says that Old Man Time is the arch enemy of every athlete. Old Man Time is the one certain victor over every champion in every sport. Nothing can defeat him. All one can hope to do is stall him off as long as possible.

Though certain famous sport luminaries have matured very young—Bobby Jones, Frank Wyckoff, and Vincent Richards, most athletes reach their peak of physical condition at about 25. Numberless college wonders are "burned out" before they are out of school.

Ty Cobb was still the greatest ball player at 40. Walter J. Travis was one of the world's peers in golf circles at 40. For some, at least, Old Man Time was not so cruel.

The adulation of the public is a great ally of Old Man Time. Too many athletes allow such adulation to result in a chronic condition of "swell head" which helps materially to grease the boards for a fast downward trip from stardom and popularity. The athlete who develops this trouble has a tendency to disregard training rules, admonitions of the coach, and the ordinary dictates of common sense, and soon falls prey to this ally of Old Man Time.

Old Man Time generally manages to affect the coordination of mind, eyes, and hands of the athletic performer. Baseball players especially notice thier legs beginning to yeild to the strain, their eye-sight following the same path to ultimate defeat.

But the most drastic effect that Old Man Time works on us is purely psychological. Age tends to kill the play instinct, the "will-to-win", and the old athlete finds himself bowing to this strongest of enemies. When one has lost that last asset, the impulse to win over his competitors, his days are numbered and the way to oblivion is short and quick.

"Big Bill's" advice to those who aspire to do real battle against Old Man Time is to observe training rules, don't get a swelled head, and don't lose the "will to win."

An athlete span of popularity and success may be directly proportional to the extent to which hq follows the advice of this famous idol of the sport world. Tilden is an excellent example of the carrying out of such a program.

BAINONIAN

The members of Bainonian Literary Society are assured of an excellent program next Saturday night. Dr. Hunter has promised to tell his famous Paul Bunyan stories. It is one of those programs that one cannot afford tc miss. The stories in themselves lose nothing in the telling, and Dr. Hunter is no smash as a story teller.

Bainonian Orchestra will be right on the job, as usual. We do not hear so much about it, but it is known that there are about eight of the Bainonian girls who possess real music ability, and they do not hesitate to use it for the benefit of their society sisters.

"Women are fools to marry."

"Yes, but what else s there for men to marry?"

You've heard of Naples, the famous Italian port, haven't you?

No; how much a bottle?—Tit-Bits

A modern parasite is a person who goes through a revolving door without pushing.

CATAWBA NEXT VICTIM

Maryville College engages Catawbe College of Salisbury, North Carolina next Friday night.

On the last road-trip Maryville succeeded in defeating Catawba but the game was a very good one and Maryville rightly deserved her win.

An added attraction will be given the students immediately after the game when Knoxville Y. M. C. A. wrestling team will engage Maryville matmen in an attempt to even the count, Maryville having won the previous contest between the two teams.

Maryville may be without the services of her star forward K. Davis. Davis has had trouble with his feet all season and now they are in a very bad condition.

Maryville's starting line-up will probably be, Woodard and White, forwards; Waddell, center; and Reed and Cherry, guards.

THE OLD TIMER SAYS

Some of these intermural games show the evolution of basketball from football.

Basketball is more modern—they don't wear so many clothes.

A good intra-mural basketeer is considered lucky if he gets out with less than a black eye and a few loose teeth or the equivalent.

The smaller ones have adopted clever tactics of running between tall opponent's legs and accidentally pushing a little.

The bigger they are the harder they bite the dust,—or in some cases, the floor.

But the long lanky boys pay it back with good use of sharp-pointed elbows.

century. He said man has passed from being discovery-minded to inventive-minded, to social-minded, and last to psychological-minded. Psychology has something to say about Jesus Christ. Heredity cannot be changed. Money, time and other things may limit environment, but his depth, the line of conviction, may be changed as much as desired. "Jesus can give depth to personality."

Feb. 7—Evening Service

Dr. Vale answered a number of questions submitted by the students.

Feb. 8—Morning Serivce

The sermon on "The Abiding Glory" (text Gal. 6:14) was one of the most inspiring messages of the week. Dr. Vale showed that Paul gloried not in his ancestry, citizenship, superb intellect, education, wealth or leadership, but in the love and power of God.

Feb. 8—Evening Service

"Losing Jesus" was the subject of this evening's service. The speaker pointed out that we may lose Jesus by supposing him to be with us, as Mary and oJseph did at Jerusalem. Dr. Vale said we might find Him by making amends for sin, by looking where we lost Him, and by returning to our trysting place.

Feb. 9—Evening Service

Dr. Vale spoke to a full chapel tonight at seven o'clock. His theme was "I Know Not the Man", Matt. 26:74. The minister showed how Peter took three steps away from Christ and had to take three back again. Peter slept in the garden, followed afar off, and warmed his hands at the enemy's fire. He had to repent, seek a place of reunion, and confess his Master.

Slants On College Life

By Hessie Keeton

One of the popular magazines of the day sends regularly to the literary editor of the Highland Echo copies of some of the news that later appears in the magazines. The Echo is at liberty to use it. Just why it has not may be due to some apprehension that the students would not be interested. How about it? Here is how some of the stuff reads.

"Geometry is Soon Forgotten—A Golf Swing Lasts Forever."

I am personally acquainted with dozens of college men who play golf and they have, without exception, forgotten every tihng garnered in the four years at the university—everything but the golf, declares Frank Condon, dare-devil golfer of Hollywood Boulevard in an editorial "Golf or Geometery".—It is with effort that they can recall whether Hannibal crossed the Alps or the Alps crossed Hannibal.

"Prostitutes of the Gridiron".

In the story "Colossus" now running in College Humor is an editorial written by one of the characters, on professional college athletics which is timely and true enough to quote as though this were not a story.

"American football is, intrinsically, the grandest game I know. But it has been spoiled by stadiums, sports editors, systems, sycophants and Soviet supervision.

Prostitutes of the gridiron! That situation is due to frenzied publicity, to the American axiom that a clouded victory is more honorable than a bright defeat."

Naturally there are those who say that a newspaper should be limited to news, but since Maryville College has no other publication, why not make the Highland Echo a medium for expressing some current opinions of the day. What do you—the student tihnk? Let's hear some opinions.

"Necessity is the mother of invention, my boy."

"Oh I see. But who was the father?"

"Why he was er-er, oh yes Pat. Pending."

"How were your marks?"

"Oh, nothing to write home about."

A question in Bible—"Did Daniel shoot the Lion's club?"

FACULTY CARS

other car of the same make within the next decade.

Next in chronological order comes Professor Kiger and his Essex. This famous automobile has appeared in the 1920 hilhowean (in two places) and is very much in evidence on rainy Sunday mornings aiding marooned girls to return to the Hill for a afternoon of quiet. Miss Clemmie is the proud owner of a new Essex super-six as is Brownie and all the little Brownies. Miss Heron is said to be the original speed demon, but that is really a gross exaggeration. She and her new Essex and its inmates reach Knoxville or at other times, the Heron's Nest in nothing flat, nothing punctured, nothing lost, strayed or stolen. Another Essex advocate is Professor Howell, who, hatless, drives a coach on four given to him by his grandfather. (not an heirloom, however.)

The Chrysler agency on the Hill is supported by Miss Green who drives a sport coupe, with a rumble seat in use at specified times. Mrs. Veech also expresses her choice in favor of the Chrysler, and it is rumored that Dr. Rogers has followed in their train with a new Chrysler purchase.

Miss McReynolds dodges telephone poles, pedestrians, and other minor obstacles in her Victory Six. Miss Wilkinson is a firm believer in this make of car and she loops the Loop every day to and from the Hill. The musical motor of the Pontiac appeals to Miss Butcher and its inexhaustive expressiveness to Mrs. West.

Dr. Stevenson has the distinction of driving the only Nash on the Hill, which he does with a kingly air and Thursday morning precision.

Professor Walker prefers to ride in his Ford truck with its mechanical inconveniences and overheating qualties, in company with turnips and milk bottles. Mr. Proffitt treasures his Ford and so does the Proctor of the Grounds whose Ford awakens the sleeping beauties of Baldwin and Pearsons at various hours of the night and early morning. Dr. Wilson Fords around especially in the summer, but at present his automobile is in cold storage. Mrs. Minton believes in the Ford, its power of endurance, and innate ability to understand Spanish.

Dean Barnes finds many psychological advantages in his Studebaker with its high I.Q. and many years of experience. Coach Honaker drives a Studebaker sedan, several sizes too large for him. Dr. McMurray and his College Maid also studied the situation and chose the Studebaker as the family vehicle.

Valentines for Mother, Father, Sweetheart and everyone—RICKETTS'.

More Of Honor System

The term 'Honor System is used to connote the formal recognition and adoption by students and faculty of a system of mutual responsibility among students for honesty in scholastic work and other college activities. However, it has been said recently by an astute observer of students and a keen viewer of the trend of modern student thought that "the only way in which the problem of student government will ever be worked out sucessfully will be to perfect a joint organization among the students and faculty combined." This statement furnishes a challenge to American students. Is it correct? Cannot students now govern themselves successfully?

A majority of the students who discussed the Honor System at the Fourth Congress of the N. S. F. A. were of the opinion that the Honor System is more efficiently managed when the council is composed exclusively of students. However, in some institutions, a mixed committee functions successfully. The composition of honor councils ranges all the way from those cmposed entirely of students to those composed entirely of faculty members. Each institution must work out this problem for itself.

In order to be most effective, the Honor System should be somewhat limited in its scope. It should be phases of student life, and it should be thoroughly understood by the students that, when the system is violated, punishment will follow swiftly and certainly. It is not the severity of the punishment that counts; it is its certainty. The penalty should be as severe as the exigencies of the conditions demand. In some colleges the only punishment for the violation of the Honor System is permanent expulsion; in others, it consists of a deprivation of college credits; in still others it consists in a deprivation of social privileges or in a simple reprimand. Some institutions publish the names of the convicted students; however, a majority of them favor withholding the name of the offender.

Generally speaking experience has shown that the regular student body governing council can administer the Honor System better than a special honor committee. However, in some institutions the duties of the student officials are so heavy that a special committee is a necessity. There are a number of notable exceptions to the general rule stated.

The system of organization should be simple. A simple process should be worked out whereby a student can be given a fair and impartial trial. Some institutions provide for a second trial on appeal, which is public. Few public trials have been held within the history of the Honor System, but, when they have ocurred, they have been gruesome things. It is generally thought best to provide for a final appeal to the president of the college, or to some designated faculty committee, before a student is permanently expelled.

Many students think that the aim of the Honor System should be to exclude cheaters; many believe that an attempt should be made to rehabilitate offenders.

Secret student spies whose duty it is to report violators of the system have been found to be of little value.

Regardless of what individuals may think about the salutary influence of the Honor System, it is a fact that students are crying out agianst the wholesale cheating that is going on in some of our American colleges which rely wholly upon the cleverness of the instructors or proctors to detect cheaters. Many of these students came to the Congress of the N.S.F.A. last December searching for something to substitute for the faculty espionage system, while some came hunting methods and information that would enable them to improve their Honor System. It is high time that something definite be done toward solving this problem of student honesty.

The N.S.F.A. is deeply interested in this question and it urges serious thought, expression, and action upon it. The Association of American Colleges is also interested in it to the extent that they are now conducting a survey of the system as it exists in the United States.

How true: "Dad", declared the son who had just graduated from College. "I want you to give me some advice about how to run a newspaper.'

"You've come to the wrong person, my boy," sighed the veteran editor wearily. "Ask one of my subscribers."

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

In these days we hear a great deal in exaggerated comparisons between the English style of debating and the American style of debating as such. I say exaggerated comparison,s for after all, I sometimes wonder if there is so much difference. Surely an American would claim as his own style any logical reasonable development of the subject that contributed to the desired conclusion. On the other hand, from the theory of debate, no English debater would want to use anything irrevalent to the subject, or that did not inaure the same desired conclusion. If there is no reasoning the style is neither American nor English.

—:—

However, this can be said; it is difficult to judge a debate where the styles are so opposite, so different. It is like comparing two men of different ages in civilizaton to ascertan whch one was the greater.

—:—

If the affirmative thunders in awful tones, proving "beyond the shadow of a doubt" (not even to his own mind) that his opponent has no clue to start with, and not a chance in the end if he did have a clue and a start; if the negative suavely relates parlor jokes without point or connection in order to make the judge forget the proposition; then it is hard to say which is the better.

—:—

I first thought I might suggest that they be judged on which was the worse, but that would probably be just as hard to say.

—:—

The trouble is that one extreme is dubbtd "American" by the populace and the other extreme is dubbed "English" by the proletariat.

—:—

But I guess it's typical. We have the same or a similar disagreement in the need of cruisers. The United States wants a big enough one to whip all the little ones, and Great Britain wants enough little ones to whip the biggest.

—:—

Professor Queener's American History Class has just been studying the important event of the break between John C. Calhoun and Andrew Jackson. The text said that Jackson at that time wrote Calhoun a letter in the sentiment of "Et tu, Brute!" When asked what caused the break between the two famous men, one girl said that Jackson called Calhoun a brute.

"Say, is that the moon coming over the Hill?"

"Dunno, I'm a stranger here myself."

Director Of College Maid Shop To Represent Shop In New York

Mrs. McMurray to Exhibit Samples to Retail Merchandising Corporation's Buyers March 1.

The Secretary of the Retail and Research Corporation representing seventeen of the largest stores in the country has written to Mrs. McMurray, director of the College Maid Shop, to be in New York City before March 1st, because the Association is looking for a new source for its apron supply. She also has an appointment with the pajama buyers of the same corporation on March 5. Should the College Maid products satisfy the buyers, it means a golden opportunity for our little College factory.

The seventeen stores which make up the corporation are from Boston to San Francisco. The Shop is already selling to one of the largest stores in the Corporation, J. L. Hudson of Detroit. It has bought College Maid Uniforms for three years, and it is probable that their buyer's recommendation has been an important factor in securing for Mrs. McMurray this favorable opportunity to see the other buyers. There is to be a general reorganization of the apron departments of the stores, and the final report will be given on March 1. The pajama buyers will be there, too, for they all want to buy from the same source.

The Shop labors under two disadvantages. In the first place, the College Maid products are more expensive than the usual things offered at wholesale. This is due to the superior quality of material and workmanship that is characteristic of all the Shop's products. The College Maid apron sells from 20 to 40% more than other aprons on the market. The second disadvantage is the age old competition. On the day of the Corporation's report, their building on 1440 Broadway will be swamped with representatives from all the reliable manufacturing concerns in the U. S., each eager to present his samples, and his arguments. But that does not worry Mrs. McMurray because she is the only one of the representatives who gets to talk with the buyers. The others send samples in, but she is allowed to talk with them. Knowing Mrs. McMurray, we feel that she will succeed where others have failed.

MISS DEHAVEN AT HOME IN OHIO

Miss Ethel DeHaven is now residing at Osborne, Ohio, with her parents. She has been working at journalism. Although not teaching at present, Miss DeHaven has secured a life certificate for high school work.

Miss DeHaven's hobby at Maryville was the teaching of Systematic Discourse to willing sophomores.

THETA ALPHA PHI DELEGATES BACK

Baker, Peirce Return From Ohio Convention.

Feb. 16—Frank Baker and Jesse Peirce arrived home from a thousand mile bumming expedition tonight. They attended a dramatic conference at Ohio Wesleyan on Friday and Saturday as guests of the Theta Alpha Phi chapter of that school.

Mr. Peirce and Mr. Baker had many thrilling and chilling experiences, but seem to be none the worse for the trip.

One of the high spots in the conference was the banquet on Friday evening, at which time the toastmaster called on "Professor" Peirce for a toast. Mr. Peirce being absent, Mr. Baker gave the Maryville address.

In the evening the delegates attended a most finished presentation if "East Lynne", a melodrama of the '80's.

The Maryville representatives expressed their satisfaction with the conference, but as for the bumming, two words were sufficiently descriptive: "Never again."

EXPRESSION GROUP IN ENTERTAINMENT

Advanced Students In Depart. Read for Townspeople.

Feb. 14—This evening some of the most accomplished members of the expression department went out to read for several organizations of the town. The first group of readers went to Alnwick school house, to read for a group of parents, teachers, and patrons of the school. The purpose of the gathering was to raise funds to improve the school yard and playgrounds The program consited of musical numbers, such as "The Turkey in the Straw", rendered on violin, quitar and piano, and readings, "The Mission Box That Surprised the Town" by Peggy Mevis, "Keeping a Seat" by Lavina Jones, "The Neighbor' by Evelyn Seedorf, and "Mary Carey" by Louise Avery.

The other groups of readers was entertained at dinner at Reagan's Bakery by the Farmers' Association After dinner Virginia Hecht read "The Rainy Noah Story" and Gladys Graham read a monologue, "Buying a Hat."

"Will your people be surprised when you graduate?"

"No. They've been looking for it for years."

DR. VALE CLOSES FEBRUARY MEETINGS WITH FINAL APPEAL

Noted Presbyterian Preacher Succeeds in Bringing Message of Christ.

The February Meetings have again come to a highly successful close. It is Dr. Vale to whom our thanks are due this year. His sermons and conferences have been uplifting, energizing. He has succeeded in his task of presenting Jesus Christ to Maryville students and friends. His work will not be forgotten.

A summary of last week's meetings follows:

Feb. 11—Morning Service

Dr. Vale chose for his subject, "Hypocrites". The text was found in Matthew 6:16. He described five kinds of hypocrites to us: the pious hypocrite who pretends to be very religious; the critical hypocrite who is always finding something wrong in other people; the day-dreaming hypocrite who imagines himself in situations into which he has not come by honest effort; the excusing hypocrite who excuses himself for not doing right; and the lying hypocrite who trys to get credit for something he hasn't done.

Evening Service

"Life's Greatest Question" was the theme of this evening's sermon. Dr. Vale brought home to us with great force the fact that it rested with us "What We Did With Jesus." He told us that there were four answers commonly made to this question. Judas Iscariot sold Christ. The Chief Priest crucified the Saviour. Pontius Pilate tried to wash his hands of Jesus. Saul of Tarsus who followed Christ was the greatest gainer. Dr. Vale impressed us with this statement: Jesus wants to release the best that is in you.

Feb. 12—Morning Service

Taking for his theme, "The Ship and The Net", Dr. Vale told us in this address of how Christ commanded Peter to give him his ship, and launch out into the deep and let down his net. Our speaker then went on to say that Christ is calling to us to give Him control of our lives, to launch out into the deep and to let down our nets into the sea of life. He said, however, that if our lives were not strong all over they would break as Peter's net did under a great strain. Peter's net of life broke when he denied Christ but Christ mended it when He tested Peter's love for Him.

Evening Service

Dr. Vale spoke to us on "Fighting With Wild Beasts at Maryville". We are all battling in our souls with beasts of selfishness, trickery, and lust. It is our duty to so overcome our lower selves that the beast in us will not have a chance to rise up. Jesus Christ is always near us and He is the only One who can help us win our struggle.

Feb. 13—Morning Service

"The City Foursquare" was the title of the Thursday morning service with the text of the sermon found in Revelations 21:15. Dr. Vale explained the problem which often

RUSK—BLAKE

Ruth Blake and Roger Rusk former students of Maryville, were married Saturday night, February 15, at the home of the bride's parents, Knoxville, Tenn. It was a quiet home wedding, only a few close friends beng present. The prenuptial music was rendered by Anne and Fancher Smartt, and Isabel Cannon played the wedding march. The only attendants were Fancher Smartt and Hayden Laster.

The young people are graduates of Maryville College, members of the class of '29. Throughout their four years here, they took prominent parts in all student activities. Roger will be remembered as the capable manager of the Book Store, and for his excellent work in dramatic productions. Ruth was an ardent "Y" worker.

STRING QUARTET IS LYCEUM ATTRACTION

Chamber Music Ensemble Next Program, February 27.

Feb. 1—The Musical Art Quartet will furnish the entertainment for Maryville's next Lyceum program, to be presented February 27 in Voorhees Chapel.

Maryvillians are looking forward to this date, for no chamber music ensemble in recent years has become so firmly established within a brief time as has this excellent string quartet. The personnel consists of solo musicians, at least two of whom Sascha Jacobsen and Marie Roemaet-Rosanoff, have achieved international fame. The other two members, Paul Bernard and Louis Kaufman have had wide experience in both solo and ensemble playing.

Messrs. Jacobsen and Bernard are violinists, Miss Rosanoff plays the 'cello, and Kaufman performs with the viola.

Advance information indicates a very high type of musical performance in store for Maryvillians, and the Lyceum committee report that this is considered the high-light of the 1929-'30 Lyceum program.

This will be the fourth number of the year, the fifth and last number consisting of the heralded Holland Bell Ringers, who will appear at a date to be announced later.

PUTMAN CLUB

Among the student activities on the Hill is the recently organized Putman club. The charter of this club has its origin from the question asked by Joe Hacker, "Do you know Putman?" The officers and other dignitaries are ranked according to their relationship to the honorable Mr. P. D. Putman. Doc Morrison is president because he lives in Chicago; Philip Sarce vice-president because he has seen Mr. Putman; Joe Hacker holds an honored position because Mr. Putman once spent the night in his home.

Roberta Hickman has the distinction of being the only feminine member of the organization, ex-officio fepresume. The club has conferfed upon her the title of P.D.D. When asked if she is an honorary member, Roberta answered, "I'm the only girl member; I don't know whether it's honorary or not. Hayden Laster says she's an onery member.

BAINONIANS STAGE LAST MID-WINTER, 'EAST Is WEST'

Cup Winners of Last Year Will Perform Monday Night, February 24th.

"In the infinite, whence all things come, there is no East, there is no West. West is East, and East is West."

These words of Lo Sang Kee in the play "East is West" make the theme of the Bainonian Mid-Winter which will be given in the chapel on the evening of February 24.

The prologue of the play takes place in a Love-Boat on the Yantze River, China. On this boat beautiful girls are sold into slavery to wealthy Chinese merchants. The sale of Ming Toy, a lovely maiden of the Orient, is prevented by the interference of a romantic American youth who happened to be on the Love-Boat at this time. The youth persuades his traveling companion, Lo Sang Kee, to buy the girl Ming Toy and take her to his home in the United States.

As would-be expected, Ming Toy and her savior, Billy, fall most desperately in love. Both decide contrary to the will of the young man's parents and the opinion of the whole world to wed, to unite East with West or white with yellow—for the lovers believe that "the color of man's face is not the reflection of his soul. Many white people are yellow, many yellow people white."

'ECHO' ADDS TWO FROSH TO STAFF

Bob Crothers, 'Nez' Hamrick Are New Apprentices.

The Highland Echo Committee has selected members to refill the vacancies which occurred some time ago among the Freshman Apprentices. Last fall when the apprentices were selected a second list of those who really deserved a place on the staff but could not be chosen because of the limit set, was made. It is from this list that the newcomers have been chosen. Mabel Jean Frost, an Arizonian, felt the ties of home so strongly when she went home at Christmas that she decided to stay there. In her place Nez Hamrick has been chosen, a well known and popular girl of the freshman class. William Patterson was sick last semester and lost so much time and work that he went home at the end of January—though we hope he will be able to come back next year. So the committee selected Robert Crothers to fill the vacancy. This new blood should make The Highland Echo a bigger, better, newsier paper.

Prof. Queener: "A new kind of dumb waiter is a boy who asks a girl if he may kiss her and then sits back and waits for her to say yes."

WOMEN TO OPEN DEBATE SEASON FRIDAY NIGHT

Teachers-Carson and Newman Meet on Local Platform; Teams Away

DISCUSS DISARMAMENT

Men Follow In Triangular Classic With King, Tusculum 27th.

Feb. 15—The regular season of debate for Maryville will be formally opened Friday night, February 21 in a triangle debate with Teachers College of Johnson City and Carson-Newman College of Jefferson City. This is a debate for women and all teams will be away from home. The regular Pi Kappa Delta question for debate will be used. It is, resolved, That the nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament, excepting such forces as are needed for police purposes. The debate here will be held in the Y.W.C.A. auditorium at 7:30 o'clock.

Our affirmative team which is composed of Viola Pettit and Elizabeth Cannon, will go to Johnson City, and will debate Carson and Newman at Teachers' College. Alice Renegar and Ruby Lee Johnson, composing our negative team, will meet Teachers' College at Carson-Newman. The visitors will meet on our own platform, Carson-Newman upholding the affirmative and the Teachers defending the negative.

This is the first regular debate on our schedule, although we did meet Albion College of Michigan in a non-decision, open forum debate early in January. This was before our regular teams were chosen, and was scheduled largely to obtain information.

Our first regular debate for men will be the King-Tusculum-Maryville triangle debate February 27 when J. Stuart James and Richard Strain take the offensive against Tusuclum at Tusculum, and Wright Frost and Roy Taylor defend the negative at home against King. This is one of the most closely contested annual debates.

OLD STUDENT GOES TO SYRIA

While we were in the midst of the February Meetings, Miss Buena Hixson, an old Maryvillian, member of the class of '28, set sail for Syria where she will take her place on a mission field there. The field to which Miss Hixson is going is the same one on which Miss Lois Wilson, our president's daughter, is working.

Maryville's Black Crows—By Edith Nash

Columbia Phonograph Recording Company has seemingly achieved much success wtih its records of the "Two Black Crows". Many people appear to enjoy, without tiring, the droll humor and wit which make these Comedians so widely popular. And it is surprisingly true that in nearly every home where there is a talking machine (and especially in homes which have children in the adolescent stage), one finds a record of "The Two Black rows". But have you noticed Maryville's Black Crows? Since Maryville College is so different from other places in many respects, it is not strange that our Black Crows are of another order, for they are entirely different from the famous celebrities of the talking machine. In short, the Maryville Black Crows are, scientifically speaking, thousands of Cowus Americanus which are known in plain Eniglish, as Common Crows.

These crows have a little community Center, the Rookery, in the College Woods. Each morning about six o'clock, and often earlier, the crows begin "to warm" up for the days food exploring expedition. They make a beautiful picture wheeling gracefully round and round in wider and wider zones with a rose tinted sky ond pale blue mountains for a background. The birds continue this wheeling and flying for an hour or more, making a great noise, as if arguing abou tthe plans for the day.

A few of the more adventurous, the young crows I imagine, leave the main body of birds while they are thus agitating and engage in friendly races to meet the rising sun. Two of them soar up ond up until they are mere black specks against a briliant sky; then when they have become two exhausted to climb higher, they begin to descend, sometimes gliding swiftly, sometimes in a bouncing motion as if encountering invisible obstacles, and finally dropping gracefully into mass of swarming and crying relatives just above the tree tops. Order is soon restored to the rookery when a final decision

The All-Around Sport—By Julia Terry

Moonshining is the all-season sport, the extra curricular activity in which earnestness, frankness, bashfulness, and zest, are the requisites for entrance. It is the best all-round sport offered at Maryville because there are more chances for individual participation, cooperation, and competition. There is no coach for ths sport—the participants need no coaching, but there are referees present on the field of battle.

Moonshining in the fall is rather slow, at first; that is, new entrants are just a little skeptical, and do not gain full confidence until after the first trip away from home, the fall mountain trip. Here on the Sunshine Limited the participants realize that true love never runs smooth. There is a decided increase in membership after the trip and hence competition is more keen.

Moonshining is the favorite indoor sport during the winter season, although a few prefer to brave the icy winds and continue to make it an outdoor sport; possibly because of the inadequate equipment inside and because of overcrowded conditions. Twice a month the participants may snap into the game in the Alumni Gymnasium, and great are the falls thereof.

Spring moonshining is the most enlightening and enlivening season for this favorite sport, perhaps because of freshness and greenness of all living things. Spring fever may help to add heat to the battle.

Not much is known of the summer moonshining for during these two months the participants are taking a much needed vacation (in company with somebody else). It may be that summer moonshining and summer not.

The above points indeed prove that moonshining is the best all-round sport offered at this college; if you desire circumstantial evidence, just walk in Thaw Hall on a rainy day—thye're all around. It's not a case of being No Man's Land—better, No (Old) Maid's Land.

The paper this week is being handled entirely by the staff editors, Edith Nash, Hessie Keeton, Forrest Robertson, and the associate editors, William Graham and Edwin Buchanan.

The fact that the paper functions as well without the editor-in-chief is a credit to the system under which the Echo has been run for the last two years.

Dr. Wilson

February is a month of fame, and its calendar records the birthdays of illustrious men of national and world interest, but to us at Maryville none stands out more prominently than that of our own President Samuel Tyndale Wilson. Today Dr. Wilson is seventy-two years old, and his record testifies to a life of service. We all owe him gratitude.

When visiting speakers in our chapel exercises say that Dr. Wilson has been a "spiritual father" to them, or that he is one of the "most beloved college presidents", they are only echoing what we as students already know. When a church executive tells us that he can accept a report from Dr. Wilson's committee, knowing that it is right he is only expressing our convictions. Only a few hours ago one of the most intellectual, most active students on the Hill said, "When I am seventy-two years old, if the people know as much good about me as I know about Dr. Wilson, I shall be satisfied." I understand now what a friend meant when he told me before I ever entered college, "I think it would pay you to go to Maryville if you received notihng but the influence of Dr. Wilson."

We believe this is the sentiment in the hearts of all Maryville students, and that influence is being carried into all parts of the world.

Again

During the last basket ball games here it has come to the attention of many that there is still a lack of enthusiasm and good sportsmanship displayed by the student body as a whole. The feeble applause which greets the Highlanders when they come out on the floor and the still weaker applause given the visitors are matters which need immediate correction.

Reports from the recent basket ball excursion into North Carolina indicate that our boys were enthusiastically greeted at every place they played, and were given such a great ovation that one could not distinguish between the amount of applause given each contestant. Frequent jars and advice to the referees should also be eliminated.

This is not the first time that the Echo has found it necessary to print matter on good sportsmanship, but it is hoped that a few, at least, will attempt to improve our courtesy toward visitors.

—o—

Congratulatons

A good deal of adverse criticism has been going on among the students concerning short meetings which were held for a few minutes at the noon hour during the first part of last week. Songs were sung and testimonials were given at these meetings and God's great outdoors was used as the chapel. The originator of these meetings should be congratulated rather than criticised for his earnest attempt to bring the students together for a short word of thanks and appreciation to God for the many wonders and bounties with which we are blessed. Whose place is it to criticise? Is it yours, who did not attend the meetings?

Another beautiful inspiration came from the person who suggested that music be played from the tower of Anderson every night during the February meetings. This met with nearly unanmious approval and everyone eagerly listened for the mellow notes of the horns as familiar strains of hymns were played.

PATENT MEDICINE

(Being a talk delivered by Dr. West before Whatno County Medical Club)

Ladies and Gentlemen, I shall have to apologize to you for reading my speech tonight, but the fact is, I did not have time to learn it, having just heard I was to speak last October.

The subject about which I am to talk tonight is the Patent Medicine Fraud in the United States. This subject is often touched upon by various speakers, but is never treated with all respect due to such an important issue.

Since I was assigned this topic I have been investigating the products of several well-known patent mediecine companies, namely, Dodo's Nervo for the Nerves, Korkoff's Bunion Cure, Phlobb's Liver Life, Magnesia Nuggets for the Esophagus and Dr. Goop's Ashtma Compound, I found them all O. K. and shall report on them separately.

Dodo's Nervo was the first medicine I investigated. I found that besides its aid to the nerves, it was also supposed to be good for ingrown toenails, itch, rheumatic pains, insect stings and bronchial trouble. In fact the makers claimed that it was good for tooth paste, shoe polish, hair groom, and face massage. I cannot recommend it for hairgroom, however.

Korkoff's Bunion Cure was the next investigation. It was a liniment of some variety that not only cured the bunion, but it trimmed the toenails. Beside its bunion curing properties, it could also be used as sewing machine oil, floor polish, substitute for vinegar, and as an excellent dry-cleaner for removing spots. This medicine seemed to be O. K.

Phlobb's Liver Life was next. It guaranteed that in a week's time it could remove all old paint, sandpaper the floors, and completely renovate any liver, no matter how stubborn the liver. I cannot verify this statement, however, as I was unable to find any one whose liver needed remodeling. I will say, however, that it showed remarkable efficiency in polishing furniture, painting radiators, flavoring candy and running automobiles instead of using gas.

Magnesia Nuggets for the Esophagus was the fourth medicine I investigated. It was a little more extravagant in its claims than the Liver Life, as it claimed not only to reapint the esophagus, but to remodel the front porch and to add a two car garage, all for a dollar a bottle. It seemed to me that it was unusually good at soldering radio connections, cleaning lamp chimneys, substituting for ink, resilvering mirrors, and many other odd jobs about the house.

Dr. Goop's Asthma Compound was my last investigation, and I believe it to be the best of the lot. It guarantees to absolutely cure the most stubborn case of asthma in two days, to entirely reline the nasal passages with a good grade of aluminum, to install a new heating plant in the cellar and to supply the coal for two months. Beside all this it was found to serve as an excellent substitute for shaving creme, to beat all known solutions as a mouth wash, to remove the carbon from any make of car, to act as a soothing syrup for baby or grandmother, to kill all moths in a fifty mile radius, and to cure the worst case of heaves in any size horse.

AN OLD STORY

The story is told of a peasant with a troubled conscience who had come to a monk for advice. The peasant had circulated slander about a friend—only to find out later that it wasn't true.

The monk was old and wise. "If you want to make peace with your conscience", he said "you must fill a bag with chicken down, go to every dooryard in the village, and drop in each of them one fluffy feather.

The peasant did as he was told. Then he came back to the monk and announced that he had done penance for his folly. "Not yet!" said the monk sternly. "Take up your bag, go the rounds again, and gather up every feather that you have dropped!"

"But the wind must have blown them all away".

"Yes, my son," replied the monk. "And so it is with gossip. Words are easily dropped, but no matter how hard you try, you can never get them back again."

'STYLES OF THE TIMES'

—by an observer—

There is, no doubt about it. The great army of college students loose in this old (or young) nation of ours do exert a tremendous influence upon the country at large. The constant outpouring annually of young men and young women with their diplomas tucked, or rather, ducked under their arms cannot but have a marked effect on national fashions in entertainment, comforts, manners, morals, and what not in the lines of culture and education.

In many quarters this pressure is made to count heavily. We have the advertisers' word for it that the opinions of collegians are the first, last, and loudest words in all of the "styles of the times."

This same assumption is most emphatically manifested by the pressure felt directly upon our fashions in apparel—but especially, perhaps, upon the official dictates in sports clothes.

Scarcity of space prevents at this time a thoroughly complete and organized appraisal of college styles, but for the edification of those who wish to take a sure short-cut to sophistication it will suffice to present a brief survey of certain prevailing tides of collegiate fashion.

First we have Exhibit "A"—"A goodly number of the co-eds at Blankety-blank college are obliged to attend gymnasium classes twice a week. Accordingly on certain days of the week, literally swarms of them are to be observed cavorting around the campus in the most attractive athletic raiment, consisting of black pleated skirt, tennis sneaks, and spotless white "middy" blouse with a G. Washington black bow tie. The effect produced is distinctive, at least, if not ludicrous. None of them would care to parade down the main street of the town in such a costume, yet the tradition enveloped campus of their own college is not too good for the same fashion tangle to be observed. A few of the co-eds wrap an overcoat around themselves in an attempt to avert the impression that their college campus is anything but a place where one's personal appearance is of any consequence. Unfortunately, the young men of blankety-blank college have not yet taken up a similar custom which would approve of wearing their gym uniforms to chapel services and classes."

Exhibit "B"—Not wishing to show any preference for the fair sex, the style surveyor noted several of the popular habits among the men of the above named blankity-blank college—"Some of the best dressers wear a white shirt buttoned at the neck, tie omitted, with a coat worn to show up the fashion to its best advantage. Many others, having read somewhere that at Yale and Princeton a tramp is dressed the best, attempt to follow this through as effectively as possible, omitting such miscellaneous shaves, etc, as too much trouble. The principles of logic involved are excellent, except that it was several years ago that such was the custom at the big Eastern schools."

Other style customs, equally popular, are not discussed here, though easily appreciated by one and all.

A few chemical discoveries have been reported, absolutely shattering the time honored facts and theories of Priestley, Lavoisier, and several other denizens of the deep.

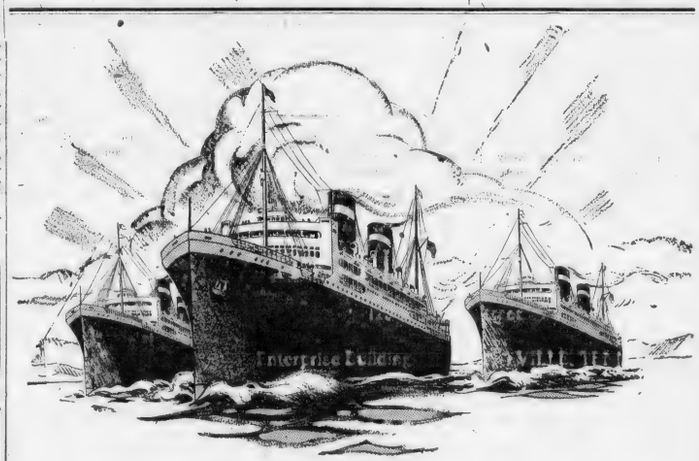
Many new methods of preparation and analyzing were revealed as:

"One way of preparing Oxygen is by running hydrogen through an electric current and when it comes from the cylinder it is Oxygen."

"A metal is something that contains no elements whatsoever."

"Hydrogen is useful to blow out pipes."

"Valence is one atom of Hydrogen."



"The element is a compound.

Over the Horizon

HERE they come—the nucleus of an all-electric merchant marine. Yesterday, they were a dream. To-day, they are well over the horizon, linking the ports of the east and west coasts with fortnightly service. The goal of the Panama Pacific Line is to build three more turbine-electric ships, thus enabling weekly New York-Frisco sailings.

Even now, the three liners, California, Virginia, and Pennsylvania, constitute the largest fleet of turbine-electric commercial ships in the world.

Besides propelling these ships, electricity hoists freight, raises anchors, mans pumps, turns rudders, drives winches, and warps the vessels into their berths. It lights lamps, spins fans, operates elevators, cools and cooks food. Its magic touch is apparent on every deck.

All electric equipment, above and below deck, is a product of General Electric.

The planning, production, and distribution of such equipment has been largely the responsibility of college-trained men who are working with General Electric and who have aided in bringing these ships over the horizon.

Crack Knoxville Y. Combination Downs Maryville Matmen In Stiff Revenge Bout

Knoxville Produces Flawless Eight Tustlers.

M. C. BEATEN

Six Minute Overtime Periods Often Required.

The Highland matmen suffered their first defeat from the hands of the Knoxville Y grapplers since the beginning of competition between the teams two years ago. The score was 23-11.

To the initiate the matches were excedeingly interesting because of the great variety of thrusts and counter thrusts presented by the almost equally matched men, but to the spectators who were merely onlookers the action was dull. Men less evenly matched and of less defensive skill would have presented more action, for in most of the bouts the defensive and offensive skill in the opponents cancelled each other leaving nothing but two sweating and very apprehensive opponents.

After a hard struggle Buchanan turned in the only fall registered by the Maryville athletes. He threw Tallent of Knoxville with a nelson and crotch hold in four minutes.

Peacock and Hurley gave the crowd a brief thrill when they put on three minutes of action with Peacock pushing the fight. But in a careless moment Peacock slipped into a scissors and nelson hold and was thrown.

Mayer, captain of the Y team, pinned Lee in two minutes with a rider hold.

The Shaw-Hurley match was hard fought and practically even. Shaw broke the tie by a time advantage in the extra periods.

Coach Watkins lost Weiss in the extra periods by a time advantage after having been within twenty seconds of victory on the regular period.

Cash won over Farrar by a time advantage in the extra period. This match likewise presented evenly matched men, the match going to Cash by a few seconds after sixteen minutes of wrestling.

After six minutes of mat action Overly was pinned with a body hold by the veteran Kelly. The match was one of the most active of the eight.

The 155 pound Kensey put up a great fight with the 200 pound Sizemore. Kensey eluded the former champion of the U.S. for ten minutes and was pinned in the extra period only after the giant heavyweight was sweating with utmost effort.

The Highlanders will go to Chattanooga next Saturday night to meet the Chattanooga Y team in the last meet of the season.

TUMBLING

A few aspiring, co-ed tumblers have been coming to Third Floor Anderson to receive the instruction of "Buck" Buchanan. There are a few more out every day and the more difficult arts of the game are being tried. It seems that the same ones are out every time and that they are out for every other sport also, and as "Buck" would like to give us a place in the Circus we will need all the girls who can possibly be at Anderson every evening from four to five o'clock.

WHAT IS AN EDUCATION?

Those who decry the increasing emphasis placed upon business, commerce, and industry in this country will not be pleased with the report made by the city of Cleveland Captain of National Association of credit men recommending means of "Adjusting the curriculum of the schools to the actual demands of business."

Educators—taking the word in its best sense—point out that this very tendency to place the purely utilitarian side of school instruction above that devoted to general development if intelligence and knowledge of such very necessary branches as World geography, is what is bringing the demand for college men to the point where complaint is heard that opportunities for merit promotion are few. The boy who goes into an industrial establishment, say, on the lower rung of the ladder, who has been taught acording to the Cleveland plan, only some of his probable duties on that lower rung, is extremely likely to find himself handicapped by his lack of instruction in such simple matters as United States histor, geography, etc., when it comes to promotion.

SPRING FOOTBALL

Coach Honaker has issued orders to his assistants, Coaches Davis and Thrower, that spring football practice at Maryville will be started on Monday afternoon, February 24.

Coach tells us that he expects to see some of the football aspirants personally and he is also willing to have anyone who wishes to talk with him to come to is office or see him on the campus, some time this week.

Coach /sincerely hopes that every ardent student of Maryville may accept this privilege of spring football training facilities. Maryville has always been aware of the fact that the squads in the past years have been very small compared to the material that other schools have at hand. Most high schools have os many players out for the team as Maryville was able to put on the gridiron last season.

Coach Honaker says that he would like to have any who have never played football to come out for spring training as most of the fundamentals are taught at this time and all of the players have to go through this at the same time. More time is spent in spring training on the fundamentals and limbering up work than there will be next fall when the task of assimilating a team is on the shoulders of the coaching staff.

Spring workouts have become essential for a well rounded fall campaign. Anyone wishing to come out for baseball will not have his chances lessened by spring football practice. There will probably be in all about four or five weeks of football and only the first two or three weks will be required of any baseball or track aspirants. Members of the football squads at Maryville have never been embarassed by the coaches, by being dropped from the squad on account of their inability to perform certain tasks to the desired perfection.

Maryville's coaching staff is considered one of the best in the State and they are doing their utmost with the material on hand, but they could put a more representative Maryville team on the field if more of the students would come out for the team next year.

Coach Honaker also wishes to inform any who intend coming out for the team to secure football equipment at Bartlett hall gymnasium next Monday morning at 8:00 o'clock.

Announcements will be made in chapel the latter part of this week. More definite information may be secured from any of the Coaches Honaker, Thrower or Davis.

The world's richest and most powerful nation is also the world's hardest working nation. How far Uncle Sam exceeds other countries in his output of labor is shown by Dr. Thornton Reed, Professor of Mining at Columbia Univesity, who estimates after a careful study, that the United States, with one-sixteenth the population of the world, completes about half its work. This country accomplishes about one and one-half times as much per person as Canada, her nearest competitor, and thirty times as much as China.

By calculating the relative amounts of horsepower generated by men from the food they eat, and by machines from the fuel and power they use, Dr. Reed has arrived at his conclusions regarding fifteen leading countries. He also recalled that China and India are firs in the amount of work done by hand, but are far behind the United States, Great Britain and Germany in the work done by man with the aid of power machines. For instance, the labor done by man and machines in this country equals the manual labor that could be done by ten times the number of men in the United States.

Maryville Highlanders Defeat Catawba Indians On Home Floor, Friday, 33-23

OLSON'S SWEDES PLAY HERE NEXT FRIDAY

Mon. Feb. 17—The Highlander Basketeers left Maryville this morning for Johnson City, Tenn., where they will play the Milligan quintet. Our squad succeeded in defeating Milligan once this year and is expected to repeat their performance.

On Tuesday night, Maryville will engage Tusculum College on the hardwood. The Tusclum basketeers have not lost any out of the eight games played this year, so, in spite of the fact that Maryville defeated them last year, Coach Honaker's squad will have to be fast and furious to emerge victorious this time.

Next Friday night, Olson's Swedes, a professional team, will play our quintet on the home floor. This is expected to be the best game of the season and will probably offer many thrills and heart throbs even to non-moonshiners. This will be the next to the last game which will be playde on the Maryville floor this season, the only other one being against Carson-Newman.

WHITE STARS

Indians Out to Scalp Scots But Fail.

Feb. 14—A desperate second half rally by Catawba fell short of catching the flying Highlanders, and the Indians took their second defeat of the season from Maryville, by the score of 33 to 23, at the Alumni Gym tonight. The game was fast and many fouls were called on both teams. Catawba lost two men by the foul route and Maryville one.

The Highlanders started fast and working with smooth-like precision, grasped an early lead. Their teamplay was far superior to any they have shown this season. An alert defense kept Catawba away from the goal, the Indians not scoring a field goal till late in the first half. The half ended 16 to 7, in favor of Maryville.

Catawba came back strong in the second half, keeping the ball in their possession most of the time, the count was brought to 16-14, and 18-16. White and Woodard then caged some nice shots to put the Highlanders safely in front again.

Woodard and White, with seven and twelve points respectively, led the Highlander scoring. Captain Peeler and Kesler, were outstanding for Catawba.

The box score:

Maryville (33)		Catawba (23)
Davis (4)	f.	Peeler (8)
White (12)	f.	Kesler (6)
Waddell (3)	c.	Weigel (2)
Reed (1)	g.	Finch
Cherry (2)	g.	Robinson (4)

Subs: Maryville— Woodard (7), Lewis (4), Parks. Catawba—Sapit (2), Hamilton (2), Earnhart.

"THAT NIGHT"

That night when in the Judean skies
The mystic star dispersed its light,
A blind man moved him in his sleep
And dreamed that he had sight.

That night when shepherds heard the song,
By hosts angelic choiring near
A deaf man stirred in slumber's spell
And dreamed that he could hear.

That night when in the cattle stall
Slept child and mother cheek by jowl
A cripple turned his twisted limbs,
And dreamed that he was whole.

That night when o'er the new-born babe,
The tender Mary rose to lean,
A loathsome leper smiled in sleep,
And dreamed that he was clean.

That night when to the mother's breast,
The little one was held secure,
A harlot slept a happy sleep
And dreamed that she was pure.

That night when in the manger lay
The Sanctified Who came to save,
A man moved in the sleep of death
And dreamed there was no grave.

"INDIFFERENCE"

"When Jesus came to Golgotha they hanged Him on a tree,
They drove great nails through hands and feet, and made a Calvary;
They crowned Him with a crown of thorns, red were his wounds and deep,
For those were crude and cruel days, and human flesh was cheap.

"When Jesus came to Birmingham they simply passed Him by,
They never hurt a hair of Him, they only let Him die;
For men had grown more tender, and they would not give Him pain,
They only just passed down the street, and left Him in the rain.

"Still Jesus cried, 'Forgive them for they know not what they do.'
And still it rained the winter rain that drenched him through and through;
The crowds went home and left the streets without a soul to see,
And Jesus crouched against a wall and cried for Calvary."

FEBRUARY MEETINGS

confronts us all; What is Heaven? He termed Heaven as being a state of mind, and secondly, a place, a space in which our spirit and personaltities meet after they have been released from their bodily limitations. He said that what we do today, at the present time, is a preparation for the future life.

Evening Service

Dr. Vale spoke on "The Greatest College Danger—Drifting" with the background of his sermon taken from the one-hundred thirtieth Psalm. The text is found in Acts 27:41, "Falling into the place where two seas met." He showed how we are often lulled by the gentle south wind of fortune and ease and then betrayed into a tempestous storm of diversity. In order to overcome our hrdships we should always carry with us on our life voyage, four anchors, namely: 1. The Anchor of Christian Conviction, 2. The Anchor of Christian Companionship, 3. The Anchor of Christian Committal.

February 14—Morning Service

Dr. Vale's last sermon was preceded by an expression of his appreciation of what had been done for him during his stay at Maryville. The topic of his sermon was "Weighed in the Balances". The text was taken from Daniel 5:27, from which Dr. Vale painted a vivid representation of the city of Babylon at the height of its glory and power, and told the story of Belshazzar, his ridicule of the Jewish God, and the hand writing on the wall in living fire. His sermon centered about the balnces in which we are weighed, Man-made Balances, of Wealth, Intelligence, Skill, Society and Beauty; and God's Balances, taken from the Ten Commandments: Thou Shalt not Kill, Thou Shalt not Commit Adultry, Thou Shalt not Steal, Thou Shalt not Bear False Witness, and Thou shalt have no Other God Before Me. Dr. Vale said that if we accept Christ, He walks into the balances with us and weighs it down, and we are not found wanting.

THETA EPSILON

The members of Theta Epsilon Literary Society are assured of an excelent prgoram Saturday night. The play that was to have been given some time ago will be presented. "The Bells of Canterbury", a farce on Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" is the play.

It is one of those programs that you cannot afford to miss. You will be especially interested if you are now studying Chaucer, or if you have had English Literature.

I'M THE GINK

I'm the Gink that delights in telling other people's business. I go from room to room trying to hear some new scandal. I delight in passing news around and somehow I manage to make it grow. I spend so much time trying to find out what the other fellow is doing, I don't have time to do my own work. I lead my nose some places besides where the odor is pleasing. Gossip is my line. I realize that I am losing friends every day, but I enjoy talking about others just the same. If there is nothing special to tell, I get lots of pleasure out of making up "petty scandals." I enjoy broadcasting slighty remarks about some of the courting couples. Of course I never say anything to anyone face to face. I talk all the time but never seem to get much said at least no one believes me.

If you want any news scattered see me, 'cause I'm the Gossiper, Tatler Gink.

—"Orange and Blue"

THE BATTLE

I must act quickly. No time could be lost. I dodged back into the room and slammed the big door closed. But too late. Already some of the fiends had gotten in and now more were sailing through the, all but blocked, entrance. I made a dive for the door on the opposite side of the room but before I could reach it one of them slid to a stop in front of me and, reached for me with cold fingers, I turned and ran to the other side of the room.

They were still coming in and had massed themselves by the entrance. They were quite small but they outnumbered me a hundred to one. Of a sudden they turned toward me and leaped to the attack. They swarmed all over me covering me with their cold, wet bodies. As I fought back blindly several of them hit me in the face with cold, deadly fingers. They easily eluded my efforts to come to grips with them. My anger got the best of me. Instead of a cool fighting man I was fast becoming a maniac. With a great effort I shook myself violently and half of them were shaken off. I was by my broom in a bound and as they came at me again I swept the darn things out of the room. "Why", I asked myself, "Don't they make Carnegie windows so that the snowflakes can't get in around the cracks?"

MARYVILLE'S BLACK CROWS

has been reached, for the crows begin to fly away in every direction in search of food. A goodly number of the less energetic (and perhaps less thoughtful) make a straight course to Pearsons' back door, and remain perched on the old wagon or in the trees, patiently waiting for scraps which cannot be converted into hash or tomato a la bread.

Prof. Knapp, who is an authority on birds, states that most of these crows are here only for their winter reisdence but that there are a large number which rmain in the rookery during the entire year. So at almost any time in the day you can see a number of Maryville's Black Crows flying over the corn fields or circling about the rookery in the College Woods.

You will enjoy the untangling of this apparently hopeless situation whcih ends—well, come and find out for yourselvs.

The major parts are taken by Jane Duke, "Ming Toy", and Bob Crothers, "Billy", who are working out their characters with much success. Russell Gilmore and George Osborne should also be placed in the stellar list. Russell has what is probably the most difficult role of the play and has mastered it perfectly. Lo Sang Kee, played by George Osborne deserves much praise as a piece of excelent character interpretation.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

A few years ago I saw, in some of the newspapers, the picture of a young college debater who was graduating from the school of his choice that year. The occasion for such honor this time was the fact that he had never lost a debate during his college career. Well, that might mean much or it might mean little according to how many debates he had participated in and whom he had debated against. Certainly he possessed a happiness which most of us do not experience, and we give him all credit for his notable achievement; but I sometimes wonder if it would not have been beter for him if he had, at some time, known defeat. Victory is not always victory.

—:—

There is a notion on the part of many that "victory" or 'defeat" as such does not make any difference. It is all just a debate. Well, it does make a difference if you believe what you say.

—:—

Of course, if you have no conviction about what you say it probably does not make any difference. In that case very likely there is nothing lost or gained anyway.

—:—

Debating is still educational training for life. One does not have his own way about everytihng after he leaves school. Therefore, I say it is a good thing to learn to become a good loser as well as a victor.

—:—

There is another point in favor of at least one defeat. It is sure to give the debater a stronger determination to win than he would have gotten from victory.

—:—

I once heard a college professor say that all freshmen ought to lose so they could be coached in their sophomore year.

—:—

Of course we can't tell when we are going to win or lose, but I think an ideal way for beginners would be to win the first two and lose the third.

—:—

One should win the first for encouragement; he should win the second in order to make him conceited enough to debate; he should lose the third in order to make him tolerant enough to debate with.

—:—

But we must try to win them all and we expect to. It is when you lose when you want to win that counts.

PHILOLOGICAL ASSOC'N MEETS HERE FRI., SAT.

Mrs. Minton, Prof. Hussey and Dr. Hunter Plan Arrangements.

STUDY LINGUISTIC SCIENCE

Illustrated Lecture Will Be Given Thursday Night In Thaw Hall.

Feb. 24—The Tennessee Philological Association will hold its twenty fourth annual meeting here Friday and Saturday, February 28 and March 1. These students of the science of linguistics are making Maryville their headquarters again after a lapse of seven years, and advance reports indicate that a good representation of members of the association will be on hand for the meetings.

Prof. Geo. B. Hussey, head of the modern language department of Maryville College, is vice-presiden of the association.

will consist of five sessions—Friday wil consist of five sessions—Friday morning, afternoon and evening, and Saturday morning and afternoon. The day sessions will be held in Thaw Hall; the Friday evening session in Voorhees Chapel. Following the session Friday forenoone the members of the association will be guests of Maryville College at a luncheon; after the evening session they will be given an informal reception by the Faculty. Thursday evening at 6:30 R. B. Steele, Professor of Latin at Vanderbilt, will present an illustrated lecture in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium on Julius Caesar. This talk will be concluded in time for the Lyceum program of that evening.

Among the numbers on the programs of the various sessions will be the reading of a paper "English Placement Tests for Freshmen" by Miss Jessie Heron; "Some Variant Readings in Plato's Phaedo" by Prof. Hussey, and "What Training in English Does the High School Expect to Give Its Graduates?" by Miss Edith Goddard of Maryville High School; also "Through Hadrian's Arch" by Prof. H. J. Bassett, from Southwestern University, former professor of Latin at Maryville and brother of Miss Almira Bassett.

Professors Hussey and Hunter and Mrs. Minton are the committee on arrangements for the meetings.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT OFFERS TALENT

Advanced Pupils Favorably Impress Audience.

The music department of the college presented students in piano, violin, and voice in an interesting recital given in the Voorhees Chapel at four o'clock on Thursday afternoon, February 20.

Msss Hale and her assistants as well as the pupils are to be congratulated for this varied program.

WOMEN DEBATERS GET UNDER WAY

Maryville, Teachers and C.-N. Meet In First Fray.

The debate season was opened Friday evening with a triangular debate between the women's teams of Carson-Newman, Teachers' College, and Maryville. The debate here was between Carson-Newman and Teachers' College. We are indebted to the young ladies from these schools for a very interesting evening. The question debated was, Resolved: That the U. S. should adopt complete disarmament except that which shall be necessary for police purposes. The affirmative was upheld by Miss Lillian Jenkins and Miss Cora Lee Donaldson of Carson-Newman and the negative by Miss Isabel Guy and Miss Mary Louise Mundy of Teachers' College. The decision was in favor of the negative.

Maryville affirmative team, Elizabeth Cannon and Viola Pettit, met the negative team from Carson-Newman at Teachers' College, and the negative team, Alice Renegar and Ruby Lee Johnson met the affirmative team from Teachers' College at Carson-Newman.

The next contest for the women's teams, a triangular debate between Tusculum, Milligan, and Maryville will take place next week.

On Monday, February 17, five Maryville girls broadcasted a program from WNOX at Knoxville. Those taking part were Lallie Miller, Edna Stuart, Carrie Pearson Christine Hunnicutt, and Harriet Brown. The girls in Pearsons heard the program over Mrs. Butcher's radio.

Too many of us do not learn either from reading, observation, or experience.

COUNCIL APPOINTS SOME COMMITTEE

No Action Taken As Student Council Discusses Problems.

At the last meeting of the Student Council the business discussed was of very great interest to everyone on the Hill. The first item that came up concerned the use of the walks about the campus. The students are requested to walk on sidewalks and paths provided for that purpose and not on the grass or where grass is supposed to be. Our campus is beautiful now, but we want it to be even more beautiful, and this cannot be accomplished unless every student cooperates.

The second item of interest concerned the chapel hour. 'A motion was carried that the president see Dr. Wilson about having the chape hour moved from 8:10 to 10:00, o between b and c periods as it wa during the February meetings.

A committee was appointed to see Mr. Proffitt to see if some arrangement could not be made to have the swimming pool properly heated.

Three girls were named as a committee to see Miss Molly about instituting fire drills in the dormitories.

Another important item discussed was that of adopting a standard ring for the school. A committee was appointed to present this matter to the faculty. If the faculty approves, the matter will be discussed by the four classes in class meetings and the student body will make the final decision.

The last item of business of interest to the student body concerns the underclassmen only. It is a question of parties for underclassmen. At present the Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors have only one party a year. A committee was appointed to see if arrangements can be made for these classes to have a party each semester. This question will have to be presented to Dr. Wilson and to the faculty.

SUMMARY

1. Students urged to use sidewalks.
2. President appointed to see Dr. Wilson about chapel hour.
3. Committee appointed to see Mr. Proffitt about heating pool.
4. Committee appointed to see Miss Molly about girls' fire drill.
5. Committee appointed to see faculty about adopting school ring.
6. Committee appointed to see about more parties.

"It Is Me" Is Not In Good Repute In Our English Dept.

It has come to the attention of many English students of the College that there is a report circulating about town, and especially in the region of Maryville High School, that IT IS ME is being taught on the Hill as correct usage. This is a gross misrepresentation of what has actually been said concerning this construction. Dr. Hunter in one of his English classes stated that he had never taught IT IS ME as being correct and had no authorithy to do so. However, he did state IT IS ME is advocated by many English scholars as being permissible now. Dr. Hunter said also that in twenty-five years from now that (in all probability) this construction will have become permissable by a majority of English scholars. Dr. Skeat, in an English text book of recent date, states: "IT IS I is only kept alive by narrow pedagogues who wish to import a narrow uniformity."

This false report probably came about from a misunderstanding of this usage when it was discussed in an advanced English class. It seems that students who have adanced beyond the high school stage of grooping blindly for grammar essentials and technicalities should know that grammar laws are not unalterable. Charles Swain of Harvard says: "Grammar simply registrars good use; its powers are not executive."

Therefore it must be clearly understood by all that IT IS ME is not being taught by the English teachers as a correct construction. However, college students are expected to be advanced far enough to recognize the probability of form becoming permissable and even good usage by the most orthodox grammarians.

The senior party for February comes next Wednesday evening. It's a theatre party this itmc, and to a real show—"Show Boat". After the picture, refreshments will be served in the bakery. This is the first theatre party of any group on the Hill since the installation of the vitaphone machine.

You can tell where man is headed by the way he is walking.

Musical Arts Quartet Is Lyceum Offering Thurs.

Acclaimed Best Number On Course This Year.

"By dint of the great individual artistry of its players, and by incessant work toward perfection of their ensemble, the Musical Art Quartet has achieved remarkable heights, and I predict for it a great future. To the musicians as well as the amateur, it is a joy to hear the players performing a quartet of Beethoven. It is as if four well-bred and high-minded people had come together to discuss the most beautiful experience of life."

The above are the words of Walter Damrosch. No better recommendation of the next Lyceum attraction can be repeated than this expression of this noted orchestra conductor.

The Musical Art Quartet appears at the College Chapel this Thursday night, February 27, at 8:15 p. m.

Sascha Jacobsen, first violinist, has established his reputation as one of the leaders of the younger generation of American violinists. Russian by birth, he comes of musical family. He began his studies in violin at the age of eight under the famous instructor, Prof. Leopold Aver. Since his debut in 1915 he has extensively toured the country.

Paul Bernard, second violin of the quartet, is an American of Russian ancestry. He, too, studied with Prof. Aver, as well as with Paul Stassevitch. In 1922 he made his New York debut at Aeolian Hall and since has appeared extensively in concert, alone and with other noted artists.

Louis Kaufman, the viola player is also American. He studied at the Musical Art Institute in New York under Frank Kneisel, where he won the Loeb prize on graduation.

Marie Roemaet-Rosanoff holds a high position among the 'cellists before the public. On her graduation from the Musical Art Institute in 1918 she was the recipient of the Loeb prize and the medal for highest honors. She has appeared in recital in Brussels, Liege, and Paris, and since her debut in New York has received high tributes from the press.

The program which they are to present consists of such numbers as the delightful "Andante Cantabile" by Tschaikowsky, and Nevin's "Song of the Brook". That great composition of Schubert's will perhaps show the quartet at its best.

The obtaining of this Musical Art Quartet adds further proof to the already-evident fact that those who chose Maryville Lyceum attractions exhibit a genuine responsibility in their task.

SENIORS PRESENT BIBLE TO DR. WILSON

Class of '30 Remembers College President's Birthday.

Feb. 18—Yesterday was Dr. Wilson's birthday. February 17, marked his seventy-second anniversary Today, as a token of their regard for him the Seniors presented Dr. Wilson with a new Bible.

Dr. Wilson complained good-naturedly about the fact that the Seniors always remind him of the passing of another year by giving him a present. However, he told us that he did appreciate the Bible and that he would use it, for the Bible he is now using is almost worn out. The presentation of the Bible was made by Frank Baker, Senior Class President.

Then the Seniors led by Jesse Peirce gave a cheer for Dr. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson.

To say here, how much we think of our College President is impossible. But we can say that we wish him many more happy years and it is our hope that many lives may yet come to know the influence of his personality.

FROSH WASTE TOO MUCH SPARE TIME

According to Cornell Head Eighty Percent Lost.

Approximately 80 per cent of the average college freshman's time is spent in light activities, according to Dr. Richard S. Vhrbrock, of Cornell University, speaking before the American Association for the Advancement of Science. These in the order of time occupied are: Sleeping, eating, working for pay, walking, physical exercise, and bull sessions.

In a study of the distribution of time for one week, made by Dr. Vhrbrock, it was found that the typical College Freshman spends approximately one-third of his time sleeping. One-third in work activities, and one-third in social play and personal pursuit.

When students who make high grades were compared with those who were failing, it was found that the high scholarship men had the following characteristics: They spend more time in class atendance, studying at home, in library work; on class and fraternity activities; writing reports and themes; walking or riding to and from classes; in shunning work; reading newspapers, magazines, novels; on family duties; listening to visting lecturers; keeping record of use of time. They spend less time in conference with instructors; atending movies, plays, concerts; on parties, dates, dances; card playing; automobile riding; bull sessions, shopping, phoning; at meals; bathing, shaving, dressing and sleeping.

ATHENIAN

Next Saturday night the Athenians will have an election of officers, who will guide the Society through the remainder of the school year. Besides the election there will be a reading, "Two Pictures of Old Southern Plantations", by our pleasing Athenian reader, Hayden Laster, and Reeder Carson will add a musical touch to the program with harmonica selections.

All Athenians expected and all visitors heartily welcomed.

FIRST DEBATE FOR MEN THURS.

William Graham and Forrest I. Robertson To Represent Maryville.

Feb. 22—The next debate of the season for Maryville, and the first regular debate for men will be next Thursday afternoon, February 27, when our teams meet King College and Tusculum College in a triangular debate. Richard Strain and J. Stuart James, both juniors, will go to Tusculum College to debate the affirmative side of the regular Pi Kappa Delta question on disarmament. The debate at Maryville will be between our own team composed of Wright Frost and Roy Taylor who will have the negative side, and the affirmative team from King College. This is one of our most interesting debates of the year and it is always warmly contested. Last year King College won both sides in this contest, and the two years immediately preceding that Maryville won both sides.

An unusual feature of this classic is that the debate here will be held in the afternoon instead of in the evening. This arrangement has been secured because there is a lyceum program in the chapel in the evening, and an effort has been made to accommodate those who wish to attend both programs.

Another interesting feature of the debate is that the decision will be made by an expert, or it will be a critic judge decision. This method is usually interesting to the entire audience as well as instructive to those especially interested in the art of debating.

Following this the next debate will be a single debate here with the University of Chattanooga. On March 4 William R. Graham and Forrest I. Robertson will defend the negative side of the question against the attack from the affirmative team from Chattanooga in this annual event.

LOGAN IN LINE FOR RICH REWARD

Turns In Alarm Which Saves Family From Blaze.

Feb. 19—Charles Sumpter Logan, our peerless keeper of the Y.M.C.A. store is exceeded in the number of nicknames possessed, only by Clifford Overly.

The following are some of Logan's monickers. He was "Spike" even before he came here. Some of his friends call him Sump, a diminuitive of his frontpiece. To many of the salesmen who delver goods to the store he is still called Hogan. Some of his friends in town call him Sumperry. Paul Dickenson and Tom Cooper call him Hobo. Lately, he is being called Hero because of his recent exploits.

Wednesday morning, February 19 as Logan was slowly wending his way toward Martin's Drug Store to get his morning allotment of Journals and thinking, so he told an Echo reporter, of life's cruelties and woman's loveliness, especially the latter, he noted the roof of a nearby house in flames. He awakened the owner who in turn awoke his wife who gave vent to a lusty—"eeek"—an alarm was sent in. The largest damage was done to the slumber of Pearsons Hall inmates disturbed by the screaming sirens.

Oakey Biggs, who resides in the fire hall, says an immense reward totalling to a rising vote of thanks is most likely to be forth-coming from the financially depressed firemen who get a few shekels for every call answered.

Several of Maryville's faculty members dined with the Herons at their nest on February 14. The only thing that has been reported as dampening the pleasure of the evening was Miss Clemmie Henry's fall. We are glad that the injury was not serious.

Tolerance is the even balance that enables one to believe or doubt without getting mad because the other fellow believes or doubts.

Looking Back to See Ahead

We hear a great deal about the folly of looking backward. It is true that we progress by going forward, not backward, but at the same time, it is not a bad policy to check up on the present in the light of the past. What our conduct will be in the future will depend largely on what our own former experience, or the experiences of others, has taught us will give the desired result.

We have in our midst a very concrete record of Maryville College, concerning which very few students know anything at all. The College Museum, located behind the forbidding wall to the left of the librarian's desk in Thaw, has been growing steadily for a great number of years, and now contains many valuable and interesting curios. There may be seen such things as: a model of the Maryville Academy, Indian arrow-heads, wood from the various trees found in the nearby forests, curious beadwork from all over the world, native handiwork from almost every mission station in which Maryville had had a part, and other tokens of Maryville's work here and around the world.

It will be infinitely worthwhile to spend an hour in the Museum some afternoon. After coming out onto the campus, one cannot but be fairly well satisfied with the progress we have made here, and yet determined to do his bit to carry on the good work.

A knowledge of the history of the college could very well be included in the requirements for graduation, but it is not, so it is up to the individual to learn it on his own initiative. The museum is a very interesting place to start learning.

Ironing Out a Difficulty

As the women students will tell you, ironing out anything these days is a difficulty. It seems that the college laundry has become inadequate to take care of the pressing needs of the women. There has been some effort on the part of a few to have each dormitory equipped with a room for the purpose of pressing and ironing.

The matrons of the halls seem to be heartily in favor of such a convenience, but because of the difficulties encountered in the electrical connections in the buildings, have not been able to do anything definite about it. This barrier is one which would have to be taken up with Mr. Brown, but according to our limited knowledge of electricity, it should not present an insurmountable problem.

This is a question which needs concerted action on the part of the women. Any practical plan would meet with the approval of the college, but naturally the impetus must come from the students.

NO ECHO NEXT WEEK

Due to the fact that the Echo contract calls for thirty issues during the year, it is necessary that we omit some weeks. There will be no Echo next week.

HIGHLAND FLINGS

College Grad.: "I've called to see about a job."

Boss: "But I do all the work around here myself."

C. G.: "That's fine, when do I start?"

"I've had to ask you five times for the money you odwe me."

"Well, I had to ask you ten times to get it."

"Does he Neck?"

"Neck? Say that guy thinks a girl is built like a giraffe."

"The photographer never gives me justice."

"You want mercy not justice."

She: "What's the difference between dancing and jumping?"

He: "I dunno.'

She: "I thought so."

"Some day I'm going to speak my mind, and when I do ——."

"Yeah, the silence will be maddening.'

A SHORT STORY

The first time Lou went out in a short dress she came back in a Rolls Royce, the second time she went out in a shorter one and came back in a patrol-wagon.

Sap: "Say Lucy, what must I give for a kiss?"

Lucy: "A little chloroform."

"I moved out in town last week."

"What're you going to do with your books, burn them or sell them?"

A telegram sent by a farmer to the police stated: "Grey auto passed here, killed a cow containing four gentlemen and two greyhounds, one of which was a clergyman."

"Why does a girl close her eyes when a man kisses her?"

"She doesn't want to see him make a fool of himself."

"So your husband was lost at sea?"

"Yes a bathing beauty got him."

"Why is Mortimer looking for a cashier, he only hired one last week?"

"That's the one he's looking for."

"So you don't think much of the new motor cop?"

"No, he's always chasing around after these fast girls."

It is not a sign of weakness when you draw lavishly upon Knowledge superior to your own.

Gladys: "The reptile! How dare he speak to me that way!"

Mac: "Why call him such a name?"

Gladys: "He's a lounge lizzard, that's why."

Love is all right if he can keep up the payments on the Ford.

CURRENT CAMPUS COMMENT

Girls: Irish, we sure like that new suit of yours.

Irish: You all must get big and wear it sometime.

Runt: Gee, I wish I'd get the mumps so I wouldn't have to keep that date Monday night.

Bill Graham: I'm from Detroit, Michigan.

Mumps Chorus: Come on over, we're having a swell time.

Joe Hatcher: "I used to think I knew some mountain songs, but when I came to Maryville everybody was singing them."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

"Scotty" Thompson says that the reason there has been no marriages in Scotland recently is because some one heard of free love."

Q.—What is the difference between a flapper and a soldier?

A.—One faces the powder while the other powders the face.

Q.—What would happen, speaking geographically, if a colored waiter dropped a roasted turkey?

Ans.—The fall of Turkey, the destruction of China, the overflow of Greece, and the humiliation of Africa.

Q.—"What was the first scene at the Chicago fire?"

Ans.—"Kerosene."

CARE OF TEETH

The teeth are among the best friends of man, as well as the worst ones. Every thing from rabies to hardening of the arteries is blamed on the teeth with justice. Teeth are the cause of at least two thirds of all the mouth trouble in the United States.

Care of the teeth is therefore essential. Because it is essential we shall now consider some of the phases of tooth culture.

Teeth should be cleaned five times a day, on arising, after breakfast, after lunch, after dinner and once before going to bed. The selection of a dental creme has often troubled fastidious people, and for their benefit I shall prescribe a formula.

One can of Old Dutch Cleanser, one bucket of lye, one barrel of sand, one quart of paint remover, two gallons of best white enamel, ten paint brushes. Mix in an eye-cup, stirring gently. Heat over small alcohol flame, such as Sterno, let it boil until it hardens in cold water. Let it cool and dissolve in sulphuric acid. Apply to the teeth with dish mop. You will be delighted with results.

The color of the teeth has a great deal to do with their health. Let me cite some examples; blue teeth mean that the owner is in the last stages of Reapya, the dread disease of the tooth paste companies. Green teeth mean that the owner is afflicted with paralysis of the right hand. Yellow teeth mean that the owner was born 1870 B. T. (Before Toothbrushes). Red teeth mean that the owner has been eating blackberries. Thus we see, gentle reader, that the teeth should be cared for and spoken of gently.

—Dr. 'Chic' West, Health Specialist

Happiness in this world, when it comes, comes incidentally. Make it the object of pursuit, and it leads us a wild chase, and is never attained.

Follow some other object, and very possibly we may find that we have caught happiness without dreaming of it; but likely enough it is gone the moment we say to ourselves, "Here it is!" like the chest of gold that treasure seekers find.

One should take great care not to grow too wise for so great a pleasure of life as laughter.

QUESTION AND ANSWER DEPARTMENT

Q.—What is the best way to eat grapefruit?

A.—From a great distance.

Q.—Can you recommend a method for removing superfluous hair?

A.—Try a good stiff brush or a vacuum cleaner.

Q.—Can you tell me a good way to reduce?

A.—Cut out all meats, vegetables, fruits, tonsils, and appendix.

Q.—What is the best way to open watermelons?

A.—Start at the outside and work in.

Q.—I am a young girl of 16, weighing 234 pounds. Am I underweight?

A.—No, but your feet are. Under a great one.

Q.—I am bothered with cold feet at night. Can you tell me what to do?

A.—Tell him to wear his socks to bed.

Q.—My upper plate keeps coming loose. How can I prevent it?

A.Keep your mouth full.

Q.—I am troubled with sore feet. Can you suggest a remedy?

A.—Try insect powder.

SPORTS

LOOKING FORWARD

Mon., Feb. 24—The Highlanders will play their last regular scheduled game of the season on the home florr tomorrow night against the Maryville Athletics.

Three of our veteran cagesters, Captain Waddell, ex-captain Reed and Ralph Cherry will sing their swan-song before local fans tomorrow night. Let's all get out and give these three a big hand.

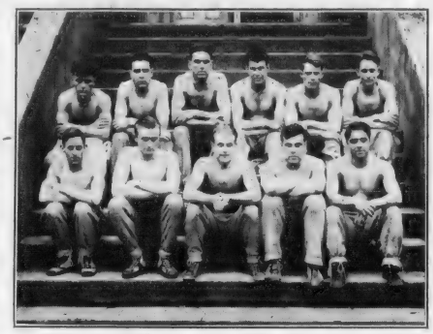
The Smoky Mountain Conference Championship will be played from February 27 to March 1. The line up is as follows:

L. M. U. vs. Carson-Newman—
Thursday afternoon
Milligan vs. East Tenn. Normal—
Thursday night
Maryville vs King College—
Thursday night

The winner of the L.M.U.-Carson Newman game will play the winner of the Milligan-East Tennessee Normal bout at 8 o'clock Friday night. The winner of the Maryville-King fray plays Tusculum, who drew a bye, on Friday night at 9 o'clock.

The two winners of Friday night's games play the finals on Saturday night at 8:00 to decide the Smoky Mountain Conference Championship.

Maryville was barely nosed out of the championship last year by Emory-Henry, the score being 27-26, but they're out for blood this time so let's stay behind them.



SPRING FOOTBALL

As some ever-aspiring student may not have seen last week's Echo in which appeared the announcement of Spring Football practice, we hereby wish to state again that practice is to start Monday afternoon, February 24.

Coach Honaker wants any would-be football player out for spring practice.

Anyone wishing to get the fundamentals is asked to report not later than Wednesday or Thursday following the opening day of practice. Practice will probably last from four to five weeks.

Maryville Defeats Chattanooga Y 21-15 In Final Bout Of Season

The Maryville College Wrestlers invaded southern Tennessee territory and chalked up another victory in a revenge bout with Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. Chattanooga defeated our matmen by a 20-18 score on our home floor the previous week but were unable to repeat their performance. With all the Maryville men working hard to tally up the most points for the Alma Mater, Chattanooga went down before a 21-15 score.

In the 115 pound class, Buchanan easily defeated Murphy of Maryville by a fall in 1 minute 40 seconds—5 points.

Peacock, 125, after a hard battle in which he was very aggressive, lost to Couch, Chattanooga by a fall in 6 minutes,—5 points.

Shaw, 135, gained over a minute time advantage oyer Johnston in a stiff 10 minute battle to give Maryville 3 more points towards victory.

Hatcher of Maryville, representing the 145 pound class, finally lost to Selcer by a fall after a gruelling 5 minute bout—5 points.

Watkins downed his man, Herm by a tricky hold after 7 minutes of fighting in which Maryville was far the superior—5 points.

Cash of Maryville, easily defeated Hill, 165, by a fall, using the double arm-lock hold. This was the shortest bout of the match, taking only 1 minute, 12 seconds—5 points.

Headrick, Chattanooga's 175 pound coach, finally was able to hold Carr on the mat after 9 minutes—5 points.

In the unlimited class, Overly gained a time advantage over Wallace to score up the final three points for Maryville.

This was the last match for the Maryville matmen this season but next year we expect to see more of them as they already have a few matches lined up.

TENNIS

Last week tennis practice was resumed; the season has come once more. White-clad players, hurrying feet, flying balls, and whizzing rackets brought back to life the courts, which had lain idle for several months.

The next step in the progress of the season is the holding of the spring tennis tournament. All candidates for the team should do their best in the tournament, because the team will be selected according to the results of this contest.

Prospects for the coming season are good. In the first place, there will be no lack in the number of games to be played, for trips are being planned and altogether there will be probably fifteen or twenty matches for the Maryville netmen to play. Moreover, there will be no lack as far as coaching goes; Professor Smith will instruct the players in the delicate arts of the game. In the third place, there should be no lack of players.

The most important factor in the sport is, of course, the team itself. We have a substantial nucleus around which to build up a good team. Two letter-men are back this year—King and Strain. Byron King lettered in tennis last year. Dick Strain was not here last year, but he lettered the year before.

The success of the season, however, will depend upon the whole team; two men will not be enough. There is a great opportunity for new men. Not only is there room for players on the team, but there is also plenty of room to practice in. Two courts which have not been used for several seasons could be repaired, if an unusually large number of men should come out.

The thing to do is to get in shape for the spring tennis tournament. The time to do it is now.

Maryville Defeats Tusculum 29-19

M. C. Basketters Fall Before Milligan, 32-17.

CHERRY, REED, STAR

Tusculum Loses First Match of Season.

Feb. 18—The Maryville Highlanders returned today after gaining an even break on their two-day road trip, on which two conference foes were engaged, Milligan and Tusculum. Tuesday night the Highlanders displayed a fine brand of ball to hand Tusculum its first defeat of the season, 29 to 19, while Monday night the Highlanders could not get going and fell before the Milligan Buffaloes 32 to 17. Maryville defeated Milligan earlier in the season.

Against the Buffaloes on Monday night, the Highlanders were in poor shooting form, failing to take advantage of many close range shots, which affected their all-round play though they fought stubbornly. Milligan jumped into an early lead by dint of some fine shots, from all corners of the court. This lead was gradually increased as the Highlanders did not find their shooting range.

Grant, Milligan forward led the scoring chalking up ten points, closely followed by Kemp Davis with nine.

In the Tusculum encounter, both teams started fast, the first half being very close, the two teams matching shot for shot. Maryville gained the advantage just before the end of the initial half to lead 13 to 11.

In the final half, Maryville displayed a fine brand of ball, which was too much for Tusculum, the Highlanders drawing rapidly away. Captain Waddell, veteran center played great ball, scoring seven points, while White, Woodard and Davis, all gave fine offensive performances. White lead the scoring with nine points. Morenno, Tusculum's star forward, was held to one point by the fine defensive play of Cherry and Reed.

SWIMMING

Under the tutelage of Jack Coughlin, Maryville swimmers are fast developing into a well-balanced team.

In the swimming meet held at the first of the year several of the new men showed promise of developing into better than the average college or Y swimmer.

At the present Mr. Coughlin can give us no dope on the definite personnel of the team to represent Maryville in the meets that are to be carded the latter part of March and during April.

So far Maryville has six meets scheduled, three of them in foreign pools and three for the benefit of Maryville audiences. Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. and Knoxville Y. M. C. A., also Tusculum College and possibly Emory and Henry will complete the schedule for this spring.

No definite dates have been set as yet and consequently according to Jack Coughlin this is all of the information that can be given out for the present.

The finals in the intra-mural basketball games will be played as a preliminry to the Maryville-Athletic game Tuesday night at 7:00.

LITERARY CORNER

AD INFINITUM

The following free verse was read by Miss McReynolds before the Writer's Workshop:

A People fair, and filled withwonder
At mysteries all about her—
Mystery of earth and sky and sea,
Mystery of her own creation,
Wondering, yet seeing beauty in it all.
So close to Nature did Hellas live
In eargerr tireless search for truth
That she was given precious keys to Nature's treasures,
And breathed the breath
That sped her messenger, Hermes—
Mercury, bounding on his way.
Thus with the message of her finds
Began a progress for all mankind.

So close to Nature—
She caught step
With the Master-worker, Nature's Creator
And was made co-worker in giving light and beauty to the world.
The Master-worker holds precious his creation
And uses all
Even the particles of dust
To make the glow around the sun.
This eager, life loving, beauty loving people
Caught the spirit
Saying: "The greatest stroke of art
Is to turn evil into good."

Joyfully carrying the torch
She had lighted
And joyful at what its light revealed
She, though in a larger, deeper, broader sense
Was as the children planting flower seeds
Said they were
Helping God to make the world beautiful.
But her bright light could not light all the way,
Nor pierce the darkness that engulfed her.
Yet that darkness was as a ray of light
To others coming after—
Nature turning evil into good.

So the Master-worker
Made co-worker Athena's eager, happy, mystical people
And co-workers coming after who will,
Who hear the music and catch step.
The Master-worker who enhances his creation
With mists and shadows,
Who uses the day's dust accumulation
To make the glow around the evening sun!
Perhaps even the pain, failures and misunderstandings—
Life's dust accumulation
Will turn to light
And help to make the glow
Around a greater, distant sun.

"His Glorious Night"

Noon On The Campus

(By Edith Nash)

Of all the descriptions written of the campus by an unwilling freshman for an unrelenting instructor, and of all the descriptions recorded in the college catalog, there are none on file describing the Hill as it appears during the noon hour, that is, after the first five or ten minutes have been wasted in the manipulation of knives and forks.

On leaving Pearsons, the first object that comes to view is the masculine receiving line, and many are the girls who go into the hands of the receiver. After a process of elimination the receiving line gradually diminishes. The residue left is composed of disappointed specimens of mankind who adopt as their theme song, "Love's Labor's Lost if I Can't Get the One I Want". They usually combine into a formidable group of gangsters by the Book Room in the center of the crossroads where they can antagonize female traffic from any direction. The other group of downhearted desperados occupies the bench outside Pearsons in the office of a self-appointed reviewing stand.

Through a lack of cooperation there are also several groups of girls standing or strolling, their gait determined by the quantity of warmth produced from their overheated discussions. These groups are constantly interrupted by the daily appearance of two blue convertible coupes driven by would-be collegiates. The cars alternate between the two groups and at times favor particular girls who return the compliment by a brief conversation.

No, I haven't forgotten the moonshiners, but they're everywhere. The cedars crowning the hilltop are surrounded by love birds as are all the conceivable nooks and alcoves built for the accommodation of clinging vines and their parasites.

Town girls usually gather on Bartlett Avenue halfway between Science and the Book Room, discussing the pro and con of the latest town scandal, and sometimes antagonizing the dormitory damsels by sitting with a devil-may-care attitude in an inviting looking automobile, in fact, a much too inviting automoble in these balmy spring days of late.

Very important, is that group of women faculty members, representative of four different types of learning: English, Psychology, French and History, which strolls daily, up and down, back and forth, in search of interesting subject material, although their conversation is usually highly interesting and full of food for thought. Were they not overheard last week talking about fruit salad and potato chips?

The pond in front of Science is an object of interest especially to those girls who forget their compacts and find that the pond is a satisfactory substitute for the missing mirrors. Intensely Interested in these reflections is a line of masculine observers on the Science steps, making non-scientific comments on the objects within their range of vision and research.

No doubt, there are many more noon hour novelties unique to the Hill but the unique 1:10 bell brings all unique things to a finish, even feature articles.

The Debater Maintains

By Logic B. Reasons

There is one thing in being on a debate team when one is particularly interested in people. This is the intimacy or the degree of intimacy in which debaters become acquainted in such brief periods of contact. When once I meet a debater on the platform and give especial attention to him for the short while the debate lasts I am impressed by his personality until I remember that man occasionally, as I travel, I see one whom I have met in debate. It gives a pleasant, familiar acquaintance. Often I see those who know others with whom I have debated. This makes it easy to become acquainted.

—:—

I believe there is no activity in which college students meet where they can come to know each other better than in a debate. This is true because debaters study each other and they make a pretty fair estimate.

Of course, it may happen that somemties right in the heart of argument, we may underestimate our opponent's worthiness, but even at the same time we give him credit for having the ability to get away wtih it.

—:—

The trouble is, when a man starts a debate with his wife, she is both the "Honorable Judge and Worthy Opponent."

—:—

In only one instance did I ever know it to be otherwise. There was a husband and wife who were deaf and mute. The husband came home late one night, and, when his wife began her blessing in sign language on her fingers, he turned the light out.

—:—

Then she sued him in the courts for her legal right of protest.

PALACE THEATRE

Maryville's sole motion picture enterprise has taken a definite step ahead. The management of the Palace Theatre deserve praise for their decision to install "Taklies" in the theatre.

Since the beginning of this policy two weeks ago, students and townspeople have witnessed moving pictures with sound that are without question up to the standard of similar shows in larger cities. The "talkies" are in great demand, and Maryvillians now have access to the best.

Such productions as "Show Boat" and "Cocoanuts" indicate the degree of quality of pictures which this new policy is resulting in bringing here. A glance at the program for the next few weeks shows that the Palace management is trying to secure real pictures for its patrons.

BAINONIAN

On Saturday night, Bainonian Literary Society will be favored by a unique and interesting program. Mr. Russell Gilmore whose abilities as a magician are well known has consented to give an informal lecture, and some exhibitions of the black art.

Bainonian's Saturday night programs have been unusually interesting this year, and we should extend much credit to our original thinking, hard working program secretaries. Bainonian's orchestra has been faithful, and adds much to the general feeling of good fellowship tht prevades the Hall each Saturday night.

Some people are shown up when it comes to a show down.

Student Council Backing Movement To Beautify Campus

VOLUNTEER BAND STATE MEETING CONVENES 14-16

Students With Foreign Mission Field In View Meet At Maryville.

ALL ARE WELCOME

Delegates Expected From Many Colleges In Tennessee. Speakers Good.

On March 14, 15 and 16 delegates from the various Student Volunteer Groups of Tennessee will meet here on the Maryville Campus to hold their annual conference. From all we hear about it the outlook promises much. If you don't believe that the Maryville Student Group is anticipating this get-together just ask Florence Wallace.

The main theme of the Conference as announced is, "Students At Work In A Waking World". The discussion groups and addresses will center their thought about this subject. The committee for securing leaders has certainly been fortunate in its work for the program lists some of the most eminent people in the field as speakers. On this list are: Mr. Jesse Wilson, General Secretary of The Student Volunteer Movement; Dr. Alva Taylor, professor of Social Ethics at Vanderbilt University; Miss Constance Rumnough, a missionary of wide experiences. Miss Rumnough has worked in several European countries spreading the gospel, so she is well fitted to address the conference.

These meetings are open not only to the members of the Student Volunteer Group but also to all students on the campus and to visitors from town. All in all this conference promises a stimulus for those here on the campus as well as for those who come to Maryville from other parts of the state.

BAINONIANS HOLD UNIQUE FLECTION

Campaigns of Presidential Nominees Progressive.

One of the most unique and interesting presidential campaigns ever launched here came to an end last night when Bainonian Literary Society elected officers for the third term; and both candidates for president—Roberta Hickman, and Olive Clopton—were elected. This is the first time that the Society has voted in two presidents, and it is due firstly, to the popularity of both candidates, and secondly to the hard work of their respective campaign managers. Eva Hampton, as manager for Clopton, stated:

"Vote for Clopton, and have better meals at $10.00 per month, attend two dances a week, lights off 12:00, solution of all campus problems; social privileges every night."

Anita Ghigo, Roberta's publicity agent announced: "Cast your votes for Hickman and be rewarded by low tariff, low taxes, paved roads, short dresses, jay walking, moon shining any time, any where with any body."

The other officers elected were:
Vice President—Louise Carson
Secretary—Esther Hunter
Program Secretaries—
Kathryn Hodges, Evelyn Seedorf
Editor—Hessie Keeton
Critic—Willie Nelle Harold
Sergeant-at-Arms—Mary Schwan

LE CERLE FRANCAIS

The members and friends of Le Cercle Francais enjoyed the program Wednesday, March 5.

The program consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Harriet Brown, the reading of several French letters from French correspondents by Edwin Osborne, and a French game in which every one who was present was able to participate.

ROYAL HOLLAND BELL RINGERS IS LYCEUM ATTRACTION

Last Number of Current Season Is Novel, and Promises To Be Unusually Good.

March 10—The Royal Holland Bell Ringers will provide the last Lyceum attraction of the year at Maryville. This program is scheduled for Thursday, March 20, in the chapel at 8:00 o'clock.

The company is composed of an entire family from that quaint country called "The Netherlands". They have often played in the Court of Holland where they are great favorites with the Queen herself. The family in their native Holland costumes will present a picturesque setting for the novelties of the entertainment.

Musical novelties will be introduced, including the bearina, smallest musical instrument imported from Holland, the cymbal harp, Swiss hand bells, "rattlebones", and farm bells— all interspersed with folk songs and dances of their native land.

LIBRARY OFFERS NEW BOOK LISTS

Latest Addditions To Be Posted In Class Rooms.

Through the cooperation of Professor Ellis and the heads of departmental classification, and these lists will be placed in the various classrooms for the benefit of students who desire to read new books in lines of their own specific interest. A list of these new books will be printed in the Highland Echo for the convenience of those who wish to have a permanent list.

When he first comes into this It is not infrequent that new books pass by unnoticed because students do not keep themselves informed as to recent purchases by the library. It is hoped that through this courtesy on the part of the faculty, students and others interested will avail themselves of the opportunity to become acquainted with the new books in the library.

ALPHA SIGMA

An eminently educative program has been arranged for Alpha Sigma Saturday night at 6:45. Three of the mightiest of Maryville College intellects have grappled with the consuming movements of the day and theirs are the spoils. They, Jesse James, John Taggart, Joe McClellan, will expound upon these spoils, which, we are assured, are not too rank, the subjects bing, respectively, Fascism, Bolshevism, Socialism. No doubt, there will be a tremendous throng gathered to delight in the well fluent eloquence of these skilled elocutionists. Therefore, be prompt in order to obtain seating space. To add diversity to this rather erudite affair Wilson Gillingham has been secured to present the world's premiere of his Pathe News. Again, and as a parting sally (or fling as you prefer) have a regard for punctuality.

A Student Challenge

An Editorial

If a dog bites a man it is not news; if a man bites a dog, it gets first page with box car headlines. Thus it is when a suggestion for beautifying the campus comes from the student body. This is one of the best things the students as a body have sponsored in recent years, and it should have the hearty support of all.

The students are being asked to give a couple of hours of their time to the work of making gravel paths to replace the worn and unsightly mud routes between buildings. The college is to furnish the materials with which to provide this much needed transformation, and it is certain that the students will not let such an opportunity to beautify their campus pass unnoticed.

Our college campus is one of the most beautiful natural campuses in existence, and, even as it stands now, exceeds most campuses in our collegiate circle. However, there is much room for the proposed improvements. A couple of hours spent in work on it now will be well repaid by the feeling of pride we experience in the spring when our visitors compliment us on the beauty of our surroundngs.

Coming as it does from within our student body, this project should be of especial concern to each of us. It is a challenge to our ability to function as a group, and may pave the way for further innovations in the days to come.

DEBATERS SEASON APPROACHES END

Only Two More Debates Before National Contest.

March 8—The debating season for the varsity debaters will soon be over. Only two more dates remain to be filled. The men meet Teachers College in a dual debate March 17. An interesting part of this debate is that the audience will judge it.

On March 25 the women will meet Berea College in a dual debate for the women's finals. Professor Queener is trying to arrange a "double-header" with Berea for this date, a women's debate and a men's debate, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. It is not definitely arranged yet, however. If this arrangement can be made the men's team that goes to Wichita for the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention will debate at Berea on the way.

This debate with Berea ends the season except for the convention and the debates on the trip. Two men, with Professor Queener, will make this trip.

The season so far has been successful. Maryville has won decisions in six out of seven contests, and has participated in one other contest, a non-decision debate with Albion College.

An extemporaneous speaking contest will be held at the University of Tennessee on March 17. Five colleges will have representatives there. William Graham will represent Maryville. The other colleges are Teachers' College, Lincoln Memorial University, King College, and Carson-Newman College. While the University of Tennessee is host to the speakers, our own forensic coach, Mr. Queener, is largely responsible for the promotion of the contest in East Tennessee.

Dr. Wilson Away

Dr. Wilson left Monday, March 3, for Philadelphia to attend the General Council of the Presbyterian Chucrh. He returned on March 7.

He couldn't have a minor operation because he was over twenty-one.

HIST. CLUB VISITS BLOUNT MANSION

Group Goes To Knoxville To See Governor's House.

March 3—The History Club visited the Governor Blount Mansion at Knoxville this afternoon. The Club and its guests left from in front of the chapel at 1:00 p. m. in cars furnished by members of the faculty and Bob Byerly. It is said that Prof. Kiger gave the girls in his car a sight-seeing tour of East Tennessee.

The house was constructed for Governor Blount, territorial governor under Washington, in 1792 and was the first frame house in the nation west of the Appalachians. It is a fairly large house and for its time may well have been called a mansion. It is located one block to the right of Gay street on the first street after crossing the County bridge.

The Club was met at the entrance by one of the Knoxville members of the Association for the upkeep of the building. After we all had registered we were taken into the dining room. An old hunting board, formerly used to serve mint julep to weary members returned from the chase, an old solid walnut china cabinet, an old table, and minor pieces of furniture are in this room. The original wide boards of hard pine are still in the floors and staircases of the building, and are in excellent condition despite the ravages of time and several none-too-careful occupants. In the little entrance hallway are found 18th century maps and a framedd cheque which saved the house from the hands of the unsympathetic.

On the other side of this hall is found a large room finished in a pleasing green. The desk on which Randall wrote his famous Annals of Early Tennessee History and which was formerly owned by John Sevier is in this room, as are several other interesting pieces, such as a canopied bed whose spread the feminine members of the club admired. A most welcome thing in the room was a rousing fire in the big fire-place.

CHAS. A. JOHNSON, CLASS '26, LEADS CHAPEL ON VISIT

Chicago Seminary Student Recipient of Prize Scholarship.

Feb. 28—Mr. C. R. Johnson, of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago, addressed the students in chapel. Mr. Johnson is an alumnus of Maryville and is one of the few men to be graduated here with the degree of Magna Cum Laude, Mr. Johnson went from here in 1926 to Chicago Seminary where his scholarship during the past four years has gained for him the Blackstone prize for scholarship. This prize carries with it the privilege of two years foreign study. He will finish at Chicago this year. Mr. Johnson's home is in McMinnville, Tenn.

He brought greetings to the Maryville student body from those Maryville men who are at Chicago. He presented us the challenge to enter full time Christian service.

WOMEN WIN TWICE IN TRIANGLE DEBATE

Win Over Milligan and Tusculum On Trip.

The second women's debate of the season was a triangular debate between Milligan, Tusculum and Maryville. The debate held on the Maryville platform was Milligan and Tusculum. The question was the Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved: That the nations should adopt a plan of disarmament except such forces as are needed for police protection. Miss Jean Humphreys and Miss Bernice Cantrell of Milligan upheld the affirmative while Miss Georgia Blinn and Miss Mary Campbell argued for the negative. The decision went to the affirmative.

Maryville's affirmative team, Viola Pettit and Mary Lovette, met the Milligan negative at Tusculum, while Alice Renegar and Ruby Lee Johnson, our negative team met the Tusculum affirmative at Milligan. Both Maryville teams won their debates.

ATHENIAN ELECTION

On March 1, the Athenian Literary Society met, and after an enjoyable program and after some fitful soapbox oratory on favorite candidates had been concluded, the following officers were elected:

President - - W. T. Whitman
Vice President - - Phillip Vogle
Recording Secretary - Edwin Shelley
Program Secretaries - Lynn Rankin, Ira Morrison.
Critics - - Allen Foreman, Hubert Welsh
Editor - - - Aubrey Bradshaw
Sergeant-at-Arms - Thomas Cooper

Pre-Med Club

The Pre-Medical Club will meet Wednesday immediately after supper in the Y. W. Reading Room. All who are interested are cordially invited.

ENTIRE COLLEGE ASKED TO HELP PROPOSED PLANS

Authorities Furnish Materials, Students Pledge Labor To Make Walks.

BENCHES TO BE BOUGHT

Fifty Metal Campus Seats To Add To Looks And Convenience.

Prospects are bright for our Beautiful Campus. At the meeting of the Student Body in Chapel Friday morning there was a wholehearted response to the needs of our Alma Mater. The plan of the Campus Committee of the Student Council, in brief, calls for the building of certain new paths needed on the Campus, for the resurrecting of certain old paths, and thirdly, for the securing of fifty good campus benches.

For the building of the paths over a hundred men offered their services free for the work to be done each afternoon, beginning at three o'clock. Many of these also pledged money for the benches. These Volunteer workers have been so divided that two shifts of eight men each, with their "bosses", will work on each of the six days of the week. Brownie will be the general contractor in change. When the paths are completed, it is planned to have some beautiful shrubs and evergreens set out at various points on the campus. The bare spots on the campus will be fertilized and sown in grass, and if the student body continues its warm cooperation by keeping on the paths and off the grass in going to and from the buildings, the month of April should behold a Beautiful Campus which has had its "face lifted" by expert doctors.

The total cost of fifty benches is to be about $375.00. Pledges by the students amounted to $180.50. Miss Clemmie Henry has on hand from College friends $82.50. The faculty wil be invited to contribute to the fund this week. A considerable amount is anticipated from the plan of the Committee here given: Upon the receipt of one dollar or more from the students of any State, or from any club organization on the Hill, The Campus Committee will inscribe the name of that State or Club upon a bench, which will thereafter have a peculiar interest attached to it, as the "Ohio" bench, etc. Remember, it is not limited to an organized State Club, but if three students from Idaho would pay the dollar, there would be a bench with "Idaho" upon it.

On Wednesday morning each person will be given a small envelope, in which he will put his contribution, seal it, write his name on it, and drop it in a box as he leaves Chapel. Even after all these above contributions are received, there may still be a deficit, but Miss Henry will try her best to help us secure enough donations from outside friends to quickly clear up the balance.

THETA EPSILON

Piano Solo - - Mary McArthur
Reading—"The Art Exhibit" - Elma Param

Debate: Resolved, that a hen can lay more eggs on a square pole than on a round one.

Affirmative — Frances Turner, Jane Mitchell
Negative — Helen Scroggin, Marion Cutler

The program was very interesting and entertaining. The piano solo showed much technical and interpretive ability. The reading was very humorous. The debate—well, the applause after each speech was enough to show the approval and appreciation of the audience.

The program secretaries have worked hard and each program has shown much preparation.

Who gave you the black eye?
Nobody. I had to fight for it.

Some Signs Of The Times

There are signs of all kinds—business signs, signs of rain, signs of happiness—or perhaps disappointment, gesture signs, or, getting back to our "trig", we have sines and cosines! But the "signs" of this article are none of these.

After much diligent research, it has been found that Baldwin Hall takes first place for having the most numerous and varied kinds of signs, tacked here and there on the doors around the dorm. If one should happen to walk down the halls and read each sign as it comes, much enjoyment would be obtained from it. But since the opposite sex seldom gets this privilege, this article will help them to picture the various and sundry signs.

We find that Welcome signs and Quiet signs have the majority. The welcome ones read something like this: "Duck Inn, one waddle ahead", "You are invited and Happen Inn." There is one sign though, which reads: "Stop! Look! and Listen!" And below in flaming red are the following words: "Warning! Quarantined— Contagiuos Diseases Within." This is the only sign of its kind in captivity, and do you wonder that people knock before opening the door? I don't think it would be quite safe to call it a welcome sign. The quiet signs are all very much the same: "Quiet is requested for those who have Retired", and "Silence, please."

Next in line come signs which say, "Early to Bed", how could it be any other way?) and then we have the business signs: Hair Cut 20c—Neck-Clip 15c—Typing Done Here.

After the common signs the others are of various and interesting origins. "End Fat!—the way is short and easy." Note girls—you who are gaining from Pearsons hash. This may be the very method in which you will be restored to your sylph-like form!

The next sign says: "Recipes for Successful Homemaking—" (It's funny how some girls' minds will run!) Then we have this very optimistic sign: "Life ain't one long funeral. Look on the bright side, old son, and Smile". A pretty good motto and doubtless it has helped a great many girls out of the blues.

A few of the other signs are: "The Hall of Fame", "House of Lost Souls", "Young Men are Fools", "No Berry Picking", "Smart after Six", "The Beech-Nuts", and "Baldwin's Best".

Megalomania

If you are doing a good piece of work, people will find it out. This is an old saying, but yet an exceedingly true one when thought of in terms of Maryville College. Of course we all realize that if there is anything the average human being dislikes and cannot easily forgive it is the failure to gain public or group admiration and the absence of the things which tickles his vanity. To be the center of some worthwhile endeavor tends to inflate the old proverbial "ego", yet George Washington or Abraham Lincoln never wrote a single word in the constitution saying that we should celebrate their birthdays. We must contribute to life. Life does not mail individual contributions to us. If we want to be a real success on the college campus, do what we can in the best possible manner and then allow the often prolonged justice to give us our reward. If you are capable others will recognize the fact, and any amount of personal solicitation can only lower you in the eyes of other students.

College life, like any other phase of group living, is afflicted with this menace of Megalomania. Because of natures' molding there are individual desires and aims separate from those of the group. Just as in community, state or national politics, there is also in campus life a few Honor Seekers, nor is Maryville an exception to this rule. But remember, ambitious people have a hard time when they try to be great. And although personality is not developed until maturity still the main points are shaped while we are young. Let us pick out ideals towards which to strive, and surely one of them should be honesty with each other on the campus.

Take heed what you hear and how you hear it.

What's Life Anyway?

Life is a funny proposition. Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his life is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings by the balance of our species. In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil; in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up; in his duties he is a darn fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a small check, he is a thief, and then the law raises Sam Hill with him. If he is a poor man, he is a poor manager and has no sense; if he is rich he is dishonest but considered smart; if he is in politics, he is a grafter and a crook; if he is out of politics you can't place him as he is an undesirable citizen; if he goes to church he is a hypocrite; if he doesn't, he is a sinner and dammed; if he donates to foreign missions he does it for show; if he doesn't he is stingy and a tightwad.

When he first came into this world everybody wants to kiss him; before he goes out they all want to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age, he is simply in the way and walking around to save funeral expenses. Life is a funny road but we all like to travel it just the same.

And don't forget it, folks, we're all in the funnel and we're heading for the spout.

I see where a scientist has asserted that each kiss shortens a girl's life 10 seconds.

My goodness. I've been dead 300 years and didn't know it.
